A SERIOUS LOOK AT THE CHRISTIAN BIBLE & THE "JESUS STORY"

In common, I believe, with the majority of Christians, in my early years I accepted the Christian Bible as the inspired Word of God, a direct message from Deity to humanity. Later, however, a more critical approach to the Christian Scriptures revealed incredibilities and impossibilities, which both shocked and repelled me once they were seen upon serious and scholarly study of the Bible. What a difference there is between just setting in the pew and listening to sermon after sermon and becoming a serious student and scholar of the Bible; what a difference a little serious study of the Bible makes in one's life and understanding of the role of the Bible in one's Spiritual life. Finding myself unable either to ignore these barriers to traditional interpretation of the Christian Scriptures as espoused by mainline Christianity or to adopt a tolerant, uncritical accepting of the Christian Scriptures, two alternatives presented themselves. One was to discard entirely the orthodox concept of the Bible as an error-free and infallible source of Spiritual Wisdom and moral counsel but that was impossible having seen already in beginning studies that there exists such contradictions in the Bible which cannot be blamed upon a Perfect God, and the other to undertake a detailed study of the whole text to find the answer for these irregularities and contradictions in the Bible. I knew down deep in my heart that there had to be a reason but at that time in my life such understanding for these irregularities and contradictions escaped me. This latter course was chosen over 20 years ago, and in this decision I entered Seminary to follow the "call of God" upon my life.

It was in Seminary in the late 1980's that I began to see in my own personal studies outside of the classroom the reason for such contradictions in the Bible. It was during these years during Seminary in my parallel studies outside of the classroom that I began to see that many of the difficulties arising from a "literal" reading of the Christian Scriptures disappeared if portions of the Bible were regarded as allegorical and not taken as if "literal" and "historical" events. I began to see that throughout the whole of both the Old and New Testaments in the Christian Bible as well as behind my Christian doctrinal and sacerdotal forms there lies a much deep Metaphysical Spiritual Truth, a real "Gnosis" (Greek for "knowledge") of Man's origin, true being, nature, and destiny which has been basically lost to the vast majority of humanity by the devices of the early emerging Gentile Roman Church and their tragic "materialization" and "literalization" of the ancient Sacred Divine Wisdom and Sacred Scriptures which we see expressed today in our traditional interpretation of our Christian Bible which for the most part is based solely upon a "literal" and "historicized" translation of the Scriptures. I began to see over and over again that these ancient Sacred Spiritual texts which are at present thousands of years old were never written originally with the intent to be understood as if "literal" and "historical" and quickly realized that such an approach to them in my life only assured that I miss their Divine intent and meaning in my life today. Over months and years of such continued study both during and after my Pastorate I continued to be convinced that there exists a foundation or origin of my Christian religion other than that which is commonly accepted through Church tradition and the common place "literal" and "historical" approach to the Christian Scriptures. I began to awaken to and see for myself that there exists hidden or inner truths or Spiritual and Metaphysical doctrines which lie deeper than those forms, creeds, or doctrines which are associated with the term "Christian" in the popular conception which most accept and inherit as children and follow even as adults setting in today's Churches. I began to see that the whole of the Christian Bibles is at best a "pseudo-history" that is at its very core Divine Metaphysical allegories which were passed down previously from nation to nation, from culture to culture; Divine Spiritual myths and allegories that were never meant to be taken "literally" or "historically" but yet had valid meaning to the whole of humanity and not limited to but one person. I began to see over and over again as my studies advanced into other areas of study like archeology, Biblical languages, Gnosticism, the ancient Egyptian Religion, Comparative Religions, Comparative Mythology, Astro-theology, etc., that a "literal" reading of the Bible misses the rich meanings intended in the stories that we read in our Bibles. I began to be convinced over and over again in over these many years of scholarly study that the Bible is a book of "symbols" that were used by the ancients to encode esoteric Truths; Truths that were not given to the masses but only to the "select few" who were initiated into the Higher Mysteries hidden beneath the surface of these Divine Stories. Let it be said that when all the studies are done the depiction of the "life of Christ" which can be found in almost every major religion down through history and since the beginning of recorded time on this planet is at its very heart an initiatory journey of the incarnated Soul of every human being and was never meant to be limited to but one person as has been done by the pens of Rome as found in the New Testament they gave to the world since the 2nd century. This "life of Christ" is truly the "greatest story every told" especially in light that it can be found told verbatim as far back as ancient Egypt some 10,000 years B.C.E. Seeing these facts for yourself bring into serious question the "plenary" and "literal and historical interpretation" of our Bible, especially the New Testament with its "Jesus Story" with its sole "literal" and "historical" interpretation as the sole type of hermeneutic and method of interpretation applied to it by traditional Christianity. The Rabbis of Judaism have always known this and that is why they reject the Christian "Jesus Story"; the Rabbis have always known what Christianity has forgotten; namely, that all Sacred Scriptures of the world are to be seen through 4 levels of interpretation; the "historical and "literal" interpretation is only the beginning of one's understanding of the Divine Realm, it is the "milk" of the Word of God and not the "strong meat" to which we should aspire in our Soul's Spiritual progression. The "pattern" is set before us; we must drink "milk" before we are ready for "strong meat" but evolution of body, Soul and Spirit is the goal. We start out with a "literal" and "historical" approach to the "Christ Story" no different than did the ancient Egyptian Religion which started out with a "literal" and "historical" Hours as "the Krst" but like them this is not where we should finish our Spiritual evolution. We must move on to see the deeper things of God hidden beneath this "literal" and "historical" interpretation of our "Jesus Story". We must come to see that the authors of the world's Scriptures deliberately concealed beneath cleverly constructed veils of allegory and symbol Divine Truths which they discovered by direct search of the Cosmos and Nature which is body and voice of God to man. These Divine Spiritual and Metaphysical Truths concerning God, Krst/Christ, man and his True Nature were made available to the trustworthy but at the same time concealed from the profane under the purposeful veils of "literalism" and "history" as it has been done to us today. For this purpose the ancient invented a special category of literature which differs from ordinary writing in that, with some historical fact as foundation, it is largely composed of Spiritual allegories, symbols, and certain "key" words, the whole constituting a cipher by means of the Ageless Wisdom was with reasonable safeguards made available to humankind. Such I learned through exhaustive studies over many years were the origin, the nature and purpose of the Sacred language in our Bibles. These Divine Truths are once again provided to those who are of "full age" by Bet Emet Ministries and in so doing we provide the "truth-seeker" and those hungry for more than the "milk" of the Word Sunday after Sunday these higher Divine Truths which they deserve.

The historical difficulties of the Bible narratives, the want of reliable information regarding the central figure of the Gospels, the uncertainty respecting the date and authorship of the various books of the Old and New Testaments, the host of purposefully mistranslated and purposefully misquoted Hebrew Scriptures found in both the Greek Old Testament as well as the Greek New Testament when compared to the Hebrew originals, the forgery of the Hebrew Messianic Prophecies as contained in the New Testament, the obscurity of the early centuries of the Christian era, and the astonishing contradictions among the various sections of the Christian community respecting the very essentials of their faith, through all claim their authority from the same texts and records: these matters are well known to all who have passed beyond the mere Bible-class curriculum at their Church, and are seeking for more light and certainty than can be obtained from traditional Orthodox Christian presentations; be that Catholicism or Protestantism as they both stand today. Most "pew sitting" Christians are totally unaware that these difficulties exist within their Bibles and their "simple Christian literally interpreted Faith"; but they do! One's awareness of the Bibles inconsistences and contradictions are not meant to cause one to deny his faith in God or to cast away Christianity nor the Bible but accomplish just the reverse; in these contradictions the Spirit of God is sounding an "alarm" to your Spirit that once recognized is intended to "awaken" you out of your Spiritual slumber and move you from the "pew" to serious study of the Bible and the Divine Realm where one unlocks the secrets of God, the Christ, and one's True Nature and Being. Such an attitude of mind to seek more than the "milk of the Word" is often regarded by their friends and even Pastors as a want of "faith" and their personal inquiry and questioning of the Bible cause them to be repelled and alienated and categorized as "misfits", "trouble-makers", and "apostates". There are millions of such people today who, living in the Information Age, who find themselves looking beyond the "traditional Christian teachings" and "exoteric dogmas" of Christianity and in so doing see a deeper "esoteric" Spiritual Truth that lies just beneath the traditional inherited "literalized" and "historicized" texts and dogmas of the Christian Church. On making the discovery that most of the Bible is allegorical I began to apply the "keys" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom to many of the Books and stories of the Bible and the reward of resolving these textual difficulties in the Bible when only viewed as if "literal" or "historical" immediately vanished and in so doing I was enlarged Spiritually, intellectually, and my life so immeasurably enriched that as a Pastor I felt moved to share them with others who like myself "were hungry" for more than the Church provides in this day of religious lethargy. Little does such a one who embarks upon such a study know what they will find as I; namely, an unbroken thread of Divine Spiritual Truth of the most highest nature which cannot ever be expressed or comprehended if limited to a "literal" and "historical" understanding or limited to but one person as Rome has done with the "Jesus Story" as we have received in from their hands.

The object of this website, the first of many for Bet Emet Ministries ("Bet Emet" means "House of Truth" in Hebrew) is to suggest certain lines of thought as to the deep truths underlying the "literal" interpretation of Christianity, truth generally overlooked, and only too often denied by those unlearned and unskilled in the study of the ancient Scriptures and their reproduction in the Christian Bible. There is a widespread, popular, idea that there is no such thing as a "secret" teaching in connection with Christianity, and that "The Mysteries", whether Lesser or Greater, were a purely Pagan institution. Nothing could be further from the Truth as the reader will soon come to see as his knowledge and study advances. The very name of "The Mysteries of Jesus", so familiar in the ears of the Chrestians/Christians of the first centuries, would come as shock of surprise to those who attend traditional Christian Churches today. It is necessary, therefore, to prove clearly than in the Earliest Church, at least, Christianity was no new "faith" or "religion" in possessing a hidden side, and that it guarded, as priceless treasures, the secrets revealed only to a select few in its Mysteries. The only thing "new" about Christianity after the 2nd through the 5th century was that the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Greater Mysteries of "the Christ" were lost to mankind and buried under the dogmatism of a "literal and historical only" interpretation of the Bible; itself the repetition of previous Sacred Scriptures treasured by the earliest nations and religions of mankind since the beginning of recorded time.

Religions have always been given to the world by men wiser than the masses of the people on whom they are bestowed, and are intended to quicken human evolution. In order to do this effectively they must reach individuals and influence them. Now all men are not at the same level of evolution, but such evolution is a rising gradient, with men stationed on this ladder of Spiritual evolution at its every point. The most highly evolved are far above the least evolved, both in intelligence and character; the capacity alike to understand and to act varies at every stage. It is, therefore, useless to give to all the same religious teachings. Yet all types of humanity need religion, so that each may reach upward to a life higher than that which he is leading. Religion must be graduated as evolution, else it fails in it object and purpose. Religion seeks to evolve the moral and intellectual natures of man, and to aid the Spiritual nature of mankind to unfold itself. Unknown to most Christians scholarly research has indisputably proved than the religions of the world are markedly similar in their main teachings since the beginning of time, in their possession of Founders who display superhuman powers and extraordinary moral elevation, in their ethical precepts, in their use of means to come into touch with invisible worlds, and in the symbols by which they express their leading religious and Spiritual beliefs. This similarity and common identity of the Founders proves according to Comparative Mythologists and Comparative Religionists that all religions, even Christianity, have a common origin that reaches back to the beginning of time and as far back as pre-ancient Egypt. The Early Church Fathers, like Augustine, knew this; it is we who don't today being lulled to sleep by a religion which has broken from the mold of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and set itself maliciously above all ancient Spiritual Wisdoms and deemed itself and its "literal and historical" interpretation of their same ancient Wisdom texts as "literally infallible and inerrant". Again, nothing could be further from the truth as I would find upon serious study of my Bible and its parallels to the ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom which has been with humanity since the beginning of recorded time as we see in Augustine's quote below.

That which is known as the Christian religion existed among the ancients, and never did not exist; from the beginning of the human race until the time when Christ came in the flesh, at which time the true religion, which already existed began to be called Christianity.* (Retractt. I, xiii, cited by Dr. Alvin Boyd Kuhn in his Shadow of The Third Century , Elizabeth N.J.: Academy Press, 1949, p.3).

Augustine is not alone in his testimony.

Eusebius, the great champion of Christianity, admits in his book: "that which is called the Christian religion is neither new nor strange, but-if it be lawful to testify the truth-was known to the ancients" (Hist. Eccl. lib. 2, ch. v.).

Eusebius says that "the names of Jesus and Christ were both known and honored by the ancients" (Hist. Eccl. lib. i. ch. iv).

Eusebius, in his Church History, tells us that Justin, in his Dialogue with Trypho, says "there exists not a people, civilized or semi-civilized, who have not offered up prayers in the name of a crucified Savior to the Father and Creator of all things" (Hist. Eccl. lib i. ch. iv).

Ammonius Saccus, a Greek philosopher, founder of the Neoplatonic school, taught that "Christianity and Paganism when rightly understood, differ in no essential points, but had a common origin, and are really one and the same religion" (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 329).

These few quotes immediately brings to mind numerous questions concerning the "literal" and "historical" understanding of "the Jesus Story and the Christian Christ" let alone the Founder of Christianity, this Jesus of Nazareth which for almost 2,000 years has been denied as the Jewish Messiah for the entirely of Judaism to whom the Messiah was originally promised. This as well brings into question the unique understanding of the whole of Christianity's religious dogmas and doctrines based upon this "literal and historical Jesus" of Christian history to which millions hold a "belief" that undergirds their understanding of Christianity's salvation message for mankind. Still ringing in our ears is the quote of Augustine as well the many others from a host of ancient writers who tell us that our "Jesus Story" is but the retelling of the "oldest story every told" which we find as far back at ancient Egypt some 10,000 years B.C.E. and even before. Once one sees the truth of such statements regarding the antiquity of our "Jesus Story" then to suppose only a "literal" and "historical" approach to such a story that is placed only in the first century strains believability to the breaking point. To approach such a story in our Bibles only with a "literal" and "historical" perspective guarantees we will not arrive at the Divine Spiritual Truths cloaked and veiled within it that the Creator intended we "awaken to" and obtain in our Earthly life. We grow up accepting without question this "literal" understanding and "historical" understanding of "the Christ" and "Jesus" never knowing that there is much more to know and learn than a supposed "literal" and "historical" understanding of these sacred texts in our Bibles. The "literal" and "historical" approach to our Bible is only the "start" of our Spiritual Enlightenment; not the goal! It can be likened to elementary school for the Spirit in man and is only the first step in our Soul's awakening to its True Being and incarnational purpose.

The ancients found it necessary to withhold certain teachings from those who, morally, are not yet unfitted to receive them as they confer upon the recipients not only the Truth about their Divine Nature but the celestial powers latent in mankind which accompany such an "awakening" of the Truth of one's True Self and Divine Mind. These same ancients refused to teach the ancient Spiritual Wisdom (esoteric dogmas and Greater Mysteries) to those unqualified and unpurifed men and veiled the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Divine Truths behind the cover of myth, allegory, similes, and parables which the uninitiated and unlearned, not possessing the "keys" to correctly interpret these stories, accepted as if "literal" and "historical" accounts and events. Most of Christianity today can relate to this I am sure; I once could. These deeper Spiritual Mysteries and esoteric teachings that lie concealed under the "pseudo-history" and "literalism" of our Bibles deal with the constitution of man's True Nature, they explain hidden and hidden laws of the Cosmos that affect man, and throw light upon hidden processes, the knowledge of which gives man control over natural energies, and enables its possessor to direct these energies to certain ends; both good and unfortunately bad. Such knowledge is power unknown to humanity in its present state of evolution but as a New Age approaches, the Age of Aquarius, it is time that the "Christ without" be awakened in every child of God as "The True and Only Christ which is Within". With this "gnosis" and Divine knowledge restored to humanity and looking beyond a "literal" and "historical" understanding of the Bible mankind can once again embark upon his intended Spiritual evolution. No longer is he relegated to being a "spectator" but now become "the prime actor" in this Cosmic Drama called life and Spiritual evolution. This knowledge and "gnosis" is not possible by reading these Sacred Texts, Spiritual myths, allegories and mythologies which line the pages of our Bibles only in a "literal and historical manner"; the "literal and historical" interpretation being but a method of necessary interpretation of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom designed to veil and cover these higher Divine Truths from those unfit, unpurifed and not trustworthy to possess. But owing to the fact that this method of "literal" interpretation of these Sacred Divine Allegories is the way we had the ancient Sacred Wisdom explained and presented to us as we grew up in the Christian Church then it becomes our task in our first website to deal with the Bible and its "historical and literal" interpretation which Christianity promotes as the only way Scripture is to be understood let alone the "only way to God". It is in this "literal" way of reading and interpreting our Bibles that our beliefs in "Jesus" and "the Christ" are inherited, learned, and sustained by the vast majority of 2.5 billion Christians in the world today. One is shocked to find that this "literal" form of interpretation of the ancient Divine Wisdom and Sacred Scriptures of the nations, including Judaism and the Hebrew Scriptures, was considered the "milk" of the Word of God and not the "strong meat" which enriches, evolves, and Spiritually progresses the Soul of man. In other words the Bible is a book of pseudo-history at best and to approach these ancient Divine Sacred Myths in our Bibles as "literal" and "historical" stories only is tantamount to drinking "milk" and not eating "strong meat". It is only when a baby goes beyond the "literal" and "historical" understanding of the texts does he enter into the Higher Mysteries of the Bible concerning God, Christ, and man's true Nature and incarnational purpose. Let us not forget that the "literal" interpretation of the Bible is but one of the four ways the Rabbis taught that Divine Scriptures were to be understood. Each manner of interpretation of the Sacred Scriptures was a "step" to the next higher understanding of the Divine realm. This "literal" interpretation of the Scriptures is basically the "first grade" to the "believer" and when Spiritually ready he was to be taken under wing of learned and proven men and given the "Mysteries of the Kingdom of God within" which comes from higher interpretations of the Ancient Wisdom like Drash, Rhemez and Sod. This will become plain as we go on.

So we begin looking at and contrasting the "literal" understanding of the Christian revelation of "the Christ" and the "Jesus Story" given mankind as expressed in Christianity today and contrast it with the teachings and texts of Judaism that preceded it. In this way we can see who has the correct "truths" concerning the Messiah, "the Christ" and the truths concerning the evolution of mankind and his Soul. In this way we can see who has the more correct understanding of the salvation of man's Soul; Judaism or Christianity. In particular, and most importantly, we look to see if Christianity has even maintained the integrity of the "peshat" or the "literal" understanding of the ancient Spiritual dogmas handed down through time that passed down through ancient Spiritual history and culminated in Judaism in the first century. Our purpose here in our first website is to introduce the reader to the facts that Christianity and its Bible has taken even the "literal" and "peshat" understanding of the Divine Wisdom and "radically reinterpreted" it during the 2nd through the 5th centuries. This explains why Judaism and Christianity oppose each other on almost every doctrinal point shared in common between them. These facts will hopefully encourage the reader to study Judaism to reconnect with the legacy of the ancient Spiritual Truth which its yet maintains today.

For me to make such statements as above is one thing; for you to see this for yourself and prove our studies to yourself and seek the "narrow way" for your life and family is completely another. No one can force a belief upon another; no one has the right to attempt to do so. We at Bet Emet Ministries surely don't and this is not my intent. Not everyone is ready for what Bet Emet Ministries has to provide the Souls of mankind. But Truth is precious and everyone deserves the ability to hear it "when ready" and then make their personal choice as to accept or reject it. Only when we have made the appropriate intellectual inquiries and investigations for ourselves into such teachings presented on this website can we honestly decide whether to continue to accept or reject such "literal" interpretations of the various texts we read in our Bibles and have had taught to us most of our adult lives. However, you cannot bring your good judgment to bear upon anything in fullest measure until you have been fair in your efforts to understand such teachings from Bet Emet Ministries and then faithful in your attempts to test and verify personally what we have shown you in these articles. Let us be humbled by such studies and higher truths presented in the articles we read. So let us look at our Bibles and examine them through the microscope of scholarly study and let us both walk the same path of study as we examine our Bibles through Christianity's primary mode of interpretation of their Sacred texts; the "literal-historical" method of interpretation. Only in this way can we see for ourselves if truly the "literal-historical" manner of Biblical interpretation is the "way, the truth, and the life" and that "no man cometh unto the Father" but through them and the "literal" and "historical" Jesus revealed to us on the pages of our Bibles. Once finished with such studies on this website you will be able to take the next step in your Soul's Spiritual growth and evolution as you climb the ladder to Heaven. As your studies advance with Bet Emet Ministries you will move beyond the "literal" and "historical" interpretative approach to the Bible to enter into the deeper Spiritual Wisdom but first things first; we begin and focus now only with the "literal and historical" approach to Christianity, Christian dogma and teachings which has promised us Eternal Life.

Pastor Craig M. Lyons Ms.D., D.D., M.Div.

A SERIOUS LOOK AT THE CHRISTIAN BIBLE AND THE "JESUS STORY"

Disclaimer: It is important for the reader to understand that in this website where we examine in-depth and from a scholarly view the Christian-Jewish Bible in relationship to its main character, Jesus Christ of Nazareth, and many of the religious "dogmas" associated with the New Testament Jesus as taken from the texts and Church tradition we will approach all such studies using the typical "literal-historical" approach to the "Jesus Story". As stated on the opening page of this website that there are other and more truthful interpretations of the Biblical texts other than the introductory "peshat" or "literal-historical" interpretation of Sacred Scriptures. But beginning with the elementary understanding of "literalism" as applied to these Sacred Texts in our Christian Bible it is hoped that the reader will be challenged in his "thinking" to see that a much deeper and hidden understanding is intended as related to these Scriptures than the one inherited and taught by mainline Christianity today. Only by looking at the contradictions, inconsistencies, and discrepancies which abound with the "historical" and "literal" interpretation of these Sacred Scriptures can we be altered to the need to look deeper than our basic "literal" and "historical" approach to these texts if we ever hope of arriving at the true meaning hidden in these misunderstood and misinterpreted texts when only using the "plenary" or "literal-historical" hermeneutic (method of interpretation). As stated as we awaken to the need to move beyond this beginning interpretation of these texts can we ever hope to grow Spiritually to the degree that is afforded to us by coming to understand them through the "mystical", "mythological", and "metaphysical" understanding of God and His Christ. If you have studied and ran across some of our other more advanced websites from Bet Emet Ministries then you know that "the Christ" can be found interpreted from 3 different perspectives down through the whole of recorded history:"mystical", "mythological", and "literal-historical" (the "literal" being the last of the interpretations). Only after one has spent a considerable time in dedicated and scholarly studies in such areas as the "literal vs allegorical" interpretation of Sacred Scripture and the Bible, the study Biblical Judaism and its religious dogmas in contrast to the later "replacement" religious dogmas of Roman Christianity, the study of the Jewish Messiah as seen in the true Messianic prophecies as taken from the Hebrew Scriptures and not from the later forged Greek Old Testament translations and even later from the pens of Rome in our current Christian Bibles, the Essenes and their "literal godman" interpretation they applied to the human Jewish Messiah, comparative manuscript evidences of purposefully misquoted and mistranslated Scriptures as they exist in our Christian Bibles when compared to the earlier Hebrew Scriptures, the true history and origin of the Roman New Testament and its canonization and later abundant changes down through the earliest centuries, the Gnostic Paul vs the later falsified "Romanized" Paul in our current Bibles, the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom literature which contains the "pattern" for all later "Christ" and "Jesus Stories", Jewish and Gentile Gnosticism, the ancient Egyptian religion and the ancient and original "Jesus Story" and all of its later "retellings" as found in the study of comparative religions, the study of Astronomy and Astro-Theology where the personification of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac is the template for the personified events of Matthew chapter 1 through chapter 28, then and only then can one truly understand and be certain which two of the above three methods of interpretation of "the Christ" are trustworthy, accurate and factual to the original Divine revelation given mankind by the Divine Mind and Creator of this Universe in the beginning of recorded time. But doing this requires a lot of study to be certain whereby you can be confident and "bet your life" upon your findings. But this is not the study at hand and yes, to get to the bottom of the truth about our "Jesus Story" does require some effort on your part only because of the changes that were applied to it down through history and especially by Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century. But such studies again are left for our later and more in-depth websites.Our focus here must be only on determining the validity and reliability of a "literal" and "historical" approach to our Christian Bible and especially our "Jesus Story" contained within it. This can be most effectively done by contrasting this approach of interpretation of what we read in our Bibles to other evidences and facts taken from archeology, Biblical history, and the comparison of Biblical Judaism vs emerging Gentile Roman Christianity in the earliest centuries.

Again for purposes of comparing Judaism's truths vs Roman Christianity's alterations of this Divine Truth over the early 2nd through the 5th century and the implications that these "alterations of prior Divine Ancient Spiritual Truth" hold for the "non-Jew" and "Godfearer" today which set in the pews of Christian Churches the world over then we adopt in this website and for all studies in this website a "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" as well as the "Jesus" of the New Testament. Only in so doing can we adequately contrast the Divine Spiritual truths of Judaism vs the later "radical reinterpretation" of them by later Roman Christian theologians and by so doing follow the heritage of these prior "Divine Spiritual Truths" back down the corridors of history to the earliest Divine Spiritual revelations and understandings given to mankind by the Creator which were intended for humanity; both "Gentiles" and "Jews". Only in subjecting the "literal" and "historical" interpretation of the Bible and our "Jesus Story" to being tested and exposed to the conflicting and contradictory facts from Biblical languages, Biblical history and culture, Comparative Mythology and Religions, Gnosticism, the ancient Egyptian Religion and Sacred Mysteries, Astro-theology, Astronomy, and Astrology can we be certain that our "literal" and "historical" approach to the Scriptures is in need to be reevaluated and reconsidered. If there is to be found "unity" between such a "literal" and "historical" understanding of our Bibles and our "Jesus Story" when contrasted to these evidences and facts taken from archeology, Biblical history, and Biblical languages, etc., then we are on firm footing. But if we find constant contradictions, inconsistencies, and discrepancies abound between the "literal" and "historical" understanding of our Bibles along with our "Jesus Story" when examined in the light of scholarly research in such areas like archeology, Biblical Judaism, Biblical languages, unbiased Biblical history, etc., then we have reasons then to took beyond such a "literal" and "historical" understanding of the Bible and our inherited "Jesus Story". This is especially important since Rome has tied the salvation of mankind and the whole world to "believing the literal Jesus Story" and the creeds that surround it for one's atonement of sins and Eternal life. If we find in such comparative study of these other areas of investigation abundant contradictions, incongruities, disagreements, inconsistencies, and discrepancies with our supposed "infallible" and "inerrant Jesus Story" then the "thinking believer" should be honest with himself that there lies as the very feet of a "literal" and "historical" understanding and approach to his "Jesus Story" many problems that brings such an approach and interpretation to our "Jesus Story" into serious question. But one contradiction might be a coincidence, but hundreds should tell us that there is something drastically wrong with such an approach to the "Jesus Story" and this should motivate us to want to know what truly lies behind our "Jesus Story"; it sure did me!!! What I found and you will find in later studies in other areas of inquiry like Comparative Religions, Gnosticism, Astro-theology, Astronomy, the ancient Egyptian Religion and Sacred Mysteries are unbelievable "parallels" to our "literal and historical Jesus Story". This should give us serous cause toRETHINK what we have been taught about Jesus and how we approach our Bibles and the other interpretations of it which bring better sense to this Spiritual revelation. If we find these conflicts and contradictions to our "Jesus Story" in great number, and we will, then this is the "death knoll" to the "thinking believer" concerning a "literal" and "historical" approach to the Bible and the "Jesus Story". Such critical study as mentioned opens our minds and understanding to a deeper Spiritual Truth than can ever be expressed through a "historical" and "literal" interpretation of our Bibles. But you don't know this yet for certain having not yet done the necessary studies to see of which I speak; we are only concerned in this website with verifying if that the "literal and historical" approach to the Sacred Scriptures in our Bible and our "Jesus Story" is warranted, reliable, and should be depended upon for one's salvation. This is and must be our "only focus" at present!

For this reason it behooves us to look seriously and in-depth at our Christian Bibles and our approach and interpretation of our "Jesus Story" and in so doing contrast the Christian Religion and its Messiah with Biblical Judaism and its Messiah from which it grew. Christianity was to be the culmination and zenith of Biblical Judaism and it is our task in the forthcoming articles to see indeed if Christianity as it has been presented to us today in the Roman Bible and its primary method of interpretation is the Divine Truth or if at its very heart it is the Roman "replacement" and denial of Divine Spiritual Truth as held unchanged and unaltered by mankind for over 15,000 years. Let us not forget that Biblical Judaism was the culmination of the evolution of the ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom as expressed through the previous Egyptian, Babylonia, and Persian religions and finally synthesized and adopted by the Jewish culture. These other great civilizations and religions have perished but try as they may the Jewish culture and religion has resisted now for over 2,000 years constant attempts of mankind's darkness to extinguish its Divine Light and Truth. The ancient Spiritual Wisdom lives on in Biblical and Mystical Judaism without deception; a claim that sadly cannot be made for my birth faith Christianity. That being said the repudiation, denial, mischaracterization and "radical reinterpretation" of Biblical and Mystical Judaism is not a good thing. I will let you be the judge of the results of the forthcoming studies and leave to you, the reader and "truth seeker", to draw the necessary conclusions as we attempt to compare Jewish and Christian theological perspectives on common religious dogmas all the while dealing with the "New Testament Jesus" in a "literal-historical" manner in order for such an accurate comparison to be done effectively. Only in this way can we be certain that we have not fallen into a "replacement religion" and aberrant approach to reading and interpreting the Bible and our "Jesus Story" which is given us by Rome.

In order for one to "return" to the faith taught by the Jewish "Christ" in the New Testament one must be convinced that upon serious scholarly study that he does not possess it, practice it, and observe it. Without such serious study the hope of knowing for certain if a "return" to the "faith once given the saints" and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom is needed in one's life can never be known for certain. Of course few Christians I know ever think that they might not be true followers of the Jewish Christ because it never dawns on them that they might not have or use the same Scriptures commonly used and accepted by first century Jews let alone interpret them as did the early emerging church of the earliest first centuries. Not only that but they are almost totally oblivious as to the need of a different approach and interpretation of the Scriptures that they have. The problem in a nutshell as I found it is that we as Christians and followers of the New Testament Jesus today simply do not use the same Bible as used by the earliest church let alone approach and interpret these ancient Sacred Scriptures in the same way as did they. We have a Roman substitute and a replacement Bible containing a host of altered Sacred Scriptures that inevitable produced many conflicting and alternate religious beliefs, dogmas, and religious doctrines within it which were not part of the earliest faith and beliefs of the followers of the Jewish "Christ/Messiah" of the earliest centuries C.E.! As difficult as that thought might be for the great multitude of Christians who love Jesus and believe they are his followers, the sad fact of the matter as I discovered for myself over 20 years of in-depth research and analysis of the New Testament, is that the vast majority of my faith as a contemporary Christian was in direct opposition to what a typical Jew like the one called "Jesus" in our New Testament would have both "believed" and "practiced". Simply we have been given a "book" that is declared "Divine" by Rome that is not accurate to the existing Hebrew Scriptures and religious belief system of the typical normative Jew of the first century or of the Jewish Synagogue/Church headed by James which functioned as a "light to the Gentile world" as seen in Acts chapter 16. This is a fact beyond any doubt when you compare "Scripture with Scripture" between the Christian Bible and the Hebrew Tanakh and Jewish Scriptures; only then can you see the deception first hand and remove any doubt as to what I say. Archeology and historical facts tell us today that the Bible cherished by James, the head of the Jerusalem Church, has been altered in hundreds of "key" theological places and seldom do we study hard enough to see these "forgeries" for ourselves let alone does it ever dawn upon us to think to compare the Hebrew Scriptures and texts with the later Greek, Latin, and English "supposed translations" for accuracy which, if done, would show us these alterations of religious beliefs and religious dogmas and doctrines beyond any doubt! We take for granted that we have the Bible "Jesus used"; but we don't really have it and are never aware that we don't have it in our possession or in our Churches until we are alerted to this fact by others who have done the necessary studies in these areas and know the difference between "truth" and "fiction". It is way past time for "thinking" Christians and followers of the Jewish "Christ" to get to the heart of the matter and get to know their Bibles much better. With such knowledge our Bibles can be "redeemed" and Truth can discerned upon it pages and cherished as we at the same times discern the later "false additions" and purposeful dogmatic corruptions by Rome intended to direct the Gentile away from Biblical Judaism into the doors of the Roman Church. It is hoped that all readers will take just a minute and read the articles on this website and THINK deeply about just how much you, a non-Jewish believer in the God of Israel and a typical Jew living in the first century have in common. Let us never forget: Titus 1:4 4 "To Titus, mine own son after the common faith:..."; "the faith" shared by both Jew and "non-Jew" alike when we look at the Greek of the New Testament when both Jews and "non-Jews" attended Synagogues together all through Asia, Minor, and kept in common the Sabbaths and Biblical Festivals of God. This dear one is only the tip of iceberg when seeing how we have fallen from Divine Truth in our Christian Churches today. When seeing these deviations from Eternal Divine Truths you should ask yourself why we don't have these Divine Truths shouted from our pulpits in our Churches today and why a substitute religion is preached instead! When you are finished with such a study then and only then can you see clearly and understand the reasons we don't have more in common with this "Jewish Jesus" that we "profess" that "believe we in" and "believe we follow". The reason simply we don't have more in common with the Jewish Faith is because as "non-Jews" today, under the influence or Rome and their Bible for over 1,800 years presently, we have a "religious belief" system that is quite different from that which existed in the Jerusalem Synagogue/Church that sent their message into all the known Gentile world in Acts 16 because our religious texts and the religious dogmas presented in our Bibles which we have inherited from Rome are "radically reinterpreted" and "altered" when compared to the higher Spiritual Truths contained in Biblical Judaism and are sadly not an accurate reflection of what first century Jewish Christianity "believed" and both "practiced as "the faith once given to the Saints" and shared with the "non-Jews" of the earliest centuries. It is time to return to "Jesus' Bible", the true Hebrew Scriptures and come to understand what has happened to the truth about "the Christ" as well as the Bibles we have inherited from Rome.

A Christian's religious belief system, when tested and exposed to contradictory facts from Biblical languages, Biblical history, Biblical culture, the Biblical texts, the study of comparative religions, as well as Gnosticism, Egyptian Religion, the ancient Divine Wisdom, Astronomy and Astrology, and Archeology, must in the Spirit of Truth and Repentance, be flexible enough to change

To fully understand my "thoughts" and "beliefs" upon "Jesus" and "the Christ" one has to be accomplished in many different types of Religious knowledge which has existed since the beginning of mankind and recorded time. The "quote" above in the "red" expresses these areas of knowledge and when the reader becomes competent in these various disciplines then and only then can he see through the alterations of "the Christ" by the pens of the Essenes and later Roman Monks through the 2nd through the 5th century. Then and only then can one understand why the Jewish nation yet today does not "believe" in our Christian Jesus as the "Jewish Messiah" as found in Rome's New Testament.

Answer for yourself: How does one determine for certain that he possess and observes the same "religious belief system" as exampled by this Jesus or if his "religious belief system" opposes that exampled by this Jesus? How does one make sure what he is being taught in his Churches would be accepted by this same Jesus today or rebuked by him if he attended your same Church?

Well, honestly, that is not too hard to ascertain. One must only investigate and discover what the real faith of the "Jewish Christ" truly is and what one committed to it really believed as found in 2nd Temple Judaism, the School of Hillel in the first century C.E. and then contrast these "religious beliefs" with what the New Testament teaches on the same subjects. When one finds for himself through such a study that the New Testament is often and in many places a contradiction and a false depiction of what a Jewish Rabbi like this Jesus both believed and practiced as one's faith in the first century, then one is finally undertaken the "path of return to the faith once given to the Saints". The amazing thing that we see when these studies advance to a certain level is that there is nothing basically different from this "Jewish expression of faith in God" and the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom concerning God, man, cosmos and "the Christ" that has existed among humanity since the beginning of time! That sadly cannot be said as we shall see when investigating the "replacement religion of Christianity" as devised by Rome after they conquered Israel and as unfolded during the 2nd through the 5th century. In Rome's domination of Israel the "light of the world" was extinguished and they call this era today "the Dark Ages". Our problems begin when we see for ourselves that what the New Testament often teaches contradicts with what we know of the Hebrew Sacred Scriptures and the Hebrew Old Testament, Biblical History, Biblical Language, Biblical Culture, Archeology, etc. Without personal study you will never see these problems that open your mind to the truth about what we have inherited due to Rome's antisemitism and "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Divine Wisdom. The God Who says "I change not" is not the author of such confusion and is not schizophrenic. Thus, we must study to find the answers why our Christian Faith today and its religious dogmas and doctrines which come to us written on the pages of Rome's Bible are "radically reinterpreted" and therefore contradicts the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom as well as Biblical and Mystical Judaism in most of its dogmas as well. So set back now and let us examine "the Truth" for a change!

HOW ARE WE TO INTERPRET THE "SACRED SCRIPTURE" OF THE BIBLE WHICH CAN BE SHOWN TO BE LESS THAN TRUSTWORTHY WHEN INTERPRETED "LITERALLY" AND "HISTORICALLY?

That's a great question but first of all you have to study enough to know "for certain" that the "literal" and "historical" interpretation of the Bible is not the proper approach to interpreting the texts and verses you read when you pick up your Bible or read it in Church. This takes dedicated study of the Bible and a significant amount of time to discover the discrepancies, irregularities, forgeries of the texts in the New Testament when compared to the Hebrew originals as well as abundant knowledge from archeology, Biblical Judaism, Ancient Egypt, Comparative religions, Gnosticism, astronomy, and a host of other sources of associated information and evidence which has been collected today by modern Biblical scholarship. We no longer live in the Dark Ages where "fear" and "ignorance" of the Bible and Spiritual Truth was the order of the day; we live in an information age that illuminates the Soul and mind of man like never before. After many rigorous years of in-depth religious study into the origin and canonization of the New Testament, which was the foundation for my "religious belief system", the fact of the matter that a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of the Bible was severely inadequate to understand the inherited Scriptural texts before me. As a typical Christian, who had grown up since childhood being told to trust everything I read in the Old and New Testaments and as heard preached by my Pastor, I was shocked to find out in my serious personal study of this Bible, both before, during, and after Seminary, that my Bible and especially the New Testament was not reliable when taken as a "literal" and "historical" revelation of the Divine Realm. I found out that contrary to what I had been led to believe and been told by my Pastor and Church, that I was not, in the final analysis, truly following this Jesus of the New Testament which had been my example and model of perfected humanity; in fact I discovered that in many, many ways my Christian "religious belief system" and the majority of its religious dogmas and doctrines was in direct opposition to what a Spiritual Jew like Jesus both would have believed and practiced in Judaism his whole life, But never being taught Biblical Judaism this understanding is not common knowledge in today's Christian Church; we basically are led to believe that the Jews don't believe in our Christian Jesus but that is the main difference; nothing could be further from the truth of the is matter. Contrasting my inherited "Christian religious belief system" and its interpretation of religious dogmas, most of which I would be amazed to find already existed in Biblical Judaism, I would become shocked to no end to find that although my Christian dogmas were "similar" in title they at their very core were nothing more than adulterated religious teachings which has been given a "radical reinterpretation" by Roman Christianity that opposed both what the Old Testament and Biblical Judaism had taught for over 3,000 years. Of course this carried over into my New Testament as well; but not knowing Judaism then I accepted all things that came from the mouths of characters of the New Testament and the Bible given me by Rome. It was not long before the hard facts hit me head on: I was not a "true" follower of Jesus and his teachings; I was more of a follower of Paul than Jesus. Although I was in good standing with my church and Pastor, I was not truthfully a disciple and student of a Jewish Jesus. I had to remember that there never was a Catholic Jesus, or Protestant Jesus; only a "Jewish Jesus" lines the pages of our Bibles since it was through Judaism that God shared His Mind through the teachings of the "Jewish Christ". The Scripture came to mind often: Phil 2:5 5 Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: (KJV) This I reminded myself is a "Jewish Jesus" that never departed from Judaism and saw no need for a "new" or "replacement religion"! What I discovered, and what I will relate to you in this website and many others, is that because of purposeful mistranslations, purposeful misquotations, and multitude of Old Testament verses taken out of context by the various New Testament writers (who were not the Apostles as you have been led to believe), and even pure Scriptural invention of texts out of thin air, I had been deceived by the New Testament documents and in reality was not practicing the faith of a Jew like Jesus nor was I truly following in his footsteps. I found that by following some of the teachings within the New Testament that I, in reality, opposed what Jesus both would have believed and observed as part of his faith in first century Judaism. When this all hit home to my mind and Soul tears was not an option. I had just never known these things since I never truly studied my Christian Faith and its Bible and, like most of my readers, being taught since I was a child to read my New Testament "without question" and "without study". Repentance was in order. I pray you see it the same way once you see the evidence and facts for yourselves. But you have to acquire the knowledge of what I speak first and this can only be accomplished through serious study. We have provided such "facts" on this website to help you in such a discovery and trust such enlightening information will be a blessing to your Soul.

THE BOTTOM LINE: MUCH IN THE NEW TESTAMENT IS NOT RELIABLE WHEN APPROACHED WITH A "LITERAL" AND "HISTORICAL" PERSPECTIVE AND INTERPRETATION AND IT WOULD SERVE YOU WELL TO ALLOW YOURSELF THE OPPORTUNITY TO INVESTIGATE THE NEW TESTAMENT WITH US TO SEE IF WHAT IS REPRESENTED WITHIN IT IS CONCERNING THIS LITERAL AND HISTORICAL JESUS AND "THE CHRIST" IS, IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, ACTUALLY TRUE OR FALSE

BEFORE YOU BEGIN A SERIOUS STUDY OF THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION AND FACTS WITHIN THIS WEBSITE, IT IS NECESSARY FOR YOU TO ACQUAINT YOURSELF WITH THE TRUTH BEHIND THE NEW TESTAMENT; ITS ORIGIN, ITS CONTRADICTIONS, ITS DISCREPANCIES, ITS CHANGES & ALTERATIONS, AND THE ROMAN INFLUENCES THAT CONTRIBUTED TO THE THEOLOGIES INCLUDED WITHIN IN. ONLY THEN CAN YOU TRULY BE PREPARED TO EVALUATE THE FOLLOWING DATA WHICH CONTRASTS THE "QUOTES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT" AS TAKEN FROM THE "CHRISTIAN" OLD TESTAMENT WITH THE JEWISH HEBREW MASORETIC TEXT & SCRIPTURES THAT A JEW LIKE JESUS USED. THE DIFFERENCES ARE ALARMING AND THEOLOGICALLY DEVASTATING TO CURRENT CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY AS FOUND IN THE NEW TESTAMENT!

NOW, IT IS TIME FOR THE FACTS AND THE EVIDENCE TO BE MADE KNOWN

The reader, "truth-seeker" and "thinking-believer" must now be the judge of the facts and evidence being brought forth; evidence that escapes the casual Bible reader and "pew-setter" in our Churches. Once you see the evidence and the facts for yourself, as I did, there will be no doubt as to the truth of my previous statements. Those who study this website as well as the others presented by Bet Emet Ministries will come to see rather quickly the fallacies of interpretation of the "Jesus Story" when using only the "literal" and "historical" interpretation. But this is only the "first step" in recovering the truth about the Divine Christ; a Divine Truth that remained intact from nation to nation since the beginning of time until the rise of Roman Orthodoxy in the 2nd through the 5th century. Once seeing this information and knowledge for yourself, then your can understand how Biblical Judaism which sent its Faith into the whole of Asia, Minor and later to the known world in Acts 16 was later "replaced" and "radically reinterpreted" by a later emerging Gentile Anti-Semitic Catholic Christianity which set upon the hills of Rome; a Church which relied upon falsified and distorted religious documents for its authority in changing the "Faith of Jesus" into a new religion based upon a "Faith in Jesus". As a serious seeker for truth and a lover of God I challenge you to study the materials presented.

ROMAN CATHOLIC LITERALISM...& ITS IMPACT UPON THE PRIOR "CHRIST STORIES" AND "JESUS STORIES"

Up to now we have only scratched the surface of Christian "literalism". Now we plunge ourselves into the thick of it as we come to how how this "literal" interpretation of the Gnostic "allegorical Christ" developed towards the send of the second century. This began as a minor cult with a unique claim that Jesus has literally lived out the Pagan myth of the dying and resurrecting Godman. Literalists fabricated a lineage to link themselves back to the supposed disciples and forged letters of Paul to make him appear anti-Gnostic (Pastoral Epistles). Patterning much of the historical Jesus around the pattern of the Persian Godman Mithras Christian literalism would gradually grow into the official religion of the Roman Empire by the fourth century. With the full might of the Roman state behind them, Christian Literalist waged a barbaric war against Paganism and Christian Gnosticism, destroying temples and burning libraries and historical records of these movements along with dissidents, and plunging Western civilization into the Dark Ages. The legacy of Christian liberalism has not only been the lost of precious Ancient truths concerning God and His Christ but the misquided obsession with the historical Jesus which can be shown to today to be a mythological figure who appears to mankind in different ways according to the understanding of the individual based upon prior teachings (both good and not so good). In the end this Christ is the indwelling Spirit of God which lives within us and eternally call us to Himself. Now the facts and evidence of this historical deception by Roman Catholicism follows. It is time we learn the truth about the "real" Paul and separate him from the later Roman "recreation" of Paul as the mouthpiece of Roman aberrant theology.

MARCION: THE MAN AND HIS THEOLOGY AS FOUND IN THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT OF THE EARLIEST CHRISTIANS

It is assumed that by now the reader has a fairly good grasp of Gnosticism and many of its religious beliefs. This will be necessary in analyzing Marcion and his First New Testament that espoused and taught such beliefs about "the Christ." Now let us look at the man who gave us the first New Testament which Rome will later use as the "skeleton" for their "literal" and "historical" adaptation of "the Christ" as Jesus. Let us examine in summary fashion Marcion and his religious beliefs and how they were reflected in his collection of authentic Pauline literature and the earliest written gospels which makes up his First New Testament. Only when we know what the "truth was" in the beginning can we judge what we have been taught today and make intelligent comparisons in our search for truth.

THE JEWISH JESUS....AND RELATED STUDIES

To the "thinking believer" it appears without question, given the information in this and other websites from Bet Emet Ministries, that the "faith of Judaism" in which the "Mind of Christ" was expressed in the earliest centuries has been "radically reinterpreted" by Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century. Since the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Mystery Religions all taught the evolution of the

"indwelling Krst/Christ" it would behoove us to look seriously at the Jesus depicted in the New Testament as ask ourselves if are really followers of this "Jewish Mind of Christ" and practice the "faith of Jesus" or just have a faith in the religious dogmas that Rome attached to their reinterpretation of the ancient Krst/Christ.

EXAMINING THE DIFFICULT WORDS "OF/ABOUT" JESUS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT...WHAT THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH FAILS TO UNDERSTAND SINCE IT HAS LOST IT'S JEWISH ROOTS

Needless to say with Rome's corruption of the Hebrew Scriptures and their "forced" interpretations of their interpolations we need accurate knowledge of the Hebrew language and the Hebrew Scriptures before they were altered if we ever hope of unraveling the truth behind the "Jesus Story" and answering correctly the most important question we will ever have to answer in this life; namely, "Who do men say I am". This should help.

JOHANNIE STUDIES AND THE JEWISH JESUS

I suppose of all the Gospels in the Bible the Gospel of John is the most familiar and beloved by the readers of the New Testament. When one repents and comes to God often he is told to read the Gospel of John first for it reveals the love of God for men. What is often overlooked by most is that the picture of Jesus in the Gospel of John is completely different from the pictures of him in the Synoptic Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke. Why so? If the Jesus one sees in John can be shown to be less than the authentic Jesus who really lived and taught and died, then is this "the Jesus" we are to have faith in? If one was to do in-depth study and find that the picture painted for us in the Gospel of John of Jesus is in reality based upon pagan mystery religions and Greek philosophy instead of the Torah and the Prophets, what are we as believers to do? Should we trust out eternal life and our fate to a fictionalized rendition of "a Jesus" who never existed except in the minds of pagans who altered the documents we revere as the New Testament? Do you know the facts of what happened to Christianity over 1700 years ago? Do you know the difference? Do you want to know the truth before you die and meet God face to face? Will paganized concepts and beliefs about God and His son do us well on that day? The time to repent of such errors and false doctrines is now because adherence to them constitute Idolatry! Knowingly I don't believe anyone would willfully commit such a sin, but unknowingly we do. In the articles that follows I will reveal to you what I found throughout my search for the Historical Jesus and you be the judge.

If one undertakes the study of Bet Emet Ministries' Websites, and understand it is a life's work, then one is prepared to understand what has truly happened to Christianity down through the centuries and how Divine Spiritual Truths, once expressed through allegory, metaphor, Spiritual myth and simile by the Ancients who first received the Revelations of God, has been suppressed, altered, and tragically lost for the most part today through the "literalization" of such Spiritual revelations given to us by the Ancients. This is a tragic story to say the least and renders us today as "believers" and "followers of the New Testament Jesus" as basically "idolators" as defined by this same Bible and we never know it because our Bibles inherited from Rome are "forged" in key "theological places" and this assures we inherit "untruth" never aware that we are doing so. That is until you study to see these issues! If you are diligent to study and learn from what is shared on these multiple sites then over time you will come to see and understand how it is possible to follow the "New Testament Jesus" and his teachings and examples in one way which ends with idolatry and blasphemy and in another way which ends in holiness and righteousness. The decision is yours; but such a decision must be based upon knowledge and not "emotion". This is the mystery that is tied up in understanding and interpreting the "Christ Story", or should I say the "Jesus Story" the way it was originally intended to be understood and not the way it was later "radically reinterpreted" by Rome during the 2nd through the 5th centuries. The key to all of this rest in the true identity of "the Christ," "the Logos", and "Christ Jesus". We are all familiar with these terms but we will soon come to see that there is a big difference between what we have been taught about these terms today and what they meant to the original "Chrestians" and "Christians" before Rome's rise to supremacy. Rome's has played a key role in the loss of these Divine truths and in their place the substitution of falsehoods and this will become all the more plain to see very soon. "Surely that is not possible I hear you say" but I only wish it weren't so. For your study and thought these websites were developed and revised over the years as Bet Emet Ministries' have progressed and deepened in its studies and more parts of the "theological puzzle" of Christianity became apparent to myself and others associated with Bet Emet.

These websites by Bet Emet Ministries are intended to be "a step by step" process in your pilgrimage of learning the truth regarding "the Christ". It has been rightly said: "It is all about the texts" and rightly so. We therefore begin by looking at the surface of the texts and their examination as to accuracy of translation which involves any possible purposeful mistranslation, misquotation, and lifting of such verses out of context in order to change the intended meaning desired by the original writers. We trace such changes when found from their inception all the way from their corruption when they were mistranslated moving from the Hebrew to the Greek and follow then through the Latin and later English Old Testament quotes as well as New Testament quotes. Only in this way can we be assured that what we have inherited in our Bibles is "God's Truth" and "God's Word". Then moving deeper as the websites progress we look often at the hidden and esoteric meanings that lie beneath these same texts and their later alterations as well. In other words we begin our websites with a "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" and "Jesus Christ" and after having covered these many comparisions of Judaism vs Christianity do we then move deeper to look at the "Mystical Christ" and finally to the "Mythical Jesus Christ". If you followed all of this then you see that we will look at "the Christ" from three vantage points; beginning with the inherited "literal historical Jesus" we will take and examine all texts and explain them "literally" as we have been taught to "believe" since growing up since childhood in the Christian faith that we inherited. In so doing it is my intent to show separate for you the "Jewish Messiah and Judaism's Spiritual Truths" from a "non-Jewish Messiah and untruths" given us by Rome. There are two different "Messiahs" exampled for us in the Rome's New Testament; a "Jewish Messiah" and a later "Roman Messiah" and only one can be true. Here is where the authenticity and reliabiliity of the Scriptural Texts is of utmost importance because the reliability of the texts must determine for us which "Christ/Messiah" is the real one in the New Testament. This is why Bet Emet spends so much time in comparing the Hebrew to the later "purposeful alterations" for such alteration of the Hebrew Scriptures has a direct and disastrous implication for the truthfulness of the depiction of the New Testament Jesus as he has been represented to us in our New Testament. As you see these Hebrew passages, "line upon line and precept upon precept" being corrupted one after another as apply to a "Jesus Christ" of Rome's making this should stir your mind as to what then really stands behind this "supposed historical and literal person" who has been passed off to mankind as the "fulfillment of the Hebrew Scriptures" in spite of the Jewish people's denials now for 2,000 years. As your studies progress it is my hope that you will come to see the depiction of this "Jesus" in the New Testament in a deeper light; not as some "supposed historical-literal person" due to the forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures as well as pure Scriptural invention but the "personification of Divine truth" that was entrusted to the Jewish nation for the person who was ever to be born in the Gentile world. As these websites progress I am confident that you will come to see just whom this "Divine Christ within" really is and how this concept of the "Indwelling Christ in all humanity" has tragically be changed and altered by Rome and given a "literal-historical life" of its own which was limited to but one person who only exists through the forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures and pure inventionism. It is a real shame that the only Jew to ever came to you and me was this New Testament Rabbi and model for humanity came dressed up like Constantine and bearing literalized sunworship concepts which simply are not true in their "literal sense" since they bring the stain idolatry with them. This is another "big key"; literalized Sunworship is wrong. But when the Sun is seen allegorically for the "visible representation" of the "invisible God" and "Soul" then the reader will come to see that the Creator put this Orb in the Sky to teach us of the progressive growth of "Spirit/Soul" in the bosom of man. When understanding this "key" then the Sun is the example given man for the growth and Spiritual progression of his Soul as the Sun moves through the Sky and the Zodiac. This knowledge well come in time as your studies advance but know that Matthew, chapter 1 through Matthew chapter 28, follows this "Path of the Sun" through the Sky perfectly. We should expect our "Jesus Story" to do the same and it does! Of course it would because Paul states in Rom 1:20: *"For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world a*re clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse:".

Over time as your studies advance you will come to see the Higher Divine Truths and how the ancients expressed then in Spiritual Allegories, myths, legends, metaphors and did not express them as we mistakenly think today as "literal" or "historical" stories. They understood what we have forgotten: God is not a man and God exists in a Metaphysical realm and they had to turn to and utilize pictures and symbols to capture such High Spiritual Truths which we have lost the "keys" to understand today thereby taking them all "literally" not knowing how grievously we err. Their Divine Truths were expressed as Spiritual allegories and they were intended for all and easily remembered over some deep theological treatise. Simply said there exists an "unbroken chord" between this ancient Spiritual Wisdom from the beginning of mankind that remains unbroken down through time until the 2nd century with the rise Romanism and the beginning creation of the Roman Bible. During the next 3 centuries Rome will expend all effort and money possible to "radically reinterpret" the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of mankind and in so doing alter almost all, if not all, the Spiritual concepts cherished by mankind since the beginning of time. The study of the Roman forgery of the earlier Sacred Wisdom and the Hebrew Scriptures, themselves the legacy of the Great ancient Egyptian Religion, is the beginning of our awakening to this great loss of Spiritual veracity to humankind.

In closing it is my intent as a yet ordained Pastor who desired to serve the Creator and help His children do the same that once this information came to light over the years of my studies I realized that someone has to share and tell others of this deception in order that our worship of the Creator be in "Spirit and in Truth. We can say we worship in "Spirit and in Truth" all day long but that does not mean we are doing it. Bet Emet, Hebrew for "House Of Truth", has done as best it can to present these truths to other "truth seekers" in hopes that your love for and worship of God be likewise.

Now lets discuss the study. The order of our study is very important. If you start from the beginning and work your way through these websites as if you are reading the "best of many books" (which you are) then you will end your study with few unanswered questions and you will have arrived as the truth you sought and have a very clear picture of whom God is and what He requires of you as the non-Jewish believer in Christianity today. But above all your journey ends with the awakening of yourself to your True Identity and the Divinity that resides in you. You will discover beyond any doubt that the "Jesus Story" is YOUR STORY. That you are the "indwelling Christ/Sophia" in "matter" by which God is progressively evolving Himself and you are His Temple for his own progressive Self-awareness of Himself. You and God are truly "co-laborers". This is the very goal and purpose of your incarnation.

Sure the trip is hard, long, and time consuming and filled with both tears and joy as you deal with what has happened at the hands of men who served themselves rather than God. But the goal must be kept squarely before you in order for you to come to the Truth once known about God by these Ancients who framed many of the very same religious doctrines that sadly have come down to us altered and redefined today which sadly cover the pages of our Bibles of which we are not aware. You will come to see that there is a very big difference from the Jewish Bible and the corrupted Gentile Christian Bible we inherited from Rome and this corruption has blinded you to your true Self and Infinite Being. This is Rome's doing! All of this is dealt with on our websites and you will get to it in time if you are diligent in your study.

Let us end with one passage from the Hebrew Scriptures:

14 Then the LORD said unto me: 'The prophets prophesy lies in My name; I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spoke I unto them; they prophesy unto you a lying vision, and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their own heart.

It is time that we do diligent study in order to overcome these "lies" which we have inherited from Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century and beyond and it is equally time that repent of such errors of "belief" that as well are in our life. It is time we search out and return to the faith of our Fathers who carry the Ancients traditions and truths with them. Today we find that best expressed in my opinion in Judaism because not only are they the "children" and legacy of Ancient Egypt but carry the hope for the whole of the Western hemisphere that they might yet, as Paul said in Eph 5:14: "Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light" as well in Col 1:27: "To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory:".

Few know of these truths because of lack of study but the beginning study has been done for you. It is time you accept the mantle of study which in first century Israel taught was "the highest form of worship".

Lev 20:77 Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy; for I am the LORD your God (the Jewish Tanakh)

Now let us look more deeply into the websites that follow and read their descriptions.

INTERPRETING THE "JESUS STORY" THROUGH THE 4 WAYS OF RABBINICAL TEACHING

The Websites and our spiritual pilgrimage follow but I must say that what I uncovered when getting to the bottom of the origin of the "Jesus Story" is that the "New Testament Jesus" can be understood in many different ways and in so doing yet communicate Divine Truth to the reader. I have discovered through my 20 years of study that we basically have 3 different ways to understand "the Christ" and the "Jesus Story" as I and others see it. Let it be understood up front that our "Jesus Story" is not "new"; it exits from the beginning of recorded time as found in a host of other nations and other "religions" where this personified central character, often termed "the Krst" or "the Christ", is found to be identified by a host of other names in these different religious expressions. This fact alone should make us aware that something lies behind our "Jesus Story" other than a supposed "literal" and "historical" person. We at Bet Emet Ministries have covered all 3 different understandings and presentations of this "Krst" or "Christ" which is termed "Jesus Christ" in our Christianity and the presentation of our research is distributed throughout the totality of our websites. Taken in order our Websites take the student through these 3 different understanding of "the Christ" in systematic order where we progress from our supposed inherited "literal-historical" approach to the understanding of "the Christ" to the ancient "Mystical", "Mythological" and finally the "Metaphysical" understanding of "the Christ" as taught by the ancients down through recorded history until the 2nd century and the rise of Roman Orthodoxy. Here is what we find when we do the exhaustive studies into this area:

- Historically...(Divine Spiritual allegory and myth taught through the medium of a personified and presumed historical person; although not accurate to the existence of a historical person yet very important in that it serves as an example to be emulated and followed by all mankind).
- Mythically...(personification of the Sun (the Sun being only the visible representation of the Cosmic Divine Conscious & Intelligent Energy and Divine Mind of the Creator) and its path through the Zodiac and the 4 seasons of the year; the equinoxes and solstices which again personify the growth and Spiritual maturation of the Soul and Divine Mind in "matter" and humanity)
- Mystically...(expressing a hidden teaching, a secret doctrine, given under strict and exacting conditions to approved candidates by the Masters of Wisdom regarding the descent of the Logos and Divine Mind of God into matter, ie., again mankind). Paul speaks of this:

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Are all three methods of presenting "the Krst", "the Christ", or as we know of it as "Jesus Christ" equally accurate to truth? No they are not and our Websites will provide the evidence you need as a "truth-seeker" to not only see this for yourself beyond any doubt but make adjustments in your religious belief system when needed based upon the facts and evidence our Websites provide. Our focus needs to be on correctly interpreting "the Krst" and "the Christ"; both the Mystical and Mythical Christ and then being equipped with this understanding we can then and only then adequately deal with and understand what lies behind the erroneously interpreted "Historicity of the Christ" as seen in our inherited "Jesus Story" which is portrayed and interpreted to us as a supposed person of historical being, the Christ with flesh which is limited to but one person.

It goes without saying that we all begin to read and study the Bible from a "literal" perspective assuming that it is the vehicle for "literal truth" about Jesus Christ, never realizing that these ancient stories were written and were intended to be understood by the writers of this ancient Spiritual Mysteries only as Spiritual Allegories by the original writers and never to be understood as if a "literal" story. That is why we find upon study our "Jesus Story" repeated in identical form from beginning to end all the way back to pre-dynastic Egypt over 13,000 years ago. This "Christ Story" was never intended to be understood as if "limited" to but one person but to the whole of the human race. God had descended into "matte" and humanity had become the Temple of the Holy Spirit and Divine Mind of the whole Cosmos. It is this hidden mystery, that the Divine Mind incarnated into all "matter" and finds Self-expression in all manifestations of "matter", especially humanity, that is lost in our current understanding of "the Jesus Story" we have inherited today.

Bet Emet Ministries began several years ago to present websites dealing with Christianity which at first adopted this "Literal Interpretation" of Jesus in the "Jesus Story" since the "literal" approach toward Jesus in the New Testament is taught today by almost all of Christianity as they assume that Jesus Christ was a historical person. We all grow up in the Western Hemisphere assuming that the "Jesus Story" is a historical reality; that is until we do serious study of our faith which is required to get to the bottom of this "Jesus Story" and the religious synthesis within it. Only when my studies into the truth behind our New Testament progress to where I uncovered the First Gnostic New Testament which was later corrupted by Rome with its Second New Testament did I see when studying Gnostic Christianity that "the Krst" and "the Christ" (the Divine Mind of the Creator in all "matter") did I come to clearly see the Mystical Christ and Mythological Christ for what it truly represented. Many of our websites, especially the early ones from years ago, begin by approaching the "Jesus Story" from this inherited historical -grammatical method of interpretation because this is how we grow up and first get acquainted with the "Jesus Story". Only by submitting this "historical Christ" under the microscope of intense scrutiny can we be certain that the inherent problems in this interpretation of "the Christ" and the "Jesus Story" is a falsehood and then look elsewhere for its true meaning and find the "Mystical", "Mythological" and "Metaphysical" truths behind all the "Christ Stories" which remained intact for thousands of years until the 2nd century where we find Rome "radically reinterpreting" the whole of the "Christ Stories" and "limiting" this Christ to but one person the access to which only comes through the doors of the Roman Church. Oh, how convenient for world domination and the manipulation of humanity through fear and ignorance. These "truths" I felt were necessary to get to the readers, students, and "truth-seekers" in order to reveal the greater Spiritual Truths that lay within Biblical and Mystical Judaism that are not taught by mainline Gentile Christianity today. As a pastor I realized that it takes time for a "seed to grow" and if I strike out and were to say "everything you believe about Jesus is wrong" I would lose any hope of reaching people with the fruits of my studies. We must understand our Jesus correctly; that is what all incarnational life is meant to accomplish whereby one "awakens" to his True Self; that he is the expression of Divinity and Divine Mind as a human being. We sing "in him we live, move and have our being"; more correctly it is in "us" that God moves, lives, and has His being and it is this agency of the indwelling Christ, not limited to but one, but in all that needs to be restored to humanity so that man can become ONE again with God and all world religions turn their swords into plowshares because we are all ONE.So we begin with the study of the Jewish Roots of Christianity by following the the Rabbinical Methods of teaching and I applied them to Bet Emet's presentation of the "Jesus Story" which we find evolves over the totality of our Websites. There are 4 levels of Rabbinical teaching. Let us learn them now as we return "to the Faith once given the Saints".

PASHAT

The first level of understanding is PASHAT (simple interpretation). The Pashat is the "literal" meaning. It is similar to what Protestant hermeneutics calls "Grammatical Historical Exegesis" and also similar to what Protestant Hermeneutics calls "The Literal Principle." The PASHAT is the plain, simple meaning of the text; understanding scripture in its natural, normal sense using the customary meanings of the words being used, in accordance with the primary exegetical rule in the Talmud that no passage loses its PASHAT (b.Shab. 63a; b.Yeb. 24a). While there is figurative language (like Ps. 36:7) symbolism (like Rom. 5:14); allegory (like Gal. 4:19-31) and hidden meanings (like Rev. 13:18; 1Cor. 2:7) in the Scriptures, the first thing to look for is the literal meaning or PASHAT. This is how and why I developed the first websites and in so doing try to reveal the beauty of Biblical Judaism to the Christian student desiring the truth of his Jewish Roots. For it is in Biblical Judaism do we find our links with ancient Egypt in their purest form thus preserving better than any nation these Ancient understandings of God, Divine Mind, and the Cosmos and man's responsibilities to the Creator. These following websites approaches "the Christ" as an assumed "historical person" yet never telling the reader that behind this motif of a "historical Jesus" lies the greatest deception known to mankind. We will see this deception emerge as we try to verify what our Roman Bibles say on its pages when compared with the Hebrew Scriptures from which it taken. Only by seeing the host of problems that emerge doing such comparisions of Christian dogmas and doctrines with the Jewish dogmas and doctrines as well as the Hebrew Scriptures from which our Bibles inaccurately quotes and purposefully mistranslates does the door "crack open" as to the many problems and falsehoods that lie behind a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of our inherited "Jesus Story". This needs be said for until we see these problems and falsehoods then moving to a deeper understanding and a more true understanding of "the Christ" and our "Jesus Story" has no purpose since being taught since childhood that our Bibles and Christian faith is "infallible, inerrant, and inspired". I will let the evidences which I bring the reader to determine if such an approach to Christianity is warranted and can be proven in light of modern scholarship.

- RETURNING TO THE BIBLICAL FAITH OF JESUS/YESHUA BY EXAMINING CLOSELY OUR BIBLES
- http://www.christianjewishbible.netfirms.com
- (We begin our study by looking at our New Testaments since it is within this New Testament given us by Rome that we have the core of the problems concerning this Jewish Messiah portrayed as Jesus. Here we encounter, maybe for the first time for many readers, a host of unlimited examples of textual and Scriptural falsifications in our Christian Bibles when compared with the prior Hebrew Scriptures which lie in stealth in both the Greek and later English mistranslation of our Christian Old and New Testaments. Hundreds of examples exist where the facts and Scriptural truths that exist in the Jewish Masoretic Old Testament texts are shown to be purposefully changed in the Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures by the Essenes and later incorporated into almost all Christian Old Testaments. Not to be outdone, Rome later emerges and continues the Scriptural falsification on a much larger scale by changing and altering the Hebrew Scriptures and eventually adapting its "literalized" solar-mythology" in their final production...the Second New Testament. Here we encounter the change of these ancient Divine Spiritual Mystical, Mythological, and Metaphysical Concepts as they become altered almost beyond recognition and reinterpreted and attached to the life of the "supposed literal and historical" New Testament Jesus. In order to see how "Mystical Divine Truths" of a "Metaphysical Realm" become "literalized", "historicized" and "limited" to but one supposed person of history one has to trace the adulteration of the Scriptural Texts and the forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures. So it is necessary that we become very familiar with the document called the New Testament which has incorporated such a religious agenda and the creation of a "replacement religion" over these last 1,800 years). This is our "introduction" to the "Jesus Problem" which can be laid basically at the feet of Rome and their "antisemitism".

- RETURNING TO THE JEWISH ROOTS OF CHRISTIANITY...THE FAITH OF JESUS/YESHUA
- http://returntofaithofjesus.netfirms.com
- (The examination of the Jewish and Hebrew Roots of the Christian Faith as taken from a literal perspective. In so doing we expose many of the errors in doctrine and practice of today's Gentile Christianity with special emphasis upon the non-Jewish believer and his Divine place within the Israel of God instead of enmeshed in "replacement religion" as exists today in Gentile Christianity. We pay no attention in this site to the many problems concerning the Historical Jesus and approach the study from the normal assumption that the historical Jesus is true since that is how most of us grew up believing in the first place. In later sites we look at this problem in greater detail but to stress the greatness of Divine Truth as found yet in Judaism today as well as over the last 2,000 years we compare basically "Roman Christianity and its dogmas with the dogmas of Judaism and all the while keep our eyes on the alteration of the Hebrew Scriptures which changed the ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom as found in ancient Egypt and their later children the Jewish nation).

- http://covenantofnoah.netfirms.com
- (Now we look in depth to the non-Jewish believer and how he fits into true Biblical Faith without conversion to Judaism. This is very important information and necessary for every Christian to read and study in detail. This is a very revealing study of the Covenants of God with special emphasis upon the Covenants concerning the non-Jew which are called today the Covenant of Noah comprising the 66 commandments of Noah. Included in this site are Old Testament references to this covenant as well and revealing exposition of this same covenant in the New Testament as taught to the non-Jews in fulfillment of the Great Commission before Rome would change everything in the 2nd through the 5th century. It is here we begin to see the "pattern"; the "Pattern of Worship" which we find is the same for the Jew and non-Jew and how denominational Christianity has missed the mark throughout history due to it's antisemitic background and antisemitic dogmas and Scriptural forgeries inherited by Rome).

- THE BIBLICAL "PATTERN" OF WORSHIP & THE GENTILE GOD-FEARER IN THE FIRST CENTURY SYNAGOGUE-"CHURCH"
- http://jewishrootscx.netfirms.com/
- (Having learned all of this knowledge from the above websites and fully convinced that repentance is needed in our "Christian religious belief system" then the question that should be asked is this one as I see it: "If I, as a non-Jew, who had not converted to Judaism, had lived in the first century in Israel and had come into contact with the Messianic Movement within Israel as we find it in Acts 15 for example, then what would I have been taught about how a non-Jew is to "worship" the Creator"? Is there a "Pattern of Worship" of God that I need to know about? Other questions come to mind: What was I to do having learned these truths about the early Gentile inclusion into the Israel of God? How was I to worship in contrast as to how I learned from Roman Christianity? How can I bring this understanding into my life today? How can I worship the Creator in "Spirit and in Truth" in light of what I have learned in the above websites that has shown me that I have been badly taught and so badly misquided by my spiritual leaders in Christianity today? What lies behind these "Jewish and cultural" expression of Worship of God as seen in the Biblical Festivals as well as the Equinoxes and Solstices? Is there a "Comic Pattern" of worship that is reflected in the Jewish Nation and their Jewish and cultural worship of God? Is there something bigger out there that I fail to see being limited by only the "Jewish expression" of the worship of God? Do I begin with a through study of Judaism and advance to a deeper understanding of the God of the Cosmos? Is the Macrocosm reflected in the Microcosm of Jewish worship? Yes, yes, yes! But all of that must come later. We must get our feet on the ground of Scriptural integrity and learn these "basic principles" and the truth about our New Testament and our corrupted "Jesus Story" before we move into much "deeper waters" and the hidden Divine Truths behind our "Jesus Story". If you want those answers then these forthcoming websites are for you. Now having mastered the above sites we move on to these "deeper Spiritual waters" that Rome never intended you know!

- http://historyofformationofnewtestament.netfirms.com
- (Now we must understand how we actually got this New Testament in the first place with all of its purposeful mistranslation, misquotations, and Scriptural inventions. This study is as best as possible an unbiased and intense study into the New Testament, its origins, its canonization, the disagreements of the early Church Fathers as seen for hundreds of years in the many conflicts and disagreements concerning it; its falsification and purposeful mistranslation of the Jewish Masoretic text, the role of the Essenes in the falsification of the Jewish Old Testament and its impact of the later developing Roman New Testament, and the determination of the role of the Holy Spirit in the production of the New Testament...if any)

REMEZ

The next level of understanding of the Scriptures taught by the Rabbis is called in Hebrew REMEZ (hinting at a prior truth or a hidden truth that goes beyond the current text). Peculiarities and contradictions in the Biblical texts are treated and presented to the reader as hinting at a deeper Divine and Spiritual truth than that conveyed by its PASHAT. The fun of discovering our Jewish Roots, Sabbaths, and Biblical Festivals is over and is in reality only the "introduction" to the deeper Mystical and Metaphysical teachings to come. Now it is time for serious investigation of our inherited faith. Our Websites get more challenging as I begin using the principle of Remez to hint that there are problems with the "Jesus Story" beyond the Pashat "interpretation" and begin to question many of the teachings of Christianity and their presentation of Jesus as the Jewish Messiah. We still approach these issues as if "historical" but as your studies progress you begin to slowly get the picture that there is severe problems with what Christianity teaches about "the historical Jesus Christ" and its presentation of Jesus as the Jewish Messiah. It bears saying again that we approach this information yet as if "historical" but as our websites progress we will soon move to the "Mythical" and the "Mystical" presentations of "the" Jesus Christ. You might say we are in the process of cracking the egg shell regarding the "Jesus Story".

- THE JEWISH CONCEPT OF "THE" MESSIAH....WHY CAN'T THE JEWS AND THE CHRISTIANS AGREE?
 - http://jewishmessiah.netfirms.com/
 - (Now we enter the beauty of Judaism and the truths they taught about their own Messiah and once knowing this then it is easy to contrast them with what we have been taught as Christians that come from our forged Christian Bibles. Ever wonder why the Jews and Gentile Christianity cannot agree on the Jewish Messiah? At last the unbiased truth concerning the Jewish Messiah and with it many explanations as to how the Christian theology concerning the Messiah deviates so drastically from the Jewish Messianic concepts as well as emphasis on the corruption of the Gentile's religious texts (OT and NT) which culminates in the creation of a Messiah which was never prophesied by the Jewish prophets.....the answers for the Gentile Christian are not always comforting but if you want the truth it is here for the interested and unbiased student and true seeker of truth. This is a selective summary of what went before on the other sites where I pull together pertinent information concerning one topic and one topic only: THE MESSIAH. If your desire is to study what the Jewish Scriptures taught about the Jewish Messiah before they were altered and changed as they were purposefully mistranslated into the Greek and later carried over in their corrupted forms into the Christian's Old Testament and New Testament texts, then this material is for you. Along with this site is the examination of text after text not only in it's Hebraic original form but as it was altered and changed thereby causing New Testament believers to ignorantly accept and cherish beliefs about Yeshua/Jesus which not only are incorrect but which render them idolators before God).

- A TRUTHFUL ANALYSIS OF MESSIANIC PROPHECIES IN THE HEBREW BIBLE AS CONTRASTED WITH THE CHRISTIAN TRANSLATIONS...DID JESUS FULFILL THEM?
 - http://messianicprophecy.netfirms.com
 - (A very detailed examination of the Hebrew Scriptures and how they were later altered when translated into the Greek, Latin, and English versions of Christian Bibles. We trace the corruption of the Jewish Scriptures from the Hebrew in which they were originally written and show how these Jewish Scriptures were later purposefully mistranslated, misquoted, misapplied, and even invented in order to alter the human messiah into a "cosmic Godman" by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt. Later these very same altered passages will become forced "fulfillments" when applied to Jesus in later Latin and English versions taken from the Greek forgeries of the Jewish Scriptures. We show repeatedly how the Greek translations were forged in order to include the Essene concept of their "angel messiah" and "cosmic Godman" and later how this concept would be further adulterated when applied to Jesus some two hundred years later through the further forgery of other Hebrew Scriptures by the Roman Gentile Church. In other words we show beyond any doubt how the Holy Word of God has been corrupted today. No wonder the Jewish people don't believe in the Christian Jesus; their Jewish Scriptures read completely different than those of the Christian Church in "key" messianic places)
- DANIEL 9:17-27: THE SEVENTY WEEKS OF YEARS AS TAKEN FROM THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES
 - http://seventyweeksdaniel.netfirms.com
 - (We now look at a very problematic piece of prophecy. Of all the Old Testament scriptures translated and quoted (or purposely mistranslated or misquoted) by Christian evangelicals in hopes of finding validation to most of their Gentile Christian doctrines, Daniel 9:17-27 and Isaiah 53 are perhaps the two most popular. In both cases, Christianity relies on a claim that the only reasonable interpretation of those scriptures is theirs. But is this true? Have our Christian Bibles been forged to force fulfillments as applied to Jesus when the true Hebrew Scriptures read differently than our Christian Bibles? Well...it is time to see the truth for yourself concerning Daniel's 70 weeks and then you decide who is right....Judaism or Christianity)

- THE ESSENE CHRISTIAN FAITH AND ITS LEGACY OF SUN WORSHIP
 - http://essenecx.netfirms.com
 - (As stated earlier Divine Spiritual allegory and Spiritual Myths of the ancients have been "literalized by Rome" and presented to us in our Christian Bibles as if a "literal" and "historical" truth that fits into a time-line of Rome's making. We saw when we looked at the manipulation and adulteration of the Hebrew Scriptures let alone the testimony of Judaism for these last 2,000 years that the "Jesus" of the New Testament is not their "Jewish Messiah". We begin to see this Christian deception through a comprehensive and challenging investigation into the true origins of the Essene-Christian faith as we begin in ancient Egypt and it's worship of God. In so doing we spend some time understanding Egyptian Religion where astral-theology and solar-worship was personified into "savior Godmen" such as Osiris which is the first and the "pattern" of all personification of Divine Spiritual concepts that followed. We trace such personified solar beliefs through successive Gentile nations and make note of similarities as well as differences, until we come to the Essene/Qumran cult, who, in rejection of normative Biblical Judaism because of their inability to assume the Priesthood following the Maccabee war, evolved away from Biblical Judaism and adopted these astral-theological religious ideas which had more in common with Egypt, Persian, Zoroastrianism, Buddhism, Pythagorianism, etc., than with Judaism. The Essene mistake is the same one Rome will make later; they will "literalize" these Metaphysical Spiritual concepts and "historicize" them and apply them to the Jewish "human" messiah in the likeness of King David (historically really the Pharaoh Tuthmose III) until we end up with a "corrupted Judaism" which is more commonly known today as Messianic "literalized" Christianity. It is the same perversion of purely Metaphysical Spiritual Concepts. What we find is that the Essenes "literalized" these prior Divine Allegories concerning Divine Truth of the incarnation of Divine Mind in "matter" and humanity as expressed by the Ancients down through time through the medium of Spiritual myths and symbols. It is in the hands of these apostate Essenes where these Divine concepts were "literalized" and were purposefully included in a falsified translation of the Jewish Old Testament called the Greek Septuagint (LXX). In this Greek perversion of the Hebrew Scriptures the human "anointed of God" becomes a Superman! In so doing these ancient Spiritual and Divine Mystical, Mythological and Metaphysical Concepts lose their original and intended meaning and these "radically reinterpreted" doctrines become parts of the Greek Old Testament for the Greek speaking world and for all later Christians and the Christian Church; thus providing the substrate for all later quotes of the New Testament. The bottom line being that personified Sun-worship which is the ultimate Spiritual and Divine Truth for all created manifestation was applied to the life of the hoped for and expected Jewish messiah as recorded in the New Testament and it is we, not knowing that these existing ancient Divine Spiritual Mysteries and concepts, which were only to be taken allegorically and symbolically, have been misled to see in them a "literal" and supposed "historical" understanding when these ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdoms were never originally intended to be taught as such. In so doing we spend a lot of time with these altered texts in order to see how this was done and how extensive this misrepresentation of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom is exampled in our current Roman Bibles).

- PAUL...THE TRUE FOLLOWER OF JESUS...OR...SUBVERTER OF THE FAITH OF JESUS AND FOUNDER OF A NEW RELIGION?
 - http://paulproblem.netfirms.com
 - (Now we move to the Paul Problem. Let it be said that I am hard on Paul since the "real Paul" has been presented to us on the pages of this New Testament in a particular way and reinforced by 2000 years of Church Tradition. I must say that I deal with Paul "literally" as this is the way he has again been presented to us on the pages of the New Testament and in so doing I spare no ink in pointing out the problems this presents regarding a Jewish interpretation of "the Christ". Understand that this is a very challenging website which exposes the very depth of the deception behind the New Testament's presentation of the Apostle Paul. This website reveals the truth behind the purposeful manipulation of history and facts to cover up the truth about the Gnostic Paul who was supposedly understood by all in the first century to be an enemy of the Jerusalem church and remained so his whole life. I expose what the true religious belief system of Paul really is and show you how, in spite of the incongruities of the Paul Problem in the New Testament, is a synthesis of Gnosticism, Mystery Religions, and Judaism. That is not bad when we see that in so doing we are only restoring the Ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom which had remained intact within humanity for over 10,000 years and only with the rise of Rome fell prey to their "radical reinterpretation" and "literalization" of the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom. Along with this I reveal this Romanized Paul and later pro-Pauline writers purposeful misuse of the Jewish Scriptures in their presentation to the non-Jewish world of a new replacement religion and how they made it seem as if this supposed "literalized" Jesus was the cause for it. This is strong stuff and not for the faint-hearted. We will look at Paul in a different light when he is later put into his Gnostic setting which is historically accurate then we can say "kind things" about Paul then so hold on; we need to find the "real Paul" and we don't have it yet since Rome forged all but 7 of his authentic epistles which he wrote and put his name on them. So we have to be hard on this Romanized Paul since Christians believe that he taught all the things that carry his name. Let me assure you he did NOT! We will see as we study that the blame for this deception is again laid on the lying pens of Rome so we deal on this site as "if" this Romanized Paul was responsible for these writings since we are taught he wrote them all by Church tradition)

- THE PAGANIZATION OF THE FAITH OF YESHUA ...AND THE BIRTH OF "GENTILE CHRISTIANITY"
 - http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com
 - (We move on now to look at more "literalization" of Sun-Worship as it was applied to the Jesus of the New Testament by the writers of the this New Testament. This is a very, very challenging study and expose of how "literalized Sun-Worship and how "literalization" of the Ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom today is masqueraded as "orthodoxy" in Christianity. The subject matter is diverse and will require adequate reading on your part but well worth the price as you learn of the origin of the Divine Allegories and Sun Myths which were later personified by the Indo-Germanic nations and later written into the translation of the Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt. These accounts would be later embellished by the Gentile Church as they applied them to the life of the Jewish Messiah as represented through this Jesus as they build it off the falsifications of the Greek Old Testament as altered by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt. This site exposes the false theology connected with Jesus which lines almost every page in the New Testament in one way or another. It is here we see that our "Jesus Story", taught to us as if a "literal" person, is but the repetition of the prior Divine Solar Spiritual Allegories of the nation's Sungods. Our "Jesus" is shown to be a collection of multiple personified identities collected and handed down through recorded history; such a collection of solar identifies is in truth a "nobody" when viewed again as if a "literal" and "historical" person. Not possessing this knowledge we read our New Testaments never aware that our "Jesus" is in truth not a "historical person" but behind this Spiritual Allegory is the highest Spiritual revelation that is possible to mankind. We just never knew it thanks to the Essenes and Rome's dishonesty with the Hebrew Scriptures. A through understanding of this site, as well as the others of Bet Emet Ministry, exposes beyond any doubt the lies and idolatry that has been foisted upon unsuspecting Gentiles who are yet today pawns of this theological deception and antisemitism of Rome)

This approach, teaching God's higher Divine truths through the vehicle of a godly example, the "assumed historical Jesus of the New Testament", works well up to a point because in doing so we are presented with a "Godly" example of a life to be emulated as found in the Jesus of the New Testament (for the most part). A life patterned after the Jesus of the "Jesus Story" will hopefully issue forth in one bearing the fruit of morality and ethics and a life lived in the Fruit of the Spirit. This is the reason why Israel does not evangelize today because Christianity has accomplished for them their task as God's Priesthood; for better or worse when looking at the Dark Ages and the impact of this "replacement religion". As a pastor I wish they could have accomplished this without the masked idolatry connected with the "Jesus Story". The non-Jew has learned of the God of Israel and has learned how to live in peace and harmony through the teachings of Christianity. Sadly in all of this the main character, the Jewish Messiah, has been so badly misrepresented in the character of Jesus who, for example, is made to cleanse all foods and abolish the kosher laws in Mark 7:14. This is rather strange for a Jew who is obligated to observe Kosher. Hopefully you see the problems of what I speak and they only begin here. Again through our websites the student is made aware of the problems inherent in many places in this New Testament's depiction of the New Testament Jesus and "the Christ within". Yet, in such a presentation this Jesus is the non-Jew's "pattern" for he, real or not, is the only Jew to ever witnessed to us and came knocking on the doors of our lives as non-Jews. Sadly the Jewish community is closed to the non-Jew for the most part due to the tragic treatment of their people by the Christian Church these last 2000 years. As I say often it is sad that when we answered the door of our lives as we heard the "knock" of this New Testament Rabbi named Jesus that we did not possess, at that time, enough knowledge of the truth about "the Christ" and the true "Jewish Messiah" that we could not recognize that this Jew named Jesus, as God's "light to the Gentile world", came dressed like the idolator Constantine teaching a replacement religion. Lacking this knowledge which Bet Emet's Websites provide the student we fell for the Roman "counterfeit Christ" and "counterfeit Jesus" and no wonder the Jews cannot accept this Roman Jesus as their Messiah. Good for them! But hopefully as your studies mature you begin to see that there are other ways to understand the "Jesus Story" but surely understanding the "Jesus Story" as a historical truth concerning a literal person who lived 2000 years ago and who embodied the historical Jewish Messiah is not one of them. Now for enlightenment that will take your breath away!

DRASH

Another level of Jewish hermeneutic and understanding the Scriptures is called in Hebrew "drash" meaning "search", this is the allegorical, typological or homiletical application of the text. Creativity is used to search the text in relation to the rest of the Scriptures, other literature, or life itself in order to develop an allegorical, typological or homiletical application of the text. This process involves eisegesis (reading of the text) of the text. Ironically as I found this expression or interpretation of the texts reflected most accurately the type of "belief" of the earliest Christians (called Chrestians who believed only in the Gnostic Metaphysical Christ within) who were not only looking for a historical Jewish messiah to be revealed but at the same time understood that the "logos" or "the Christ/Sophia/Egyptian Karast" lived within all mankind and could never be limited to but one person as Rome will make it appear. This understanding of "the Christ" reflects Paul and his 7 authentic epistles where he teaches the "Christ within". Now we find the true Paul who, like the earliest Chrestinas, taught only the "Christ Within".

As you might expect a few years later, as time allowed, Bet Emet provided a website dealing with the Mystical Interpretation of the "Jesus Story" and "the Christ" as we showed that the religious beliefs of the earliest "believers" who were called the first "Christians", long before Rome emerged to dominate the Christian faith, did not accept a historical Jesus at all but rather understood "the Christ" as a Divine Concept as Divine Mind that lives within every man and woman and is not exclusive to just one person as is portrayed today by "literalistic Roman Christianity. It is in this site that we restore the earliest Gnostic Christian understanding of the "the Christ" as it existed for almost 5 centuries before being utterly destroyed and almost totally wiped out by Rome with its replacement religion we have today which I call "Literal Christianity".

- MARCION AND THE "FIRST" NEW TESTAMENT...WHO WERE THE ORIGINAL CHRISTIANS AND WHAT DID THEY BELIEVE ABOUT "THE CHRIST"....THE STUDY OF GNOSTICISM
 - http://firstnewtestament.netfirms.com/
 - (Now we put all the pieces together and the whole picture comes into focus. We now look at the true Paul, a Gnostic which never taught a human Jesus Christ but rather "the Christ within" in his 7 authentic epistles. We trace in this website how the earliest "Christian" believed in the "Christ within" and not "a Christ without". We see how the ancient religious allegories were understood not only by these ancients who were given them but by the Gnostic Jews and Gentiles in the earliest centuries of the church as well long before Rome will come an "literalize" all of it and give it a fictitious historical time-line in creating a "historical Jesus". In so doing we will see how the earliest New Testament expressing these allegorical Divine truths is butchered by Rome and destroyed and how we end up with the forgery we have today. Never let it be said that archeology and hard study are not our friends. That is why Judaism has always taught that "study" is the highest form of worship!

An unbiased study of History will show you that there is not a shred of legitimate historical evidence anywhere that the "Jesus Story" originated as the biography of a man named Jesus, and quite a lot of evidence that it did not. An unbiased through study of Comparative Religion will reveal to you that the basic plot of the "Jesus Story", from beginning to end, including the motif of a crucified savior, already existed in many other religions thousands of years prior to the alleged time of Jesus and if you continue such dedicated studies into Astronomy and Solar Mythology you will find that beyond any doubt the "Jesus Story" is nothing more than an allegory for what would naturally be the oldest and most important story humans would notice and write down; namely, that of the annual passage of the seasons of the year and the path of the Sun through the celestial sphere and the 12 Houses of the Zodiac during the year. Personification of the Sun through the sky as found in the story of ancient solar and lunar gods follow in chronological procession through the year the exact chronology of the "Jesus Story" when personified from Matthew chapter 1 through Matthew chapter 28. This truly is the most amazing study.

This website will be a lot different from anything you most likely have ever studied. Growing up in the Western Hemisphere we are traditionally taught a "literalistic" and not an "allegorical" or "symbolic" understanding of Christianity. This "literalistic" interpretation of "Jesus" and "the Christ" is based upon the inherited religious documents we received from Rome which we were taught to accept as infallible and inerrant without every questioning them. However great advances in Biblical Studies and archeology have been made in the last two hundred years and one in particular in the last 50 years has made a startling impact upon Christianity and few know of this. I am referring to the discoveries of the Nag Hammadi Library along with the Essene's Dead Sea Scrolls in the last 50 years which has turned our traditional Roman understanding of Christianity upside down and basically taught us that almost everything we had through we had "known" from Roman Christianity up to now concerning "Jesus" and "the Christ" was wrong. That is simply because when we discover from study of these archeological finds and see for ourselves that the First New Testament written and given to us by the earliest Gnostic Chrestians like Marcion and Paul did not teach a "human Jesus Christ" but rather an allegorical and symbolic "Indwelling Christ Only" as the Logos within each of God's children. This explains why there were no genealogies, birth or infancy narratives, or the 4 traditional Gospels in the earliest Gnostic Gospels and not added to the Roman Second New Testament till after 180 A.D. It is this "allegorical Christ" and "allegorical Joshua-Jesus Christ" ["pattern"] that the earliest New Testament and the authentic Pauline epistles taught but few know this today since Rome's efforts to destroy all of this literature by burning the libraries of the world as well as murdering the Gnostics until few remained to safeguard this Spiritual Metaphysical Revelation which can be traced to the beginning of mankind. In this website I reveal these truths concerning the "allegorical Christ" of the earliest Chrestians. Along with this we tackle the difficult problem of Christian forgeries of later Pauline Epistles and Gospels in their attempt to create a "historical Jesus" and a "historical Christ" in order to mimic their Godman-Emperor. This information goes a long way not only in explaining the lack of credible and unforged evidences for a historical Jesus but shows how a Second New Testament was latter forged in Paul's name, who was long dead, along with the names of long dead Apostles in Rome's attempt to place a historical Jesus of their creation within an appropriate time-line. By comparison of what was written and contained within the First New Testament with what was later written later by Irenaeus and others in Rome's attempt to refute the Gnostic Christ and the Gnostic Joshua-Jesus we can easily now come to terms with this creative theology of Rome which was little more than a synthesis of "literalized" Sun Worship as exposed on our other sites. What should strike you as you study these materials is that the concept of the "Logos" and the "allegorical Christ" goes all the way back to the beginning of mankind where God gave Revelation of Himself and His plan to the Ancient Egyptians who first wrote of the Karast/Christ and provided the "pattern" adopted by all later world religions until the rise of Rome!

SOD

The 4th and final level of understanding the Scriptures is called in Hebrew "Sod" meaning "hidden". It is here that I reveal the hidden links to Egypt and Astronomy which they "allegorized" to capture for all time the Divine Concepts that they witnessed written in the sky and Heavens above them. The Sky is God's Bible! When you learn to "interpret" the Sky and the stars then no man can deceive you about Divine Truth any longer! God, writing on the blackboard of the sky and Heavens, expressed to these Ancients sages and Priests eternal Spiritual principles that were later captured in "myths" and "legends" to preserver for all time these Godly truths that would last through all time and yet today survive in spite of the destruction of Egypt by Alexander the Great and later Rome. These Laws of the Cosmos were expressed in allegorical Spiritual myths that were reaffirmed by the same Laws witnessed operating in Nature. Ancient man, understanding that these same Laws operated within himself and his body saw therefore that "he was created in the image of God"; the image he witnessed operating above and around him when noticing the same Laws and Cycles in the Heavens and in Nature operating within his physical body as well. This is truly beautiful when you see it as it brought tears to my eyes to see and comprehend Gods' earliest message to me and you that has not been changed or adulterated by the agendas of men and apostate religions down through history. It is so simple when you see it. That is the way God intended it to be in the beginning but we strain at a nat and swallow a camel today with our highly developed and evolved theologies down through Christian history.

It has been a hard and long process for me to accomplish but my task is about through when I complete this website on the "Mythical Jesus Christ" as seen in the stars.

Now it is time to devote this website to the comprehensive understanding of the "Mythical Christ". In so doing we will prove that the "Jesus Story" is actually an allegory for the path of the Sun "personified" as it travels through the 12 Houses of the Zodiac and through the 4 seasons of the years (the Spring Equinox, the Summer Solstice, the Autumn Equinox, and the Winter Solstice). You will come to see that this is the oldest and most important story humans ever knew as it also is full of Divine Truths that are to be understood "allegorically" and not "literally" as we have erroneously been taught today by a literalized Christianity of Rome's making. The Sun was viewed by the ancient Spiritual Masters as the "visible representation" of the "invisible hidden reality" of God. This Sun and its path through the Heavens is repeated over and over again for mankind so that man cannot miss the Truth and Message of God involving the Spiritual evolution of his Soul. It is we today who have not a clue to this Great Bible in the Sky. We owe a great debt to Ancient Egyptians and their great wisdom and their foresight in preserving for the the world this earliest understanding of God and Divine Mind and its incarnation into "matter" and humanity where we trace by looking at the path of the Sun the birth, life, death, rebirth and progressive Spiritual Evolution of man's Soul.

- THE EGYPTIAN RELIGION AND ITS RELATIONSHIP TO JUDAISM AND CHRISTIANITY
 - http://www.egyptcx.netfirms.com/
 - We have all heard that "all roads lead to Rome" but in reality all roads lead to Egypt. This is especially true when one studies Christianity and Judaism and finds that these sister-faiths are nothing more than evolutionary developments of the Egyptian Religion. Understand from the beginning that Judaism is a much more faithful picture of this Planet's original understanding of the Divine than Christianity. Judaism comes in a close second. As a Pastor I am amazed where my studies have taken me and the things I have learned over these last twenty years in my pursuit of Jewish Roots of the Christian Faith. Never did I expect to find what I have uncovered and consider myself fortunate to live in an age where archeology and other such disciplines are giving back to mankind what Rome destroyed, covered up, and took from us over the last two thousand years. The study of error is often a little less important than the study of truth. The history of the human mind, in its progress from ignorance towards knowledge should tell us the mistakes into which it has sometimes wandered, as well as its steps in the right path. This is the goal of this website: to re-examine Gentile Christianity as to its earliest roots and determine if what is considered "Christian orthodoxy" today is a faithful representation of the earliest understanding of God by the Ancients since it is they who coined the religious concepts which we are told that we adhere to today in the primarily Christian Western Hemisphere.
 - There is much to say about the knowledge contained in this Website but let me be brief. This website will reveal to you how the Ancients understood the message of God and His revelation to them from their critical observations about the Heavens and the sky as well as Nature. The Egyptians Priests and scholars understood that God was revealing His Laws and intentions in the operations of the Divine Laws that governed the Cosmos. These Ancients holy men saw that these same Laws operated within their own bodies as well and that they were "created in the image of God" as what God was doing "above them" and "around them" He also was doing "within them". These Ancients sought out God and His way like no other nation has ever done on the face of the earth and tragically this knowledge was lost to us until only recently with the discoveries of archeology. We must understand that when allegory, metaphor, simile, and myth which expressed both the identity and actions of the Creator as understood by the Ancients in grasping for understanding of God and His workings in the Cosmos, was altered and stripped of its symbolism and rendered for all time as if "literal" by those who will come later through "conquest" and destroy Egypt and their understanding of God, then not only is Divine Truth lost forever but it plunges its recipients into abject idolatry. Such is the plight of the primarily Christian Western Hemisphere as these allegories and metaphors that once expressed Divine Truth were altered by Rome and "literalized" and applied to men's lives; in this case Jesus. If you have been diligent to study the website referenced just above this one then you saw for yourself this tragic loss of Divine Truth by Rome's "literalization" of such Egyptian Ancient truths concerning the "Logos" and "the Christ".

- ASTROTHEOLOGY AND THE "JESUS STORY" OF THE NEW TESTAMENT: DOES IT ORIGINATE WITH THE STARS?
 - http://jesusastrotheology.netfirms.com/
 - This website is presently under construction*. This will be the last website for Bet Emet Ministries and in so doing we will go where few have gone. In this website we will show beyond any doubt from Astronomical examples of the Sun, Moon, Stars, and Constellations, that the Ancients preserved what they witnessed in the stars and Heavens seen in the cycles, patterns and paths and movements of these Heavenly orbs in "allegories" and in "myths" and "legends" not only concerning physical movements of these Celestial orbs as taken from their observations but expressed within these "solar myths" and "lunar myths" deeper Divine Truths of a Mystical Nature. These hidden deeper Divine Revelations from God to mankind dealing with the Spiritual Nature of mankind and his expected Spiritual maturation were again saved for all time through the agency of Myth which was never to be interpreted "literally" but rather were to function as "allegories" and "symbols" only that were but vehicles for transmission of higher truths from God. From these celestial patterns the Ancients extrapolated the Laws, Ordinances, Commandments, and Covenants of the Creator and gave them to mankind as a "blueprint" for our existence. These myths held the message of God to mankind. Later these myths were told through lives of personified man-gods like Osiris, Dionysus, Attis, Amon, Mithra, and Jesus. Since we include Jesus in the same sentence with other astral myths then this will be a hard study for as you examine the evidence presented you will see without a doubt that an unbiased study of History shows that there is not a shred of legitimate historical evidence anywhere that the "Jesus Story" originated as the biography of a real historical man named Jesus. In fact the evidence, or should I say the lack of it, and the forgery of all that does exist outside this one New Testament, is hard to deny and makes a belief in a historical Jesus almost impossible when knowing from the above studies the hundreds of forgeries in the religious texts of the Christian Bible. Nowhere outside of this one forged book by Rome can we find this "historical Jesus". As if that was not enough an unbiased and through study of Comparative Religion reveals to the reader as seen in the above studies and sites that the basic plot of the "Jesus Story", from beginning to end, including the motif of a crucified savior, already existed in many other religions thousands of years prior to the alleged time of Jesus and if you continue such dedicated studies into Astronomy and Solar Mythology you will find that beyond any doubt the "Jesus Story" is nothing more than an allegory for what would naturally be the oldest and most important story humans would notice and write down, that of the annual passage of the seasons of the year and the path of the Sun through the celestial sphere and the 12 Houses of the Zodiac during the year. What is most startling is when you see for yourself that the personification of the Sun and its path through the sky as found in the story of ancient solar and lunar gods follow in chronological procession through the year the exact chronology of the "Jesus Story" when personified from Matthew chapter 1 through then end of the book. The Synoptic gospels follow the path of the Sun in its travels through the sky from beginning to end. Most may have no idea of what I am saying I can only tell you to hold on and read the articles on this site and you will quickly come to see of what I spoke. Let it be said when you see this and that all the other "Jesus Stories" are but Ancient allegories of the Heavens and the Sun and its path through the Zodiac which was later "literalized" then without a doubt there is no more room for idolatry connected with any Jesus of any kind. Then we can follow in the footsteps of Moses and quit worshipping a false "god-man" and return to worshipping our Creator in Spirit and in Truth. You come to see that the "Jesus Story" is nothing but a retelling of the "Osiris Story" and the "Horus Story". It is from these two Ancient Egyptian stories that all other "saviors" have come.

Orthodox Christians, since they are committed to a belief in the literal truth of the Bible, hold that after the flood men became even more evil than they were before, so that 4,000 years after the creation of the world, god sent his only begotten son to suffer and die for the salvation of the human race. This ministry of Jesus, the Christ, was supposed to be a unique event in human history but as we show it is anything but that; it is the repetition of everything that came before. This opinion of Jesus' uniqueness is no longer tenable among those who accept reason as the criterion of truth.

If you are diligent to study and read these websites then you have it all. There is little that exists that is not covered in one way or the other or has somehow escaped my attention over these almost 20 years of study. There is nothing I would trade for my years of study and the truths that I have gathered and although it has been challenging to my very core I fully am aware that because of such serious studies my walk with God, the true God, is closer than ever. It is truly well with my soul because "I KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT HIM SEPARATED FROM ALL THE FICTION" that men have written down through history to promote their own religion and political agendas.

- THE SACRED MYSTERIES....OUR LAST WEBSITE
 - http://thesacredmysteries.netfirms.com
 - This is what we have been waiting for; the conclusion of all of our websites and the final answer as to just "Whom" is this "Jesus" we have heard about all our lives and how this should affect our lives for the better. Central to the ancient Spiritual Wisdom is the concept of the Divine Spark/Cosmic Fire or seed buried within each person. It was the purpose of the ancient Spiritual Mysteries to bring to life this Divine Spark in the life of every person so that it would illuminate life on this Earth and so aid mankind in its Spiritual evolution of its True Self and True Being which is Divinity "incarnated" into "matter". This Divine Spark embedded within the "animal" body which housed man's Soul and Divine Mind was symbolized by various figures and characterizations at different times down through recorded history and in different nations and places. We find these symbolisms today in the nations as their personified Sungods and Goddesses which are preserved for mankind in the nation's Divine Legends and Spiritual Mythologies. Their names were Horus, Orpheus, Dionysus, Mithra, Krishna, Adonis, Tammuz, Hercules, Ishtar, Isis, Persephone, and even Jesus and so on. They were all labeled by Rome to be "pagan" Christs but these Divine Myths are, when correctly understood and interpreted correctly, are the highest expressions in metaphors and allegories of man's True Divine Self; as Plato has so appropriately said man is a "god in an animal body". The philosophers of the ancient world and even the ancient Egyptians before them knew that these figures were only symbolic of the highest Metaphysical reality within mankind and were never to be understood or taken to be historical men or women; it is we who do not understand this precious ancient Mythology today. Many writers today write of this subject completely devoid of its true understanding and mislead millions in so doing. These Divine Truths in these Spiritual Mysteries are "Spiritually discerned" and eclipse the intellect of many.
 - We will see in this website that over 5,000 years ago in ancient Egypt and some 2,000 years ago in the area of the eastern Mediterranean, the Divine Soul or Spark within humanity was called the Christ (from Krst, Karast or Krist, Egyptian for the anointed ("messiah") mummy). What we find when we wade through all of this ancient theology found in ancient Egypt and the Gnosticism and Spiritual Mysteries of the ancient nations is that early Christianity was nothing new at all; in fact it was originally before the rise of Roman "literalism" only the re-statement of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Gnosticism of the ancient Spiritual Fathers as far back as ancient Egypt and beyond and not a replacement of this Spiritual Wisdom as Christianity as we know it today has tragically become. We come to see that a "radical reinterpretation" of almost all the ancient Spiritual Wisdom was the legacy of Roman Orthodoxy. Christians of any intelligence during the first two centuries at least did not regard their movement as the bearer of the first light into the heathen darkness, but only the republication of very ancient Spiritual Truth. If you undertake this study with Bet Emet you will find what all do; namely, that the earliest of the Church Fathers and their writings attest to this very fact that "True Christianity" (the religion of "the Christ" within humanity) has been with mankind since the beginning of time. Augustine's quote to truth will wake the dead! Sadly today Rome as "radically reinterpreted" all the ancient Spiritual Wisdom in order to dominate and control the world through fear and ignorance and in so doing forcing it through the doors of the Roman Church to avoid the supposed "fires of Hell" which don't exist by the way; it worked....we call the legacy of such theological inventionism today the Dark Ages and it lingers in our Churches

Sunday after Sunday and billions and billions of people have walked through their lives following "another Gospel" and "another Christ" never knowing that they never had the Divine Truths that this Creator imparted to humanity in the beginning of its infancy. The truth of this matter is that the indwelling god is himself being brought to birth within the womb of humanity; in you and me. This is our calling, this is your purpose; to aspire to progressive Spiritual Perfection by reaching toward the mark of your high calling in "Christ". We come to see in this website that man is a Spiritual Intelligence, who has taken flesh with the object of gaining experience in the worlds below the Spiritual, in order that he may be able to master and to rule them, and in later ages take his rightful place in the creative and directing Hierarchies of the Universe. Man, being himself, is to come to know the Divinity whose life he shares. Each individual is gestating a Divinity within the depths of his own nature from life to successive life. Yes, Christianity taught reincarnation as do all major world religions and did so until 533 A.D. when a vote of hands struck this Divine Law of Science and Physics from the pages of intended Spiritual Truth but once it was heard shouted in the halls of the Vatican.

- Christianity has fervently exhorted us to look into the empyrean to find the unapproachable God. All the while the infant deity slumbers unheeded within the heart awaiting to "come forth" from the "dead". Yes, resurrection from the dead was something to be experienced on this side of Jordan as the Gnostic Paul so appropriately says: Eph 5:14 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. (KJV) Christianity has largely nullified the force of St. Paul's almost frantic cry to us: "Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is within you?" In fact we have heard of it all our lives but never recognized its because "being born again" has again had its "true meaning" radically altered once again by the Roman Church.
- In this last of our website we will see that the supreme Creator was at first given various names, such as the First Cause, the Great Spirit, God, the One. Creative energy emanates from the One and manifests in various ways, depending on the plane or level of existence that is involved. The ancients understood that the the gods of primeval religion were the active manifest powers, faculties, organs of God himself that flourish in the Universe and Cosmos. Nature was understood by the Spiritual ancients as God's body, elemental forces the agents and messengers (angels) of his operative economy, Universal and Divine Mind His thinking faculty and the ultimate contribution His Spiritual heart to mankind and all of this was imparted and incarnated into mankind awaiting "awakening from the deadness" of Spiritual apathy and ignorance of his True Being. The ancient system of Spiritual Wisdom thought it not blasphemy to define the organic structure of deity to explain to human grasp the cause and nature of the world. Reverence was not withheld from even the lowest instrumentalization of Godhood and its manifestation in our physical realm. The ancients deemed it not dishonoring to deity to recognize His being in all things. They saw God manifested in nature, and not as abstracted from nature. And they studied nature as the living garment of God's immanence. In so doing many cultures compare the Creator to the Sun. The Sun pours out its life giving rays, as does the Creator. In order to exist, all life absorbs a tiny amount of energy from the Sun. The Creator is our Spiritual Sun and it is the very embodiment of our cells and their nucleus. There have been various solar gods, such as Ra, Apollo, and Christ but they are all nothing more than personifications of the "Internal Sun" that is the core of every cell in our bodies and the very Living Conscious Energy within each cell that makes the Body of Christ or as the ancient Egyptians termed it the "Body of Ra". We come to see that there are many levels or planes of existence or manifestation. There are terrestrial and celestial worlds (as Paul says), noumenal and phenomenal realms, physical and ethereal planes, material and spiritual bodies, heavens, fairy-lands, underworlds, hells, limbos, Isles of the Blessed, Elysian Fields, the meadows of Aarru-Hetep and homes on high. And the beings on these worlds and planes of existence range from high divinity down to man and these beings are shown to be the very "gods" and "goddesses" of which we read in the ancient mythologies of the nations. The ancients understood that God, through the Law of Incubation and Incarnation, has filled all "matter" with Himself with an intended purpose of perpetual Self-awaking and Self-awareness of Himself. In all that exists, even in mankind, God has His being and He lives and moves and has His being in us as He does in all "matter". Through the Law of Dismemberment God has "fragmented" Himself into infinite Divine Sparks that has "fallen" into "matter" and incarnated Himself into all existences as we see in the Egyptian Ennead, the Egyptian Ogdoad, and Jewish Kabbalah. Here again we see that all the world's religions before the rise of Rome shared the same Spiritual Ideas of God, man and Cosmos. All of life is shown to be perpetually evolving Spiritually until the Universal Mind inherent in all "matter" achieves the "fullness and stature" of the Divine Mind or "Krst/Christ". This is what Paul actually says in Ephesians 4:13 13: "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ:" This is why the "only Christ" that exists is the Divine Mind which "fell into matter" to save the Souls of mankind which equally "fell to their deaths" in "matter". This Divine Mind we see in his "fall into matter" was termed by the ancients the "death of Christ" as they recognized this "fall" of Christ to his "death" involved the "crossing of planes" of Celestial existences and termed this the "Crossification" or the "crucifixion of the Krst" or "the crucifixion of the Christ" in order to save the Souls trapped in Amenta/Hades/Hell and material incarnation in "matter". This is the only truth taught about the allegorical "dead of God" or "Krst/Christ" which was taught for thousands of years and existed in such integrity in all of the nation's ancient Spiritual Wisdom and was always taught in all world religions and their Spiritual Myths and Divine Allegories down through time until the rise of Roman Orthodoxy when the "indwelling Christ" and gestating Divine Mind was "externalized" and "separated" from humanity and confined to but one person of Rome's historical invention, the "Jesus" of the New Testament. In this "Jesus" of Rome's devise we can yet find if we possess the ancient "keys" to correctly interpreting the Ancient Spiritual Wisdom which has been so tragically twisted by Rome the compilation and synthesis of all "incarnated Christs" down through ancient religions which is so perfectly personified down through history by the ancient Spiritual Wisdoms of the major world religions; all having in common the same idea that man is a "god in an animal body" slowly evolving himself in his return to his Fathers' House as the Prodigal Son Divine Allegory so appropriately states. Let me finish this with a quote from Paul: "Know ye not as to your own selves, that Jesus Christ is in you, unless ye be reprobate?" (2 Cor. 13:5). It is here we find the ONLY Christ ever given humanity and mankind will ever know! It is here we must call forth the Christ "from the dead" within us: "Come Forth" must be our cry as we find the Son, the Divine Mind in us, calling forth the Father from the "dead" within us and all humanity as we see so clearly in the resurrection of Osiris by Horus, his Son, the Egyptian Christ, which is re-told in the "Jesus Story" where the Jewish Christ calls Lazarus forth from the dead; "L-Asar-Us", is Egyptian for Lazarus in Hebrew. Here we see "Asar" is Osiris, the Father God of "the Christ", who is called forth from the death to which is "fell in matter" . Here we see Horus calling his Father God Osiris from the dead within in all humanity to where humanity comes to know its True Self as Divinity in "matter". Humanity is to experience the Lazarus story personally. The cry is to come forth for every person as Paul shows us: Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV) Shame on you Rome for such a terrible deception that has robbed from mankind these last 1,800 years his true Divinity and purpose of his incarnation!

So we began our study with the question:

Matt 16:13 13 When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? (KJV)

Now you have you the "plan-o-gram" to find all the answers! ?The rest is up to you to study to show yourselves approved by verifying what we show you then you can be assured that you will not stand ashamed when you meet this Creator face to face when you cross your Nile/Jordan...(the same)

IN CLOSING

As stated earlier we begin our study with Bet Emet Websites with a "historical" assumption and present studies to show the beauty of Judaism over the dishonesty in Christian theological dogma and do so by using the depiction of the New Testament Jesus as if "historical" because he provides a vehicle for the teaching of Jewish theology, monotheism, morals, values, ethics, etc. It is not my purpose to reveal the weaknesses behind such a historical presentation of Jesus at this time as it will be developed and proven at a later time as one's studies progress through the Mystical Jesus and the Mythical Jesus as detailed on the above websites.

Of concern for us of course is the "Jesus Story" as depicted in the New Testament and its reliability as understood "literally" since it is being taught as a literal truth today about a historical man who lived 2000 years ago. You will come to see in time as you study that the Ancients as far back as Egypt understood this "Karast/Christ" entirely different from how we have been taught today under the direction of Roman and Protestant Christianity. Here are some big questions for you to ponder in light that most Christians trust in this Jesus Christ for their Eternal Salvation.

- Answer for yourself: Who or what is truly behind the name "Jesus Christ"? Can it be proven that the "Jesus Story" is nothing but the personification of the Sun and its passage through the various houses of the Zodiac as it passes through the 4 seasons and the equinoxes and solstices? If so then what do you do now?
- Answer for yourself: Are the infancy narratives and later depictions of the life and ministry of Jesus Christ in the New Testament nothing more than solar stories told as allegories which were later "literalized" and subsequently written into Rome's New Testament and depicted as a literalized historical Jesus Christ when in fact they were understood by the Ancients as astrological myths taken from astronomy?
- Answer for yourself: Did Rome destroy the Gnostic Christ of the earliest "Christians" which had existed since the beginning of time over the first 5 centuries of the early Church and replace it one of their own making? What are you to do when you see this from your studies on our Websites?
- Answer for yourself: If I study the Websites and find that the "Jesus Story" follows chronologically the Gospel of Matthew from chapter one through the end of chapter 28 and see for myself that the "Jesus Story" presented there parallels identically the personification of the Sun in its path through the Zodiac then what should this mean to me regarding my belief in Jesus as the historical Christ and him being the Jewish Messiah?
- Answer for yourself: Have we as Christians and followers of the "the Christ" been deceived by Rome and spent a good part of our lives worshipping a man as God as Rome has declared in their New Testament since the Nicean Council (325 A.D.) when in fact we should have been worshipping the one true Creator as the Pharaoh Moses (Akhenaton) instructed when he stood up to the religious establishment of Egypt when some were straying from the truth in their worship of the "godman" similarity to what we have done today with Rome's historical Jesus? Are we guilty of idolatry as Christians because we have believed a fable no more real than Snow White and the seven dwarfs?

Well the following studies in the above websites is not for the weak of heart as I will present over and over again infallible proofs that the "Jesus Story" as depicted in the New Testament is but a hoax perpetrated upon us by Rome in their hatred of the Jewish faith and Jewish Gnosticism back in the first century. You will see, in the last websites depicting the Mythical Christ, as we move chronologically from one sign of the Zodiac to the other, from month to month, from season to season, from Spring equinox to Summer solstice, from Autumn equinox to Winter solstice, and repeating again this cycle, along with the study of selected events from the depiction of the life of Jesus in Rome's New Testament, that if you study with us and finish the studies on this website, that the "Jesus Story" as depicted in the New Testament is nothing more than the literalization by Rome of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac along with other solar myths later incorporated into their "Jesus Story" as later literalized by Rome as well. In so doing you will see as I and many others have that we have not been taught the truth about "the Christ within" and how He is so integral to the proper worship of the Invisible God as Egypt and Moses taught. It would seem that Egypt got it right in the beginning but thanks to Hellenism and Romanism we lost these earliest and correct understanding of Divine Concepts witnessed in God's Heaven and Nature. In a way these were our classroom and where we were to be instructed by the Creator about our life and purpose in God's creation. We are truly blessed today to live in an age where archeology and the information age can bring these truths back to life for you and me.

As a "retired Pastor", and moved by what my studies revealed over the years, I feel moved to share this information and evidence from such studies with those interested in the truth behind the origin for "Jesus Story" which is taught to the world today as a historical reality when in fact it is not. In the websites that are delineated above such evidence is presented to the reader in hopes that the missing puzzle pieces concerning the "Jesus Story" will be plainly evident to him and he can, in the light of such knowledge, no longer be deceived by the astrological allegory of "the Christ" as found in the New Testament which is erroneously taught "literally" today. I make very few promises to our readers but I make this one now: If you do these studies, and read these articles on this website then you will be thoroughly convinced as I was that the "Jesus Story" was never meant to be understood "literally" as it has been taught to you and me. Thus the worship of Jesus as a historical person or connecting this assumed historical person with God or believing him to be God is the most vulgar idolatry according to Moses and the Ten Commandments and a terrible affront to the Creator and constitutes blasphemy of the Name of God.

Currently Bet Emet Ministries offers a CD with all our websites contained on it where the above information is available for easy search and study where you can work through this material at your leisure. If you would desire the synthesis of our scholarly studies into these areas concerning the origins for the Christian faith and the truth behind "the Christ" and the Jewish Messiah along with the "Jesus Story" then one is available for a small donation to support the efforts of this ministry. Inquire if you so desire by e-mailing me at the link below. Shalom.

We offer a CD of all out websites contained on one disk if you are interested with detailed instructions as how to study them "in order"...please inquire for the CD for such through study will take you some time if you ever hope of cracking the "Jesus Puzzle"

Greetings

In response to your request for the CD from Bet Emet Ministries, a CD that contains all of our published studies, sixteen websites, total, sites on very important areas of thematic studies that provide the "key" to proper interpretation of Christianity as it exists today, then we ask that you consider a small donation to our ministry that allows us to continue to procure necessary materials to further our studies in these important areas that archaeology and Egyptology today are bringing to our attention. I ask that you consider a minimum donation made out to Craig Lyons of $50.00 for literally my life's work...twenty years of scholarly study into the true origins of the Christian faith, the origin of the Bible and the true people who wrote these religious and Spiritual documents that came to be included in the Bible. As you will see, the origin for our Bible stories do not rest with the Hebrews or Jews, but with the Ancient Egyptians originally. Along with the CD is included a very important 10 pages of detailed instructions as to how to approach these studies and study them "in order." There is a certain and proper path, or order if you so wish to call it, in which these studies need be followed, studied and addressed for their maximum benefit to the student. It is rather like climbing the stairs of ancient knowledge...you cannot get to the 16th step without properly traversing the steps between each other in "order" if you desire to obtain the goal in your pursuit of Spiritual truth. Such a sequential order assures a constant and progressive evolution of thought and understanding. This "order" in the study of these sites is critical if one is to build upon this new knowledge and follow the studies one step at at time and not get "lost" or overwhelmed by so much "new information." So often we read the end of the book first and get confused or just quit, or worse, we get scared not knowing how the teacher arrived at his conclusions. Fearful or overwhelmed, many stop their quest for Spiritual truth and their incarnational evolution stops. Hence, this information, approached in sequential thought, is of a vital necessity if one is to trace the evolution and man's departure from these Ancient Divine Spiritual Truths that all mankind were once given in the beginning of Creation. It is important to see how these ancient Spiritual truths were held sacred for over ten thousand years before the rise of Roman orthodoxy where they will change radically and rapidly with Rome's "literalization" of the Divine. Today we are so far from this One Truth, this "faith once given the saints," that it is a crying shame and the fruit of such a departure from these ancient Spiritual truths, especially as seen in our country which prides itself of being a Christian nation, speaks of our departure in America today from the Creator's will for mankind. In fact, for over the last 1,800 years, Rome has sadly been the leading culprit and the greatest sinner in this tragic departure from Divine Truth yet both it and its daughter, Protestantism, have churches that fill our land but little truth comes from them, focusing on tradition than the historical-critical study of the Bible. There is hope for your "return" to "the Faith" once given the Saints and this CD will show you exactly what we have "lost" and how we are to "recover it all" once again.

If you would like to obtain this CD with its instructions as to where to begin and how to proceed, then please respond prayerfully with your gift for this abundant truth that will not only change your life as never before, but reveal to you the goal of your incarnational purpose, which is no less that your realization in this Earthly life of the fullness and stature of Christ. I ask that you respond as the LORD lays on your heart to with your gift and support to my efforts and I thank you for your support as we are endeavoring at this time to reach out on a much larger manner if God permits. Please address all checks or money orders to simply Craig Lyons and the CD is out asap. Thank you. Please share this knowledge with others for we are moving into a new age of awareness in a Cosmic sense; it is time for mankind to take their next step in the evolution of its Spiritual consciousness as we strive to become one with the Divine ONE Himself. And this cannot happen without truth and knowledge. Remember, the only religion that God ever gave man was TRUTH!

BET EMET MINISTRIES.....THE "CD" AND HOW TO USE IT PROPERLY IN YOUR STUDIES

Greetings...from one "truth seeker" to another.

I want to personally thank you for requesting our CD, the collection of our studies at Bet Emet Ministries into the origins of Christianity and the hidden truths behind "the Christ" which are not taught today but have been with mankind since the beginning of time. I wish to personally thank your for your support of our ministry and your prayers for our endeavors in trying to restore this hidden wisdom to mankind which has been deprived from us today by Christian censorship down through Church History.

I know this amount of information and knowledge can be overwhelming at times but remember this is a collection of my studies into the origins of Christianity and "the Christ" totaling almost twenty years. What you must keep in focus in such a study is that when ALL of the present knowledge is sifted looking for truth using as unbiased "scientific method" as possible then we find that down through history the spiritual masters of our race have understood "this Christ" that dwells within us as the manifestation of God and Creator in 2 basic ways:

- The Mystical Christ...every nation has had a different "name" for this same Spiritual Concept that dwells within man (Horus, Osiris, Dionysus, Krishna, Attis, Adonis, Mithra, Quetzalcoatl, Jesus, etc).
- The Mythical Christ...these above Metaphysical concepts were expressed by the Spiritual Masters of antiquity in allegories, metaphors, myths, and legends handed down since time began. We see the same idea of the transfer of this Spiritual information being transferred to mankind in both the "lesser" and "greater" mysteries of the priesthoods of the ancient religions; even the Jesus' example shows us this type of instruction as seen in the "parables" for the common folk and then the disciples being taken into the "mountains" for a "higher consciousness" and understanding of these Metaphysical ideas of Spirit and its "impregnation" into "matter" and its "indwelling" within humanity. This again we must remember all occurs "within the human being" and that the "Kingdom of God" is within humanity not outside humanity. This is the core of the ideas of God incarnated within all humanity; not limited to but one person as Rome will later devise.

Over time we find that from these above two methods of interpretation of God and His Christ, His Divine Mind "within us", all of which were allegorical for Divine Metaphysical concepts, that there developed a 3rd interpretation of "the Christ" at the hands of Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century:

- The "Historical" and "Literal" Christ as confined to but one person.

No matter how far you go back in time and no matter in what nation you look you find that the first, and in my opinion, the most correct understanding of God and His relationship to "matter", ie., mankind, is found with ancient Egypt and the nations that learned of the Creator from them. It is here we find "the Mystical Krst/Karest/Christ" and the "Mythical Krst/Karest/Christ" and when correctly understood and this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom correctly interpreted, once these "keys" are restored, one comes to see that these most ancient religious beliefs and understandings of the Divine and the Deific Mind of the Universe as taught by ancient Egypt, the fathers of the later Jewish nation, hold the greatest understanding and secrets of "God" Deific that exist on our planet even yet today. Opinions on Egypt are divided today but there are scholars emerging today that challenge the current mistaken understanding of Egypt expressed by such current voices as Mark Lerher and Z. Hawass and these modern scholars are restoring the greatness and understanding of Egypt as the world's first monotheistic nation which we see when correctly these "keys" to the understanding the Ancient concepts of God and the Egyptian "Karast" and "Christ" are restored. This ancient Egyptian "Krst" we call "the Christ" today and this "Divine Spiritual Allegory" is the prototype for all later "Christ stories" and "Sungod stories" which are only "allegorical" for the indwelling God and Divine Mind (Christ) within the whole of humanity awaiting "awakening from the dead". Thus the first Bible of mankind was called the Egyptian Book of the Dead; mankind being dead to his true Self and Divinity. You will come to see in time that all of these prior Spiritual Allegories of the Decent of the Soul, the Deific Mind of God into "matter/flesh" were in 2nd through the 5th century "radically reinterpreted" by Rome into a supposed "literal-historical" personage called "Jesus" and to which Rome attached the supposed "only way of Salvation" for mankind and then created a Sacred Book we call the Bible to espouse their false concepts and altered Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients.

Well, we begin our study of this story of the Divine "Krst in mankind" over 15,000 years ago and archeology today is overturning the erroneous understandings we have inherited handed down from that time and and erroneous religious beliefs today which are largely due to Roman religious "reinterpretation" of this Ancient Divine Wisdom and their censorship of this prior "Spiritual Truth" down through church history. It even exists today but is weakening in this Information Age which is beginning to shine the "light of truth" upon the religious deception of Rome over the last 1,800 years. As your studies grow in these areas and as you begin the studies of our Websites you will see progressively why such studies and undeniable facts and information challenge to our very core our traditional Christian dogmas and "religious beliefs". The light of truth once again shines and the student can now see how these Ancient Spiritual Fathers understood God and His Cosmos and His Christ for over 10,000 years in an unbroken succession of "beliefs" and then knowing this then contrast it with Rome's "radical reinterpretation" of it all aided by the burning of all of the world's major libraries to cover up their deception. You will, now being equipped with the "first Divine Truth" see for yourself how what we have been taught today about the "historical Christ" and the "historical Jesus" from Rome with their Second New Testament cannot hold up to scrutiny in light of the prior unbroken understanding of the nation's "Christ Stories" which parallel our "Jesus Story"; all of these stories again now being seen as they were understood by all....Divine Allegories never taken by anyone to be "historical" and "literal". They described "mankind's condition" that is unique not to one but to all of humanity. This limitation of the Divine Mind and "Christ" to but one person is the great Roman lie to which they tied the whole of salvation of mankind and of course in so doing made sure that such salvation only comes through the doors of the Roman Church. Through fear, ignorance, and a complete "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom the mind-control of humanity under the influence of Rome was now complete.

Being born into Christianity we inherited a "Literalistic" interpretation of almost everything we read in the Bible never knowing without serious study that this book was at best as an allegory placed in the historical development of the Jewish people (the biological children of Egypt). We, not knowing this, read this book with "literal glasses" never realizing that what we were reading were at best "blurred" religious concepts of the Ancients which they never interpreted "literally" but only "allegorically" or "metaphorically" but yet even at that when understood as "allegories" they expressed a "literal" Divine Truth which has come to be almost burred beyond recognition today in this "literalistic" understanding which is forced upon the texts; a radical

"reinterpretation" enforced by Rome between the 2nd and the 5th centuries. Once the texts were "doctored" then almost all hope and "keys" to the proper interpretation of this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom was lost to the "average" person. We must never forget that when told through the medium of legend and myth the identities of many of the characters of which we read were but anthropomorphic vehicles designed to express such Heavenly truths and were to be understood not as if "real people" or "historical characters". In other words these "gods" and "goddesses" and "godmen" were never real but expression of the "godman" in each of us when we come to understand that man truly is the "Temple of God" or the "Temple of the Holy Spirit". We are the Divine Himself trapped in matter through the Descent of the Soul from Heaven to matter....flesh. These concepts began with Egypt as did most of what we have hear taught in our churches today in one way or the other although most often than not they have lost their original understanding as taught by the Ancients who first gave mankind these Divine messages and truths. We have lost so much through the "literalization" of these Divine Allegories and Myths. That is why I present in Bet Emet the beginning studies and websites with a "literalistic" method of interpretation as that is where we both began our pilgrimage to God in our birth faith of Christianity. We must have a point of reference to where we are "at" in our lives at present. In so doing I chose to use this inherited "literalistic" method of interpretation to help the "babes in Christ" grow to see at first, for example, the beauty of Judaism as the legacy of Egypt since it is the best and truest expression of these Ancient religious beliefs and revelation of these Ancient Spiritual Masters that we have existing today in the world in my opinion. In this way we contrast the Hebrew "texts" with the forgery of them later in the Greek and later English translations of our Bibles done so in order to give a "literalist" view to this previous existing Divine Spiritual Allegories. In this way we can begin to see how our Christian Texts are "forged" in "very important places" and this purposeful mistranslation, misquotation, and pure invention of "Scripture" was done on purpose to distort the previous Divine Allegories and make it appear as if they were "historically" interpreted previously which our and your study will show you that they were not; not until the 2nd through the 5 century when Rome became the "forgery mill". There is no "literal" "godman" in Judaism unlike Christianity; their hoped for Messiah was only a "human being" anointed by God for a special task and he never appeared according to Judaism. Therefore there exists in Judaism no threat of idolatry unlike what we innocently inherited with our Roman Christianity and Protestantism and their "literalistic" and "historical" interpretation of this prior Spiritual Religious Allegory of the ancients. This enforced "literalism" of these Divine Concepts by Rome over this 300 year period of early Christian history is to be understood not as a blessing but as a curse when your depth of study advances to see the "Gnostic Christ" within which by the way modern scholarship teaches us today was the earliest understanding of "the Christ" or "God within mankind" as held by both Jewish and non-Jewish Gnostic Christians in the early Church. Let us not be so naive to not know that winners of wars write history from "their view" and that this has been done by Rome and the world fed "their book"...the New Testament which an insightful reader would notice the blending of both the "Gnostic Christ within" and the later created "historical Christ without". Rome should have done a better job editing it as they left trace evidences as to their forgery in the very texts they "doctored" over the early centuries. Archeology and the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls testifies to this Greek forgery in the beginning and the later incorporation of it into the Rome Bibles to which Rome only continued to contribute in their anti-Jewish and antinomian "reinterpretation" of this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom which was built upon God's Order and Laws of the Cosmos which promote and maintain harmony between Heaven and Earth (mankind).

I use the "literal" method of interpretation in reaching the student "in the beginning" of our studies with the knowledge he needs concerning such areas of study found in the early websites which deal with Judaism vs Christianity, the Covenant of Noah, the Biblical Pattern of Worship as best expressed today for the non-Jew again as found in Judaism which is without the taint of idolatry, the adulteration and corruption of Christian Scriptures, both the Old and New Testaments, the Roman Re-interpreted Paul Problem, issues of the Messiah and Messianism as viewed from Judaism vs Christianity, Messianic prophecies, Daniel's 70 weeks prophecy, the Essenes and their corruption of the Hebrew Scriptures when they translated them into the Greek LXX, and finally the introduction of sunworship as applied to the Christian Jesus and his depiction in our New Testament. All of these sites are approached with a "literal" view in order to contrast the current understanding and teaching of them as viewed from the Christian viewpoint vs the contrasting points of view as we look at what exists concerning these same "religious views" and "religious beliefs" outside of the Christian viewpoint and how they were viewed before this Roman "literal reinterpretation"; in particular when looking at Judaism and literal sun worship. In so doing we see the contrasts as well as parallels that bring into question the validity and reliability of what we have received as Christian truth through "church tradition" and "Christian doctrine" and "Christian theology" concerning these above issues. This is done to make you THINK! I truly believe that if God is not the author of confusion then this expose has to be blamed on man...ie, primarily Rome and their replacement religion of Christianity of the 2nd through the 5th century, which took the place of Biblical Judaism for both the Jew and the non-Jew. Of great importance is the contrast of the "literal understanding" of the Sungods and Sunworship with the Christian Jesus. This is done to show the reader that there is very little if any difference between the Sungods of the Ancients, their stories, their lives, and their sayings and the Roman presentation of Jesus. We will come to see that unlike before, when these Sungods were NEVER understood as if "literal-historical" people that Rome will through their "reinterpretation" of this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom completely "reinterpret" these Sungods as personification of the Descent of the Soul into mankind into a supposed "historical-literal" Savior (Jesus) to which the Salvation of the whole human race depends. Now you see how this "literal" interpretation must be used first to see and expose such plagiarism and the deception to which we have fallen as Christians who are taught since childhood to believe in one book "only"; the book that Rome forced upon the world at the point of a sword.

That is quite a study in itself; one which exposes the crafty manipulation of ancient Spiritual Texts and their later forgery and sad "reinterpretation" that allowed Rome to deceive millions and millions down through history. Such mind-control has never been found to this extent in the history of this planet and it passes for "Orthodoxy" Sunday after Sunday and few if any ever find the clarity of vision to even question it.

After seeing these things we move to a deeper understanding of "the Christ" when we look at Gnostic Christianity and their "Gnostic Christ"; the "Christ Within" which I believe to be not only the same understanding of "God Within" mankind as taught by these Ancients but the correct interpretation of "the Christ" as first held by the earliest followers of "the Christ" before he was "literalized", "carnalized", and "historicized" by Rome after the Jewish War of 70 A.D. It is here we vindicate the Paul which Rome previously mischaracterized. We vindicate the "real Gnostic Paul" now understanding that our previous attack upon him was due to Paul's presentation by Christianity as promoting a "historical and fleshly" Christ which in reality he did not. Now the real Paul can be seen and his 7 authentic epistles understood correctly and his religious views concerning "the Christ within" be exalted and promoted and given credit where credit is due but laurels to Paul can ONLY come after you have come to see the big difference between an "internalized Christ" and an "external Christ" made by Rome's forgery of his epistles and letters long after his death. We help contrast this "Roman reinterpretation" of Gnosticism and the Gnostic Paul with the earlier "Romanized Paul". This is why I take great pains to contrast the Hebrew Scriptures and religious teachings vs the "Roman Pauline Christology and theology" that we have inherited in our forged Christian Bibles and New Testaments.Let us not forget that the Roman New Testament is a "second edition" and "re-editing" of the prior Gnostic New Testament that NEVER taught a "literal-historical Christ". As I show you these earlier Gnostic Christians taught this same Ancient Spiritual Wisdom inherited since Ancient Egypt. Rome has done Paul a great disservice and dishonored his ministry and name for almost 2000 years presently and few know it due to their lack of study in these critical areas concerning the "Mystical Christ" and the "Gnostic Christ" within. It is in these studies we contrast the "literal interpretation" of "the Christ" (our first studies on this CD) with the "allegorical" interpretation of the Christ which we show goes back to the beginning of time as delineated on our Egypt Christian website as well as the Marcion New Testament Gnostic website. It is here that I expose the fallacy of the "literal" interpretation of "the Christ" and the deceptions behind the "historical Jesus" as a literary creation of Rome when they "carnalized the Christ within" over the 2nd through the 5th century of the emerging Gentile Church. It is here we don't hold back and with prior conditioning of the student and reader by study of the earlier websites I expose the sad facts that an unbiased study of History will show you that there is not a shred of legitimate historical evidence or any untampered or unforged evidence anywhere that the "Jesus Story" as we received it by Rome in their "book/Bible" originated as the biography of a man named Jesus, and quite a lot of evidence that it did not. Outside of this one forged book, the Roman Bible and the New Testament, there exists not one piece of unforged or unadulterated evidence for the historical existence of this man from Galilee. I go on to show the reader that an unbiased through study of Comparative Religion and Comparative Mythology will reveal to you that the basic plot of the Jesus Story, from beginning to end, including the motif of a crucified savior, already existed in many other religions thousands of years prior to the alleged time of Jesus and if you continue such dedicated studies into the Astronomy and Solar Mythology websites you will find that beyond any doubt the "Jesus Story" is nothing more than an allegory for what would naturally be the oldest and most important story humans would notice and write down, that of the annual passage of the seasons of the year and the path of the Sun through the celestial sphere and the 12 Houses of the Zodiac during the year. Personification of the Sun through the sky, the Equinoxes and Solstices, (symbolic of the Divine Living Energy of the Cosmos that the Ancients called "God"), as found in the story of ancient solar and lunar gods, follow in chronological procession through the year, the exact chronology of the "Jesus Story" when personified from Matthew chapter 1 through Matthew 28. Here you see for yourself that again our "Jesus Story" is nothing more than the personification of God's Sun, a symbol of Himself that ancient religions understood was symbolic for a Living Intelligent Energy which is this Cosmos itself.

For an educated man or woman to believe that all of this knowledge and evidence is but "coincidence" and there yet exits a "literal-historical" Jesus to which mankind's salvation depends stretches belief beyond limits of sanity. Besides any serious study of Egypt will show you that this "Jesus Story" existed on 2 levels: the Mystical and the Mythical and did so as far back as 10,000 B.C.E. Only later will Rome come and reinterpret these Divine Truths and forge them into a Historical time line with a fictitious person and in so doing destroy the Ancient truths and Divine Revelation given the Ancients who first developed these "religious doctrines" in the first place. So when you see this, and I mean all of this, then there is no room for a "Historical Jesus". Sad but true. Yet to teach these truths of ethics and morality that is found in the "mind of Christ" to the Gentiles due to the preconditioning of a Jesus-centric faith into which we are born it is necessary to teach through the vehicle of this "Jesus" as our example of the "indwelling Christ" and in so doing slowly begin to widen the scope of the reader's learning and gradually introduce him to these other concepts and origins of the "Mystical and Mythical" Christ and slowly expose the Historical Jesus for what it is; namely, just an ancient Spiritual allegory which was later literalized by forgery of previous ancient religious texts and a drastic "reinterpretation" of this Ancient Spiritual Wisdom as we find in Rome's New Testament in their grand scheme of replacement religion. Sadly Egypt is destroyed today but her children and her truths live among her children, the Jewish nation and Biblical and Rabbinic Judaism. If you want to find the Messiah to come and the "mind of Christ" it is paramount to "unlearn" the errors you have been taught and begin to restore these ancient Divine Truths to their splendor as they once were when the truth was taught about the "Christ Within" by these early Chrestian/Christian Gnostics let alone much earlier in Judaism and ancient Egypt. Only in this way can we see clearly that this Jesus, even in as corrupted view that we received him from Rome, can yet be an "example to be emulated" but for this to happen where God's true salvation message to mankind is no longer connected to some supposed "historical-literal" person who never existed then then we must begin to look into Judaism and into Egyptian religious teachings as they existed before the rise of the Roman Empire. For it is opinion, after all of these years of study, that it is there we find "the mind of Egyptian Karast (Krst)" who is the original Christ, and it is here that we find that the Egyptian mysteries were continued by the Gnostic Christians and the authentic Paul who only wrote 7 epistles and who never taught a "fleshly Jesus Christ". Only when Rome forged the later anti-Gnostic religious writings is Paul given credit for belief in a "historical Christ" which again I and other scholars point out was never his belief nor the belief of any before the early 2nd century with the rise of "some" of the Early Church fathers which received the ancient "oral tradition" to which they begin to give a "drastic" reinterpretation like Ignatius and Justin Martyr and later Irenaeus. But that time it is too late to stop this juggernaut of error we call "literalistic" Roman Christianity and the Dark Ages are the result of such tragic misinterpretation of earlier Divine Wisdom. Only later do we tragically find that these metaphysical concepts revealing God to man, as coming down through recorded history from Egypt, to be destroyed when "literalized", "carnalized", and "Christianized" in Rome.

But some might wonder and ask "where did all this come from originally"? Well I deal with that also in revealing the "Mythical Christ" as taken from Astronomy and Astrology of the Ancients as they read the stars and Heavens and saw within them and the movements of the Cosmos the varied messages of the Creator to mankind as interpreted in the cycles, patterns, the path of the Sun, moon, planets, stars, constellations, risings, settings, eclipses, etc. We will eventually get to the study of the uranograph which is so fascinating. It is all there and the wonder never stops as these Ancient Spiritual Masters saw and understood "Divine Messages" in the Heavens which they brought down to earth and applied to the Soul of mankind and its pilgrimage and development into this "Karastlikeness" or "Christlikeness" which the Creator intended for mankind and his Spiritual Evolution.

All of this might sound impossible to one now who is not well versed in such areas of study mentioned above but believe me these teaching will take your breath away as you see the depth of spirituality of our Ancients compared with the religious fare we are fed today from our Christian pulpits and TV. If you ever wondered "where is the beef" you have found it here I promise you and the recommended book list on Egypt will feed you forever.

In closing it needs to be said that in approaching these sites it is best that you first read the attachment "websites" as I have reworked this presentation and it exists today as a "plan-o-gram" for your studies on the CD from beginning to end. it can be accessed at: http://www.christianjewishbible.netfirms.com Following this "plan-o-gram" will lead you from the beginning of our studies where we contrast various themes of study first using a "literal" hermeneutic in order to see if it can hold up to scholarly scrutiny of such study. Let me tell you right up front that it cannot; in other words what we have been taught in our "literal" and "historical" presentation of the "Jesus Story" cannot hold up to scholarly investigation when comparing many of our inherited Christian ideas and "spiritual concepts" as taken from our Roman Bibles are compared to modern scholarship let alone the pre-existing Hebrew Scriptures which state otherwise which are so tragically and purposefully misrepresented in our Christian Bibles. Let us never forget that our "religious beliefs" are based upon the "texts" and if our "texts" can be shown to be unreliable or forgeries then we have the cause for further study to find the "truth" now realizing maybe for the first time in seeing this information that "we don't have the truth". This is not "news" to the Jews who have for over 2,000 years denied the "literal" and "historical" Jesus as their "Messiah". But is "news" to the Christian Church and only so because we "studied" what was taken for granted by most. We approach many different thematic studies by this approach seeing if what we have told is "true" by our Christian tradition and texts and comparing these "beliefs" with other information that brings it into severe question. When hundreds of such things and "beliefs" which are taken for granted by most because they are "in our Christian Bible" are shown to be purposeful forgeries, purposeful mistranslations, purposeful misquotations, and pure Scriptural inventions when compared with the previous Hebrew Scriptures, then our "Literal" and "Historical Jesus", Rome's only way for man's salvation, fades into the background of a list of Roman deceptions too long to enumerate in this one article. But the "good news" and "great news" is that now our minds are open to consider these "higher truths" the eclipse Rome's perverted "gospel" and we begin to look for the first time at what really "lies behind our Jesus Story" which we can no longer believe to be limited to but one person or be "literal" or "historical". Now we find the highest Spiritual Truth ever given mankind that is hidden even in the teachings of this Jewish Christ. Here we find the "mystical" and later "mythological" and "metaphysical" interpretation of these Ancient Spiritual Wisdoms and their "Mystical Christs" that only dwell within mankind awaiting awakening. This is the only God man ever knew which Rome sent far into the heavens and in so doing separated mankind from God when the ancients always knew man and God are "ONE". This is the best way in my opinion to approach these varied subjects in order where you move from our inherited supposed "historical" view of "Christ Jesus" to the truer "Mystical Christ" and finally to the "Mythical Christ/Metaphysical Christ" which lives "in you" and in so doing keep an organized pattern of such study in order that the study does not get "lost" in such great amounts of information. Understand that this Spiritual deception of mankind by Rome did not occur overnight; it took centuries and no full disclosure of such deception and apostasy from Divine Truth and restoration of Divine Truth can be handled in just a few articles. This restoration of mankind to its True Self and Divinity by which he discovers that he is the incarnation of God's Divine Mind and "Christ" is the goal or all our studies and it can be accomplished quite easily if you do as I recommend and take these studies in order. We begin with a false premise of "literal" and "historical" and proving it a fallacy then we move to the "Mystical", "Mythological" and "Metaphysical" where the Divine Truth of God and man shines like the dawning Sun. It will only require your desire and time to accomplish these studies in full. This is the greatest truth mankind has ever lost and the hope of mankind's future. It is time for the truth and as a retired Pastor with no ambition for a big ministry but for "truth" then this is my gift to those who want to worship God in "Spirit" and in "Truth" the way it is supposed to be done and was done by the ancients who shame our Christian expression of our faith today. We have a lot of "unlearning" to do and a lot of "correct instruction" to comprehend if you want these truths to become alive in your life so lets begin.

Also attached in our websites is our "recommended book list" which you can find at: recommended_books This "recommended book list" shows you where you can go to examine these findings for yourself and I recommend many good books which I own and have devoured over these last 20 years. I have tried to acquire each of these books in my personal library and from them gleamed these hidden truths which I give you in these websites. I leave you with my blessings and again thank you for your gift and support of our small and humble attempt to restore the truth concerning God and His Christ in mankind to the world as He was first revealed to mankind in the beginning of recorded history before greed, ambition, antisemitism, and the agendas of men and religious politics robbed us of such wonderful truths concerning "the Christ within", our True Being!

Now when you get the CD there are several websites "listed". Open one at a time in the "order" given on the "website" attachment and follow the flow of "thought" from beginning to end to keep your study on track and organized. Remember we begin with a "literal" approach because that is what we are taught in Christianity as children and grow up with that mindset. Only by disproving that the "literal" and "historical" approach to the "Jesus Christ" is a falsehood can we ever hope of breaking down in our minds the walls of resistance and erroneously instruction we have most likely received our whole lives. Only then can we be objective as to the truth behind the "Mystical" and "Mythological" and "Metaphysical" truths that lie behind the texts of our Bible and New Testament which were never meant to be interpreted as if "literal" in the ways they have due to Rome's efforts. As you get to the later websites then the Divine Truths of such an interpretation of "the Christ" only as "Mystical" and "Mythological" and "Metaphysical" can be appreciated and seen for the Divine Truths that they always have held for mankind. After each "site" is opened "in order" then look for an "index" file. We are not looking for an "index.hmp" or an "index with a red logo that has a red 'IM' on it". We are looking for just a plain "index" with a logo on the left of it that is like so many other "logos" or "articles" in the same website as grouped together. Just "click" on this "index" and it opens to the "home page" of the website which is placed on the Internet. From this "index" most if not all the websites on the CD will go to a "second page" that follows the "introduction". It if from this "second page" that you will find your highway to other articles in each websites. The journey to truth is not short but remember that "Truth is the highest Religion ever given man by God". Now the rest is up to you. Enjoy.

AN APPEAL TO TRULY LISTEN...NO MATTER HOW HARD IT MIGHT BE IN THE BEGINNING OF YOUR STUDIES

I am sending to our readers the fruit of much research in a rather difficult area. This study will anger some and liberate others. There is no middle ground. To say that many of the teachings and article from Bet Emet Ministries are confrontational is an understatement. But let me ask you, "Do you want the truth before your die" and "Do you want to please God more than your Church and pastor"? Well if you do then I beg you to read these articles thoroughly and completely before making up your mind on the issues presented. I caution you to lay your emotion down and your tendency to defend your traditional Christian tradition and give this new information and facts a fair hearing. Objectivity; so hard to acquire sometimes, is mandatory if you are to gleam from these teachings the desired truths presented and which you indicate you desire by your introductory study into these areas. I know it is hard to discard something you at present thought was always true. I understand this, but what I know, that you at present have not yet seen to the fullest for yourself, is the deception within the New Testament which can be shown today without any doubt and that being so was written by men who defied the Truth of God and presented you with a "replacement religion" long ago which you have accepted "by faith" without any serious reflection, questioning, or study into the origins of our Faith or the Bible you use within it. But if you read and understand the material presented, and apply objectivity, then your quest for truth will be enhanced and you shall acquire truth like never before in your life. You, like I, at one time in my life, only lacked the proper information and proper evaluation of the issues at hand. The traditional Christian lacks information and liberating knowledge that only comes from diligent study, for having done such myself as others have before me, I rest today certain and confident that my life and faith is much more pleasing to God than before where I followed teachings in "one" book which were shown to be less than trustworthy when exposed to the light of serious Bible study and modern scholarship. My calling as a Pastor is to help you, the flock of God, see the truth of God and His revelation to all Souls before it was altered and changed by men of devious natures during the 2nd through the 5th century of this current era. What I am certain you will see when finishing this series of articles on this website is that traditional Christianity is laden with hidden anti-Semitism, anti-Judaism, and replacement religious doctrines which has caused you to err and not know higher Spiritual truths that God desired for you to both know, possess, follow, practice and embody in your life.

With this earnest appeal, I lay before you possibly some of the hardest-hitting religious literature you have possibly ever read. Remember we are encouraged to show ourselves approved before God and this comes through knowledge of "the Truth" which is often obtained through diligent study. Many do not answer such a challenge; I and others have. I lay at your feet the fruits of such diligent study acquired over the last 20 years of my life. It is my desire that I might help you in some small way not stand before God ashamed one day and be totally surprised and ashamed since believing in your life an inherited "Church tradition" and "dogma" which you never personally investigated for yourself as to its integrity and trustworthiness. We are warned of such foolishness, but few heed the warning of "the Jewish Christ" in Matthew chapter 7 and take the course of least resistance and effort in life; a course with fatal consequences.

Matt 7:22-24 22 Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name?

and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? 23 And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity. 24 Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: (KJV)

The world today is in trouble; Christianity is partly to blame. Those who do believe in some form of Christianity are divided into hundreds and thousands of competing sects and denominations; in fact today there exists more than 2,000 different "brands" of Christianity all of which preach a "different Jesus" which at the same time teach "various dogmas" that support their very unique expression of Christianity. This is totally absurd when considering "the Faith once given to the Saints". The definite article "the" tells us plainly that there is but "one" true Faith; at other places called the "common faith" referring to that shared between the "Jews and the non-Jews". If you are truthful you will have so say that your Christian expression of your "faith" has little in common with Jews and the "Jewish Faith"; that should not be! Very few Christians have ever heard that the true Christianity of history existed up and until the 2nd century in the synagogues of the world; there were no corner Church houses and will not be until after the time of Constantine. This earliest expression of Christianity as truly "Judeo-Christianity" and traces of it can be found to have existed up until the 5th century before being basically eradicated by the efforts of an emerging Roman anti-Semitic Orthodoxy bent upon destroying Judaism and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Metaphysical understanding of "the Christ" in mankind.

Today, the "Christian" world is in a malaise. It is confused and its moral system is impotent without the sure foundation of God's law. Secular forces are increasingly dictating the standards of conduct, whereas that used to be the prerogative of religious leaders. We behold the spectacle of sexual perverts taking over more and more key posts in government, in education and even in some of the mainline Churches! We behold the horrifying statistics about millions of unborn babies having their skulls crushed and being vacuumed out of their mothers' wombs! Let us not forget that these same people flock to our Christian Churches seeing no wrong in such actions; they have been deceived by a religion that has lost its "Jewishness"! Today, we behold a society that is truly coming apart at the seams; we behold a society that will soon be directly PUNISHED by the Great God if things don't change. Change comes trough "truth"!

Answer for yourself: Why has this happened to us?

Because our people have been deceived into believing in "another Gospel." I am referring to the Gospel of the "Romanized" Paul and not the Gospel taught by the "Jewish Christ". We will in later studies come to see that many times, in fact more often than not, this "Paul" in the New Testament is really a "Romanized Paul" created later by Rome along with abundant forged theological texts that were given his name. These are later woven into the earliest New Testament of the Gnostic Chrestians ("Christians" were an adaptation of the earliest Gnostic name for the "good Christ"). You need to know right now that another name by which Rome and its particular brand of Christianity was called is the "Forgery Mill". Buried under this falsified and "Romanized Paul" on the pages of our Bible, again given us by Rome, lies intermixed among Rome's forged texts the true Gnostic Paul whom we will meet later in our studies in later websites. With training and education into Gnosticism and the great ancient Egyptian Religion one comes to a point in his life to easily spot and discern the "Gnostic Paul" and his true teachings concerning "the Krst/Christ" in the New Testament apart from those later added and corrupted by Rome in their creation of a "Romanized Paul" which again is made to teach "another Gospel" other than that taught by the Jewish Christ. The bottom line in all of this is that once you see that there is a big difference between the true Gnostic Paul and the later "Romanized Paul" then you realize that instead of the Gospel taught and preached by the "Jewish Christ" through Biblical Judaism which was later only reiterated by the true "Gnostic Paul" we have been taught and fallen for "another Gospel" developed by Rome over the 2nd through the 5th century with their anti-Semitic Church Counsels. We failed to heed the warning of Matthew 7:

Matt 7:13-15 13 Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: 14 Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. 15 Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. (KJV)

Matt 7:24 24 Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: (KJV)

These "two Gospels" are in our Bibles today and they are not the same! Make no mistake about it; there are two competing and conflicting messages and "Gospels" in our New Testaments. "Impossible", you say? Some might say "No way, I never saw it". This just goes to the fact of diminished Spiritual awareness in our Christian nation today because of the famine of the true Word of God and Divine Truths not being preached in our country. A "replacement religion" is a sad substitute for Divine Truth. It has been said:

There is No Religion Higher than Truth (Helena Petrovna Blavatsky)

Regardless if you have seen it yet or not it is a fact; there are two opposing "ways of Salvation" laid out for the Souls mankind in our Bibles. We will see this shortly very clearly. The reader most likely has never seen this for himself; we at Bet Emet Ministries will help you see that the Gospel of this "Romanized Paul" is a contradiction of what Moses, the Prophets, the Gnostic Paul and the "Jewish Christ" both believed and taught. It is here we are introduced to the "literal" and "historical" problems that lies at the very heart of our Christian Bibles given us by Rome. Simply said, this Roman Bible, when interpreted "literally" and "historically" can be shown quite easily today to not be trustworthy to the true history of the time, the events and religious dogmas that existed in the times depicted within it. That is a bold claim you might think, but we, with God's help, can prove it beyond any doubt if you will only be diligent to study along with us. We will show you amazing things if you stick with such study for the end of the road is most glorious; in the end the Bible can be redeemed from tragic misunderstanding and misinterpretation; but this can never be done if one uses only the "literal" and "historical" hermeneutic espoused by Christianity today. Under it all we can find higher Spiritual Truths lifting the Souls of humanity far higher than any crude and debased "historical" and "literal" interpretation could accomplish. The only thing we need from you is time to read and digest what we show you. We ask only for a fair reading and time to think about the things we reveal to you. Thinking on your part is a prerequisite for obtaining Truth and discarding error. The stakes are high, because most Christians today have lost contact with the true God and His revealed way of life for the whole of humanity; in its place they have fallen into the trap of a "feel-good religion" cleverly crafted to assure one never "awakes from Spiritual slumber". The compounded tragedy of the matter is that most of the peoples that set in today's Churches are not even aware of this. Their failure to see and understand what I share does not change the facts as you shall hopefully come to see for yourself.

Now, for an "eye-opening" experience which the Churches have missed for over 1,800 years.

As "the Jewish Christ" said, "Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in heaven. Many will say to Me in that day, 'Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Your name, cast out demons in Your name, and done many wonders in Your name?'

Please pay attention the this next verse and the Greek word used for "iniquity:"

And <2532> then <5119> will I profess <3670> (5692) unto them <846>, <3754> I never <3763> knew <1097> (5627) you <5209>: depart <672> (5720) from <575> me <1700>, ye that work <2038> (5740) iniquity <458>.

Let me say it another way:

And then I will declare to them, 'I never knew you; depart from Me, you who practice LAWLESSNESS'" (Matt. 7:21-23)!

The Greek word for iniquity is as follows:

BDB/Thayers # 458

458 anomia {an-om-ee'-ah} from 459; TDNT - 4:1085,646; n f

AV - iniquity 12, unrighteousness 1, transgress the law + 4060 1, transgression of the law 1; 15

- 1) the condition of without law
 - 1a) because ignorant of it
 - 1b) because of violating it
- 2) contempt and violation of law, iniquity, wickedness

Now let us look at the root word used above and watch closely at what we find:

BDB/Thayers # 459

459 anomos {an'-om-os} from 1 (as a negative particle) and 3551; TDNT - 4:1086,646; adj

AV - without law 4, transgressor 2, wicked 2, lawless 1, unlawful 1; 10

- 1) destitute of (the Mosaic) law
 - 1a) of the Gentiles (DID YOU SEE THIS)!
- 2) departing from the law, a violator of the law, lawless, wicked

Answer for yourself: Do you not see that "the Jewish Christ" is referring also to Gentiles who are ignorant of and who are destitute of the Mosaic Law? How can that be when we are taught our whole lives that we are "not under the Law"? How can that be when we read in our New Testaments that "Christ is the end of the Law"? When was the last time your Pastor used a Greek Lexicon to find the original meaning of the English words of his Bible? Do you see what we are missing here by only reading the English of our Bibles? What else are we missing in the host of words in our Bibles; Bibles which were originally written in Hebrew and later translated into Greek? How far are we off the mark that God intended and don't know it?

Answer for yourself: Could it be that we are violators of the Mosaic Law? How does that relate to a "non-Jew" who was never given these Laws in the first place? Are you aware that within the Laws of Moses are the much earlier Laws of Noah which are 66 Laws given to all the "non-Jewish" races of the Earth and which can be traced back as far an ancient Sumer which is pre-ancient Egyptian?

Answer for yourself: Could it be that as typical Christians who live by this "Romanized Paul's" theology which states that we are "not under the Law" and that "Christ is the end of the Law" are ignorantly violating the Laws of God in areas such as worship, observance of Biblical Festivals, Tithing, etc.? Does the implications for what we have just seen end here with just the Biblical Festivals and Tithing or has it no end? How can we be confident that we are not violating these "Laws" of God that we saw were "hidden" under the English of Matthew 7 and the Sermon on the Mount? Is ignorance of the Law our excuse and will that hold up? Deuteronomy is full of "sins of ignorance" so that won't help! Should we rest easy knowing this since we have a Church's calendar and it has "religious holidays"? Have you ever stopped to think that the "non-Jews" observed the Biblical Festivals up until the 5th century or is that something again your Church forgot to tell you? Did God intended that His Biblical Festivals were to be given to the whole of humanity because Metaphysically they represent the path of the Soul in its incarnation? Well, that's too deep for now but it only goes to show you how much we have missed with our current Gentile expression of Christianity that Rome fed to the world at the point of a sword for over 1, 800 years.

Answer for yourself: Could we be ignorantly violating the Laws of Tithing, for example, in spite of giving our Tithe to our Church who uses the money in ways contrary to how God commanded "the Tithe" was to be used and used ONLY as elaborated upon in the Hebrew Scriptures? That bears much thinking and repentance once you see the truth for yourself, but if I asked a Christian to summarize the Tithe as taught in the Hebrew Scriptures I would find not one who could give the right answer. That's because we never read the Hebrew Scriptures and the Old Testament in our Christian Churches; there is nothing more ludicrous like calling the Bible that Moses, the Prophets, Paul and Jesus used as "Old" when it was the standard for the known world for thousands and thousands of years.

Answer for yourself: If we are not to "add to" or "take away" from the Word of God, then if we look at the Laws of Tithing for example, then should we feel confident that our Church traditions have taught us to defy these Commandments of God as to how His Tithe is to be used and in what areas "only" it was to be used? Where does it say that our Churches are allowed to spend the Tithe in other ways than God commanded? Where is the "exception" that allows the Church to spend the Tithe on whatever it so desires? What about Deuteronomy 4 again which commands man to not "add to" or "take away" from what God said about how and where the Tithe is to be used? There is a principle here; these Sacred Texts are our test of Love for God and this is seen daily in our obedience or disobedience to what God has commanded of humanity.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that such things as correct tithing, correct worship according to a "pattern", observance of Biblical Festivals, and Sabbaths are part of the Mosaic Law and were shared by both Jew and "non-Jew"? Well they were for almost 5 centuries! Again, our Christian experience is lacking in these areas and we should ask "Why don't we if that was the 'pattern' for 5 centuries"?

Answer for yourself: As impossible as it sounds to you, especially considering what your Church has taught you from its anti-Semitic replacement faith given the world by Rome during the 2nd through the 5th century, whether Catholic or Protestant, along with many other things which find their roots in this "Romanized Paul's theology", how can we say that "the Jewish Christ" and his sayings and teachings are wrong in this above verse and your Church and Church tradition is right? Can we be so blind as to believe that our Church tradition is a higher truth than the words of the "Jewish Christ" expressed through Judaism? We better not! But we never knew what lies behind the words of our Bible; we never stopped long enough to look up these words in a Greek Lexicon and Hebrew Lexicon (dictionary) and now having done so our comfort zone in our Christian Church just vanished and vaporized into thin air! We stand naked in defiance of what the Truth truly is which lies behind vague English words at best and study hardly ever entered into our minds as necessary in our Christian walk.

Answer for yourself: Who are you going to believe now? Who do we believe now, especially in light of historical verification that "non-Jews" like you and me who came to the God of Israel through "the Jewish Christ" were instructed in the observance of the Laws of God in the Hebrew Scriptures which include detailed Laws regarding the Biblical Sabbath, Biblical Feasts and Festivals, and righteous giving of the Tithe as commanded in the Jewish Bible up until the fifth century when it all changed? This is only the beginning when contrasting the dogmas of Judaism vs Christianity; it does not end here but is only the beginning of the unveiling of the deception to which we have fallen. There are 66 such Laws for the "non-Jew" given by the Creator in His covenant with the "non-Jew"; not to mention Isaiah 56 which invites the "non-Jewish" world to "choose those other things that please God as well" which are more Laws and Commandments which were originally given the Jewish world as well and which were extended to the "non-Jewish" world in order that these two peoples of God could become "One" in unity. Now, sharing and observing the Laws of God "together" the two branches in Joseph's hand "become one" and God has his "One people of God". Now we did it! Now we are waking up to Truth that we never knew before that shakes the very pulpits of our land.

Answer for yourself: In honest truth, does your Christian experience testify against you; that you have not observed such Mosaic Laws and that you personally are in line to "fulfill" Matthew 7? Do you dare want to know just how far from Divine Truth our Christian experience has led us by only reading the English words of our Bible which are vague at best and in so doing failed to obtain and understand, let alone observe their correct meanings? Did not the "Jewish Christ" warn us to both "hear" and "do"? But ever more where is our true standing before God when considering the host of purposefully mistranslated, purposefully misquoted, and purposefully invented Scriptures grabbed out of thin air which can today easily be seen if one only compares the Hebrew Bible with the Christian Old Testament and its later misquotes in our New Testaments? One only has to begin a serious study of comparing the Hebrew Scriptures with the later Greek and English texts to see for himself such deceptions which up until now in one's life he was totally unaware that his Bible is unreliable and untrustworthy in many "key" theological places. How much further from Divine Truth have we fallen due to these textual forgeries that up to now you most likely never knew? It is time to learn the truth of the matter and let our lives reflect and be an example of Truth and not falsehoods?

Answer for yourself: The more you learn of this "higher Spiritual Truth" then what do you plan to do about it?

Answer for yourself: Christians may scoff at the idea of replacing God's laws with human ideas, yet is this not the very thing the Church has done with some of God's commandments like the ones mentioned above? Who gave permission for the Sabbath to be replaced by Sunday? Who said Passover could be replaced by Easter? Who said the Tithe which is commanded in detail to be given only certain ways and in certain areas of life be used for anything in the Church budget? Who has the authority to rescind what God has originally intended?

We have replaced the 24-hour, seventh-day Sabbath with an hour or two of Sunday morning worship; we have replaced the Biblical holy days with holidays of Rome's invention; we have replaced God's dietary guidelines with our own ideas about what we should eat, and we have replaced giving the Tithe to places where God does not allow nor has placed His name.

Answer for yourself: It is robbery of God to used the Tithes in our Churches in areas like the "general fund" or use the Lord's Tithe moneys in which any way the Pastor or Board of the Church desires? For your information the Tithe in the Bible is to go to ONLY three categories or receptacles:

- 1) the widows, orphans, sick, lame blind, etc., are to receive "all" of the Tithe 2 years out of 6
- 2) you are to keep your Tithe 2 years out of 6 to celebrate the Lord's Biblical Festivals and help the poor to observe them with you, and
- 3) again all of the Tithe 2 years out of 6 is to be given to the Levite or the "teacher" who teaches the truth of God's Word and not the by-laws of your particular denomination. Part of this Tithe was shared with the Levitical singers and "janitors" who cleaned up following Temple services (housekeeping).

I dare say again that this is not your Christian experience. Why not? Has not God said it? Does that really settle it? It should. But again it does not and Church tradition or agendas reign supreme in our Churches while God's Word is conveniently not addressed or quoted in these areas.

Answer for yourself: Do you not realize that if your Church does not distribute the LORD's Tithe accurately then you are a party to "robbing God" and you have placed yourself and your family "under a curse"? No matter how many time you are reassured from the pulpit that by giving to the Church you are "not robbing God" if your Church misappropriates the funds into other areas not sanctioned by the Hebrew Scriptures then you are robbing God no matter how you try to rationalize it. That is why when on staff of a mega Church in Dallas when I had studied the Tithe out for myself in detail I confronted the Sr. Pastor and asked him point blank why all those early years when I had previously set in the pew that I was not taught correctly about the Tithe. I then informed him I could no longer Tithe to this Church where I am "on staff" because they did not obey the Law of God in this area and that my Tithe would be distributed personally into these areas as God had commanded. You see, I erred "not knowing the Scriptures" but that was changing in my life day by day as my studies advanced. Bet Emet Ministries is the fruit of such repentance.

Mainstream Christianity has criticized believers for keeping the seventh-day Sabbath, for celebrating the Biblical holy days, for practicing the dietary laws, for placing their Tithe in other places than their local Church; all things that God has commanded in the Hebrew Scriptures. And mainstream Christianity often commands what God forbids: "Forget the Sabbath. Ignore the holy days and dietary laws, bring you Tithe to the storehouse for the Church is 'the storehouse'" (which it is not!). Dear ones, this is only the beginning of a deep theological iceberg.

6 But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.

Ezekiel says that if you see the sword coming (God's judgment) and fail to warn your brothers then their blood is on your hands. I have warned you and I was warned. The rest is up to you.

Our hope is to warn you and provoke you to repent in these areas of your "religious belief system" in order that your life become more pleasing to God. The problem began long ago with a man named Paul who was misrepresented to the whole world by Rome and in so doing Rome replaced the faith of "the Jewish Christ" with a faith and theology "about him", replaced the Torah with grace only, and who literally altered the Divine plan of salvation. Knowledge of the above is free to all; all you need do is look with an open mind and a serious heart toward the God whom you love and His Divine Truth in areas which our Churches has sadly failed us and our Souls.

It is with love and in the spirit of repentance I give these precious truths to you. May we all come to the unity of the faith that the original Church once had, and must have again.

A PERSONAL WORD FROM PASTOR CRAIG BEFORE BEGINNING THIS SERIOUS STUDY

As an ordained Pastor, as well as a follower of "the Jewish Christ", my years of in-depth study has convinced me that I, as well as multitudes of other Christians, have relied upon a document, the New Testament, for our faith and practice which is, unfortunately, less than reliable in hundreds of aspects when viewed "literally" and "historically". Most Christians are not aware of this fact. Such knowledge escapes the uninformed believer, but I assure you, if you will continue your study of the materials presented in this web site by Bet Emet Ministries, you will quickly come to see what the Jewish people have always known and why the Jewish scholars and people have not accepted the Christian Jesus which seems, on the surface, so simple to the New Testament believer. The problems of which I speak concern the unreliability and untrustworthiness of the New Testament for one's faith and practice when taken "literally" and "historically". Since most of the followers of "the Jewish Christ" are New Testament believers, and not Old Testament believers (that is one of the major problems; our unfamiliarity with the Bible Jesus would have used), their knowledge and comprehension of the Old Testament is severely lacking. This makes it all the more easy when reading the New Testament to overlook the hundreds and hundreds of purposeful misquotations from the true Hebrew Scriptures, the many purposeful mistranslations from the Hebrew Scriptures by the writers of the New Testament, and the hundreds of verses quoted out of context by the New Testament writers on purpose. This does not even address yet the multiple copying of ancient mystery religions and their "pagan Christ" in the characterization of the New Testament Jesus.

Most Christians are totally unfamiliar with Comparative Mythology and Comparative Religions. This is a study not for the faint-hearted Christian. Comparative Religion shows that the basic story of Jesus' one year ministry and the motif of a crucified savior already existed in numerous other religions prior to the alleged time of Jesus. We have it on no higher authority than that of Christianity's founding fathers themselves that the Christian religion was very much like other older religions currently extant. Other religions had their savior character, born of a miraculous nature, who performed miracles, cured the ill and sick people, and eventually died an untimely death, often by crucifixion. This should sound very familiar to our "literal" and "historical" story of Jesus preached by Christianity for the last 1,800 years. So close did Christianity resemble these other religions that the Christian fathers resorted to the ludicrous explanation that the Devil himself had created these other near identical religions prior to the alleged time of Jesus to deceive the masses so they would reject the true religion of Christianity as being just a copycat of these already existing religions. Religious scholar Charles François Dupuis (1798), in his The Origin Of All Religious Worship, states the obvious: "There is not the slightest difficulty, without the intervention of the Devil, to perceive, that whenever two religions resemble each other so completely, the oldest must be the mother and the youngest the daughter."

Justin Martyr (A.D. 100-165) was the first and most distinguished apologist for the Christian religion. His first apology, The First Apology Of Justin, argues that Christianity should be accepted as any other religion because it is so similar to other preexisting religions. By arguing thus Justin inadvertently admits:

- Other religions and beliefs already existed which were quite similar to Christianity

Christianity was hated to such an extent that he had to write an apology for it demanding that it be accepted.

Notice if you will what Justin Martyr says in Chapter 10: HEATHEN ANALOGIES TO CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE

And the Sibyl and Hystaspes said that there should be a dissolution by God of things corruptible. And the philosophers called Stoics teach that even God Himself shall be resolved into fire, and they say that the world is to be formed anew by this revolution; but we understand that God, the Creator of all things, is superior to the things that are to be changed. If, therefore, on some points we teach the same things as the poets and philosophers whom you honour, and on other points are fuller and more divine in our teaching, and if we alone afford proof of what we assert, why are we unjustly hated more than all others? For while we say that all things have been produced and arranged into a world by God, we shall seem to utter the doctrine of Plato; and while we say that there will be a burning up of all, we shall seem to utter the doctrine of the Stoics: and while we affirm that the souls of the wicked, being endowed with sensation even after death, are punished, and that those of the good being delivered from punishment spend a blessed existence, we shall seem to say the same things as the poets and philosophers; and while we maintain that men ought not to worship the works of their hands, we say the very things which have been said by the comic poet Menander, and other similar writers, for they have declared that the workman is greater than the work.

Notice again from Chapter 21: ANALOGIES TO THE HISTORY OF CHRIST

And when we say also that the Word, who is the first-birth of God, was produced without sexual union, and that He, Jesus Christ, our Teacher, was crucified and died, and rose again, and ascended into heaven, we propound nothing different from what you believe regarding those whom you esteem sons of Jupiter. For you know how many sons your esteemed writers ascribed to Jupiter: Mercury, the interpreting word and teacher of all; AEsculapius, who, though he was a great physician, was struck by a thunderbolt, and so ascended to heaven; and Bacchus too, after he had been torn limb from limb; and Hercules, when he had committed himself to the flames to escape his toils; and the sons of Leda, and Dioscuri; and Perseus, son of Danae; and Bellerophon, who, though sprung from mortals, rose to heaven on the horse Pegasus. For what shall I say of Ariadne, and those who, like her, have been declared to be set among the stars? And what of the emperors who die among yourselves, whom you deem worthy of deification, and in whose behalf you produce some one who swears he has seen the burning Caesar rise to heaven from the funeral pyre? And what kind of deeds are recorded of each of these reputed sons of Jupiter, it is needless to tell to those who already know. This only shall be said, that they are written for the advantage and encouragement of youthful scholars; for all reckon it an honourable thing to imitate the gods. But far be such a thought concerning the gods from every well-conditioned soul, as to believe that Jupiter himself, the governor and creator of all things, was both a parricide and the son of a parricide, and that being overcome by the love of base and shameful pleasures, he came in to Ganymede and those many women whom he had violated and that his sons did like actions. But, as we said above, wicked devils perpetrated these things. And we have learned that those only are deified who have lived near to God in holiness and virtue; and we believe that those who live wickedly and do not repent are punished in everlasting fire.

Again direct your attention to Chapter 22: ANALOGIES TO THE SONSHIP OF CHRIST

Moreover, the Son of God called Jesus, even if only a man by ordinary generation, yet, on account of His wisdom, is worthy to be called the Son of God; for all writers call God the Father of men and gods. And if we assert that the Word of God was born of God in a peculiar manner, different from ordinary generation, let this, as said above, be no extraordinary thing to you, who say that Mercury is the angelic word of God. But if any one objects that He was crucified, in this also He is on a par with those reputed sons of Jupiter of yours, who suffered as we have now enumerated. For their sufferings at death are recorded to have been not all alike, but diverse; so that not even by the peculiarity of His sufferings does He seem to be inferior to them; but, on the contrary, as we promised in the preceding part of this discourse, we will now prove Him superior--or rather have already proved Him to be so--for the superior is revealed by His actions. And if we even affirm that He was born of a virgin, accept this in common with what you accept of Ferseus. And in that we say that He made whole the lame, the paralytic, and those born blind, we seem to say what is very similar to the deeds said to have been done by AEsculapius.

Lastly let us look at chapter 66: OF THE EUCHARIST

And this food is called among us Eukaristia [the Eucharist], of which no one is allowed to partake but the man who believes that the things which we teach are true, and who has been washed with the washing that is for the remission of sins, and unto regeneration, and who is so living as Christ has enjoined. For not as common bread and common drink do we receive these; but in like manner as Jesus Christ our Saviour, having been made flesh by the Word of God, had both flesh and blood for our salvation, so likewise have we been taught that the food which is blessed by the prayer of His word, and from which our blood and flesh by transmutation are nourished, is the flesh and blood of that Jesus who was made flesh. For the apostles, in the memoirs composed by them, which are called Gospels, have thus delivered unto us what was enjoined upon them; that Jesus took bread, and when He had given thanks, said, "This do ye in remembrance of Me, this is My body;" and that, after the same manner, having taken the cup and given thanks, He said, "This is My blood;" and gave it to them alone. Which the wicked devils have imitated in the mysteries of Mithras, commanding the same thing to be done. For, that bread and a cup of water are placed with certain incantations in the mystic rites of one who is being initiated, you either know or can learn. These quotes can be verified if you seek them out in Justin's writings on the Internet or from his printed First Apology.

Answer for yourself: What should we have seen in the above quotes of Justin Martyr, the first Christian Apologist?

We just saw that this Second Century, highly touted Church Father, informs us that Christianity teaches the same things as the poets and philosophers whose works can be yet read today and in so doing the "doctrines of Christ" can be elucidated and found cited as far back as recorded time. Justin cites Plato, Menander, Sibyl, Hystaspes, and the Stoics as just some of the sources for "overlaps" with 2nd century Christianity and its teachings on "the Christ". Note especially that Justin acknowledges that the Christian Jesus is similar to the sons of Jupiter: Mercury; Æsculapius; Bacchus; Hercules; the sons of Leda, and Dioscuri; and Perseus, son of Danae; and Bellerophon. They have in common that they were all produced without sexual union. They all likewise suffered an untimely death and all ascended into heaven. Important to also note is that the Logos, or Word of God, an epithet of Jesus Christ, was also an epithet of Mercury.

Ironically if you read closely it is amazing that Justin Martyr explains that Christianity's unique and innumerable parallels to the ancient Wisdom Religions of the world is to believed to be the fruit of "wicked devils".

Answer for yourself: Could it be that Christianity "is" the same ancient Spiritual Wisdom, the same ancient Mysteries, the same Divine Spiritual Wisdom cherished by the ancients that has been badly "radically reinterpreted" through "literalism" and "historicization" by Rome that today it has lost its true meaning?

Let us look at another Church Father; the great Augustine.

That which is known as the Christian religion existed among the ancients, and never did not exist; from the beginning of the human race until the time when Christ came in the flesh, at which time the true religion, which already existed began to be called Christianity.* (Retractt. I, xiii, cited by Dr. Alvin Boyd Kuhn in his Shadow of The Third Century, Elizabeth N.J.: Academy Press, 1949, p.3)

Now, let us examine the great Church historian Eusebius, who in his Church History, tells us that Justin, in his Dialogue with Trypho, says "there exists not a people, civilized or semi-civilized, who have not offered up prayers in the name of a crucified Savior to the Father and Creator of all things" (Hist. Eccl. lib i. ch. iv).

Now let us examine what the great early Church Father Tertullian who himself was an "ex-Pagan" and later the Bishop of Carthage. Notice his startling comment as he ironically admits the true origins of the Christ story and of all other such god-men by stating in refutation of his critics, "You say we worship the sun; so do you" (Wheless, Forgery in Christianity, p. 147).

Other scholars will tell you the same story as did these earliest of Roman Christian Church Fathers.

"Although surprising to us now, to writers of the first few centuries C.E. these similarities between the new Christian religion and the ancient Mysteries were extremely obvious. Pagan critics of Christianity, such as the satirist Celsus, complained that this recent religion was nothing more than a pale reflection of their own ancient teachings. Early 'Church Fathers,' such as Justin Martyr, Tertullian, and Irenaeus, were understandably disturbed and resorted to the desperate claim that these similarities were the result of diabolical mimicry. Using one of the most absurd arguments ever advanced, they accused the Devil of "plagiarism by anticipation," of deviously copying the true story of Jesus before it had actually happened in an attempt to mislead the gullible!" (Timothy Freke & Peter Gandy, The Jesus Mysteries: Was the "Original Jesus" a Pagan God?, pg. 5 (1999).

Now let us examine 3 quotes from Charles François Dupuis, The Origin of All Religious Worship, (1798) chapter IX, starting on page 214, titled, "An Explanation of the Fable, in which the Sun is worshipped under the name of Christ").

- "It is chiefly in the religion of Mithras or the God Sun, worshipped under that name by the Magi, that we find mostly those features of analogy with the death and resurrection of Christ and with the mysteries of the Christians. Mithras, who was also born on the 25th December like Christ, died as he did; and he had his sepulchre, over which his disciples came to shed tears. During the night the priests carried his image to a tomb, expressly prepared for him; he was laid out on a litter, like the Phœnician Adonis. These funeral ceremonies, like those on good Friday, were accompanied with funeral dirges and the groans of his priests; after having spent some time with these expressions of feigned grief; after having lighted the sacred flambeau or their Paschal candle and anointed the image with Chrism or perfumes, one of them came forward and pronounced with the gravest mien these words: “Be of good cheer, sacred band of Initiates (“initiés,”) your God has risen from the dead; his pains and his sufferings shall be your salvation.”
- "[...]And it would really seem, in this instance, as if Firmicus, in his onset on the ancient religions, had set his heart on it, to collect all the traits of analogy, which their mysteries had with those of the Christians. He clings chiefly to the Mithraic Initiation, of which he draws a pretty uniform parallel with that of Christ, and to which it has so much resemblance, merely because it is one and the same sect. It is true, he explains all this conformity, which exists between these two religions, by asserting, as Tertullian and St. Justin did, that a long time before there were Christians in existence, the Devil had taken pleasure to have their future mysteries and ceremonies copied by his worshippers. This may be an excellent reason for certain Christians, such as there are plenty in our days, but an extremely paltry one for men of common sense. As far as we are concerned, we, who do not believe in the Devil, and who are not, like them, in his secrets, we shall simply observe, that the religion of Christ, founded like all the others on the worship of the Sun, has preserved the same dogmas, the same practices, the same mysteries or very nearly so; that everything has been in common; because the God was the same; that there were only the accessories, which could differ, but that the basis was absolutely the same."
- "The oldest apologists of the Christian religion agree, that the Mithraic religion had its sacraments, its baptism, its penitence, its Eucharist and its consecration by mystical words; that the catechumens of that religion had preparatory trials, more rigorous than those of the Christians; that the Initiates or the faithful marked their foreheads with a sacred sign; that they admitted also the dogma of the resurrection; that they were presented with the crown, which ornamented the forehead of the martyrs; that their sovereign Pontiff was not allowed to marry several times; that they had their virgins and their laws of continence; finally, that they had everything, which has since been practiced by the Christians. "Of course, Tertullian calls again the Devil to his assistance, in order to explain away so complete a resemblance. But as there is not the slightest difficulty, without the intervention of the Devil, to perceive, that whenever two religions resemble each other so completely, the oldest must be the mother and the youngest the daughter, we shall conclude, that since the worship of Mithras is infinitely older than that of Christ, and its ceremonies a great deal anterior to those of the Christians, that therefore the Christians are incontestably either sectarians or plagiarists of the religion of the Magi."

If you take a second to reflect upon this earliest of testimony of these Church Fathers regarding the "Jesus Story" in their day then you should see and understand enough to know that this remodeling of Jesus in the likeness of the ancient sungods and goddesses is most unlikely if this Jesus was a true "literal" and "historical" Jewish Rabbi!!!

This characterization of the Jewish Messiah as the personification of the Sun simply is not something that one finds characteristic of first century Biblical Judaism and their views upon their hoped for coming Messiah. What we fail to understand when reading "the personification of the Sun" is the deep Metaphysical and Mystical understandings that the ancients guarded and cherished about God, cosmos, man, nature, and incarnation. This is a study for a much later website. What we find upon more study is that the Rome needed to counter the popularity and influence of Biblical Judaism in the "non-Jewish" world. In so doing the devised a plan to take the ancient Mysteries and their personified Sungods and Goddesses along with the Jewish Messiah and synthesize them into one corporate being and representation which would have universal appeal to all "non-Jewish" humanity who were very familiar with the religious concept of a coming savior for the Souls of mankind. Rome, by "racially reinterpreting" the cherished ancient mysteries present their new "replacement religion" to the world as the "literal" and "historical" Jewish Messiah. Rome was very clever in their religious synthesis. Beginning by building off the authority and reputation of Judaism Rome created their version of the Jewish Messiah and backed it all up by purposefully misquoting and misinterpreting the Hebrew Scriptures and presenting this forgery to the non-Hebrew speaking world as God's Book, the Bible. Not only did Rome theologically corrupt and forge the Hebrew Scriptures but the same approach was applied to Marcion's New Testament (the first New Testament, the Gnostic New Testament). This first New Testament by Marcion was the Gnostic New Testament teaching only of the "indwelling and incarnating Christ" in every child of God which has been loved, adored, and cherished in the nation's ancient Mysteries since the beginning of time.

This "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Mysteries and its "Christ/Sophia" was named Jesus, the equivalent of "Yeshua" which means "Jehovah is salvation". The only thing left for Rome to do was to mix the ancient Sacred Mysteries and their "Christs" with the concept of the "historical" Messiah of Judaism; but there was one rather large problem that only those who read Hebrew knew. The Hebrew Scriptures were not fulfilled by any Messiah, past or present in their day, and the Temple was destroyed and Israel scattered the world over. Only by the purposeful mistranslation and purposeful misquotation of the Hebrew Scriptures and pure Scriptural invention out of "theological air" was Rome able to "radically reinterpret" Judaism's belief and hope for a human Messiah in the lineage of King David (in reality Tuthmose III, the Hebrew Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty of Egypt). This corruption of the Jewish Messiah, when grafted upon a "literalization" and "historicization" of the ancient Mystery Religions and their "Christs" produced the "literal" and "historical Jesus" of Rome's "Second" New Testament. In reality the New Testament we have today is Marcion's New Testament which was pure Spiritual allegory and Spiritual Myth teaching the Highest Divine Truths of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions dealing with the incarnation of God as Divine Mind/Krst/Christ into "matter"; ie., humanity. You see the "Jesus Story" is to be your story, my story, every person's story because it is, when interpreted correctly with the "keys" necessary from the ancient Spiritual Wisdom, the story of the Descent of the Soul and its Christ into human form; Christ being the savior of the Soul, our True Being, by being the Bishop of our Souls while in material incarnation. Truly, Plato said it right: "Man is a god in an animal body"; even Justin knew this! Today as Christians we wait for a visit from "above" by the Christ when all the time the only visit we ever get is from "within" but this will never occur until man quits looking to the stars and awaiting the coming of one so long overdue according to Christian Scriptures when interpreted "literally" and "historically". Something else is intended here other than a "literal" and "historical" understanding. Only when we study to the point to see the ludicrousness of attempting to interpret a book like our Bible today by a method of interpretation and hermeneutic never used by those who wrote these Sacred Scriptures in the first place, can we ever hope of redeeming our Bibles from nonsense and restoring them to the highest Spiritual knowledge and revelation ever given mankind. It is the great ancient Spiritual Mysteries that knew this; only with the aid of archeology in the last 200 years have the "rocks been crying out" the truth about "the Christ"! Have you heard them and the scholars who are dispelling religious darkness and fear with the glorious light of God's truth?

The agenda of such literary deceptions by the New Testament writers and those who put the New Testament canon together and promulgated a select and highly erroneous method for their interpretation ("literal" and "historical") let alone altered the Sacred Scriptures of both the Hebrews and Gnostics over hundreds and hundreds of years, escapes the masses who are unfamiliar with the history of the Gentile Christian Church along with their unfamiliarity with the only Bible a Jew in the Jerusalem Church ever knew; the Jewish Scriptures which are unfortunately called the "Old" as they are in the Christian Old Testament today.

As Christians and sincere individuals who, seeking to know and do the will of the Almighty, come to such knowledge concerning the tampering of the New Testament and the anti-Semitic agenda of its writers, you are quickly confronted with the most significant question you'll every have to answer in this life: "Is the New Testament really the Word of God"? The answer to that can be a resounding "Yes" but at the same time it can be a resounding "No"; it all depends on how your approach and interpret it. That is why we will in this website investigate many Christian dogmas under the light of critical study to be ceratin our understanding of them is build upon firm ground and not sinking sand. I as well as you, most likely since childhood, have been assured by our spiritual leaders that the answer is "Yes" to the above question, but as I said it all depends upon the interpretation of them.

Answer for yourself: Does it stand to reason that if the ancients wrote these same Sacred Scriptures never intending a "literal" or "historical" understanding of them be held by the readers and hearers, then how accurate is our understanding of them if we approach them "literally" and "historically"? Perhaps you have even had some emotional experiences which seem to validate your leaders' assurances while in church. I did. Don't mistake the love of God for His children as an approval for one's ignorance for the Sacred Texts he reads and his disobedience from such an erroneous understanding. As you know, though, true faith is based neither upon trust in men (Ps, 146:3), nor even upon occurrences of the supernatural (Deut. 13); nor can we trust our emotions as a barometer for truth.

"I do not feel obliged to believe that the same God who has endowed us with sense, reason, and intellect has intended us to forgo their use."---Galileo Galilei

Without your personal knowledge about such purposeful Hebraic Scriptural misquotations, mistranslations, and verses taken and used out of context as contained in the New Testament, let alone the "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Divine Wisdom and ancient Mysteries in the recharacterization of "the Christ within", you cannot make a fair and intelligent evaluation to such a premise put forth in this website; you can only make an emotional one. You might be sincere, but at the same time sincerely wrong and never know it until you die. Bet Emet Ministries makes available to you in this site valuable data, research, and information about such matters; offered in an attempt to help you find the truth about these issues in hopes such knowledge will allow you to make necessary changes in your beliefs and Spiritual walk; thus assuring a life more pleasing to God. We ask that you complete these studies in a spirit of earnestness and prayer, asking God to reveal to you His truth in the quietness of your own heart. As you do so, remember that you are a member of a kingdom of priests and a holy nation (Ex.19:6), described in the Scriptures as the "apple of God's eye" (Zech.2:8) and participants in an "everlasting covenant" (Gen. 17:7). As such, rest assured that God will indeed heed your request as you sincerely seek to discover His Divine Truth; a Truth that was suppressed for over 1,800 years but now in our day again seeing the light of day for all those who have "ears to hear" and "eyes to see".

PLEASE DON'T MISUNDERSTAND OUR MOTIVES FOR SHARING THESE TRUTHS WITH YOU. WE SEEK ONLY THE TRUTH

Occasionally we at Bet Emet are not understood when being critical of much of what the New Testament says and how it is taught today. We are not trying to say "Gentile Christianity" is wrong, but rather trying to get to the truth concerning Jesus and "the faith once given the saints" after centuries of repression of such truths along with alterations in supposedly "infallible" documents we inherited as the "New Testament". The result of our study and research dictates that we be truthful to what we have found in our research because God is watching. God desires we have faith in the truth and not in error. We understand such misunderstandings by some of our readers because most of our readers have not had the opportunity to read and study to the level we have over the last 20 years where we discovered much that forced us to bow our knee to new and higher Divine Truth and repent and make changes in our "religious belief system" in order that our lives be more pleasing to God. Simply we found, based upon our studies, that much of the New Testament, especially in "key" doctrinal positions, was a replacement of the actual beliefs that were held by the vast majority of Rabbis like the Jesus of the New Testament in the first century.

There is no way you can be a follower of Jesus and contradict what he both believed and practiced as his faith; no matter what the later "Romanized Paul" and the New Testament which again Rome provided to us has to say. The sad fact is alarming: there is no way you can practice contemporary Christianity and be a true follower of Jesus. A cursory reading of the New Testament does not always provide such an understanding, for most read it as if it is "inspired, infallible, and inerrant", and because of their unfamiliarity with the Old Testament, never spot such textual problems contained within it as I have delineated above. Most never question anything about the New Testament. Such I found is not wise, and you will be amazed once you see it for yourself. Nothing could be farther from the truth than the "infallibility and inerrancy" of the New Testament, and this fact will become evident upon initial serious study of the New Testament. Understand such a false trust and belief in the New Testament by most Christians today is not based upon the reader's personal and individual study of the New Testament, but rather upon the hearsay he has picked up by listening to others express such trust in the New Testament through preaching Sunday after Sunday. This amounts to basically "brainwashing" because what you so often hear is "not the truth". There should be less preaching and more teaching; then this problem would no longer exist to the degree that it does today. The sad fact of the matter is that those who say such things have never done their homework to the depth necessary to see the problems inherent in accepting the New Testament as authoritative for faith and practice. What they miss is that in many ways the New Testament is a repudiation of what a righteous Jew like our example in Jesus would have both believed and lived. The New Testament was never meant to be a replacement book for the Jewish Scriptures, the Tanakh and Torah, but sadly has become that today for the vast majority of non-Jewish believers in God as Christians. This is our sad legacy from the anti-Semitic Gentile Church of the earliest centuries of the Jesus Movement within Biblical Judaism.

A Christian's religious belief system, when tested and exposed to contradictory facts from Biblical languages, Biblical history, Biblical culture, the Biblical texts, the study of comparative religions, as well as Gnosticism, Egyptian Religion, the ancient Divine Wisdom, Astronomy and Astrology, and Archeology, must in the Spirit of Truth and Repentance, be flexible enough to change.

Doctrine, when found in the New Testament, to be true must conform to the Word of God; the true Hebrew Scriptures and not the Christian version of them once corrupted.

"To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." (Isaiah 8:20)

Thus if we find religious dogmas and doctrines in the New Testament which contradict the Hebrew Scriptures then according to Isaiah such doctrines are to be understood as fables and lies. To fail to acknowledge such contradictions when shown them means that you stand in opposition to the Prophets and that you contradict not only Isaiah the Prophet who is quoted above, but Moses, as well as the "Jewish Christ" exampled for us in the person of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Can we trust the early anti-Semitic Gentile Catholics to have been led into all truth by the Holy Spirit (just look at their doctrines and you know God did not give them such lies), and should we trust these same people and their collection of writings called the New Testament Canon when their writings, in many places, contradict Moses and Jesus? Well, we will have to see once we begin to look seriously as the faults within it.

We at Bet Emet Ministries cannot, and we offer no man apologies for what we teach. Just understand that when you read the New Testament, with all its additions, purposeful misquotes and mistranslations of the Hebrew Scriptures, changes, additions, deletions and various doctrinal creationism over the early centuries of the Gentile Church, that the doctrines behind the men who did this are yet expressed in Roman Catholicism and many as well in Protestantism today!!! My friends, I hope to stimulate your interest and study as a "thinking believer" in hopes that you begin to give serious attention to studying the document you have trusted your whole life as "infallible, inerrant, and inspired"; the New Testament. We must realize that one's behavior and conduct before God or one's fellow man is determined by what he believes. If we have a forged document, and we do, then our conduct, behavior, and beliefs are often wrong and much of what we do is considered "sin" by God and we never know it. That can change however and Bet Emet Ministries hopes to help you in this regard if you so desire.

Answer for yourself: What will you do when you discover that much of what you have been taught from the New Testament, which has influenced your conduct and behavior, is in error and opposed by Moses and the teachings of the "Jewish Christ"; and in reality has even led you into sin because of your ignorance of the Old Testament and what it teaches?

Answer for yourself: What of other errors in the New Testament which can be shown to be false teachings created by the non-Jewish Gentile Church which have caused you to depart from what the "Jewish Christ" would have you do; thus having a conduct, belief, or attitude contrary to what God originally desired you have? What will you do after having allowed yourself to be shown that many cherished doctrines of the Christian faith are in reality sin when compared with the Jewish Scriptures and the faith practiced by a Jew like Jesus? "I hope you said repent".

I hope you would and this web page is dedicated to the defense of God and enlightenment of His people.

HOW IT WAS DONE….A BRIEF SYNOPSIS OF HOW OUR BIBLES WERE FORGED

The New Testament writers are guilty of mishandling and abuse of the Jewish Scripture in order to create a new religion which opposes the faith of Jesus. Let me give you the mechanics involved in textual manipulation whereby we end up with something different in meaning that the original author intended and what the earliest church both believed and practiced.

- Jewish texts and phrases are lifted out of their places in the Hebrew Scriptures and given meanings in the New Testament which, at best, are forced.
- Preceding many of the prophetic verses which are misquoted, mistranslated, and taken out of context in the New Testament is the assertion, "What was said through the prophet was thus fulfilled." In this way the writers of the Christian Scriptures endeavored to show that the Tanakh anticipated and predicted the events recorded in the New Testament. Such is not the case the the vast majority of cases!

- Those happenings, then, are presented as the fulfillment of the Hebrew Scriptures and are considered proof texts. Such is not the case! You will come to see this when we study them.
- The techniques employed to establish proof include citation of verses out of context, mistranslation, and misquotation. These abound in the New Testament and are overlooked by the vast majority of Christians today due to their unfamiliarity with the Old Testament.
- Sometimes a figurative or poetic phrase is mistaken for a straightforward statement and vice versa.
- Sometimes sayings of different writers, living in different places, and in different centuries are run together in such a way to destroy the intended meanings of the original writers.
- Often two or more of these methods are used in a single quotation.

SO..... DOES KNOWING THIS MATTER TO YOU?

Besides the quest for truth and an obedient life before God, there are numerous verses contained within the New Testament, which in and of themselves are not anti-Semitic but are used to substantiate certain beliefs held by the early Gentile Church which have anti-Jewish implications. Carried out to the end-result these verses influence one's beliefs and conduct. We beg of you: Don't throw away the opportunity God has placed before you to study His Word in such a way whereby you can see the discrepancies for yourself. What you do then is up to you, but you need to see them in order to make an intelligent decision. Remember God has instructed us to "Be holy, for He is holy." Let that be the impetus for your quest for God and His Truth. It has been mine. Shalom.

Are you ready for the most important study of your life?

PASTOR CRAIG'S PERSONAL TESTIMONY & AND SEARCH FOR THE TRUTH BEHIND OUR CHRISTIAN BIBLE

In common, I believe, with the majority of Christians, that as a young person I accepted the Bible as the inspired word of God, a direct message from Deity to humanity. Such a belief is easy; I was taught this from the pulpit having never studied the dogma for "inerrancy" and "infallibility" for myself. Besides, at that time of my life I had never really studied nor read closely my Bible. I just went to church like most of you; but that was a long time ago. Later, having attended Seminary where my eyes really "opened" toward the Bible, a more critical approach to the Scriptures revealed incredibilities and impossibilities, which both confounded, dismayed, overwhelmed, shocked and repelled me. Needless to say I graduated Seminary with my Master's of Divinity degree with more questions than one could count. On my last day on the Seminary campus I made God a promise. Seeing for myself that my "faith" did not "add up" and it was "full of holes" I asked God to help me find out why and what was truly in the "mind of Christ". That was almost 20 years ago and by God's grace and my dedication I have endeavored to find the answers to fill the "holes in my faith". I am thankful and proud to say having asked God for "bread" He gave me no "stone".

I have found the answers and have made sense of a Christian faith build upon a supposed "literal" and "historical" crucified Messiah that troubled even the early Church Fathers like Tertullian. Tertullian, one of the Christian Fathers (A.D. 200), originally a Pagan, and at one time Presbyter of the Christian Church in Africa, reasons in the following manner on the evidences of Christianity: "I find no other means to prove myself to be impudent with success, and happily a fool, than by my contempt of shame, - as, for instance, I maintain that the Son of God was born. Why am I not ashamed of maintaining such a thing? Why, but because it is itself a shameful thing. I maintain that the Son of God died. Well, that is wholly credible, because it is monstrously absurd. I maintain that after having been buried he rose again; and that I take to be mainly true, because it was manifestly impossible" (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 326). This early Church Father Tertullian (160-220 C.E.), an "ex-Pagan" and Bishop of Carthage, ironically admits the true origins of the Christ story and of all other such god-men by stating in refutation of his critics, "You say we worship the sun; so do you" (Wheless, Forgery in Christianity, p. 147).

Answer for yourself: What has a supposed "literal" and "historical" Jesus Christ to do with such announcements as these of Tertullian, a highly esteemed early Church Father, when likening the Christian faith to the "worship of the Sun"?

Just a "tidbid" of knowledge if I may. Interestingly, a previously strident believer and defender of the faith, Tertullian later renounced Christianity. (Wheless, Forgery in Christianity, p. 147).

A few more quotes will be sufficient to prepare the "truth-seeker" for our following studies that will help us uncover what really lies behind our "Jesus Story".

Ammonius Saccus, a Greek philosopher, founder of the Neoplatonic school, taught that "Christianity and Paganism when rightly understood, differ in no essential points, but had a common origin, and are really one and the same religion" (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 329).

Eusebius, 260-341 C.E. says that "the names of Jesus and Christ were both known and honored by the ancients" (Hist. Eccl. lib. i. ch. iv). Again, Eusebius, the great champion of Christianity, admits in his book: "that which is called the Christian religion is neither new nor strange, but-if it be lawful to testify the truth-was known to the ancients" (Hist. Eccl. lib. 2, ch. v.).

As if that is not enough enter Augustine (354-430 A.D.) who is quoted as agreeing with Eusebius by saying:

"That in our time is the Christian Religion, which to know and follow is the most sure and certain health, called according to that name, but not according to the thing itself, of which is the name; for the thing itself which is now called the Christian Religion really was known to the ancients, nor was wanting at any time from the beginning of the human race until the time when Christ came in the flesh, from whence the true religion, which had previously existed, began to be called "Christian;" and this in our days is the Christian religion, not as having been wanting in former times, but as having in later times received this name"* (Opera Augustini, vol. i. p. 12; quoted in Taylor's Diegesis, p. 42).

The problem here is contained in the words "came in the flesh" as concerning the "Christ's incarnation". The ancient Spiritual Wisdom teaches this "coming of Krst/Karest/Christ" without a doubt; it is everywhere in their myths concerning the nation's Sungods and Goddesses but the interpretation of this "coming of Christ in the flesh" is where the "key" to interpretation lies that divides the ancient Spiritual Wisdom from the later Roman "reinterpretation" of this same "coming of Christ" as I would find in my studies. This "coming of Christ" as taught in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom is the same one which was taught by the Gnostic Paul and not the later "literalistic" Roman Christianity who confined the "incarnation of the Christ" to but one person instead of the whole of humanity as the ancient Spiritual Wisdom had taught for over 10,000 years. Paul taught it correctly:

Col 1:26-27 26 Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

2 Cor 13:5 5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates? (KJV)

1 Cor 3:16 16 Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? (KJV)

This is the ancient Spiritual Wisdom being repeated by the Gnostic Paul which contradicts 180 degrees the later Roman "reinterpretation" of this same Divine Spiritual Wisdom of the ancient nations as far back as ancient Egypt. Finding myself unable either to ignore these problems and contradictions in Seminary which became for me roadblocks to belief I was faced either to adopt a tolerant and uncritical acceptance of the Holy Bible but common sense and the knowledge that God knew what I was thinking that what I was being taught by Christianity could not be true I could not walk away from such Scriptural contradictions. I had to find the reason for why my Bible did not make sense and contradicted itself so often in these critical areas.

Two alternatives presented themselves. One was to discard entirely the orthodox concept of the Bible as an error-free and infallible source of spiritual wisdom and moral counsel, and the other was to undertake a detailed study of the whole text. If you are a reader of Bet Emet Ministries then you can see that this latter course of comprehensive study was the path I chose. Over 18 years of continued study one thing continually was impressed upon me; namely, that I was constantly discovering that many of the difficulties in the Bible and its interpretation arose from a "literal reading" of these Sacred Scriptures which miraculously disappeared if such problem passages of the Bible were regarded as allegorical.

In my studies in Gnosticism and ancient Egyptian Religion as well as the Mystery Religions of the world which contained uncanny "parallels" to my "Jesus Story" I discovered that many learned scholars affirmed that some of the authors of world Scriptures deliberately concealed beneath cleverly constructed veils of allegory and symbol profound Divine Truths which they had discovered by direct research. This veiling was forced upon them because such knowledge would inevitably give very great Spiritual, intellectual, psychical and supernormal physical powers to those who possessed such knowledge of God, the Krst/Karest/Christ and the Soul. One only has to read somewhat in-depth of ancient Egypt to see such power of mind and Spirit that that the ancients possessed which humanity of today has lost. Since these powers were, and still are, subject to grave misuse such as the abundant historical testimony to the evils of religious priestcrafts and the mental domination of mankind by them, it became necessary to do all that was possible to make available such Spiritual Wisdom and Knowledge for which the authors possessed ("gnosis") to only the trustworthy and to conceal the same Spiritual Wisdom and Knowledge from the profane. For this purpose the ancient authors of Sacred Scriptures invented a special category of literature which differs from ordinary writing in that, with some historical fact as well as pseudo-historical accounts as a foundation, the Sacred Scriptures of the nations were crafted largely composed around such historical basis with Spiritual allegories, symbols and certain key words, the whole of which constituted a cipher by means of which the Ageless Wisdom, theoretical and practical, was with reasonable safeguards made available to humankind. Such, I learned, were the origin, the nature and the purpose of the sacred language found in common with the world Sacred Books of the world like the Egyptian Book of the Dead as well as Bhagavad Gita as well as others including the Hebrew Scriptures.

On making the discovery that parts of the Bible are meant to be understood only allegorically, in that way agreeing with the ancient Divine Sacred Wisdom and Spiritual Knowledge, I began to apply the various keys that I also found in ancient and modern literature to many of the books of the Bible. The rewards were breath-taking. Before my eyes many textual difficulties were resolved and the gaining of such a hidden Spiritual philosophy of life, both Spiritual, intellectual and preeminently practical have been so immeasurably rich that I, as a Pastor in a church which did not teach such truths, felt moved to resign share them with other "truth-seekers" via the Internet.

This website is at first largely devoted to a general consideration of the sacred language itself in the world's Sacred Scriptures along with the presentation of certain classic keys of interpretation, with some of the results of their application to scriptural stories, including especially the life of Christ. I realize the awesome responsibility that I have been given and have approached this task with all caution, taking care to neither to overstress a possible symbolic significance, nor to read into a narrative more than is inherent within it or was presumably present in the minds of the authors. As faithful as possible I share the truths gleaned from such personal study of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom over these last 18 years. I lay before the interested reader for the first time the ancient hidden "keys" to interpreting not only our Christian Bibles but the many Spiritual mythologies of the ancients which are the foundations for our many of our later Bible stories and events which are centered in the Descent of the Soul into "matter" along with the role of the "crucified Krst/Karest/Christ" who likewise is "crucified on the cross of matter".

If I have learned one thing it is this: There is no higher Religion than Truth! The Neoplatonists of the early centuries of the Christian era, notably Ammonius Saccus and his disciples, coined the word "Theosophia", meaning "Divine Wisdom." For them, Theosophy connoted the totality of the revealed wisdom and discovered knowledge allotted to humanity throughout the ages. As far back as you want to look you see the same "Divine Pattern" being reproduced over and over again from nation to nation; only when we get to Rome in the 2nd through the 5th centuries do we find the wholesale slaughter of Divine Truth.

Thus studying the Bible, I have found that many of the difficulties and discrepancies which had until now proved so perplexing no longer exist. May those who are are similarly perplexed and similarly seeking find in these articles in this website solutions of the Bible's textual problems and the restoration of the original truth of the Christian faith which was as attested by our Church fathers known by the ancients in the origin of mankind.

Now, before one begins such an ambitious study into recovering the "keys" in order to properly interpret the Christian Bible there are some things that he needs to know before rushing into such a study. So, a short summary of what I believe will be helpful to the beginning student in such areas of study is presented next.

COMING TO THE CORRECT INTERPRETATION OF THE "JESUS STORY"

In this website we will look intently at the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of mankind and their unique parallels with current traditional Christian theology in the New Testament and especially the parallel "symbolisms" common to both and compare the different interpretations of them; interpretations as first held by the ancients as far back as ancient Egypt and other subsequent nations and later Roman Christianity and in so doing we will take note of Rome's "radical reinterpretation" of this same ancient Spiritual Wisdom and symbolism which had previously maintained a hermeneutic consistency up and until the rise of Roman Orthodoxy in the 2nd through the 5th century. If you are like me once recognizing this tragic alteration of Spiritual Truth over the last two thousand years at the hands of Rome you will want answers as to why this ancient Spiritual Truth as recognized by the ancient Spiritual Masters for thousands of years which had maintained an integrity of common interpretation and understanding among the ancients since the beginning of recorded history was so radically altered and reinterpreted by Rome and their "literalistic" and "solitary historical" interpretation of the Divine ancient Spiritual Allegories concerning God, His Krst/Karest/Christ and Soul.

In such a study we will compare, in this website as well as others by Bet Emet Ministries, religious dogma after religious dogma, as understood first by the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and their "common interpretation" for thousands of years in their Sacred Books as found from nation to nation and the later "reinterpretation" of them by Rome as presented in Rome's Bible and New Testament as it now stands in the traditional Christianity of today; both Catholic and Protestant. Such a comprehensive study will prove to the reader beyond any doubt that many, way to many of these ancient Spiritual Truths and Divine Revelations concerning God, His Krst/Karest/Christ and the Soul of mankind and his incarnational purpose have tragically been purposefully misinterpreted, misconceived, misconstrued, and mistaken as well as purposefully taught incorrectly to humanity for selfish motives over the last 1,800 years. That is rather a bold claim on my part; one I would not make if the evidence supporting such an strong accusation was wanting but let me assure you that that is not the case because in our day and age of information such a claim can be substantiated beyond any serious doubt. In such a comparison of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom with current Christian teachings we will come to see that many of the difficulties arising from a "literal reading" of our Bibles disappear if portions of our Bible and the Spiritual Wisdom contained within them, Spiritual teachings which parallels the ancient Spiritual Wisdom, are regarded as "allegorical" instead of "literal" as we have been so taught.

This tragic "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Divine Spiritual Truths of mankind began in the 2nd century with Rome and continues in our Christian Churches today. We will compare the various Spiritual dogmas of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom with Rome's later "reinterpretation" of them over the 2nd through the 5th century; many "reinterpretations" of which have sadly made their way into our current Bibles today. In so doing we will see an unbroken transmission and integrity of these ancient Spiritual Truths and a "Divine Pattern" existing from the beginning of time, from nation to nation up lasting up until the 2nd century when Rome will set out and "radically reinterpret" them whole of these ancient Spiritual teachings and Sacred Science and destroy almost all evidence to the proper interpretation of these Divine Truths throughout the known world by burning countless numbers of the world's libraries to the ground. They literally tried to wipe off the face of the planet the truth that every person is an "evolving Divine Mind" and "Christ". We will see that this "Divine Pattern" of "Divine Truth", having existed as early as ancient Egypt, was handed down subsequently to mankind in a cherished manner thereby retaining its integrity and cohesiveness of interpretation for well over 10,000 years before Rome will later alter it almost beyond recognition. In both the Lesser and Greater Mysteries, these truths were taught as well as guarded from those who could not be trusted with such information that has the ability to empower man to rise above this animal nature and live like a "god" .

Ps 82:6 6 I have said, Ye are gods; and all of you are children of the most High. (KJV)

John 10:34-38 34 Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods? 35 If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken; 36 Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God? 37 If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not. 38 But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works: that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him. (KJV)

Few people today have awakened to the hidden meaning behind such verses that was reiterated by Paul.

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead (notice they were yet alive in the here and now), and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as (KJV)

1 Cor 2:7 7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: (KJV)

Eph 3:3-5 3 How that by revelation he made known unto me the mystery; (as I wrote afore in few words, 4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ) 5 Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit; (KJV)

Eph 6:19 19 And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel, (KJV) Col 1:26 26 Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: (KJV)

In this current study we will see conclusively how the "terminology" and "symbolism" in these most ancient and original Divine Wisdom has been changed, altered, and been "interpreted anew" later by Rome and this loss of Divine Truth and "replacement religion" as it presently exists in our Bibles is being taught in our Christian Churches in a corrupted manner. This ancient "mystery" to which both "the Christ" and Paul refer above remains almost unknown to almost all but those who have done such deeper studies to discover this tragic event of the loss of man's Divinity over these last two thousand years for themselves because of Rome.

In such a study we will see conclusively that there exists a"Divine Pattern" that is followed and reproduced in almost every nation of the ancient world for over 10,000 years that describes the "Descent of the Soul" and the "Descent of the Deific Mind of God" (the Krst/Karest/Christ) into "matter". We will see that this"Divine Pattern" was expressed through the personification of the incarnation and "fall of this Divine God", this Uncreated Intelligent Eternal Living Energy" of the cosmos, into all manifestations of "matter" of the cosmos. We see see clearly that this personification of the "fall" of the Divine into "matter" was symbolized, typified, and personified by the various "nations" in their myths of their Sungods and Goddesses of whom most were always "crucified" on a "cross" in this "fall" of Divinity into material existence. We will see that there exists a "crossing" and "impregnation" in this cosmos of "Living Energies" into the "womb of matter" that generates a higher "life form" throughout the whole of existence and the cosmos which many scholars term today the Nous or the principle of the Cosmic Mind or Logos. We will come to see that this "crucifixion on the cross of matter" is both "celestial" and "terrestrial". This will be become abundantly plain to you as our studies advance and you will see what really lies behind our "Jesus Story" and the "crucifixion of the Krst/Karest/Christ" and this "Deific Mind of God" in "matter"; which is in reality in "YOU"! The story of the "incarnation" of God is your story; it refers to "your incarnation" and "hope of glory" that you will rise above your flesh and animal nature and discover the god within. He is called "the Krst/Christ" or "Divine Mind" in you and every other child who has been born and taken breath. This is the "secret" of the Mysteries of which both the Mind of Krst/Christ, in both Judaism and the ancient Egyptian religion taught, as well as Christ and the early Christian mystics and Gnostics.

I have chosen to divide this website into sections; first a general introduction or sorts revealing little known facts and knowledge about the Bible we cherish and secondly a more detailed presentation of the facts substantiating my charge of "radical reinterpretation" of the Divine Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients by Rome. Only only has to do some parallel study in such areas of manuscript evidences, comparison of Hebrew Scriptures with their later alteration in both the Greek and later English Old and New Testaments, the study of Comparative Religions to find the other twenty or so similar "Jesus Stories" dating back as far a mankind, the study of gnosticism and hermeticism, the study of astronomy and its relationship to religious dogmas and myths, the Essenes and their synthesis of the human Jewish messiah and the perfect Adam Kadmon of celestial astrology and astronomy, the ancient Egyptian religions which has given mankind the "pattern" for the evolution of the Soul and the "Krst/Christ" within, to see that a "literal" and "historical" and solitary incarnation of "the Krst/Christ" is a total denial of God's greatest truth shared with mankind; namely, that in man God "lives, and moves, evolves, and has His being". Unless one comes to the hidden truths that lies behind his "Jesus Story" then he never will be able to "do greater things" than this Jesus of which we read because he will live and die never knowing his "True Higher Self" awaiting resurrection from the deadness of "matter". This is the true resurrection of which we read and anticipate that has been moved today beyond the death of the physical body by Rome. This was never the belief of ancient Egypt nor the early Christian Gnostics.

After the general introduction of this website I will introduce the more detailed presentation of facts and evidence by reproducing in the first part of this website previous materials from our earlier Websites which is a necessary foundation for current study which involves the investigation of the "same Krst/Karest/Christ story" as retold in our Christian Bible as a supposed "historical reality" that occurred in the first century C.E. We will see that such a depiction of a solitary "literal" and "historical" existence of but one "Krst/Christ" to the exclusion of humanity is unmerited and unfounded based upon the evidence forthcoming; but at the same time we will see that ancient Egypt history records where the Son of God, the Egyptian messiah (small "m")/Pharaoh was actually "crucified on the eve of the Passover" in the 18th Dynasty of Egypt at the foot of Mt. Sinai. This the only reference to a historical crucifixion of a Messiah (half Hebrew, half Egyptian) that can be found and verified historically in all the annals of history; the only one we have ever found historically verifiable. Outside this misunderstanding of crucifixion as presented by Rome in its one book there is no historical record or reference for a historical crucifixion of a Jesus in the first century or the time frame given for his life. The confusion that surrounds the death of the Egyptian Messiah by the Hebrew followers of Moses is later confused with the Metaphysical reality of the "crucifixion of God in matter" and such confusion of events contributes to Rome's characterization of their "historical Jesus Story". and the crucifixion of Jesus. We have to thank Constantine for the name "Jesus Christ" in the first place as he is responsible for the blending of the names of gods and out comes "Jesus Christ". I don't wish to belabor the point but it is high time the truth be told so here it is.

Constantine's intention at Nicaea was to create an entirely new god for his empire who would unite all religious factions under one deity. Constantine desired a synthesis of sorts that could please everyone. Presbyters were asked to debate and decide who their new god would be. What one finds amazing when investigating Nicaea is that vital elements of the Nicaea proceedings are "strangely absent from the canons" (Catholic Encyclopedia, Herbermann ed., vol. iii, p. 160). This quote means that the proceedings at Nicea have been expunged and censored to the public. Nicea was called for one reason only; that being the gathering of divergent religious cults to debate and decide upon a unified religious belief system for the Roman empire that could bring all peoples together under the common belief in only one god (Dr. Richard Watson, An Apology for Christianity, 1776, 1796 reprint). The list of gods represented by the Bishops of Nicea seemed endless and unity seemed illusory. A great number of Eastern and Western gods and goddesses like Jove, Rhets, Mithra, Baal, Thor, Gade, Apollo, Juno, Aries, Taurus, Minerva, Atys, Krishna, Indra, Durga, Neptune, Vulcan, Kriste, Agani, Croesus, Pelides, Huit, Hermes, Hesus, Thulis, Thammus, Eguptus, Iao, Aph, Saturn, Minos, Gitchens, Maximo, Hecla and Phernes were for the choosing (God's Book of Eskra, anon., xlvii, paragraph 36). Up and until the First Council Of Nicea, the Roman religion accepted by the aristocracy worshipped primarily two Greek gods Apollo and Zeus. The common people, however, looked to Caesar as their god who was deified by the Roman Senate after his death and venerated as "the Divine Julius" and "Savior". Caesar was called "God made manifest" and "Universal Savior of human life" and his son and successor Augustus was called the "ancestral God and Savior of the whole human race" (Homer Smith, Man and His Gods, Little, Brown, and Co., Boston, 1952).

Constantine intended to create a completely new god for his empire who would unite all religious factions under one deity. Having asked the Bishops and presbyters to debate the issue and decide upon one god among hundreds Constantine had hoped they they could reach a religious consensus. History shows us that they could not and one year and five months later no consensus was yet to be found (God's Book of Eskra, Prof. S. L. MacGuire translation, Salisbury, 1922, chapter xlvii, paragraphs 36, 41). Constantine was furious upon his return to Nicea to find little if any unity as he had hoped regarding this religious schism in his empire. The best that the Bishops had done was to limit their choices down to five gods: Caeasr, Krishna, Mithra, Horus, and Zeus (Eusebius, Historic Ecclesiastica, c. 325). Constantine, in charge of the Nicea proceedings, decided that he would choose this new god for everyone and enforce his choice upon all mankind in his empire. To appease the British Constantine chose the name of the great Druid god, Hesus as well as the Eastern Savior-god Krishna.

Now get ready for a shock. The Latin word for pig is written "sus"! "Je-sus" is pronounced "Gee-sooce" and this is from the Latin word/name "Ie-sus" which is pronounced "Ee-sooce". Now please don't get mad at me but amazingly, the suffix "sus" is the same as the Latin word for "pig". Added to this there was a Celtic demon god by the name "Esus" pronounced "Ee-sooce" also known as "Hesus" which is pronounced "He" or "Hey - sooce". Now, this god Hesus was worshiped by the ancient Druids (Dictionary of Pagan Religions, p. 117, 152). This "Esus" was found on a relief (the projection of a figure or part from the ground or plane on which it is formed, as in sculpture or similar work) that is on an alter of Zeus that was found in Paris in the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Notre Dame (Encyclopedia Britannica Macopedia, p. 575). On this relief you can see that on the chest of "Esus" is a Cross. Now, on a much higher note, there exists an Egyptian connection whereby Hesus was previously known as the Egyptian god Hu! In the heavens and cosmos this God is known to have "breathed out" and "breathed in" all that would later become life, along with its destruction/death, and rebirth. Egypt likened the creative acts of Amen or God as if he expelled his his first breath as "Hhhhhhooooooo". This is the breath of God who, as we received it, breathed life into matter. We see it so clearly in the Adam story which is at best an allegory. As the first Word of God is pronounced it sounds like the harmonics of a cosmic breeze. As a second breath is expelled Hhhhhhooooooo which becomes the sounds and name of the Ancient Egyptian god Hu. The bottom line is that Hu means an "Authoritative Utterance: Word of God: Word of Creation". This is the "Word" of God of which we also read. Clearly "Hhhhhhooooo" or "Hu" is the Word or utterance which means "God". Added to this later in the Jewish culture Hesus (pronounced heysoos) was a Hebrew term that meant "neither He nor She." It was neutral. This should make you wonder why we never hear of the feminine aspects of God or the goddesses. Amazing, we find that up until 2000 B.C.E. God was known to the culture religions of the world as feminine and not masculine. Following the northern barbarian invasions of the Southern hemisphere, the God of the battle ax destroys the God of love known in the Southern hemisphere. Truly, God is love and not a warrior God, a God to be feared. Sadly, God becomes overemphasized as "masculine" and has remained so since to most world religions since today they have separated themselves apart from the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Sacred Science. But this is only half of the puzzle.

Now it is also important to know that Krishna is Sanskrit for "Christ" which is in Egyptian the word "Krst". To these two names for god Constantine decided to combine and out comes "Hesus Krishna" as the new name for the new Roman god that would unify Constantine's kingdom. This name, "Hesus Krishna" was put to a vote and the majority of hands agreed by a vote of 161 to 157 that the name of this new Roman god would be "Hesus Krishna". This official gathering at the summons of Constantine gave the world "Hesus Krishna" as the new god of the Roman empire to which all could show allegiance and this new god was "officially" ratified by Constantine (Acta Concilii Nicaeni, 1618). This was a political act of deification by the power of Rome and the Emperor had his new religion. The astute reader might know that there is no "J" in the alphabets until around the 9th century and later "Hesus Krishna", which had existed from the 4th century, will in the 9th century, become subsequently "Jesus Christ". There you have it!

Now, knowing this, I challenge any and all to tell themselves before God that this "Jesus Christ" in the New Testament refers to a "literal" and "historical" personage that supposedly lived some 4 centuries earlier than Constantine in the Jewish culture and who died on an old rugged tree for the sins of mankind. No wonder Judaism cannot accept our Jesus as depicted in the New Testament. A little knowledge goes a long way to deliver man and save him from ignorance and foolishness. All that remained now for Constantine was the publicizing to the entire Roman empire the name of "Hesus Krishna" or, as it becomes some five hundred years later, "Jesus Christ". This synthesis of two ancient names for god was easily accomplished by Constantine and was done so when he ordered 50 new "Bibles" written containing this "Hesus Krishna" or "Jesus Christ" as a conglomerate of the hoped for seed from the loins of King David as the "Jewish messiah" (small "m" since not a God but only a man) and "Savior" (incarnated Divinity in "matter") of the world, the access to which was now only obtainable through the doors of the Roman Church and its Bishop. There is now "no salvation" outside of the Roman Church for mankind and again it only through the "Jesus Christ" of its own creation.

It may sound simple right now, but I assure you the creation of the "literalized" Christian religion it is rather complex and deserving of your study if you desire the truth that lies behind our "Christian Jesus Story" as taught today.

Only by comparing the ancient religious dogmas and doctrines and the ancient's understanding of them as only "allegories" and "metaphors" of an invisible metaphysical realm can we come to realize that a tragic miscarriage of "justice" and "interpretation" has occurred when these same "religious dogmas" of ancient Egypt; ones concerning God, the Soul and the "Krst/Karest/Christ", are passed through the hands of Roman Christianity where they were "literalized" and "carnalized" during the 2nd through the 5th centuries; a tragic time for humanity when the true original metaphysical understanding of God and His "incarnation" and "death on a cross" was tragically misinterpreted and continues to be so today some 1,800 years later. Only when examining the "prototypes" and "Divine Patterns" found in the ancient Egypt Religion and their consistent hermeneutic and interpretation and subsequent transmission on down through history basically "unaltered until we come to Rome can we be certain that these Spiritual and religious "dogmas" and "doctrines" which we have inherited as Christians have or have not retained the same original meanings and interpretations down through time as intended by those who first gave them to humanity in the beginning of recorded time. Only by seeing for ourselves the transmission of an unchanged ancient Spiritual Wisdom from nation to nation for thousands of years can we be certain that this "Divine Wisdom" and its Spiritual "allegories" along with the "Pattern for the Descent of the Soul into humanity" has remained unchanged for over 10,000 years. Only then can we then compare this ancient and common "Divine Truth" with our received "tradition" of these same religious dogmas and determine if we have received them in the same "unaltered" format and with the original interpretation intended by those who first taught then to mankind. Let me tell you now: We Have Not!

Only by seeing the same ancient Spiritual Wisdom passing down through history from nation to nation where only the "names" were different can we determine the accuracy with which this "Divine Pattern" has been maintained as bequeathed to us today. Only by comparison of the "original Divine Pattern" of these religious doctrines and dogmas as they were "understood" and expressed by these ancient Spiritual Masters at the beginning of time with our later Roman and Protestant understanding of these same "dogmas" can we determine if we as Christians and follows of "the Christ" have received them in our Christian theology and Churches unchanged and possessing the same original understanding as they did over 10,000 years before the rise of Roman Christianity. Only in this way can we see that mankind kept the integrity of the pattern intact up until the 2nd century with the rise of Rome and its antisemitism and then everything is "radically" altered and reinterpreted in order to bring unity to a fragmenting Roman empire. In so doing, by comparison of this "Divine Pattern" with our contemporary experience, can we be assured of having the proper perspective as to how to interpret our parallel "Jesus Story" correctly let alone live our lives in light of the Spiritual Truth that originally laid behind it before Rome's tragic "radical reinterpretation" of them. The bottom line of all of this comparison of the ancients religious myths of the Descent of the Soul and their "Pagan Christs" with our "Jesus Story" is to determine if we, since possessing the "same Divine Pattern" and "story", have correctly understood and interpreted this Sacred Wisdom of the ancients as we should have when reading this same "Divine Pattern" in our Bibles. We will be able by such a comparison and investigation of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom in both the world's Sacred Scriptures as well as those of Christianity determine if the accepted and inherited an interpretation of a "historical" and "literal" account of a real-live breathing Jewish Rabbi and possible Messiah of some 2,000 years ago is actually the correct interpretation of this "Divine Pattern". This is of supreme importance for the Christian given the unbelievable parallels and similarities between the "same events" within this "Divine Pattern" and those in our "Jesus Story" within our Bibles which is normally taught to us as a "historical" and "literal" account of which our belief in such supposedly determines our very own salvation. Only by such a comparison and recovery of the "keys" to properly interpret this ancient Spiritual Wisdom along with its religious myths and dogmas of the ancient nations and their "dying and rising" Gods and Goddesses can we determine for certain if our "Jesus character" in the New Testament is but another in a long line of personifications of this "Divine Pattern" and not actually a historical personage as Rome maintains to a world devoid of this ancient Spiritual Wisdom and knowledge. Only by comparing how these ancient earlier events and dogmas connected to the ancient Spiritual Mysteries were understood and interpreted by the ancients can be be certain that our approach to the same "Divine Pattern" in our New Testament is accurate as to what was intended by the originators of these ancient Spiritual Myths in antiquity. Only in such an in-depth comparison can we see for ourselves if the "Divine Pattern" as rendered in our "Jesus Story" has been mistakenly and purposefully rendered incorrectly by Rome when they discarded the prior allegorical and metaphorical intended understandings of these Divine Metaphysical truths as were understood and taught by the ancients for over 10,000 years. Only by such a comparison and recovery of the "keys" to this ancient symbolism as found in these religious myths in the ancient Divine Wisdom, can we see for certain that Rome gave the world a false "literal" and "historical" fulfillment in the person of a supposed historical Jesus when before this time as far back as you can go no such "historical" or "literal" understanding of this "Divine Pattern" ever existed or was ever meant to interpreted as such. After the evidence is presented and examined in-depth it is my hopes that you, the reader and "truth-seeker", will see that the "historical" and "literal" interpretation of our "Jesus Story " is desperately far from the intended truths that the Creator shared with mankind in the beginning of our existence and this new knowledge and "Gnosis" will open your Christian Bible for you in a whole new way and you will then behold the most cohesive and unified Divine Revelation from beginning to the end of this Bible that you have ever seen or hoped to see in this life-time. No typical Christian has ever seen this or been made aware of this "radical reinterpretation" who could remain a "typical Christian" adhering to the traditional dogmas espoused by Christianity today. It is our hope that like us, new Spiritual Insights will leap before your eyes like never before and in so doing only "awaken" you to your Divine origin, your Divine purpose, and your Divine future. It is absolutely breath-taking once you come to possess the "keys" to the proper interpretation of your Bible which Organized Roman Christianity both rejected and purposely discarded over 1,800 years ago and which sadly is absent in most if not all Christian Churches today.

It is time for the "lost light" of God and mankind to be restored. Well there you have the very core of the problem that is presented to the typical "believing Christian" today who does not possess the "keys" to correctly interpret his "Jesus Story". Bet Emet Ministries has prepared the path to enlightenment for other "truth-seekers" in other websites in order to arrive at this present study. After a general introduction concerning the Hidden Wisdom in the Holy Bible we will begin a more detailed study into the "historical Jesus problem" and its links to ancient Egypt and the crucified Egyptian Messiah. For some this will be a review from an earlier website somewhat but the necessary foundations must be laid if we are to make this pilgrimage together and arrive to a full understanding of the materials presented. This information will be for many alarming once they see the evidence, or should I say the lack of it for a "historical Jesus Christ" for yourself. Let is be said that on our other websites which are constructed as "thematic studies, we have dealt with the lack of integrity and forgery of the New Testament texts in many places along with the falsified messianic prophecy all of which are construed to foster a "belief" in a "historical Jesus Christ". At the heart of this is the unreliability of the New Testament texts which teach this Christian Jesus as the "Jewish Messiah". Remember Judaism denies and does not accept the Christian Jesus for a reason. Comparison with the Hebrew Scriptures from which these messianic prophecies are supposedly taken, will reveal to the "thinking believer" the depth of the messianic problem in the New Testament let alone other Christian forgeries of the Hebrew Scriptures as it exists in the Christian Bible. This should make us as "truth-seekers" look all the more deeply for the truth behind our altered religious texts. All of this again is done by Rome to artificially create a "historical Jesus" from the ancient Metaphysical Spiritual Wisdom which was always allegorical and metaphorical; a "radical reinterpretation" of the Soul's salvation as connected to this "crucified Krst" of which we read originally in ancient Egypt. In discarding the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Rome sets themselves up as the sole distributor of salvation for the world through their "reinterpreted" ancient Spiritual Wisdom. We should have listened to the very warning from the Christ given in the Gospel of Matthew:

Matt 24:5 5 For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many. (KJV)

Let us heed this warning and see for ourselves if our Christian interpretation of "the Christ" and the dogmas of our Roman Bible agrees with over 10,000 years of Spiritual instruction concerning God, His Krst/Karest/Christ and the true salvation of the Soul. Let us learn how we got our Bible and the alterations and changes to which it has fallen. Let us recover the truth of the Hebrew Scriptures and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom that once was the first Gnostic New Testament of Marcion; the very same truth that Rome will take and alter in their subsequent reprinting of it after its 30 year alteration at the hands of Irenaeus and other antisemitic Church Fathers. Let us study to the depth needed to see clearly this Roman "radical reinterpretation" of Divine Truth and "the Krst/Christ" that has robbed mankind of this true incarnational purpose and yet does so today. Let us now join together and recover these lost Divine Truths that the Creator intended all Souls to know during their Earthly incarnation.

THE NATURE OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH & THE BIBLE: HISTORICAL OR MYTHICAL?

Today, in this age of information, the Christian is challenged in his typical understanding of his Christian faith like never before in the history of Christianity. These are challenges that Christians and Christian interpreters and believers must meet every day now. In a nutshell the pressing question remains: Which of our scriptures are to be regarded as "historical" and which as "mythical"? Let me rephrase this question in such a way that it is more relevant to the "truth-seeker" and "thinking-believer":

- What is the truth about our "Jesus Christ"; was he a real "literal" and "historical" person?
- Could "Jesus Christ" be a Spiritual Concept that has been handed down for over 10,000 years by many different nations and in many different names that lies as the very core of mankind being a "Divine Being"?
- How is Christianity to be understood when reading our Bibles; both the Old and New Testaments?
- How are we to approach and interpret our inherited Christian Scriptures? Are they to be seen as "literal" and "historical" or are they a "pseudo-history" at best veiling a hidden "Esoteric Christianity" and a "Spiritual Mythos" of God incarnated in mankind?

Few Christians have ever heard of Ignatius who was an early Church Father. Ignatius was the third Bishop of Antioch as is reported to have died between 98 and 117 C.E. He makes an astounding statement in his writings left to us. We need pay very close attention to what is being said at this most early date in the development of "historical Christianity". He observes: "I have heard some say, 'Unless I find it in the ancient writings, (the originals or archives) I will not believe it to be written in the gospel'. And when I said to them: 'It is written!' they replied to me 'It is found written before;'" in what they called the uncorrupted originals, which Ignatius will then proceed to denounce as corrupt copies of his original gospel. Ignatius goes on to day: "To me," he says, "Jesus Christ" stands instead of all the uncorrupted monuments in the world, together with those untouched (or incorruptible) monuments, his cross, his death, his resurrection, and the faith which is in him". Notice that Ignatius cares not that "his gospel" has been "written before"! This is amazing that reference is made to an "ancient gospel" concerning "Jesus Christ" and he flippantly does not seem to care or even inquire into its prior existence. The same standpoint was occupied by Professor Jowlett, when he wrote: "To us the preaching of the gospel is a New Beginning, from which we date all things, beyond we neither desire nor are able to inquire" (Gerald Massey, The Historical Jesus and the Mythical Christ, p. 1-2, Kessinger Publishing Co, Montana, U.S.A.). Professor Jowlette makes a critical mistake. It is within man and his nature to count the "birth" of something from the time when they first acquired a knowledge of them. So it was with primitive Christians who were ignorant of the natural beginnings and past ancient history of their Christian Faith that can be traced as far back as ancient Egypt. But they simply were not aware of the hoary beginnings of their "birth faith". But things have changed. We can "inquire" into these facts today like never before being benefit of this age of information in which we live. The difference is that unlike Professor Jowlett you and I may have the "desire to inquire" to this earlier understanding of "Jesus Christ" and this "ancient gospel" where others did not and may not yet even today.

It was not until this, the Era of Excavation, that we were able to dig down far enough to recover the fundamental facts to know anything certain concerning the remoter origins and evolution of the Christian System; the most ancient evidences having been neglected until now. We find upon examination that the original mythos and gnosis of Christianity were primarily derived from Egypt on various lines of descent, Hebrew, Persian, and Greek, Alexandrian, Essenian, and Nazarene, and that these converged in Rome, where the "History" was manufactured mainly from the identifiable matter of the Mythos recorded in the ancient Books of Wisdom, illustrated by Gnostic Art, and orally preserved amongst the secrets of the Mysteries. What cannot escape our attention when doing these studies is the undeniable fact that instead of the Roman Church being a vessel for purging the truth from error we must look upon it rather as the melting-pot, in which the greatest and highest Spiritual Truths held sacred to earliest mankind were "radically reinterpreted" and watered down to unrecognizable proportions and then stamped with a newer name, and re-issued under a later date. This is the Christianity that you and I have been taught; not the original. Oh yes, there was an "original Christianity" then you and I were never taught that existed thousands of years earlier than the "transmuted" one we received from Rome. The readings of these earlier "ancient writing" prove the case to those familiar with them as Augustine's famous quotes shows us:

That which is known as the Christian religion existed among the ancients, and never did not exist; from the beginning of the human race until the time when Christ came in the flesh, at which time the true religion, which already existed began to be called Christianity. (Retractt. I, xiii, cited by Dr. Alvin Boyd Kuhn in his Shadow of The Third Century, Elizabeth N.J.: Academy Press, 1949, p.3).

Please take the time to re-read this quote above from Augustine and ponder its implications to our current "interpretation" of Christianity as given us from a "historical" and "literal" reading of the same "ancient writings" in our New Testaments which were never understood or interpreted the same as by the ancient Spiritual Masters of humanity who gave mankind them in the beginning of recorded time.

Discernment of Spiritual Truth when reading these ancient writings, many of which yet remain in our New Testaments, is determined on how we approach and read these sacred documents we have inherited by Rome. If we approach them only with an assumed "literal" and "historical" interpretation then we are guaranteed to miss completely their intended meanings for our lives; if we approach and read them as if they are the zenith of the highest Spiritual enlightenment capable to human minds consisting of the most elevated Spiritual Divine allegories, myths, and symbols then we truly have scaled to the most lofty Heavens and Spiritual knowledge.

Along this path of Spiritual enlightenment we will have cause to examine much evidence that supports such above statements. But the view is not always beautiful as one might hope. We shall see together that at the hands of Rome almost every good thing cherished by the Spiritually inclined ancients was re-dated, re-warranted, declared, and guaranteed to be the blessed result of Historic Christianity, as established by Jesus and his personal disciples. It can and will be demonstrated by us beyond any doubt to the "thinking-believer" and "truth-seeker" that Christianity pre-existed without the Personal historical and literal Christ, that it was continued by Christians who were misled by their authorities to accept a false approach in interpreting these ancient wisdom traditions and re-edited writings and in so doing to entirely rejected the ancient mystical, mythological, and Metaphysical understanding of these ancient writings and their intended meanings. We shall show the "truth-seeker" than the supposed historic portraiture in the Canonical Gospels was extant as mythical and mystical before the Gospels themselves existed. In short, the mythical theory can be proved beyond any doubt by recovering the Mythos and the Gnosis that has always laid veiling behind our "Jesus Story."

In all honesty, whether the accusation that Christianity is more mythical, mystical, and Metaphysical than historical can be sustained by the evidences available to us today is of major importance to a "thinking believer" and a "truth-seeker" than possibly any other thing in life. If such a challenge to Christianity can be made and proved then the ramifications of this challenge once proved discredits the Christian faith as it now stands and begins to open the doors of our minds to the fact that we have not understood this Bible "correctly" when we read it nor the traditions that we have inherited from our Christian Faith.

The Christian church stands teetering today on the abyss that separates two different and opposing theological messages in the New Testament; one message from the Jewish Jesus and the other from a "Romanized Paul" from the hands of Rome. Hidden in all of this is the opposition between a supposed the historical Jesus; the story of which is approached and interpreted "literally" and "historically" and the "Christ of Faith" which is more mystical, mythical, and Metaphysical. Without serious study one is hopeless in determining which of these theologies are correct; the one from a supposed "literal" and "historical" Jesus Christ that stems from a "Romanized Pauline" theology created long after the time for the life of this supposed historical person and the other which is legacy of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and the Spiritual Allegories of the Divine Realm and the Mind of God and His "Krst/Christ" which have "fallen" into material manifestation and humanity. This is the "Krst/Christ" of Faith and the Mind of Christ which resides awaiting awakening in every child of God. The true proponents of this idea is expressed in our New Testaments by two sources; the teachings of the "Jewish Christ" and the "Gnostic Paul" who both teach the progressively evolving Christ Mind in mankind; this "mind of Christ" in you and me. We will come together to see that this "Jesus Story" is your story, my story; our "pattern" of sorts to lead our Souls through life.

Many Jewish and Christian Scholars, along with ordinary Christians, would consider that the historical Jesus is by definition all-important for Christian faith. The vast majority of believing Christians today have not the slightest idea concerning the difference between "the Christ of faith" and "the Jesus of history."

If it turns out that the real Gnostic Paul was not very interested in any supposed "historical Jesus", then traditional assumptions about the historical nature and basis of Christian faith are put in jeopardy. Christians traditionally have claimed that the distinctive thing about Christian faith is its historical basis: Its so-called "particularity" lies in its assertion that God's salvation came to humanity in particular historical events - Christ '"as handed over to death for our trespasses and was raised for our justification" according again to this "Romanized" Paul and "his gospel" (Rom 4:25). We are assured that Christianity, as re-defined by Rome, is not myth or philosophy or a system of ethics but a historical revelation. Somebody is right and somebody is wrong here; we cannot have it both ways. The "truth" is out there and you can have it if you wish. If, however, it can be shown beyond any doubt that a Gnostic Paul, as the first author of the earliest epistles on the "indwelling Christ" and the most influential exponent of Christian faith in the early church, did not see a "historical Jesus" as especially important, then we will have to conclude that our view of Christian faith was not that of many of the earliest Christians, since Paul was surely not alone in his attitudes.

If Paul, perhaps influenced by the Greek mystery religions, was interested in the proclamation of a dying and rising Christ within mankind rather than in some supposed "literalized" history of Jesus, then we may be forced to conclude that early Christianity was more mythological and less historical than we supposed.

The "key" to these truths surrounding our "Jesus Story" and the real identity of "Jesus Christ" lies in the interpretation of these New Testament documents, their reliability and their later forgery when compared to the much earlier existing ancient writings to which we alluded earlier in Ignatius comment. What I have shared with the readers is the very conclusion reached by a host of scholars in the last centuries. S. G. Wilson in his article surveying the history of recent Jesus-Paul study sums it up for us when he finds himself forced by the meager evidence for Paul's interest in Jesus to come to this theological conclusion:

Driven by reflection on both the theory and practice of our historical craft to the view that there is little we can confidently assert apart from the mere fact of Jesus' life and death, we are forced to fall back on a mythological figure (the Christ of faith, Pauline or otherwise) and adopt a position which verges on the docetic (Peter Richardson (editor), From Jesus to Paul: Studies in Honour of Francis Wright Beare, p. 20)

So, if we have learned anything it should be this. It is hopeless to try to understand anything correctly in our Bibles and especially our New Testament unless we approach these "re-edited" documents armed with the same "hermeneutic" and method of approach and interpretation as held by the ancient writers of these sacred writings as well as their comparison with the more ancient traditions that exist which show us that there is nothing really new in our "Jesus Story". Only in this way can we be assured of arriving at the truth and what honestly lies behind our "Jesus Story"; a story way too many people accept as interpreted today "by faith" and never studying it out for themselves to make sure that they have "the Faith of Jesus" and not merely a "Faith in Jesus".

2 Cor 13:5 5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates? (KJV)

THE FAMOUS QUOTE OF ST. AUGUSTINE: HOW COULD THERE BE A "CHRISTIANITY BEFORE JESUS CHRIST"?

I remember those days in Seminary quite well as they were definitely a turning point in my life; one that I had not expected. First of all I love history and at one time has wanted to be a history teacher when in high school but events would lead me elsewhere. I would end up almost going to Medical School but would reconsider and end up in Pharmacy and would practice this profession for about ten years before entering Southwestern Seminary in Ft. Worth, Texas on the way to my Pastorate. But I never lost my love for history and this love will serve me well when I attended Seminary later in my life. I can remember while in Seminary learning of the Apostolic Fathers of the early church. I, at first, was overwhelmed when confronted with volumes and volumes of written works from the Ante-Nicene Fathers, the writings of the Fathers down to A.D. 325, the Nicean Fathers and the post-Nicene Fathers. It would take several years of reading them familiarize myself with not only what they said and taught but to competently follow the chronological synthesis of religious ideas and theology which would develop over these several hundreds of years. But alone the way in my voracious reading and studying of my faith in preparation for my later ministry I was often taken back by what they said. I found that often within their personal writings came confessions of deceit and dishonesty regarding the message that they were leaving the world about Jesus as "the Christ". Some of these Church Fathers and their own declarations on the pages of these early works from these Church Fathers pulled the rug right out from under my "theological feet" and shook my very life. It seemed to me the more that I read that behind all the rhetoric was an "Ancient Story" of which they knew and were but "remolding" for their time and age. It appeared to me that many of them, who addressed this issue, knew quite well of the existence of this "Christ" in the Ancient past and was only retelling the story again for the ignorant laymen of their day. What amazed me more was that some of them thought it sport and jest to teach this "Ancient Christ" and "Jesus" to these ignorant people who knew no better. Equipped with the authority of the Roman Church who held the "keys" of Heaven and Hell and who dosed out large amounts to fear to control the masses it was easy to manipulate the minds of these people and teach them what you will regardless of truth. Understand Rome had a Empire to build an they would use religious ignorance of the vast majority of the illiterate people to build it. This brings me to St. Augustine.

Saint Augustine, who became Bishop of Hippo in 395, is touted today as one of the four greatest fathers of the Christian Church. Augustine was born in Tagaste (modern Algeria). He has been called the "most erudite" and the "most prolific" of all the Early Church Fathers and the greatest theologian of all Christian history. Augustine's writings developed the theory on the Church that he is given the designation as "Doctor of the Church". It it time now to look at one of his "writings".

One of the great admissions by Augustine in his writings is one which pulls the underpinnings out from under the whole of the "unique" Christian Religion as the "only" path to Heaven which Roman Christianity attests today. I can remember it well when studying Augustine and his theology the passage that jumped out at me like few that I had read in that time of my life. In what I was reading of Augustine one day I was startled by what he said and it stopped me on a dime and I had to re-read it several times to see not only the picture of what Augustine was painting but at the same time identify with his own concern about how could there be Christianity before Christ? I read more I felt the concern and identified with the great mystery of which Augustine had written. I began to see that Augustine, the supposed greatest Church Father ever, had studied this question regarding a "Christianity before Jesus" and answered it accordingly as follows:

That which is known as the Christian religion existed among the ancients, and never did not exist; from the beginning of the human race until the time when Christ came in the flesh, at which time the true religion, which already existed began to be called Christianity. (Retractt. I, xiii,* cited by Dr. Alvin Boyd Kuhn in his Shadow of The Third Century, Elizabeth N.J.: Academy Press, 1949, p.3). Please take the time to re-read this quote above from Augustine.

I wondered at what this astounding quote from Augustine could mean. It would take several years of study on my part to identity exactly what Augustine meant by that quote. He was speaking about Egypt and the Egyptian religion which was a mixture of the Mystical and Mythical representations of Divine Truth given to the earliest of mankind on this planet. Now Augustine wrote around 400 A.D. and mind you this is far removed from the time period supposedly of the "historical Jesus". I would come to see with more study that Augustine "assumes" something that was not in this "TRUE RELIGION" which "ALREADY EXISTED FROM THE BEGINNING OF THE HUMAN RACE" which is not true; namely, that nowhere in this "TRUE REGION FROM THE BEGINNING" was there ever a "Karast/Christ" who was to come in "the flesh". This is a major study to say the least that took several years to get to the bottom of it thoroughly on my part but I did and the fruits of my studies are becoming available in various websites as time permits.

Augustine's astonishing declaration was made in the early fourth century of our era. It can be asserted with little chance of refutation that if this affirmation of the pious Augustine had not sunk out of sight, but had been kept in open view through the period of Western history, the whole course of that history would have been vastly altered for the better. It is only too likely the case that the obvious implications of this startling passage were of such a nature that its availability to the public was purposely frowned upon by the ecclesiastical authorities in every age. Augustine startling honesty in this quote held the kernel of a great truth the common knowledge of which would have been a stumbling block in the way of the perpetuation of priestly power over the general Christian mind. It would have provoked personal inquiry and disarmed the ecclesiastical prestige of much of its power.

Augustine's quote sure set me to studying like I had never before. I was slowly beginning to see that as a Christian my religion and faith might not be as "sure" as I had assumed and the more I pursued such courses of study I found that all I had was a "Swiss cheese Christian theology" which was full of holes. But it was too late for me; Pandora's box was now open thanks to Augustine and I wanted to know what this "True Religion that had already existed since the beginning of the human race" truly consisted of and I would slowly gather the pieces to this tremendous 18,000 year old puzzle together and in so doing I was equally alarmed and shocked to see that the picture "painted then by these true Ancients of Egypt about the Creator", going way back before 13,000 B.C.E., had been blurred almost beyond belief in my present day with its false presentation of the Egyptian "Karast/Christ" to me through Rome's New Testament and its falsification and misrepresentation of these earlier Ancient Truths in their depiction of the "Jesus Story".

The commentary further stated:

For what is it that the Christian saint actually says? It stands as hardly less than a point-blank repudiation of all the chief asseverations on which the structure of Christian tradition rests. Every child born to Christian parents in eighteen centuries has been indoctrinated with the unqualified belief that Christianity was completely new, and the first true, religion in world history; that it was given to the world by God himself and brought to earth by the sole divine emissary ever commissioned to convey God's truth to mankind; that it flashed out amid the lingering of Pagan darkness as the first ray of true light to illumine the pathway of evolution for the safe treading of human feet. All previous religion was the superstitious product of primitive childishness of mind. Christianity was the first piercing of the long night of black heathenism by the benignant gift of God (John G. Jackson, Christianity Before Christ, p. 1-3). (nothing could be further from the truth)!

Finally, the commentary stated:

Augustine shatters this illusion and this jealously preserved phantom of blind credulity. From remotest antiquity, he asserts, there has always existed in the world the true religion. It illuminated the intellects of the most ancient Sages, Prophets, Priests and Kings. It built the foundation for every national religion, the tenets of which consisted of reformulation of its ubiquitous ageless principles of knowledge and wisdom. It went under a variety of designations:

- Hermeticism in ancient Egypt;
- Orphism in early Greece;
- Zoroastrianism in Persia;
- Brahmanism in India;
- Taoism in China;
- The Eleusinian Mysteries in Greece
- Mithraism in Rome
- Shintoism in Japan and China.

Answer for yourself: But I thought all the above were "pagan" and wrong and evil and full of idolatry? Well they can be when you lose the "gnosis" and the secrets of how to interpret these higher Divine that were captured for all of Eternity by these Ancient Spiritualist through the agency of symbol and religious myths. When we look at the above list and read their accounts and "literalize" them as we have done with Jesus in the "Jesus Story" then we are guilty of falling into idolatry but if we possess the wisdom and knowledge as these Ancients did, who never looked at these myths at "literal" but only as "allegories expressing higher Divine Truths, then we are awe stuck and taken back by the knowledge and wisdom of these Ancient sages and Priests of God. I cannot describe it as it should be, but I have found little in life as satisfying to my Soul and Spirit as the study of Egypt, the parents of the Jewish nation, and their faith as these higher Ancient Divine Truths come alive to me as I stand startled and amazed at the depth of their knowledge of God when compared to mine growing up with a "literal" Christianity. I have attempted to bring the reader the richness of this knowledge of God possessed, like Moses for example, who grew up in Pharaoh's house. Let me say that I have been breathless by what I have uncovered and seen the Creator as more awesome today than words can covey and sadly this knowledge lays covered with millennia of sand and neglect today with the world's refocus upon Rome and its lying replacement religion with a "literal godman" instead of the Mystical and Mythical Christ which only lives "within".

In no matter what garbled and perverted form, even tribal religionism fostered this "true" and "already existing religion from the beginning of time". I sadly had to admit as I studied the depth of Augustine's quote that as an Ordained Pastor of a mega church in Dallas that I did not have this "true" religion as has mankind down through time until the emergence of the Holy Roman Empire. Mystery cultism dramatized and ritualized it in many lands. Social usages, all the annual festivals centered around the equinoxes and solstices, folktales, tales, traditions, myths, legends, and oral traditions of the common people, carried these "Ancient Truths" down the corridors of time. Always it existed among men; never was it not present in the world. Hardly ever apprehended at its real value, its representations badly misconceived, its import warped and travestied at every turn in popular practice, it yet existed and came down to Augustine's day. (Kuhn, Shadow, pp. 3-4)

But Augustine was not through as he goes on to say more startling things few have ever heard today.

"I would not believe in the Gospel myself if the authority of the Catholic Church did not influence me to do so." Against the letter of Mani, 5,6, 397 A.D.

Answer for yourself: Is this an admission that Augustine knew that the "literal" Jesus of the Catholic "Jesus Story" was a lie and that only the Mystical and Mythical "Jesus Christ" as a Heavenly Concept was true? Did Augustine know that, as the Ancients had taught since the beginning of time, through both oral traditions first and then later with recorded works, that the only true faith given by God was one that expressed unity with the Creator through the Mystical Christ within and the representation of this "Indwelling God/Christ" through the agency of Myth (the Mythical Christ)? He sure did but few reads these men today and are relegated to listening to what others have heard preached on cassette tapes by other and assorted such hearsay instead of the truth.

There is an extensive literature on the Pagan origins of Christianity. Most of these works, written by scholars for scholars, never reached the general reader. It is time they do. Only in understanding the ancient meanings of "The Krst/Christ" can we ever hope of coming to the truth that lies behind our "Jesus Story". Email us and we will send you a recommended book list whereby you no longer have to remain in the dark concerning the truth behind the "Jesus Story". We also provide to the interested student a ministry CD containing the study materials from all of our websites. Let us know if you would desire to have one. In the study of this CD the dedicated will see how the "historical Jesus", first used a teaching tool and vehicle to express Divine Truths in Judaism, will dissolve in the light of today's evidence to the contrary and in its place emerge the Divine Truth behind the Mystical Christ within us all as believed by the earliest Christian Jewish and Gentile Gnostics and how these Divine Truths were captured for all Eternity by the Ancients through the medium of religious myth. With acquisition of the "gnosis" and proper way to interpret these Ancient writings then one begins to see the puzzle pieces for what they truly are and becomes capable of recovering the original truths behind the "Jesus Story" as first understood by these Ancient Sages and Priests.

WHY HIDE THE TRUTH IN OUR BIBLE WITH PARABLES AND SPIRITUAL ALLEGORIES &MYTHS?

The Christian Bible, as also the scriptures of other faiths, has from remote times been regarded as belonging to a special, even unique, category of literature. Exponents of Oriental religious writings, the early Kabbalists, the disciples of Ammonius Saccus, other Neoplatonists of Alexandria known as Analogeticists and their successors down to modern times-all these have regarded world scriptures as being largely, but not entirely, allegorical. They looked upon them as being constructed of symbols, analogies and parables. As previously stated-and this is the main theme of this work-these allegories are said to preserve for posterity, to reveal and yet to conceal, profound spiritual and therefore power-bestowing truths. Said another way, the Sacred Books for all major religions are best understood as "pseudo-histories" at best to which metaphysical ideas have been concealed only to be seen by those who are "awakened" at their present stage of Spiritual growth and evolution.

This method of writing is referred to as the sacred or mystery language and is said to have been invented and used by sages of old in order both to reveal to those who would be helped and to conceal from those who might be harmed a deep spiritual wisdom which can bestow theurgic powers upon its possessors. The necessity for this reservation becomes clear when the use to which modern scientific discoveries are put is observed. One example of the misuse of knowledge is the release, as the explosive agent in atomic bombs, of the energy derived from nuclear fission and fusion.

Recognizing that their discoveries belonged to humankind, the philosophers and scientists of former days knew that such knowledge placed in general hands, and particularly in those of disruptive elements in society, could be extremely dangerous. They therefore constructed the cryptic language in which the inspired scriptures and mythologies of the world have been written. Although based in general upon historical events, these narratives, as earlier suggested, have undermeanings and, in some cases, even a sevenfold significance. While apparently founded on fact, each story is rather an historical metaphor, having an inner purport and containing within itself layer upon layer of hidden knowledge.

The "messengers" and "Krsts/Christs" of world religions made use of this method of teaching. It is no different when we come to the "Mind of Christ" as expressed through the Jewish faith. When addressing his disciples, Jesus spoke openly of spiritual truths, but to nondisciples, in parables. Indeed, he used the words:

"Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet and turn again and rend you" (Man. 7:6).

He also said to them,

"Unto you is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God: but unto them that are without all these things are done in parables" (Mark 4:11).

One reason for this differentiation is not far to seek. Knowledge can bestow power, and the writers of the sacred language were in the same position in which a small group of modern scientists would find themselves after having first discovered atomic energy and the means for its controlled release. They would not dare immediately to make their discovery universally available. Similarly the sages of old, having investigated the structure of matter and the composition of both universe and human beings and having discovered the forces locked up within them, felt a tremendous sense of responsibility. They had to prevent the misuse of their knowledge and, at the same time, to insure its preservation for the future benefit of humanity.

Actually, in the case of knowledge of the superphysical and spiritual worlds, their structure, their natural forces and intelligences associated with them-and their correspondences with the superphysical vehicles and powers of human beings -the need for secrecy is far greater. In wrong hands the power which such knowledge makes available is far more dangerous than physical atomic energy. The products of nuclear fission and fusion can destroy only physical objects. If misused, hidden or esoteric knowledge and the power associated with it can, in addition, impair the integrity, harden and warp the nature and, in consequence, seriously retard the evolution of the transgressors and those under their malign influence. The ancient seers, therefore, devised not the algebraical symbols and formulas of the modern scientist but a cryptic language in which some of the words retain their normal meaning, while others are cryptograms or hierograms for spiritual and esoteric truths. In doing this, the writers of old knew that only those who possessed the "keys" of interpretation would be able to discover the truths which the sacred language both reveals and conceals. The secret is rendered still safer by the fact that, in order to use the keys successfully, one must have developed the intuitive faculty and be imbued with a sense of moral responsibility.

Such, briefly and but partially described, are the origin and some of the purposes of the sacred language in which the scriptures and mythologies of ancient peoples were written. To approach the Sacred Books of the world religions, let alone our Christian Bible with a pre-set "literal" and "historical" manner of interpretation without such knowledge as to how these Sacred Books were truly written ensures that we not understand them properly or gleam from them the Spiritual Truths veiled in them intended to help our Soul and its unfoldment in this plane of present existence.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW BEFORE YOU START YOUR STUDIES INTO BIBLICAL INTERPRETATION & THE ANCIENT SPIRITUAL WISDOM HIDDEN IN OUR BIBLES

The birth-place of religions is believed to have originated in the Eastern hemisphere of this planet in ancient times. For centuries this Spiritual Wisdom and Divine Revelation of these ancient Eastern nations have either passed almost out of existence or at least fallen into decay. Ancient nations at the dawn of mankind, ancient nations like the Egyptians, the Hindus, the Greeks, the Chinese, etc., has been hidden from the younger people of this Earth. This ancient Spiritual Wisdom and its legacy has been jealously guarded by the wise men of the East. This Spiritual Knowledge and Wisdom has from time to time leaked out into the world and been the origin of countless religions, all of which, notwithstanding their hostile relationships, have yet sprung from the one Source.

There exists yet in the Earth today an oriental philosophy, the arcane wisdom of the East, and some of these teachings of which have now, under the name of Theosophy, for the first time in all the past ages only has been been presented to the world at large in the last two centuries. This guarded Spiritual Wisdom was kept from the vulgar and secular until the evolution of the human species reached a point where it was prepared to understand these ancient Spiritual Metaphysical truths. But with the advances made to our world, especially in the realm of science, the minds of contemporary mankind are today fertile areas of receptivity of these ancient Spiritual Truths which today like never before breaches the chasm existing between "Religion and Science". Man can now understand like never before what actually lies behind the Sacred texts of world religions, including Christianity, which has eluded him for millennia. For long ages this Spiritual Wisdom has been the heritage of only the more Spiritually advanced of the nations, or the elect of other less-evolved peoples who had struggled to a stage of progress beyond their brethren. These "Adepts" bound themselves to the strictest pledges of secrecy and vowed not to reveal this knowledge and power to the masses Spiritually unequipped to handle them ethically or morally until the "fullness of time" when mankind was deemed ready to take its next step of Soulish evolution. Until recently the races of mankind were judged "unfit" to receive this Spiritual Wisdom but in the last two hundred years this "lost light" is being restored to the masses of humanity like never before. That is both "good" and "bad" and we will later address.

There are many names for this "Secret Wisdom" of the ancients; being called such names as "esoteric philosophy", "secret doctrine", and even "occult science". Whatever name we may choose when speaking of the "love of Wisdom" or "Theosophy", it can no longer be said that it is "esoteric" or "secret" or "occult" once it has been given to the world at large.

Now it is important to take note that each of the world's religions embodies a different statement or expression of this arcane and ancient doctrine as given to different races and under different circumstances in all periods of time, and this was done in accordance with man's needs for such wisdom. This was done by the guardians of such wisdom from nation to nation as deemed appropriate and necessary as man rose in his Spiritual evolution as a species. There has always been a "secret philosophy" and it lines the pages of our Bible but is kept from such by the writers through various techniques we will see momentarily. Every true religion, Eastern or otherwise, has had a dual existence from the movement of its birth to the hour of its decay; an external, conventional aspect for the masses, embodying little more than a code of ethics, and giving a few general facts concerning the origin of the world and the destiny of man. But at the same time there exists an internal esoteric school, containing the real teaching of the science, from which the exoteric doctrine was extracted. Indeed it is a significant fact that all religious beliefs, when their outer garb or public superstition has been stripped off, and their naked form restored in its original purity, are found to embody identical doctrines. This is only explainable by postulating the existence of a system of wisdom from which all world religions have sprung, such a system at the same time affording a "key" to all of the various beliefs, and explaining the many allusions to a "secret school" which are to be found in the Sacred Books of all nations and scattered through thousands of volumes in every tongue.

In ages past, when peoples are different from our present race walked the Earth, greater in science, greater in art, greater in civilization, the one desire which held the human Soul was the unquenchable thirst for wisdom. Earthy desires held a back seat to the Soul's desire for Spiritual Wisdom. Unknown to us with out separation of Church and State the ancient nations saw no difference between science and religion. They fathomed the mysteries of creation, not only by analysis, but by Spiritual perception on a level that dwarfs our understanding today. We have lost so much it is a tragedy.

Our present humanity is the descendant of these ancient ones, who wisdom has been lost, their knowledge scattered to the winds, leaving only a few husks of their brilliant sciences. A few, remaining true to their Godlike natures, retained their purity and power, and vowed to restore mankind again to his true position as Divine ruler of this planet. They or their descendants still walk the Earth unnoticed and unknown by ordinary humanity today. Holding that everyone has latent in him all the power and greatness of his ancestors, and that any one who succeeds in purifying himself or his animal tendencies and nature may rise to the position of a god, they have never lost hope of success in mankind's restoration to the great Spiritual heights and knowledge from which he has currently fallen.

Almost all of our present day knowledge has come from the East. We have to thank the older oriental nations for by far the greater part of our information concerning astronomy, chemistry, geometry; and indeed, anything we at present known is but a development of the few seeds of wisdom sown among us by our Eastern brethren. This flood of light which has come our way has illuminated the origin of religions and in so doing made plain that there was at one time a single philosophy from which all later "creeds" have sprung. The records of the Eastern esoteric schools of Philosophy state that there was at one time such a universal system, and as evidence of their statement point to:

- The fact that all doctrines entitled to be called "religions," in contradistinction to mere ethical associations, maintain the tradition of mankind as at one time pure, but since fallen and degraded; and
- The underlying similarity of all ancient "religious" creeds and "beliefs" when examined at the very core of their "being"

Cleared of their dross of public error, all religions will be found to embody in essence precisely identical teachings: Brahamanism, Buddhism, Taoism, Christianity, Gnosticism, the philosophy of the ancient Egyptians, the Chaldeans, the Hebrews, the Babylonians, the Assyrians, the Greeks and all these systems, both ancient and modern, and the core religious dogmas of the above religions are more or less portions of the one arcane Secret Doctrine that at one time in the history of this planet united all of mankind in "one Spiritual Truth".

It is to the East we have to look for what remains of the primeval philosophy; for the guardians of the secret wisdom and the "keys" for its proper interpretation so necessary for restoring the "lost light". Owing to the fact that the masses tend to constantly materialize and "literalize" philosophical conceptions, to turn what are intended to be pure abstractions into concrete images, the necessity for periodically re-directing and reforming their religious ideas must be apparent, and we therefore find men coming forward down through history, generally from the East from age to age, focused upon purifying the "old religion", and starting it anew upon a more Spiritual basis. The necessity for maintaining this purity for as long a while as possible has led each great teacher to divide his teaching into "inner" and "outer" schools. So that we find in Egypt and in Greece the "Greater" and "Lesser Mysteries" of the temples, and in India the esoteric and exoteric philosophies; Buddha and Pythagoras teaching their direct disciples mysteries not revealed to the masses, and Jesus adopting a like course in the New Testament, just as Moses did with the elders and the people. In other words, there are "two levels" by which man is to both "see" and "understand" this ancient Spiritual Wisdom.

The teachings of these "inner schools" and these "Greater Mysteries" have always been identical no matter how far back you look or if you look to different ancient nations and their "Spiritual Wisdom"; although their nomenclature may have been varied, they have always been under the direct supervision of the same "idea " or central school of thought. The esoteric doctrines of any one religion will be found to be the same as those of all the others. That is why Buddhistic dogmas are in reality the same basically as those found in Christianity, Chaldean, or even the Egyptian religion. The ancient religious philosophy it upholds is to be found "hidden" under the glyph, allegory, figuration, metaphor, simile, similitudes, typifications, parables, myths, legends, fables, symbols, personifications, embodiments, and stories of every ancient major religion, as well as in the Sacred Books of each of its nations, distorted to various degrees, perhaps, but still there today. Without "training" the reader often does not recognize it; mistakenly taking such "symbolisms" for "literalisms" and thereby discounting quite often what he does not recognize and relegating it to the absurd. I surely have read enough Christian writers over the years to know that this is true. In spite of what we don't know or recognize since not possessing the "keys" to the recognition of this ancient Spiritual Wisdom that lies at the very heart of this metaphysical realm in which we live & the ancient Sacred writings that "conceal it", there yet is a common thread connecting all of these "Greater Mysteries" and "inner schools" and it is the very core of truth that lies hidden behind our "Jesus Story" when it is examined and interpreted correctly once one comes to the knowledge and possesses the "keys" for its correct interpretation.

Notice if you will that the Christ tells us that his mission in the Earth is to fulfill, not to destroy; to bring unity, not alone of religion with religion, and sect with sect, but of religion with science, and of philosophy with both. Bet Emet Ministries is unique at least in this, that while other factions cry aloud today that with them alone "truth" is to be found, the wise student and "truth-seeker" should rather seek to vindicate the truth of all, and, uniting them into one harmonious whole, to demonstrate a true Brotherhood of man which once existed and hopefully will again as we each do our small part to "break down the middle wall of partition" that separates the races and religions of the nations today since they have, for the most part, lost the "keys" to the proper interpretation of the Secret Wisdom contained in their nation's Sacred Books. Be not mistaken, our Christian Bible stands at the top of the list as the world's most misunderstood and misinterpreted book which has ever been written and given to mankind. It is time that the Bible be rescued from unintelligence and its true Spiritual Message regained and this can only be done in light of restored knowledge concerning the "keys" to the proper interpretation of the ancient myths, allegories, and symbols concerning the Sungods and goddesses, both male and female characterizations of "the Christ/Sophia" which are contained within them. We do this in this website by not only an exhaustive examination of these "keys" to correct interpretation of the ancient Esoteric Philosophy in our Bible but also by comparing the stories in our Bible which we have mistakenly been taught to interpret "literally" and "historically" with the same stories of the ancient nations and their Sacred Books which long preceded our Bible; these same stories and symbols which the ancients were always taught were to be understood "allegorically" and "metaphorically" and never "literally" as it our custom today. Only in this way will the reader and "truth-seeker" see for himself the waywardness of typical current Christian exegesis of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom which is yet contained in our Bible today. Restoring to our Bible this "correct interpretation" of this arcane Spiritual philosophy will go a long way in hastening the Soulish evolution of mankind or at least 2.5 billion of them. This, dear one, is God's plan all along; not a new one, but one forgotten and lost when viewed only with a "historical" and "literal" approach to the Christian Scriptures. The ancients both knew and understood that these "same stories" that we find in our Christian Bible today were "allegorical" expressions created out of necessity for a finite mind that expressed an infinite metaphysical reality which they as "fallen" and "incarnated Souls" found themselves. It is we in Christianity who don't know this; it is time for that to change and this Website is created to address that problem.

Our Bible is a metaphysical revelation taken from the ancient stories of the nations that existed long before Israel, Greece, or Rome. What is but a summary statement in our Bible, for example the limited number of Scriptures that address the "creation" is often addressed by the ancient nations in volume and volume of Spiritual writings totaling hundreds and hundreds of pages. Central to the ancient wisdom found in religion after religion in the ancient world is the concept of the "Divine spark" or seed buried within each person. This is later personified in the nations and their gods and goddesses; their "pagan Christs" as many call it today not possessing the "keys" to this most glorious picture of the Soul/Christ and its "crucifixion on the cross of matter". It was the purpose of the ancient mysteries to bring to life this "Divine spark" spark so that it would illuminate life on this Earth. This "Divine spark" was taught in almost every religion and Scared Book of the ancient world. This "Divine spark" was symbolized and represented by various figures at different times and in different places. You can find that "Divine Spark" represented by the various names of Horus, Orpheus, Dionysus, Mithra, Krishna, Adonis, Tammuz, Hercules, Jesus and so on. They were all "pagan" Christs which is the common term in use today to describe this Spiritual concept. Our "Jesus Story" is but another retelling of the metaphysical realties connected with these "pagan Christs" and our "Jesus Story" is but another personification and representation of these metaphysical realities in which our Soul is immersed on this plane of its present existence. The philosophers of the ancient world knew that these figures were symbolic, and not historical men. Roman Christianity changed this idea during the 2nd through the 5th century and in so doing out comes the "golden calf" of a presumed and supposed "historical" and "literal" Jesus Christ which, as stated, is but another allegorical story for the descent of this "Divine spark" into "matter" and humanity.

Some 2,000 years ago in the area of the eastern Mediterranean, the Divine Soul or "Divine spark" within was called the "Christ" (from Karest or Krist, Egyptian for the anointed mummy). The symbol of the mummy was used to symbolize the restriction of "matter" and its effects upon the descended Soul. That is why we see Osiris depicted in "white" which is representative of the "mummy" and the embodiment of the Soul in the "Spiritual denseness of matter". Early Christianity, in its pre-Roman manifestation, was a re-statement of the ancient wisdom. "...Christians of any intelligence during the first two centuries at least did not regard their movement as the bearer of the first light into the heathen darkness, but only the republication of very ancient truth." (Alvin Kuhn, The Shadow of the Third Century: A Revaluation of Christianity,. Academy Press, 1949. p.27). You study into the earliest history of Gnostic Christianity will verify this fact beyond any intelligent doubt. Kuhn quotes Augustine and Eusebius to support his claim and any serious study of the pre-Latin Church Fathers will do likewise.

Behind what we have mistakenly been taught is a "literal" and "historical" reality concerning a Jewish Jesus Christ, lays the Divine Revelation that "the indwelling god in humanity is himself being brought to birth within the womb of mankind. Each individual is gestating a divinity within the deeps of his own nature. Christianity has fervently exhorted us to look into the empyrean to find the unapproachable God. All the while the infant deity slumbers unheeded within the heart. Christianity has largely nullified the force of St. Paul's almost frantic cry to us: "Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is within you?" (Alvin Kuhn, The Lost Light: An Interpretation of Ancient Scriptures, Academy Press, 1940. pp.44-47). This is the "Divine spark" within the animal body which houses our Soul. As you can begin to see the ancients framed this "Descent of the Soul" through allegorical and symbolic language and used the disguise of personification, allegory, and metaphor as seen in the characterizations of Horus, Orpheus, Dionysus, Mithra, Krishna, Adonis, Tammuz, Hercules, and Jesus in depicting this metaphysical "fall" or "descent" of this "Divine spark" into "matter" and humanity. The whole of the "Horus Story" or our "Jesus Story" is but a parable of the "descent, life, death, and re-ascent" of the Soul in relationship to material existence. This is very "heart" of this ancient Spiritual Wisdom which was expressed by the ancient Spiritual Masters through allegory, metaphor, symbology, simile, parable, etc. I love the quote from Plato in this regard: "Man is a god in an animal body".

The gods and goddesses of primeval religions were but the personification of the active manifest cosmic powers, cosmic energies, faculties, and very organs of God Himself in His self-expression through material existence. One you grasp this very important "key" then not only does the ancient writings of comparative religions "open" for your proper understanding but you come to see that Nature was God's body, elemental forces and "Living energies" were the very agents of God's operative economy. Ancient Egypt called these "Living Energies" that comprise the whole of God of the cosmos as the "neteru". We will look at these "neteru" and the ancient Egyptian understanding of these "Living Energies" which comprise the totality of the "One God" in detail very soon. God, the ancients understood, is "One", but also a "Unity of Many" parts or "attributes" through which He acts and manifests throughout the cosmos.Universal consciousness and Mind was God's thinking faculty and ultimate good was God's Spiritual heart. This is the "Logos" or "Christ" of which we read in the Bible, not a lone "historical person" by any shape of the imagination as Rome will espouse. The ancient system of wisdom thought it not blasphemy to delineate the organic structure of deity through the medium of personification and allegory in order to explain to finite and limited human grasp the very cause and nature of the world. Reverence was not withheld from even the lowest instrumentation of God and His method of manifestation in Nature. The ancients deemed it not dishonoring to deity to recognize His being in all things.The ancients understood that there is one Mind, one Law, one Principle, one Substance in the Universe, and all that exists "lives" and experiences a "consciousness" in various degrees of its evolvement and manifestation and is "one" with all that there is. All that exists is but a "self-expression" of God in one way or the other. They saw God in Nature, and not as abstracted from nature. And these same ancient Spiritual sages studied Nature as the living garment of God's immanence" (Ibid., p. 44-45). It is here they discovered that man is but a "microcosm" of the "macrocosm" and that man is made in the image of God.

Many cultures compare the Creator to the Sun. The Sun pours out its life giving rays and "life energy", as does the Creator. In order to exist, all life absorbs a tiny amount of this "life-giving" energy from the Sun. The Creator was therefore likened to a Spiritual Sun, or the invisible Sun within all things. Therefore we now understand why the ancients depicted symbolically God through the various personifications of solar gods such as Ra, Apollo, and Christ. These are again not "literal" but figurations of metaphysical realties of the "Living Energy" that exists at the core of all existence; both visible and invisible.

The ancients taught that God has projected a ray of His own life and Living Energy into humans. "In man the divine seed is the Christos" (Ibid., p. 46). These same ancients knew and understood that "the cosmic God is hardly an object of worship by humanity; but rather the very segmented portion of infinite Being that is tabernacled within the flesh of mortals is the actual divinity assigned to receive the attention and homage of mankind" (Ibid.). We speak here of the "Christ within" and not the "Christ/God" without. God is both "unknown" and "known"; and that part of God given to mankind is the indwelling "Krst/Karest/Christ" within; symbolized again in the "Christs" of previous nations as both "masculine Christs/Sungods" and feminine goddesses who are all symbolisms of the Sophia. Christ and Sophia are "one" making the whole of the incarnated God in "matter" and in humanity.

1 Cor 2:7 7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: (KJV)

Col 1:26-27 26 Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

In Plato's Timeaus and other ancient documents twelve junior gods, who were sparks of the eternal Flame of cosmic mind, came to earth to lift up humans from their animal nature to realize their divine souls. "Our earthly task, according to St. Paul, is to link together the two natures in 'one new man', bringing to an end in a final 'reconciliation' 'the battle of Armageddon', the aeonial warfare between the carnal mind of the animal and the spiritual mind of the god." (Ibid., p. 90). This is the very "heart" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom. St. Paul said:

2 Cor 13:5 5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates? (KJV)

All of life and religion is much more than a mystical feeling of life's experience. Religion serves a purpose; it was in origin a series of codes, principles, practices, and rituals given by the demi-gods to early mankind to awaken the slumberous genius of our actual divinity hidden within our animal bodies and nature (Ibid., p. 91). It is essential knowledge for humans to press forward their Spiritual evolutionary development from the animal nature to the divine nature and this is done through knowledged and practice of the truth; not a lie! Ignorance and foolishness almost banished this knowledge from all humanity and had not the ancients buried this ancient Spiritual Truths as they were murdered in the millions at the hands of Rome then the world today would not have this ancient "light" for our Soul which has enlightened the way for humanity once again in this last two hundred years. Our present business is to struggle to regain that lost paradise of knowledge once possessed by the ancients which is not taught in "literalistic" Christianity today. We must work again to awaken our Soul to the recognition of our high cosmic mission, and revivify the decadent forms of a once potent religious practice, based on restored Divine knowledge and the ancient Sacred Wisdom. This wonderful concept of the god within is well stated in The Litany of the Sun, inscribed on the Tombs of the Kings of ancient Thebes:

"The Kingly Osiris [one of the many symbolical representations of the indwelling Christ] is an intelligent Essence. His Limbs conduct Him; His 'Fleshes' open the way for Him. Those who are born from him create Him. They rest when they cause the Kingly Osiris to be born.

"It is He who causes them to be born .It is he who engenders them. It is he who causes them to exist. His Birth (the formation of the Christ within mankind) is the Birth of Ra in Amenti [Amenti is this physical incarnational world, also called Hades and Hell in Scripture...THINK!]. He causes the Kingly Osiris to be born; He causes the birth of Himself." (Mead, G.R.S. The Gnostic Crucifixion, London, 1907, p.61)

Again, man is a "god gestating" in the body of an animal. Plato got it right. We are a Spiritual consciousness and a "Divine Spark" who has "fallen to Earth", "fallen into matter" (Rome called it a "fall into sin"...thanks again to Rome for messing it up). Man is this Spiritual consciousness who has been "crucified on the cross of matter" in order to "go to school"; a necessary requirement for the ultimate graduation of our Soul and its Spiritual evolution to perfection and completeness. Earth is but a final stop and destination so necessary for our graduation as taught by the ancients.

Again, amazingly, Paul said the same thing:

Gal 4:19 19 My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you, (KJV)

It must be understood that no human being is "God", capital "G", and no human can ever be God. Using the Sun as an analogy, we can see that yet there is a tiny bit of Sun energy in plants and living creatures. No one in their right mind would claim that they were the Sun because they had this tiny Sun and "Divine Spark" within .Similarly, there is a tiny bit of God energy in humans, but woe to anyone who thinks that he is God. The ancient Scriptures talk about the Soul, this "Divine Spark", being trapped in the prison of the body; a body of Spiritual death from which a "rebirth" is required while we yet tabernacles within this animal body. The ancients understood that man cannot escape his obligation to the animal who is lending us his body for our own advancement. We, as Souls, came hither to transfigure these brute bodies. (Ibid., p. 147).

According to Plato and the ancients, Hades was not a place of punishment for departed human souls. Before Rome and its "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom "Hades, hell, Sheol, the pit, the abyss, Amenta, the Underworld, the Netherworld, etc., were all ancient terms for this physical Earth, which serves as the realm of the "dead" for this descended Divine Spark and Divine Soul/Christ. That is why the ancients said that both Soul and Christ are "crucified on the cross of matter" which stupefies Spiritual awareness. That is why we read as Paul says:

Gal 2:20 20 I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me. (KJV)

Yes, allegorically speaking, God gave Himself for us that we might "live". Yes, allegorically speaking, God was "crucified in matter" for you and me so we might have "conscious life" and "life abundantly. Understood metaphysically as it should be and was by nation after nation for thousands of years up until Rome "radically reinterpreted the ancient Spiritual Wisdom between the 2nd through the 5th century, these gods and goddesses, as personified Living Energies, all "descended into matter", all were "crucified on crosses of matter (the crucifixion understood by the ancients as being the intersection of Living Energy into virginous "matter"), and therefore were said allegorically to have come to die of a cross as they "fell into matter" and "descended into matter" in order that we mortals might live. "Death", then, is in reality no death at all; but rather an allegorical depiction of a transition from one state to another. When we as humanity have the right understanding, then we can realize that it is our incarnation duty to "birth the god within us" and thus uplift the Earthly existence of our Soul in order that in our Earthly experience be fulfilled:

Eph 4:13 13 Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: (KJV)

As long as people are ignorant of this ancient Spiritual Wisdom hidden in supposed "literal" passages in their Bibles and likewise ignorant of their Divine purpose, the gods and goddesses are dead, and this Earth has become in reality their Hades or the underworld for these gods and goddesses who "descended into darkness" and "into matter". When we awaken to the Divine Soul/Christ within, often called "being born from above" or "born again", we experience the true resurrection from the dead and in so doing bring our Soul to life, and in the words of St. Paul "Death is swallowed up in victory." Amazingly, this is to be accomplished and experienced before we experience the biological death of the body. Again, we got it just backwards from Rome; but that was on purpose as your studies into these areas will someday reveal. Hell as a place of punishment in an after-life is simply a teaching of repression, widely used by the early Roman Churches to control mankind through fear and ignorance. A just God does not deal out eternal punishment; especially when it dawns on you that you are this very "god" incarnated in an animal body. Again, allegorically, these punishments believed erroneously to be a "hell" are depictions of the Soul failure to master the animal nature as depicted by the ancients and which is so totally misunderstood today. The worst "punishments" we face are in this life. If we do not nurture the Divine Soul here and now, we punish ourselves by not achieving our true Spiritual potential.

An understanding of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom gives a correct understanding of Judgement. Kuhn, in his The Lost Light: An Interpretation of Ancient Scriptures, states that the ancients believed that judgement occurs here and now on this earth plane of existence. He states: "Neither above man with the angels, nor below him with the beasts, does moral responsibility reside. It belongs solely in the kingdom of man, who is poised, the only creature in evolution so placed, on the two arms of the balance between mind and matter. Man on the horizon is not only nailed on the cross of matter; he is being weighed on the scales of the balance, to see if his heart is so spiritualized as to be light as a feather! Man's heart against a feather, and his fate hanging thereon" (p. 481). Now you know why I chose to put the weighing of the heart and its Egyptian image as the top icon on this website. The view that there is a "Once only Day of Judgement", to occur at an unknown time, abrogates human responsibility. So likewise does the Roman Christian dogma that "we get away with it" due to the supposed death of a "literal" and "historical" Jesus which can be shown to be a tragic misunderstanding and misrepresentation of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and its allegories of the "god within". Such a Roman doctrine of a "once only Day of Judgment" causes unjustified fear, or a "drink and be merry tomorrow we die" approach to life. The symbolism of the ancient scriptures shows that man is the author of his destiny and is judged by his own actions. The balance of justice and judgement is totally dependent upon mankind, and he must take responsibility for his actions. Humans can no longer afford to pass the moral buck.

So we see that this "Divine Spark", this Divine Soul/Christ "falls" to Earth and incarnates in human beings. Amazingly, this is "the Lucifer", the light bringer, the Christ being "incarnated" in coming to Earth to be the Bishop of our Souls. The Divine Soul becomes trapped in the animal body says the ancients, and it is very easy for it to be overwhelmed by the animal nature .When then happens the Divine Soul becomes bestial, beastly, or as more familiar "satanic". This is the true meaning of the Beast 666 or Satan; Satan again being but an "adversary". But Christianity created a "literalized being of pure evil called "Satan" who opposed God with a separate origin from God and an eternal cosmic war was created. In reality there is no such thing if "all is within God". It's a perpetual puzzle to me and other "thinking believers" and Christians why the all powerful God tolerates absolute evil if we are to buy into the Christian Satan dogma. But it is a problem created by Christians themselves and a problem that is totally absent and foreign to the ancient Spiritual Wisdom. God is absolute, beyond good and evil. "Good" and "evil" are terms that apply to the human plane of existence; both are necessary if we are to grow Spiritually by learning to choose the "good" over the "non-good" or "evil". This is a Spiritual process of experience. Such is love at its deepest core and reveals through such progressive choices made by mankind. Killing, stealing, lying and so on are wrong and not to be advocated. But holding a view of the existence of absolute evil leads to the persecutions and intolerance that are all too prevalent in Christian history where the stronger side "defines" the adversarial position of another as "evil" and uses this as an excuse to exterminate them since being defined by them as "Satanic". The Divine Soul needs the animal nature in order to progress Spiritually. It needs an opponent to wrestle with so that it can develop its powers. Christianity has demonstrated over these last two thousand years that it does not understand this dynamic process, and thereby makes it virtually impossible for the Divine Soul to achieve its evolutionary task due to its "radical reinterpretation" of the doctrines and dogmas of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom which again robs man of his personal responsibility for Spiritual evolution in this animal body which is given a "free ride" with such dogmas as vicarious atonement; a dogma not found in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom nor in Judaism for that matter.

In order to come to the truths that lie behind our "literalized" Christian Scriptures it is important to go beyond the presumed idea of an historical Jesus so that we can get to the real meaning of Christianity and the ancient wisdom. There is no hard proof of any works that were written when Jesus was supposed to be alive. This is a major problem worthy of your serious study. God was supposed to have appear as a man 2,000 years ago, yet no one in history, either Roman, Jewish, Greek, or otherwise for that matter, bothered to write a thing about it at the time! All we have today is some rather crude "forgeries" that are the laughing stock of the modern scholars who point to them as but clumsy attempts of forgery by the earliest Christians who were desperate in debates with their opponents to prove the historical existence of a non-historical event. Paul (64-68AD) makes no mention of an historical Jesus, and if anyone was to do so you expect it to be Paul. As Christianity was the religion for the Age of Pisces, it is not surprising that its origins are surrounded in mystery and astronomy as well as the personified path of the Sun which we mentioned earlier is the symbol of the Living Energy of the cosmos which "incarnated into matter". Simply said, early Christian history can be divided into two camps: one who taught a historical saviour that is represented by the uninitiated and uneducated masses, while the other knows for certain that the only Christ is the Christ "within"; this camp being the other as classified by "initiates" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom otherwise known as the Gnostics. Again we have the mystery of all mysteries before us; the "outer mysteries" of "literalism" and the "inner mysteries" of the true Spiritual reality behind the shadow of the "real". Christianity sowed confusion by losing the distinction between inner and outer teachings for over 1,800 years at present.

There is no problem in proving the existence of various people from ancient times, such as Plato, Aristotle, Julius Caesar, and so on. One would expect that there should not be a problem in proving the existence of one greater than these but there sure is! Because there is so much controversy over an historical Jesus we are entitled to approach the question with a healthy skepticism. Ironically, and think on this, Kuhn in his Lost

Light, p. 240, makes you think by making the telling observation that the further away we get from the alleged Jesus, the greater is claimed to be the knowledge of him. This is the reverse in cases of historical people. Real people are best known during their own lives, and as time passes memories fade and facts get distorted .In the first century Jesus was an airy and ethereal figure, yet centuries later people could describe his appearance, moods, the color of his eyes, and motives in meticulous detail! One is entitled to probe the alleged historical reality and only if you do will you ever come to the reality and truth not only behind the "historical Jesus" but the "keys" to the ancient Spiritual Wisdom that man is a "god" in an animal body.

The first Christian Scriptures were based on the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and we find them with Marcion's Gnostic "First" New Testament held sacred by the earliest "Chrestians" around 150 A.D. Over the next couple of centuries the "literalizing Christians" destroyed the original manuscripts of these Gnostic Chrestians in order to hide the true origins of their "replacement religion" and "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Wisdom. Gerald Massey in Ancient Egypt the Light of the World has shown that the "Jesus Story" is a retelling of the story of Horus, the prototype saviour god. Horus, again, is but an allegorical representation and personification of the "Descent of the Soul/Christ" into "matter"; the "Christ within". This prototype had different names throughout the ancient world as mentioned above. The name Jesus can be traced to the ancient Egyptian name "Iusa", which means "God the son, the prince, the heir". There are some twenty or more figures bearing the cognitive name Jesus (Joshua, Jesse, Hosea, Isaiah, Isaac, Esau, Josiah, Joash, Jehoaz, Job, Jonah, Joel and others) in the Old Testament and outside of it (Ibid., p. 587). Pictures of Jesus as a young bearded man clearly originate from Serapis, a Graeco-Egyptian saviour god. Blavatsky has shown that "Chrestian" was the name given to initiates in ancient Greece, long before the advent of the religion called Christianity.

Christianity had to promote impossible events in order to activate faith and belief over reason. Ignorance and a desire to pander to the masses by Christianity caused the ancient wisdom to be distorted. Instead of interpreting the ancient mythos symbolically, the Christians took the mythos literally. They believed in a literal virgin birth, in the breaking of the laws of nature, in corpses coming to life, and so on. Tertullian, an early Church Father startles us by saying in print: "I believe because it is impossible." It is faith, not reason, that can accept impossibilities.

The power of the Divine essence "within" is a truly liberating concept. It means that humans are masters of their destiny and cannot be belittled when the truth is known. We have to realize and awaken to our Divine nature. This is a majestic and uplifting task. Political Christianity was hell-bent on placing people in religious bondage and did so through the perpetuation of "fear" and "ignorance" through the "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and its Divine Concepts; therefore they did their utmost to destroy the ancient truth. Christianity introduced the concept of sin to disempower the general population, and the Church monopolized all religious power. Thanks to writers such as Massey and Kuhn we can now understand the awesome truth of the ancient wisdom and expose the deceits of repressive Christianity. It is now the time to let the true light shine, and dispel eighteen centuries of superstition, idolatry and murky gloom. If you want to know more than this summary statement then this website is for you.

THE HIDDEN SPIRITUAL REALITY IS RIGHT BEFORE OUR EYES IN OUR BIBLES...BUT WE NEVER RECOGNIZE IT

Unknown to the vast majority of Christians a large number of writers in both ancient and modern times have affirmed that the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and a practical philosophy of life have always been available to mankind since the beginning of recorded time and even earlier, and that, however deeply hidden, this Spiritual Wisdom and knowledge are to be found in the various Scriptures of the great world faiths. From immemorial time, and in all races, there has been current, especially among minds more receptive and thoughtful than the average run, an intuition, persistent and ever-enduring, that there exists somewhere a body of sublime teaching or doctrine which can be had by those who qualify to receive it by becoming worthy depositaries of it. These intimations have frequently found lodgment in legend and myth, and thus have become enshrined or crystallized in the different religious and philosophical records of the human race. "Truth-seekers", the ancients maintain, have but to interpret correctly the concealing disguises and veils of allegory, metaphor, analogy, simile, figuration, typification, symbolism, myth, fable, and parable in our Bible to discover the ancient's Spiritual knowledge which can bestow serenity of mind and heart and lead to Spiritual illumination of our Soul like never before. After many years of study I can concur with that statement; all I was lacking was the "keys" necessary to recognize that much of what I had previously been taught was a "literal" event in our Bible was in reality disguised Divine Allegory expressing Universal Laws and Divine Truths of the cosmos disguised in veils of personification and anthropomorphic symbolism. These "keys" to correctly interpreting our Bibles are available to all if they will seek them.

Mere folk tales and primitive superstitions apart, the world's Scriptures and mythologies of ancient peoples should, according to many scholars, be similarly approached. At least two views exist concerning these myths which we find in the world's Sacred Scriptures and their origin:

- According to one of these, world myths gradually developed as explanations of the phenomena of nature. Early peoples, who possessed little or no scientific knowledge, personified and personalized the forces of nature and dramatized their interactions with humanity. Such tales may be thought of as folk myths in contradistinction to those based upon historical, or presumedly historical, foundations.
- The second view is that many of these ancient stories were given deep cosmogonical, religious, psychological and moral significance by the ancient poets, seers , prophets, and philosophers who later arose within the world's nations.

Initiates of the various esoteric and mystery schools and the mystery religions of the older civilizations are also said by many scholars to have deliberately refashioned the legends, myths, and stories of the nations into vehicles for the transmission to later peoples their knowledge of cosmogony, the astrophysical study of the origin and evolution of the universe, cyclic manifestations of the cosmos, the incarnation and Spiritual evolution of the Soul, and the true Spiritual nature, goal and destiny of humanity. Modern scientists have also found in ancient myths appropriate symbols for the subtle mental processes they study and attempt to elucidate. Carl Jung, for example, has found in the ancient stories symbolic "archetypes" and "patterns" of human responses.

In these various ways the study of the world's various religions and philosophies of the ancients prove profitable to the modern student, while those possessed of knowledge of the sacred language and the "keys" of interpretation to the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the ancient nations will in such study begin to recognize a repetition and "Divine Pattern" and "archetypes" that exists in all ancient religious and Spiritual ideas which are found to be common to all world faiths and their Sacred Writings before the rise of Roman Christianity. In such study, I came to see for myself as many scholars whom I had read maintained, the universal use of symbols common to the world's ancient nations and their Sacred Wisdom which they used for thousands of years to portray eternal celestial and Spiritual ideas which they observed in the working of God's cosmos. These symbols and their true meaning were make readily available to those who desired such Spiritual knowledge and "gnosis". Over time I came to see for myself in my studies that the the meanings of the symbols used in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom in Sacred Book after Sacred Book, from nation to nation, were basically constant, and more importantly I came to see in such comparative religious study that consistent also are the doctrines which they reveal; that is up until a point in time when Rome "reinterpreted this Divine Wisdom between the 2nd through the 5th century. Thus, while ancient superstitions and magical practices, and the instinctive personification and dramatization of natural phenomena by early peoples are recognized, world Scriptures and mythologies may legitimately be regarded as rich mines of the Ageless Wisdom of humanity's Spiritual fathers. On occasion throughout these articles therefore, parallels are drawn between Biblical statements and the same ideas appearing in different forms in other sacred writings. In so doing this repetition of this "Spiritual and Divine Pattern" concerning God, His Krst/Karest/Christ and Soul can be seen by the avid "truth-seeker" and student.

The value of this approach to world Scriptures and comparative religious study becomes evident when the "keys" of correct Scriptural interpretation are applied to our Christian Bible. This has, however, been rendered difficult by at least three prevalent practices:

- The first of these is to mistake the veils of allegory in our Bibles for "literal" and "historical "truths. We must be on our toes to recognize that these allegories in our Bibles are written to both conceal and reveal.
- The second is to require the acceptance as fact of much that is purely allegorical and, indeed, in some cases incredible.
- The third is the insistence by some Christian denominations upon unquestioning belief in dogmas, based upon a literal reading of certain passages of the Bible, as essential to salvation here and hereafter. Unfortunately this is carried to still greater lengths by pronouncements that failure to affirm implicit belief in stated dogmas may lead to excommunication and even to eternal damnation.

These trends observable in orthodox Christianity may be regarded as particularly harmful at the present period in world history; for as a result of them the attention of Christians is diverted from eternal truisms. These especially include the existence of the Divine presence within, "Christ in you, the hope of glory," (Col. 1:27) and the fact that the divinity in all human beings is one and the same. When the Spiritual unity between all members of the human race is fully recognized, aggressive competition and strife, organized crime and wars of conquest become impossibilities for humanity.

Answer for yourself: How, then, can these veils of allegory and symbol be drawn aside and the hidden wisdom revealed?

These articles offer both general and detailed answers to that most vital question. Briefly stated, those who seek to discover the wisdom underlying inspired allegories should proceed as follows:

- Determine for yourself to discover essential Spiritual truths under the texts of your Bible which up to now you thought were only to be understood as if "literal" events since conditioned from childhood to approach the Bible with only a "literal" interpretation.

Pray to God for internal Spiritual enlightenment (Luke 11:9-10), with the single motive of becoming an ever more efficient servant of humanity.

- Be on guard to unclutter your mind of the tendency to regard the literal reading as the only true and ecclesiastically permissible one for Biblical texts.
- Practice meditation in order to develop the intuitive perception necessary for the discovery of the successive layers of revelation concealed beneath Scriptural allegories, ancient myths and some traditional fairy tales that have come down to us via the corridors of history.
- Study the writings of notable expounders of the sacred language like Alvin Kuhn, Gerald Massey, William Kingsland, Thomas Taylor, W.J. Coleville, H.P. Blavatsky, Geoffrey Hodson, G. dePurucker, and many others. Learn through personal study these major "keys" for proper Scriptural interpretation and the method of interpretation used by the writers of the ancient Divine Wisdom. Through personal study learn to recognize these "keys" it in your Biblical texts and in so doing learn to discern "Divine allegory" from actual "literal" events of the people who brought forth this ancient Spiritual Wisdom which we find in our Bibles today. By that I mean the Egyptian and Jewish religions.
- Practice until proficient the science of the application of these "keys to proper interpretation" of the ancient Wisdom in the elucidation of world Scriptures and mythologies. Take care always to neither overstress a possible symbolic significance, nor to read into a narrative more than is inherent within it or was presumably present in the minds of the authors, merely in order to support preconceived ideas. This is a big danger to a Christian already indoctrinated in erroneous interpretations of the Bible he cherishes.

Behind the use of such Spiritual myths in our Bible which mistakenly are first taught as if "literal" lie a great system of teaching has been called in different ages the Esoteric Philosophy, Wisdom-Religion, Secret Doctrine, ancient Spiritual Wisdom, or again, the Esoteric Tradition. As well, this Esoteric philosophy I found reconciles all religions, strips every one of its outward, human garments, and shows the root of each ancient religion to be identical with that of every other great religion; including Christianity once it is correctly interpreted by recognizing and discerning Divine allegory from actual historical events. Such knowledge proves the necessity of an absolute Divine Principle that operated in both nature and humanity.

The Secret Doctrine was the universally diffused religion of the ancient and prehistoric world. Proofs of its diffusion, authentic records of its history, a complete chain of documents, showing its character and presence in every land, together with the teaching of all its great adepts, exist to this day; we simply don't know this and failing to have the "keys" to its recognition as it exists in our Bibles it goes unnoticed by the vast majority of Christians today. Fragments of this ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Secret Doctrine have survived geological and political cataclysms to tell the "same" story; and every survival shows evidence that the now Secret Wisdom was once the one fountain head, the ever-flowing perennial source, at which were fed all its streamlets and all later religions of all nations, from the first down to the last, and again this includes the earliest Chrestians (called Christians today) before the rise of Roman Orthodoxy in the 2nd through the 5th centuries.

An exhaustive and genuinely critical examination, conducted in a wholly impersonal spirit, of even the remains of ancient times will convince one that these statements which I have made are founded on truth and undeniable fact; and the conviction grows upon the impartial student that it is a marvel almost beyond belief that Christian scholars could have been so blind as to allow the actual existence of the esoteric tradition to escape observation and discovery for so long as they have. This just testifies to the Spiritual blindness of those indoctrinated by error.

Hosea 4:6 6 My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge....KJV)

The task of unveiling the hidden Sacred Wisdom has been undertaken by many today. Such a "lifting of the veil of Isis" was undertaken in this age with great insight and erudition by Madame H. P. Blavatsky, cofounder of The Theosophical Society. Her aptly titled books, Isis Unveiled and The Secret Doctrine, give the traditional "keys" and many interpretations of world allegories. G. A. Gaskell has made a magnificent contribution to the subject by producing a Dictionary of the Sacred Language of All Scriptures and Myths. But such insight are not limited to but these two. Great insights come from reading Alvin Kuhn, Gerald Massey, G. dePurucker, I. M.

Oderberg, Eloise Hart, W. T. S. Thackara, William Q. Judge. Not to be forgotten are Plato, and the later Neo-Platonists like Plotinus, Porphyry, Iamblichus, and Proclus which brings to the Greek mind this ancient Spiritual Wisdom as far back as ancient Egypt. The literature which proceeded from Plato, who himself was initiated into the mysteries and studied in ancient Egypt along with the later Neoplatonists of Alexandria, and especially the writings of Philo Judaeus (approximately 30 B.C. to 45 A.D.) are also a valuable source of information.

The disciples of Ammonius Saccus were called Analogeticists because of their practice of interpreting sacred scriptures and mythologies by a principle of analogy and correspondence, also found in both the Kabbalistic system and the esoteric philosophy of the East. Thus studied, many books of the Old and New Testaments are found to contain hidden knowledge of the greatest value; for, in addition to its content of metaphysical teachings of profound significance, the Bible also indicates the existence of a pathway of hastened evolution and the means by which special powers for the service of humanity may be attained. These powers can, however, be misused to bring grave harm upon their possessors and also upon their victims. The more metaphysical teachings in the Bible are therefore, as also previously stated, written in an allegorical language which conceals, even while it reveals, power-bestowing knowledge. The Christ revealed through Judaism that this pathway of hastened evolution is called "the narrow way" which is entered through "the strait gate" (Matt. 7:13, 14). Isaiah wrote of "the way of holiness" (Isa. 35:8). Hinduism similarly teaches of the Razor-edged Path, and Buddhism of the Noble Eightfold Path. Mankind has always been shown his path to God regardless of geography or difference in religion; at their core of all these ancient Mystery Religions lies the same Divine Truths that leads mankind's Soul in Spiritual evolution and eventual return to the Father. In essence, each is a path of discipleship and initiation, which leads within a relatively short space of time to salvation, Moksha (Hinduism) or Nirvana (Buddhism). Salvation was never limited to Christianity not can it ever be once one's personal study comes to the point where he can possess the "keys" that unlock the Bible and is Esoteric Wisdom hidden in the pages and disguised through allegory mistakenly read and believed today as it a "historical" and "literal" event meant for another. With such Spiritual enlightenment that accompanies these "keys" for proper Spiritual interpretation of our Bibles one comes to see what was mistaken for a "historical" and "literal" event that supposedly occurred for another was actually intended for "You".

THE STORIES BEHIND THE BIBLICAL ACCOUNTS: EGYPTIAN MYTHS AS ARCHETYPES

It will be disconcerting for some to learn that behind many of our Biblical stories and accounts in traditional Scripture lay Egyptian myths that attempt to relate and explain metaphysical realities to the finite minds of people. One only has to begin a serious attempt to study the origins of many Old and New Testament accounts to find that behind them lay a mythological nature.

First a little must be said about "myths". Let us define the word.

- Myth is a traditional or legendary story, usually concerning some superhuman being or some alleged person or event, with or without a determinable basis of fact or a natural explanation, especially a traditional or legendary story that is concerned with deities or demigods and the creation of the world and its inhabitants. This traditional story is of unknown authorship, ostensibly with a historical basis, but serves usually to explain some phenomenon of nature, the origin of [humanity], or the customs, institutions, religious rites, etc. of a people; myths usually involve the exploits of gods and heroes.
- Myths (both old and new) are heroic stories considered by most people as having never occurred. Yet this does not mean that myths are "false," but only that to understand them we must separate their metaphysical truth from literal reality.
- Myths the world over tend to express certain common themes: those relating to cosmogony, the creation of the universe or the earth with its solar system, humanity, plants, and animals, other aspects of nature, and the theory of their origin, as well as myths of a second creation following a disaster, frequently a flood; to theogony, the origin of the [deities] and their genealogy, especially the Great Mother, pairs of deities (often brother-sister/husband-wife), and triads with the addition of a child; to etiology, the study of causes and beginnings in general; and to the struggle between or among opposing forces, especially dualistic elements as good-evil, light-dark, or heaven-underworld. Myths are also shaped by personification, that is, the endowment of aspects of nature, inanimate objects, or qualities and abstractions with human form, attributes, and characteristics. This is closely related to anthropomorphism, the assigning of human shape, qualities, and concepts to a deity, animal, plant, or other object. By means of deification, humans and personifications were elevated to the position of a deity.
- Other myths explain social traditions, customs, religious beliefs and practices, and the mysteries of life and death. Myths and legends pass from generation to generation, enriching the lives of all who listen, giving them value and a sense of security, and linking them with their ancestors before them, and wisdom heroic and divine.
- Many scholars believe that myths of the ancients represent one of the most profound achievements of the human spirit, the inspired creation of gifted and unspoiled minds, uncontaminated by the current scientific approach and analytic mentality, and therefore open and prone to profound cosmic insights which are veiled to modern thinking man with his inhibiting definitions and impassive soulless logic.
- There are whole schools of modern mythologists who argue that ancient myth is closely bound to rite and ritual; that myth was, as it were, nothing other than the "rite spoken"; and that myth and ritual were practically two sides of the same cultic coin. On the other hand, there are historians of religion who claim that the ancient myths were primarily etiological in character - fictitious tales evolved for the purpose of explaining the nature of the universe, the destiny of humanity, and the customs, beliefs, and practices current in their days, as well as the names of holy places and out standing individuals.

- On a deeper level there are psychologists who see in the ancient myths depositories of primordial archetype motifs which reveal and illuminate man's collective subconscious (Most beliefs surrounding death show fundamental similarities in that the dead went to an afterworld, which might be an underworld beneath the earth, an island paradise, a [hall of heroes], or the moon, and a number of mythologies linked death to a cycle of rebirth, somewhat parallel to that occurring in the Heavens and in Nature and vegetation). Imagination, superstition, and embellishment mingle freely with observation when we look at myth. Some myths are used to teach; some are 'just' for entertainment and story-telling.

We should be tipped off to the fact that the Bible is a book of "myths" if we are alert in reading the Bible when we notice contradictory accounts in the Bible of the "same" event. This fact alone should make us want to know "what is behind the story" we are reading at the time. Truth always lies behind "myth". Inquiring minds "want to know". Well that is me and I hope it is the readers as well.

Behind some of these contradictory accounts and inconsistencies we find ongoing propaganda wars between the kingdoms of Judah and Israel as they wrestled among themselves for supremacy. On other occasions, an early version of a story can be shown to be chronologically replaced by a later version. This was particularly true in the Creation and flood accounts, where early Egyptian influences on Israel came into conflict with later Babylonian sources. The later Babylonian "interpretations" would eventually replace the earlier Egyptian "interpretations" of the events in question, but be not mistaken, at the very heart of Judaism is the basic ancient Egyptian Religion which has gone modification today by both Babylonian, Persian, and Greek influences. What is truly amazing, and we will address it in somewhat detail on another part of this website, is the fact that today, through the aid of archeological research, the earliest Patriarchs of the Bible, men like Jacob, Ephraim, and later even King David, King Solomon, and even Tutankhamun can be shown in reality to be Hebrew Pharaohs and not "Jews" as we have been led to believe by a later re-writing of the Hebrew Scriptures under the direction of Ezra.

As one studies increase he can be on the look-out for Biblical stories that closely parallel these earlier myths and legends from neighboring cultures like Egypt and Babylon. Truly there is "nothing new under the Sun" when it comes to religion because basically all world religions have come from but one; namely, Egyptian religion. If you come to understand Egyptian religion and religious ideas you can trace them along with their "reinterpretations" down through history; even into our Christianity today. While in some cases the influences were obvious, as with the Babylonian flood myth, in many cases the task will be quite difficult and will require the deciphering and correct interpretation of Egyptian myths which is not always easy given our limited knowledge of Egypt up until the last 150 years with the discover of the Rosetta Stone and the recovery of the ability to read the Egyptian hieroglyphics. Even more important because of the biblical emphasis on monotheism, the keen reader will notice how the authors of these later Scriptures tried to eliminate references to or symbols of deities other than the Hebrew god.

Answer for yourself: How was this done? These changes were made by transforming foreign deities into human characters whereby they were given a pseudo-historical existence as well as sometimes changing the locale of the story. Let me give you some examples. The Egyptian "Hathor" becomes the Greek "Aphrodite" and the later Roman "Venus", the Egyptian "Amon" becomes the Greek "Zeus" and the later Roman "Jupiter" and so on. The same things were done to the earliest principles and theological dogmas that were first understood by the Egyptians who studied the Cosmos and Nature for thousands of years and in so doing extrapolated these Divine Truths in the first place. Over time all things "change" and that is where we are today in Christianity.

You may recall being taught in school that Western (white) civilization is founded upon the ancient Greek civilization which seemed to suddenly appear. What European historians are trying to diffuse, hide, or deny is that the Greek civilization was primarily the offspring of the advanced Black African Civilization of ancient Africa's Nile Valley, which preceded it by thousands and thousands of years. Even Greek legends related that Egyptian and Phoenician conquerors ruled all or part of Greece until the 14th or 15th century B.C. Thus we find that the Nile Valley civilization of Egypt and Nubia was already old before Europe was born. The pyramids of Africa's Nile Valley were hoary with age when the tribes of norther and central Europe were making their first stone hammers. Nile valley civilization also existed before the Western Asian civilization of the Tigris and the Euphrates rivers.

Answer for yourself: What should this say to us?

Kamite or Egyptian civilization originated from Ethiopia and Diodorus said the Egyptians were the earliest of civilized men, and that they not only colonized Egypt but it was from there that they diffused Ethiopian culture throughout the whole world. Albert Churchward, in his The Signs and Symbols of Primordial Man states that "Thus we can see that African colonies went forth and settled in all parts of the world, leaving the proofs in language, myth, and the hieroglyphics, in religious rites. The symbolical customs and ceremonies in far off lands are still extant among races by whom they are no longer read or understood, but which can be read in Egypt (p. 284).

Think of what you just read. Religious rites and ceremonies from Egypt were taken into all the world and over time the "keys" to their proper interpretation were "lost, no longer read or understood correctly"!

Answer for yourself: Could that have happened to us who are reared as Christians today with traditional Christian dogmas and doctrines and we not know that? Could it be that what we read and study and recite and cherish in our Christians Churches we have got "all wrong" a lot of the time? Could we be wrong on such doctrines as "atonement, salvation, forgiveness, eternal life, messiah and this Jesus Christ"? Well the thought of this was so frightening to me that I had to know for sure so I dedicated my life some twenty years ago to make sure I was "right" as a Christian and the years of my repentance and finally my resignation as a Pastor of a large Christian Church is the result of such an eye-opening scrutiny of my faith. Dears ones, we are so far off from the truth as Christians it is almost beyond belief. And you study of Egypt and their religion and its "reinterpretations" down through history from nation to nation will be proof positive of what I say. The "story" of God as understood by these Spiritual Masters in Egypt change over thousands of years and we never know of this because we never possessed the knowledge of what the "real" was before the "counterfeit".

As you might expect, the versions of the later stories usually disguised the true nature of the truth or the Biblical story, making it difficult to identify the earlier mythological source. Of course this was the agenda of the writers and some accomplished this agenda better than others. Nevertheless, in many instances the editors overlooked some of the telltale signs of these earlier sources and, even in disguised form, it is often possible for the knowledgeable reader to strip off the disguises and see what mythological elements the biblical authors attempted to mask and keep hidden from the reader in order to make it look as if their "god" is the real "god" and their story the "original" when in fact it but a retelling of the original with some "changes".

And lest we forget there are also stories in the Bible that simply are not true. We know this today for certain because we have in our possession today archaeological data that indicates without a doubt that events described in the Bible as happening within a particular time frame couldn't have occurred at the time indicated. Several of these stories describe Israel's destruction of enemy cities during the campaigns into the Transjordan and Canaan. The archaeological evidence shows that many of those cities didn't exist in the time of Biblical lives of the characters identified Biblically as "Moses" and "Joshua".

What should concern the "truth seeker" and reader of Bet Emet Ministries is how Egyptian mythology and literature strongly influenced much of the early biblical history, especially with regard to Creation and the flood as well as the patriarchal narratives, a subject that has been irresponsibly ignored. The lack of attention to Egyptian influences on the Bible by both biblical scholars and Christian or Muslim Egyptologists is unfortunate. A conscious and deliberate effort exists to keep the two spheres separate in spite of the fact that the Bible shows a long and continuous relationship between ancient Israel and Egypt. This has been ignored long enough and the insightful reader will begin to look to Egypt to find the true origin for much that is presented in the Bible as "Jewish". Let us not forget that this Bible places Israel's formative years in Egypt, living an Egyptian life-style, educated in Egyptian ideas, and dwelling there for centuries before the Exodus. It describes Joseph as prime minister of the nation and married to the daughter of the chief priest of Heliopolis (biblical On), one of the most influential Egyptian cult and educational centers. His two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, were half-Egyptian and educated as Egyptians. Ephraim not only became heir to Joseph and founded the kingdom of Israel but is listed as one of the Hebrew Pharaohs; Manasseh had the largest territorial base of all the tribes.

Moses, according to the biblical account, was raised and educated in the Egyptian royal court, and many members of his tribe, Levi, have Egyptian names. King Solomon married a pharaoh's daughter and built an Egyptian temple in Jerusalem for her. Common sense dictates that she had a large entourage of Egyptian priests and servants to administer to the temple's needs. Jeroboam, when he fled from Israel to escape Solomon's wrath, dwelled in Egypt before leading Israel away from Judah.

And historically, Egypt had a powerful cultural influence on Canaan from well before the Exodus to late in the first millennium B.C. An eighth-century seal of a Hebrew official from the court of King Hoshea of Israel (c. 730 B.C.), for example, shows the official dressed in typical Egyptian garb and standing over an Egyptian winged-disk icon, indicating that Egyptian ideas heavily influenced the royal court of the kingdom of Israel.

As we go through the Creation and patriarchal stories, the educated reader easily sees how Egyptian mythology significantly influenced Hebrew interpretation of and beliefs about its earliest history. These influences bring us to the question of the origin of Hebrew monotheism.

Answer for yourself: How, when, and where did Hebrew monotheism originate?

Biblical monotheism appears to have gone through an evolution that finds its origins in Egypt. In the earliest stages of Israel and its evolving monotheism, the Hebrews imagined an all-powerful Creator deity, but evidence of belief in other deities remains buried in the stories, most obviously in the form of "Emanations" from this One Absolute Creator; we call them "angels" today. The Gnostics called them "aeons". I never cease to be amazed that we can accept as true "angels" but when we read the same things expressed by the Gnostics as "aeons" then they are labeled as "heretics". This ideas of "Emanationism" appears to be the primary form in which Hebrew monotheism originated and the form in which it has fundamentally survived even into present times. The three major monotheistic religions, Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, still believe in a host of supernatural beings, particularly angels and the devil. They are beings created by the one all-powerful Creator just as the Egyptian deities were the product of the one all-powerful Egyptian Creator. The similarities of these various "Emanations" are endless and no less startling are the similarities between the Egyptian "Karest" and the Christian "Christ" as again but "Emanations" or attributes of Deity that come from this One Absolute whom we call God.

The idea of an all-powerful Creator who brought forth other supernatural beings or other "Emanations" from Himself has its roots in ancient Egypt. There it was a central belief in most religious cults that a single Creator was responsible for all of existence, including the appearance of other deities. The other nations of the Near East had no similar theology. It is the Egyptian views that initially influenced Hebrew understanding of the first times, and we will see that many of these Egyptian Creation myths are replicated in biblical history.

Over time, however, the nature of the theology changed. Whereas Egyptians also worshipped the many other deities created by the prime Creator as "Emanations" of Himself, by the time of Moses, there is a new emphasis in which this Creator deity is deemed to be the only god to be worshipped. As we study we find the reason for this is the over-emphasis of Osiris worship in the days of Moses. This is understood also as "Godman" worship similar to the "Jesus worship" in Christianity today. It always humors me to understand that in response to this unbalanced worship of the "Godman" (instead of the One Absolute God) which Moses encountered during his rulership as Pharaoh of the 18th Dynasty in Egypt that he chose to respond by closing down all the Temples in Egypt and enforced mandatory worship of the One Absolute Invisible God called Aten; thus the parallel is that if Moses were alive today and President of the United States that he would close down all the Churches that worship this "Jesus" today (THINK).

No one, for instance, ever worships God's angels. This view is reflected in the biblical command, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." The idea that only one deity among many should be worshipped is known as henotheism rather than monotheism. But there is no difference worshipping an "angel" than "Jesus" because in the last analysis we find upon serious study in both the ancient Egyptian Religion as well as later Christological studies involving the evolution of the "Christ-idea" by Rome, then both the "angels" and our "Jesus" are both " manifestations" or "Energies/Powers /Forces/Neteru" of the ONE God since all have "manifested" from this ONE. I cannot stress strong enough how the proper understanding of God and His manifestation, both invisibly as well as visibly, in the cosmos is so important for our proper understanding of this Bible we have inherited. Once the student becomes accomplished in the study of the ancient Egyptian Religion and the Divine concept of the Neteru then these "keys" and knowledge alone will help him cut to the chase in determining the "truth" behind the "Jesus Story" as well as all other other Sungods and "pagan Christs". Then the Bible begins to become a very simple book to interpret from cover to cover. Now you better understand the statement made above about Moses closing down all churches that "worship this Jesus"; he understood that doing such a thing was equivalent to blasphemy and idolatry before God. This is the "unforgivable sin" mentioned in both Biblical Judaism and the New Testament. It is tragic that the vast majority of Christians don't know the real truth about how this "personified Sun", again symbolic for the invisible "Living Energy" of the cosmos (God) as found it its various names and manifestations, like "Jesus", was made by a vote of hands equal with God by the ancient Roman Church and the Council of Nicea. The birth of Christian idolatry and blasphemy of the Name of God began officially that day and has continued ever sense under the "theology" espoused by Rome and her daughter Protestantism; Rome, mind you, a nation that rejected both its Jewish Roots as well as its Egyptian Roots.

For a brief time in the mid-fourteenth century B.C., Egypt experienced a form of authoritarian monotheism under a pharaoh named Akhenaten whom many believe to be the Biblical Moses. A full understanding of Akhenaten's theology has yet to be developed, but its existence in a time when Israel was likely still in Egypt raises questions about what influence his ideas had on the educated Hebrew people in his realm. Biblical and Christian Egyptological scholars go out of their way to build an unbreachable wall between Akhenaten and Moses, but it does not rest on solid factual foundations. The result of such religious prohibitions by Akhenaten/Moses eventually produced eventually the Exodus which resulted from a volatile religious feud between Akhenaten's successors, who reinstated the traditional beliefs, and his followers, who lost control of Egypt after his death.

History records for us that the Hebrews depicted in the Bible never embraced a pure monotheism, nor was there a single universal religion as we find in Egypt. It would take the Babylonian captivity to produce a pure monotheism in the Israelites. Many important biblical characters in post-Exodus times, for instance had names ending in "Baal," who was a major Canaanite deity. Gideon, one of the most famous of the early Judges, also was known as Jerub-baal, and Saul, first King of Israel, had a son named Esh-baal and this son succeeded him on the throne. These Baal names became an embarrassment to the final redactors of the early Bible books and they either added fictional glosses to the text to explain the apparent inconsistency or they changed the Baal name to "Bosheth," a Hebrew word meaning shame.

Belief in other deities goes farther than naming conventions. For example, Solomon had many non-Hebrew wives and he built many religious shrines for them so they could worship their own non-Hebrew deities. Later scribes attributed the breakup of Solomon's empire to a punishment by God for his apostasy. And Jeroboam, first king of Israel after the break from Judah, not only set up golden calves at cult sites, but established rival temples to the one in Jerusalem. And, throughout the period of the monarchy, biblical writers tell us that the Hebrews constantly succumbed to the religious influences of the Canaanites and Philistines.

Under King Josiah (640-609 B.C.), many severe religious reforms were instituted and strong opposition to idol worship emerged. Whether pure monotheism became part of Hebrew religion at this time we can't know for sure. But, by this time, the earlier beliefs had become embedded in Hebrew traditions and writings. Ultimately, a single redactor or, most likely, a school of redactors sometime after the fifth century B.C. gathered the main sources and traditions together and produced the first version of biblical history in its present form, editing as best they could to eliminate inconsistencies between monotheism and earlier religious beliefs. From this we get the Documentary Hypothesis (JEDP) which shows us the multiple source thesis which explains this Hebrew collection of stories and traditions that later become the Hebrew Scriptures.

It is in these Biblical stories that we find a long and continuous relationship between Ancient Israel and Egypt which directly links Egyptian mythology to Hebrew interpretation of and beliefs about its earliest history as a people and a nation as well as their God.

With this as a small introduction let this information settle and then let us continue our search for the truth which we can find in Egypt and their religion like no other place in the known world.

Now, armed with this very important information then let us continue our study into the Bible and our "Jesus Story" to see what might lie behind our traditional "literal" and "historical" approach to the New Testament Christ.

BEFORE WE DIG DEEPER...AFTER TWENTY YEARS OF SCHOLARLY STUDY THE INESCAPABLE CONCLUSIONS ABOUT "THE JESUS STORY" AND "THE JEWISH MESSIAH"

I find it necessary, both as a former Pastor and as an intense Bible student throughout the years, to bring a summary of what this Web Site contains. Too often one will read the research I've collected and scrutinize the facts presented and jump to conclusions which are not warranted; incorrect conclusions which will tend to negate the facts presented in these articles. Understandable this is not my desire nor my purpose in making such information available to you. It is my hope that these pages of information and research will benefit both my Jewish friends as well as my Christian friends in their search to draw closer to God. But one thing must be said right up front. The study of "Jesus" and the "Jesus Story" is a very complex study today and must be done on several levels if one is to come to the truth of the matter. At least that is what I discovered for such study encompasses the necessity of obtaining competent knowledge in several areas of study if we ever hope to understand correctly just whom this "Jesus" really is and what lays behind this "Jesus Story". By "several fields" of study I mean such areas such as:

- Judaism and the truth about the Jewish Messiah vs the later Christian "reinterpretation" of the Jewish Messiah.
- Competent knowledge of the religious texts of both Judaism and their later reinterpretation known to day as the Greek Old Testament and with its "alterations" which subsequently are carried over into the New Testament.
- Competent knowledge of Comparative Religions and the hundreds of parallels to the "Jesus Story" we find in the New Testament, parallels that exist in ancient history as far back as ancient Egypt some 5,000 years or earlier B.C.E.
- Competent knowledge of Gnosticism and how the "Descent of the Soul", or the "Christ Within" was later changed by Rome when they "literalized" this previous understanding of mankind and his Divine origin and in so doing "literalized" it, "historicized it", and confined it to but one person of their making...the Jesus of Nazareth.
- Competent knowledge of Lunar and Solar Mythology, or should I say Astronomy and how this became, when personified, the story of the "godman" and all later similar "Jesus Stories" from beginning to end. Along with that comes the understanding how Matthew 1 through Matthew 28 is the "personification" of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac and the Heavens which the Ancients understood as the Creator speaking to them of the Descent of the Soul and Divine Energy and its intended Spiritual evolution and maturation in this physical plane of existence.
- Understanding of how the Ancients used "myths" , "allegories", and "metaphors" to tell the Metaphysical story of the Soul and its descent into "matter" and the flesh of mankind and how these "spiritual myths" were the foundations for the later stories of personified godmen and goddesses who were but Spiritual allegories depicting the growth of the Divine Mind & Soul in mankind from its incarnation to its release at the death of the biological body. In reality the stories of these allegorical "godmen" are the story of "you and me" and our intended Spiritual development and progression while in this physical plane of existence.

Wow! That is a lot and it is not a quick work that allows one to master this information to see the truth behind this "Jesus Story" that has existed for some 10,000 years and later told from nation to nation down through history in "many different names" (like the first "Jesus Story" found in Ancient Egypt with Osiris and Horus).

But our correct understanding of the "Jesus Story" and what actually encompasses it on these various levels of understanding must first begin with our study of Judaism for the Old Testament is the first introduction for most Christians to the Creator God and His "Divine Revelation" that was handed down through history, beginning first with Sumer and ancient Egypt and later given to the "Jewish people" though association with the Biblical Moses (the Pharaoh Akhenaten of the 18th Dynasty). Too often many of my readers who lack such necessary knowledge of the history and "religious beliefs" of Judaism, as well as early Gentile Christianity and their forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures that comprise our Christian Old and New Testaments, will react out of fear when first encountering this information instead of "repentance" and "faith" in these "facts and evidences" which are uncovered to their very sight and understanding or when reading Spiritual truths long hidden but now exposed. Seeing this deception for the first time is a hard thing to stomach let alone believe as even possible in light of the constant false assurances we have heard our whole lives that only Christianity "has the truth" as well as being told that only Christianity "is the road for mankind's salvation of the whole world". Presentation of further "hidden truths" when exposed and uncovered to the eyes of "truth seekers" will not be evaluated by them objectively either because it hurts too bad or because of snap decisions on their part made in the initial confrontations with such facts and evidence which opposes long cherished Christian religious beliefs that come from the documents of Christianity and their Bibles; never knowing at that time the unreliability of such documents in the first place. Having never studied Judaism let alone knowing intimately the Hebrew Scriptures they are at that time in their life unaware of this abject purposeful mistranslation, misquotation, and pure "invention" of religious texts by the early Gentile Church in their creation of this New Testament which was finally "canonized" in the early 4th century. Let me say up front that one can have belief in "truth and facts" or a belief in "untruths". The choice is yours. God gives mankind free choice but understand that the presentation of the "Jewish Christ", seen as this "Jesus" in the New Testament today is a far cry from the "Jewish Messiah" as both expected and hoped for in the first century by Israel and Biblical Judaism. This statement is not debateable when one possess adequate knowledge of Judaism and its cherished Hebrew Scriptures and what they teach of the Jewish Messiah as taken from the true Masoretic Hebrew texts which have not been altered as well as when one compares "line upon line" and "precept upon precept" these Hebrew Texts with the later Greek purposeful mistranslations and all later Christian Old Testaments and New Testaments built upon these erroneous texts. Error and falsehood is subsequently taught instead of truth and few if any know it in Christianity because they have failed to study or see these facts for themselves. And I mean your teachers and Pastors and even Seminary professors whom I found accept all to easily the "tradition" without serious comparison of such texts where once traces "line upon line" the Hebrew Scripture down through the Greek or Latin finally into the English Old Testament and later New Testament quotes to be certain that the same "idea" has been faithfully carried down through history. Sure, this is slow and tedious study, but all the more necessary because of the many deceptions that pass unnoticed today by most.

The discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls only 57 years ago along with the Nag Hammadi Library of Gnostic texts in Egypt changed all of this and the "deception" of Christianity hit the proverbial fan, but again you have to know what was discovered in Qumran and Nag Hammadi and their startling implications to Christian Messianic theology which boasts of being basically unchallenged for the last 1,700 years by Rome. But that claim can no more be said once you see that two different Bibles were found at Qumran among the ruins of the Essenes; one is a forged Greek translation which stands today as witness to this "theological" forgery that is passed down through history in the early Gentile Church. Opposed to this Greek Old Testament forgery is an 800 year earlier Isaiah Hebrew Scroll which not only corrects the later forged Septuagint and Greek "mistranslation" but the Isaiah Scroll agrees with the 1000 A.D copies of the Hebrew Tanakh proving that it was never the "Jews" who altered their Hebrew Scriptures but rather the Greek Old Testament which is the now the discerned "forgery" from the earlier Hebrew Scriptures. It is this discovery at Qumran, as well the discovery of the Nag Hammadi Library a year earlier in Egypt which gives the world its first glimpse in over 2000 years of the true "Kodak Moment" as to what the religious milieu actually was and what the religious beliefs actually were in these earliest "Chrestian/Christian communities" long before the rise of the Roman Gentile Church which will further perpetuate this theological forgery by their "radical reinterpretation" of "the Christ". In so doing the truth behind this "Jesus" is further clouded and without significant study these facts will never be known by the vast majority of Christians today. Thank God that we live in a time which these documents were discovered and their testimony corrects these later forged "Greek" Old Testaments and all later English Bibles "theologically". But we have to know about this for it to matter to our lives and as late as 1988 Southwestern Theological Seminary taught me nothing about this let alone mentioned theses momentous events at Qumran or Nag Hammadi and the discovery of the Gnostic Library. I had to find this out on my own though my serious study into the "Jewish Roots" of Christianity where I ran across it in later studies. This changed my life and my relationship with God and gave me ample reason for major repentance in my life concerning much of my inherited Christian religious belief system. I firmly believe that God never intended we place our faith in "fairy tales" and "untruths" and neither should you. Faith that is grounded only in truth will bring forth the fruits of repentance which is acceptable to God and allow the seeker to draw closer to God than ever before as he removes from his life idolatry and disobedience which is so often masked by "religion" and many of the doctrine accepted by Christianity today!

SCRUTINY OF THE DOCUMENTS BEHIND THE CHRISTIAN FAITH.....THE ONLY WAY TO FIND THE TRUTH

With such a motive for this web site, as well as many others by Bet Emet Ministries, I wish to bring a short synopsis of what you will encounter on this web site. My intended goal for you, both Jewish believers as well as "non-Jewish" Christians, is that you become aware of the religious documents and the writers of such documents which underlie the Christian Faith and in so doing equip the reader to understand their reliability pertaining to "Divine Truth" and what value they should hold in one's life today. Only when you come to terms with the credibility of the religious documents that are the foundation for the Christian Church when seen in their historical setting and origin, and when compared with the earlier Hebrew religious texts, will one be better able to evaluate the importance such religious documents that are the foundation for all later Christian religious beliefs, many that surround this "Jesus", and the reliability that you should put into them and the impact, if any, that they should have in one's religious belief system. Once you see for yourself that many such religious documents were created and collected at the whim of Rome, let alone "altered" and "fixed" in their struggle with Biblical Judaism can one truly understand the scope of what I speak. Only when your personal study can show you these hundreds of "alterations" made to these Hebrew texts and prior religious doctrines of Judaism and one assess the scope of such alterations by Rome chronologically and successively from Church Council to Church Council as they "hammered out" the religious beliefs that they wanted connected to this "Jesus" of their making can one fully understand the degree of deception to which we have fallen today. Understanding the scope to which these earlier Hebrew texts which were cherished and protected by Jewish sages were constantly altered and amended following each successive Church Council, then and only then can you make an accurate determination regarding their infallibility and inerrancy and the role they should play in your religious belief system. As if that is not enough one can find that this "error" of alteration of the Jewish Scriptures actually began long before Rome got their hands on the documents and can be traced to the initial corruption of the Jewish texts by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, when they purposefully altered the Hebrew Scriptures when they translated them into Greek. Rome will only pick up where they left off and continue the process. As stated before the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls found one too many Bibles at Qumran, the "real" and the "fake". This knowledge should wake the dead! This is a very difficult and lengthy study but one that I think is paramount for a Christian to understand since the facts of the matter at hand reveal the insidious alteration of the Torah and the Prophets in order to "create" a religion of convenience and this ultimate lies at the very core of our inherited "Jesus Story" where he is presented to the world by Rome as the final atonement for sins and the Jewish Messiah. Understand such "altered" and "created" documents play a significant role in one's concepts and religious beliefs concerning this Christian Jesus. Idolatry and blasphemy before God is the result of our failure to do such scrutiny of the origins for our Christian faith and this is the guilt that we carry not knowing the truth of what we are taught to believe since childhood growing up in the Christian Church. Coupled not only with that, once you come to see how hundreds of passages and theological errors are contained in such tampered religious documents which include multiple purposeful mistranslations, misquotations, and the lifting of Jewish Scriptures completely out of context, then will you again be better equipped to determine for yourself if such a document should be categorized as "God breathed", "inspired", "inerrant", and what role it should play in your religious belief system. Please understand that I wish not to denigrate the New Testament because Divine Truths are contained within it in many places, but to approach this New Testament and accepting everything written within it as "Divine" and "literal truth" is unwise and foolish as I found having done so never studying how this book given us by Rome was collected and altered let alone how it compares in its many quotes with these earlier Hebrew texts. You will hopefully come to see that as a "literal" truth the New Testament is not that at all; rather, it is a beautiful book of Divine Allegories of the "incarnated God and Divine Mind" in "matter" or should I say "humanity". All of life is about becoming aware and developing the "indwelling Christ" in yourself: the hope of your glorification" as Paul states. It is my desire to exalt the God of the Jewish Scriptures who called Israel to be a light unto all nations and this includes the Christian as well and in so doing help in some small regard to the restoration of these Hebrew Scriptures to their place of authority that God intended since Sinai.

Isa 42:6 I the LORD have called thee (Israel) in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles.

Israel was given the revelation of HaShem (God) for the whole of mankind, and I personally take offense as should you when you discover that much in the New Testament which is passed off as "revelation" is in reality a perversion of these Jewish and Hebrew Scriptures and violates the commands of God:

Deut 4:2 2 Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

Deut 12:32 32 What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it.

God did not bring a "new" revelation to the "non-Jew"; it was Israel which was to take to the "non-Jew" the revelation of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It was Israel who was to take to the world the Messiah. It was Israel who was to take to the world the Covenants of God with mankind. It was Israel who was called of God to take His Laws to the whole of mankind along with the "Pattern of Worship" of God; a "Pattern" by the way which can be traced as far back as Ancient Egypt but sadly which was destroyed almost beyond recognition in the 3rd through the 5th century by Rome.

Rom 9:4 4 Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; (KJV)

Only when you see for yourself that both the Christian's Old & New Testament is a perversion of the real Masoretic Text, the Holy Word of God, can you then intelligently make a decision before God to "cast out the leaven". The conspiracy is great and done long ago. We unfortunately accept as Christians the documents of the early Gentile Church unquestioningly. Such I will show you is unwise. It is my hopes that once you see this for yourself that you will grow to love the Jewish Scriptures as found in the Stone Edition Tanakh or the JPS Tanakh; for in reality, unless you have either of these translations, you have never read the true Word of God yet in your life because you will come to see, as I and numerous others have seen who have done these types of studies, that the Old Testament translations in the Christians Bibles are "fixed" and the theological and political agenda of men in power are carried out in the religious expressions presented by them. In the pages which follow I will lay out for you these more serious errors which are passed off as "truths" by the Christian Bible.

BUT WHAT ARE WE TO DO WITH JESUS?

Lastly we must deal honestly and truthfully with the Jesus of the New Testament. Much is claimed in Christianity and its documents for this Jesus (called Yeshua in Hebrew). Again once understanding the lack of integrity within the Christian documents you will quickly come to see that such deceptions are not limited to doctrines in reaction to Judaism and the Laws and Covenants of God as taught by Gentile Christianity for the last 1,700 years, but extend to the identity of the "key" person behind the whole of the Christian Faith. By that I mean this "Jesus". This identity and truth behind this "Jesus" and the "Jesus Story" can only come once you have equipped yourself with competent knowledge concerning Judaism and the truth about the Jewish Messiah, knowledge of the religious texts of both Judaism and the later Greek Old Testament "alterations" of it along along with its later subsequent carry-over into the New Testament. Equipped with knowledge of Comparative Religions and the hundreds of parallels to the "Jesus Story" down through the ancient nations and their religions we find in the New Testament, knowledge of Gnosticism and how the "Descent of the Soul", or the "Christ Within" was later changed by Rome when they "literalized" this previous understanding of mankind evolving Divinity. These metaphysical ideas were expressed through the ancients writing concerning man's Divine origins that was often expressed through the knowledge of Lunar and Solar Mythology, or should I say Astronomy and how this became, when personified, the story of the "godman" who had "fallen" and "incarnated" into "matter"; a story shred down through ancient religions since the beginning of time and which parallels with the events and sayings found later in the similar "Jesus Story" in our Christian Bible. The parallels of the "perfect man", the "evolving Divine Soul and godman" run the gamut from the beginning to the end of the "Jesus Story" when compared with the nations religions and saviors that preceded Roman Christianity. Along with that comes the understanding how Matthew 1 through Matthew 28 is the "personification" of the path of the Sun through the Zodiac and the Heavens; the story of the evolving Divinity in mankind which the Ancients understood as the Creator speaking to them of the Descent of the Soul and its intended maturation in this physical plane of existence. Also it is necessary to understand how the Ancients used "myths" to tell this story of the Soul and its metaphysical descent into "matter" and the flesh of mankind and how these were the foundations for all later stories of godmen who were but allegories depicting the growth of the Divine Soul in mankind from its incarnation to its release and ascent at the death of the body. In reality the stories of these allegorical "godmen" are the story of "you and me" and our intended Spiritual development while in this physical plane of existence. This prior "Krst/Christ" stories are the story of "you and me"; not the story of another which has been limited to but one person by the hands of Rome. When these types of studies are done by the reader then he will have the truth about this "Jesus Christ" and only then can he correctly interpret this "Jewish Story" as the revelation of the "Mind of Krst/Christ" as expressed through the Jewish Faith. Then, and only then, can one say that no man can ever deceive him again about God and His "Word".

THE MOST IMPORTANT QUESTIONS YOU WILL EVER HAVE TO ANSWER

- Who was this Jesus, this Yeshua? Who or what is "the Christ"? Is it limited to but one person or applied to the whole of humanity?
- Was Jesus as depicted in the New Testament God, man, both? What Jesus a personification of Divine Concepts operating within humanity?
- Was he a historical figure or an allegory of earlier "Divine Truths" as had been these prior

"godmen" and "avatars" before him as found since the beginning of recorded time in religion after religion, all of which follow the same "pattern" as found in our "Jesus Story"?

- Is Jesus demonstratively the Jewish Messiah, or a false Messiah, or will he yet be Messiah? Was the Jewish Messiah only a man which later becomes a "superman" at the hands of the Essenes and Rome?
- Is this "Jewish Jesus" only the revelation of the "Mind of Christ" expressed through the Jewish Faith through the use of personification and allegory? Did other nations before Israel and Judaism express this same "Mind of Krst/Christ" through similar "divine personification" of a "perfect man"?
- Did this Jesus (Yeshua) fulfill the necessary Jewish and Hebrew Scriptures to be Messiah, or did he fulfill only the ones in the Christian Old and New Testament Bibles which read differently from the Hebrew Scriptures? If so, then how can he be the true Messiah of corrupted and falsified Scriptures? Has Israel and Judaism been right for 2000 or more years in rejecting this Jesus, the fulfiller of forged texts, as their Messiah?
- Did this Jesus only fulfill the "purposefully mistranslated, purposefully misquoted, and purposefully invented texts and Scriptures at the hands of Rome as well as the other Hebrew texts that have been "lifted out of there context", and in so doing, is this Jesus made to falsely appear to the uneducated of the Hebrew true Scriptures that he is the Jewish Messiah in spite of 2000 years of the denial of Judaism who reads a different Hebrew Bible than our Greek forged Old Testament?
- Why was this "Jewish Christ" made accessible only through the doors of the Roman Church which denied Judaism?
- Or is Jesus (Yeshua) made to look as if he fulfilled necessary Messianic passages to the illiterate "non-Jews" of the early centuries by the Gentile Roman Church by their twisting of the Old Testament Jewish Scriptures which were later passed down to us unsuspectingly today and as they currently exist undetected except by a few in our New Testaments today?
- Can we, or should we continue to believe "in Jesus" as the "literal" and "historical" Messiah once we come to see these textual irregularities and purposeful forgeries in our Christian Bibles?
- If not the Messiah, then who or what does this Jesus represent? Could there be a Divine Metaphysical reality behind the whole of the "Jesus Story"? Is it possible that our "Jesus Story" is the personification of the Descent of the Soul into "matter" as well as the "pattern" for the evolution of the hidden Divinity within man? Is this why our "Jesus Story" is basically the same as the stories of the prior gods and goddess, all of which expressed the same descent of God into "material existence"?
- Is there an understanding of "this Jesus Christ" which can be shown to be correct and valid for the Christian today? Can this new understanding of Jesus Christ draw us closer to its most ancient understanding before Rome got its hands upon it? Can this hidden understanding be restored today and benefit us in our walk with God as we come to recover the hidden "keys" and truths behind our "Jesus Story" and follow them in our lives? Could this "Jesus Story" only be the personification of the evolving "Christ Within" the whole of mankind as taught by the early Gnostic Christians and all world religions before the rise of Rome? Does this "Jesus Christ" reside in all mankind instead of just "one person" as Rome made it appear through a false "literal" and "historical" presentation of the "Krst Story" as well as all other "spin-offs" from nation to nation down through recorded history?

These are hard questions to read let alone answer to one who has grown up in a Church that stress from their forged texts that if one fails to believe the accepted dogmas that a Loving God will burn His children for eternity. Fear and ignorance is the greatest tool that Religion can wield. Power and military come second and Rome had it all. Sadly I must tell you that the answers to these questions are not nearly so easy to obtain as you might think. It take serious study in the "areas" mentioned in the beginning of this article in order for you, the reader and student, to come to the truth of the matter for yourself beyond any doubt. So much as been destroyed to cover up this terrible deception that has stymied the evolution of the Souls of men and women. God has called me to study these theological issues out both before, during, and after my Pastorate and Bet Emet Ministries has various websites detailing the answers to these most important questions that lay before and challenge Christianity today.

WHERE I STAND....AFTER TWENTY YEARS OF RESEARCH INTO THE MAN FROM GALILEE

Understand my allegiance to God is undergirded by "rightly dividing" the Word of God. In other words, we should translate the Jewish Bible according to existing Laws of Hermeneutics. There are laws which govern how a passage is to be understood and only by adhering to such laws of hermeneutics can we be assured of arriving at the truths intended in such a passage. Emotionalism and agreement to your Church's dogmas and doctrines is a poor substitute for truth and facts when they contradict your "tradition". Again God desires our emotions be attached to truths and not lies. So having stated that let me say that when one becomes familiar with the Jewish and Hebrew Scriptures and not the altered, misquoted, and mistranslated ones as found in both the Christian's Old & New Testament and Christian Bibles today, then and only then can one accurately determine if this Jesus truly lived as a "literal" and "historical" person let alone fulfilled the necessary Hebrew Scriptures to be recognized as the Jewish Messiah. When one becomes familiar with comparative religions then he sees for the first time that his "Jesus Story" is far from being unique or divine; it is the repetition of the oldest story ever cherished by mankind, the story of the descent, incarnation, evolution, and later ascension of the Soul of man told through allegory, metaphor, and personification as found in the "Jesus Story". Judaism has said "No" to this "literal" and "historical" Christian version of the "Krst/Christ Story" for the last 2,000 years and are unwavering in their denial of our Christian Jesus as the expected Jewish Messiah as they should be given the corruption of the holy Hebrew Scriptures and Egyptian religion as contained in the New Testament.

Answer for yourself: What do the Jewish people and scholars know which we in Western Christianity has not been taught? It all comes down to the reliability of the religious texts that we accept and give authority to for our religious beliefs. Discerning the "correct" Scriptures and texts from the falsified ones is the quest for every Christian and this cannot be done without some competent knowledge regarding the religious texts and their alteration given us by Rome. Such alteration of these ancient religious texts and Sacred Science of the Soul is why we have lost the "keys" to rightly dividing the "Jesus Story" today and 2.5 billion people mistakenly believe in a "literal" and "historical" Jewish man from Galilee that never fulfilled the Hebrew Scriptures; only the altered ones given us by Rome. And who knows this since the vast majority of Christians have never undertaken such studies?

Along with this is the very important matter concerning atonement and if any form of atonement can be connected to the death of this Jesus as depicted in this Roman New Testament. As you can see the "integrity" of the documents that we as Christians and followers of this Jesus and "the Christ" are paramount for our religious belief system; either we have believed the truth about this Christian Jesus because our Christian documents can stand the test of scrutiny and are accurate to the Hebrew Scriptures from which they were taken, or else we have believed lies about this Jesus because our Christian documents can be exposed upon scrutiny as frauds.

Answer for yourself: What is the truth in this matter? You will come to see the answer very clearly if you have the courage and the tenacity to study and read through this website and others that Bet Emet ministry has provided. Bet Emet is the Hebrew name for "the House of Truth". Let us never forget that the highest religion ever given man by God is "Truth".

History records that the Kingdom of God did not materialize with Israel in the first century. We today await the arrival of Messiah and the Messianic Kingdom. It is long overdue. But knowing these glaring errors, misquotations, and misapplication of Jewish Scriptures and lies contained in the New Testament, many of which pertain to this Jesus (Yeshua), I cannot before God nor mankind allow such sacrilege of the Holy Texts to go without challenge. Realizing the failure of the true Messianic Prophecies to be fulfilled it is impossible today, without question, to say that "so and so" is the Messiah. This will come as news to most Christians but what you read in the New Testament as "fulfilled" Messianic Prophecies is far from that the true Messianic prophecies as they exist in the Hebrew Scriptures before they were altered by Rome in their translation of them. I firmly believe that God desires we both rightly interpret His Word as well as accurately understand the events surrounding the Roman depiction of this "Christ" in the New Testament. But to insist against all contrary evidences that this New Testament Jesus, created by Rome by Hebrew Scriptural manipulation and misrepresentation of the Hebrew Scriptures as has been done in our Christian Bibles, is the Hebrew Messiah, is folly. It is one thing to "believe in this Jesus" and pattern your life after his example and I strongly recommend that this be done but it is entirely a different matter all together to definitely say or teach that he is the Jewish Messiah and died for our sins when the unforged Hebrew texts discount it from beginning to end. These statements will become a certainty for the reader the more he/she studies and compares the Hebrew Scriptures with the later forged Greek texts as well as the English of our Bibles. Add to that comparative religious study, especially the truths behind the Osiris and Horus Stories which parallel our "Jesus Story" and you see that a metaphysical reality has been false misrepresented as a supposed "literal" and "historical" story by the hands of Rome and made available to man as his remedy for his sin only through the doors of the Roman Church.

So when you read the following articles which expose the crafty misuse of the Jewish Scriptures by the non-Jewish Church of the early centuries, please, please understand that I am not trying to denigrate this Jesus or the "Jewish Christ"; but rather to uphold the sanctity and holiness of the Word of God as given to Holy men of old and point out how it has been twisted by the anti-Semitic Gentile Church in its creation of a religion about JESUS instead of following the faith of JESUS.

SO WHERE DOES THIS LEAVE US?

Basically the Western Christian Faith of today is a replacement religion that opposed the "Jewish Christ" and the "Mind of Christ" as expressed through the Jewish Faith. As your studies advance this will become all the more real to you but you need the "truth" to see it.

If you truly look to Jesus (Yeshua) as God's example of a life pleasing to God, a life so lived that assured judgment for life and not death, a life that will be rewarded in redemption, and resurrection, then you like I need to understand the true faith of Jesus and repent and return to the faith once given to the saints. This my dear ones is Judaism; not Roman or Protestant Christianity. We find God's Divine Truths best expressed today in Judaism which just so happens to have a place for the "non-Jew" along side the Jew. This task of recovering Divine Truth is impossible if our religious documents that concern God and His "Divine Revelation" to all mankind are in error and Christianity's religious documents in our inherited Bibles can be shown to be in error only when compared to the Hebrew Scriptures. The evidence is there for those interested and concerned enough to look. Let us honor this "Jewish Christ", an allegory for the "Christ Within" and return to the faith of this "Jewish Jesus" exampled to us in the New Testament. Let us as "non-Jewish believers" be grafted into the Israel of God as Godfearers and no longer stand apart from God's people as a competing and conflicting faith. This revelation and endeavor can only be accomplished by serious study where we return to the Bible that Israel used and it's truths concerning the Jewish Messiah along with the correct understanding of atonement and how to obtain it in our lives.

So in the pages which follow you will be shown things that will challenge your present faith in many regards. It is not my intention to hurt anyone by exposing the lies and deceptions contained in the Christian's New Testament. However, I must be truthful to God who called me by recognizing my calling in a similar light as to the calling of Jeremiah the prophet:

Jeremiah: 1:9-10: Then the LORD put forth his hand, and touched my mouth. And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have put my words in thy mouth. 10 See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant.

It is in the Spirit of Jeremiah I dedicate this web site, as all my websites, to the God of truth and it is my hopes that my pilgrimage and study is edifying to you and yours as we both try to make our calling and election certain.

TESTING YOUR RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM AGAINST THE TRUTH

Get ready for an "eye-opening" experience as you will be led to "think" deeper thoughts about our Christian Bible than possibly ever before. But first, let us ask a few questions.

Answer for yourself: What is the most powerful agent in the world known to man? Can you guess what it is? Is it the atomic bomb or the eboli virus? It is a hurricane with its tornado force winds? Is it a volcano that erupts with such fierceness? Is it an earthquake that can level a city in ten seconds? Could it possibly be that small book between two black leather covers you carry to church each Sunday or the "RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM" it generates? This bears investigation.

LET'S ANSWER THESE QUESTIONS

- What could cause David Koresh and his followers to live lives destined to end in a fiery inferno?
- What could cause over 800 people to follow Jim Jones into the jungle and commit mass suicide?
- What could cause countless others to withhold blood transfusions from family members and thereby cause their needless deaths?
- What could cause others to pick up rattle snakes as a test of faith whereby many are bitten and die from the poisonous snake bites?
- What could cause one to risk their own life and hide Jewish neighbors from the Nazi death machine during W.W.II?
- What could cause someone to quit tithing to his church and form an organization to provide food, clothing, medicine, shelter, and much more for the starving children in Africa?
- What could cause one woman to give up everything she had and go to India to minister to the poorest of the poor on the planet?
- What could cause a young woman who knows that the Ten Commandments teaches us "not to kill" yet end up killing that part of her husband that grows within her in an abortion?

Answer for yourself: Have you guessed what it is? Let me give you a clue. It is the same thing in each example: a "RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM." Each of the above examples have another thing in common; each of those people listed above more than likely confesses a "belief" in the Bible! Think and ponder that thought for a minute!

Answer for yourself: Now let me ask you another question? How can one book ("the Bible") be behind each of the above scenarios? Did you notice that the Bible elicited extreme reactions in the above 8 examples? How could one book be behind each of these "religious belief systems?" How can one book produce such extremes in religious practices; from death to the followers of David Koresh and Jim Jones to life for the followers of Mother Teresa?

LET US GET PERSONAL FOR JUST A MINUTE

- Answer for yourself: Have you ever examined your "religious belief system?"
- Answer for yourself: What type of "religious belief system" do you have presently?

Noticed I said "presently" for our "religious belief system" changes as we grow and learn truth (or at least it should).

- Answer for yourself: Where did you get your present "religious belief system?"
- Answer for yourself: Where is your 'belief system" leading you?
- Answer for yourself: How important is your "belief system" to you and is it influencing how you live your life?
- Answer for yourself: Is your "belief system" leading you to obey God more or less than He desires?

This may be a new term for you when I say "religious belief system," but you have one every day of your life and it impacts almost everything you do or say. To others they may consider it to be no great revelation that they have a capacity to believe or that they have a "belief system." However, very few people seem to realize that this system operates every second of every day of our lives. It is almost like we are on "auto-pilot" with our "belief system" setting our course for our lives. Our "belief system" determines how we use our time, our money, expend our energy, and practice our faith. Our "belief system" influences such important decisions as marriage, divorce, birth control, abortion, education, relationships, and even death.

Answer for yourself: Now can you begin to understand how important that our "religious belief system" be founded on truth and not error?

OUR RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM EVEN AFFECTS WHAT WE BELIEVE ABOUT SALVATION

We are never aware of our "religious belief system" until a situation arises which challenges us and what we believe. Let us examine one issue as an example.

- Answer for yourself: What does it mean to be saved?
- Answer for yourself: How many different views would be uncovered if we included people from various religious communities?
- Answer for yourself: What would each have to say if faced with the question, "What does it mean to be saved?"

From the Jewish community the response to such a question would be another question; they would ask you to define what you mean by "saved" or "salvation". They would want to know from what one needs to be saved, why one would need to be saved and what would be the purpose of being saved. For them, the Christian perspective of salvation is not an issue, because Judaism does not have a doctrine of salvation (heavenly Salvation as does the Christian). For a Jew "to be saved" is synonymous with being safe here on Earth. On the other hand, the more zealous Evangelical community believes that they have a divine calling to "save" everybody on the earth from a fiery Hell. To them "saved" means spending eternity with God in Heaven rather than spending eternity burning in Hell.

Answer for yourself: Do these two religious communities with such an opposing view of "salvation" have anything in common? Yes they do, although they have different "belief systems", each community will tell you that "their belief system" is based upon a Bible!

BUT ALMOST EVERYONE BELIEVES IN THE BIBLE.....

Since so many religious communities say that the authority for their beliefs is a Bible, it would seem that the world should be full of peace, harmony, and unity. Its not! They all worship the same God, use a Bible to guide their life, and agree upon the validity of the Ten Commandments. However, in reality we are confronted with a world full of confusion, conflict, and chaos.

- Answer for yourself: How can this be when we have such an abundance of religious groups proclaiming that their beliefs are Bible based...Jewish, Roman Catholic, Southern Baptist, United Methodist, Eastern Orthodox, Church of Christ, Jehovah's Witnesses, Assemblies of God, Mormons, Charismatics, etc.? Besides these, there are many minor groups which influence the lives of millions of other people.
- Answer for yourself: Should we blame "the" Bible for this? Is the Bible to blame for this or just "its interpretation"?

Let us investigate this question at length!

WHY THE LACK OF UNITY IN OUR RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEMS?

First of all, we must recognize that there is no such thing as "the Bible." We must face the fact that there are several Bibles. Basically, three religious communities account for most of the modern Bibles-Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant. Each community (Jewish, Catholic, Protestant) considers its Bible as sacred and thus different from other group's Bibles. Each believes that its Bible has an authority that exceeds that of any other document, even the Bibles of other religious communities. Therefore, each religious communities' Bible occupies an official position in the life of that particular religious community. Each religious community understands its Bible to present a "truer" or "better reflection" and "understanding of reality" than is the case with other's writings. Each community declares that its "belief system" is identical with and obviously authorized by the teachings of "the" Bible belonging to that community. Therefore each community believes its "religious belief system" is divinely ordained because its Bible was divinely given. In reality, however, we fail to understand that it isn't the Bible that ultimately determines the validity of one's "belief system;" its the TRUTH of "one's religious belief system" which is product of the "interpretation" of our Bibles!

Answer for yourself: Which Bible is the correct one...the Jewish, Catholic, or Protestant?

OUR BELIEF SYSTEM BEGAN BEFORE WE WERE BORN

The "religious belief system" of each group above (Jewish, Catholic, Protestant) not only gave validity to its own version of the Bible but decided which Bible was chosen as "the" Bible; which books were included and in what order they were to be placed. The Jewish Bible consists of the same books as the Christian Old Testament, but they are not in the same order. The Jewish Bible has three divisions-Torah (Genesis through Deuteronomy), Prophets, and Writings with priority being assigned to the Torah (the first 5 books of the Hebrew Scriptures and Old Testament). Maimonides described these divisions as three concentric circles with the Torah in the center and the other two divisions as illustrative commentary arranged in descending order of authority. The structure and its underlying assumptions show that the books in the second and third divisions are read looking backward toward the Torah. The Jewish community reads the Prophets and the Writings in light of the Torah.

On the other hand, the Christian Old Testament, taken from the Greek, is structured into four divisions-Torah, History, Poetry, and Prophets. But there is a difference in the placing of the Old Testament books in the Christian Bible?

Answer for yourself: Why didn't the Christians just take the Jewish Bible and use it in the same order as did the Jewish people and their Rabbis? Simply because that simply by placing the Prophets with their predictions last in order, Christianity distances themselves from the Old Testament and the Torah and makes is appear that it has "passed away" thus allowing Christianity to look beyond the Old Testament to the New Testament. The reader is directed forward from the Prophets to Matthew rather than backward to the Torah for understanding of all that comes later. A passage from the book of Isaiah will be read in the synagogue in consideration of the Torah. However, the same passage will be read in the church in consideration of the New Testament. It is this approach along with the practice of reading one's preconceived beliefs and "religious belief system" into the Bible that produces the tendency for most religious groups to ignore or overlook textual differences, or textual problems instead of addressing them or trying to understand the origin for them.

WE SHOULD ALWAYS TEACH WHAT THE BIBLE THAT JEWS LIKE JESUS WOULD HAVE USED AND SAYS...BUT WE SHOULD NEVER SAY WHAT THE BIBLE NEVER TEACHES

Bet Emet Ministries does not "dodge bullets!" Let us give a very important example of where the Christian church reads into a text their "religious belief system" that the text was never meant to teach. Let me say that space nor time does not allow for a full accounting of these hundreds of deviations in interpretation of the Jewish Scriptures which Judaism has relied upon for thousands of year but we will look at one presently. Let me preface with this caution: "We should always teach what the Bible says but we should never say what the Bible never teaches!"

Answer for yourself: Would you agree with this maxim?

I hope you do for it is sound wisdom.

There are sadly too many examples to list where we, as Christians, are guilty of teaching what the Bible never says; my only concern is if you will be so agreeable after you see the perversions to the text of Isaiah that have been taught by the Christian church for centuries. Let us look at Isa. 7:14.

As taken from the KJV Old Testament we find:

Isa 7:14 14 Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. (KJV)

There is a major, a major problem with this above verse as taken from the Christian translation of the Hebrew Scriptures!

Looking at the Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew Lexicon we find:

#5959 `almah- a virgin, a young woman

- a) used of marriageable age
- b) a maid or newly married girl

Notice if you will that this word when properly translated reveals that there is no instance where it can be proved that this word designates that such a young woman must be a "virgin". This word in the Hebrew, from which it was taken, simply does not carry the idea that such a girl is a "virgin" or "only a virgin".

The Hebrew word translated which is translated "virgin" in the English Christian Bible version of Isa. 7:14 is incorrect. This "virginous" idea is not the correct meaning of the term at all! In Hebrew,

"almah" means a "young woman", of which she may or may not have had prior sexual experience. It does not mandate she be a virgin. Anytime the Bible wants to make a distinction between a "virgin" and "non-virgin" for legal reasons (in a court of law and in matters of divorce), God uses the term "betulah" and never "almah." Christianity claims that Jesus was born of a virgin, and bases such belief off a verse in the New Testament as well as Isa. 7:14. However, there is no linguistic reason to translate "almah" as virgin in Isa. 7:14. The idea of "virgin" and the birth of "the Krst/Christ" or "Christ Mind" in "matter" comes from the ancient Spiritual Wisdom which teaches the "fall of God" into "material manifestation". In other words, God "incarnates" Himself "into matter". The "Divine Idea" in Genesis chapter 1 finds "material expression" in Genesis chapter 2. That is why there are two separate and similar "creation accounts". God incarnated Himself "into matter" and "material being". The word for "matter" is originally taken from the ancient Egyptian word for "mud"; the derivative of this today provides us the name "Mary"! Wow! The ancient Spiritual Wisdom always taught that in the Cosmos "virginous matter", (mud/Mary), devoid of the "Fire" or "Solar Energy" of this "Intelligent Uncreated Eternal Energy and Life-Force" of the Cosmos (God), awaiting the movement of God that would "birth" in it "material existence" and all "life-forms" in the fullness of time. Here is where we get the idea of "virgin" or "virginous" in its original meaning. It would be the combination of the "Fire of God" and the "mud/matter/Mary" that would produce the Mind of God, the "Mind of Krst/Christ" that is contained in all material manifestations. Thus we see now when looking at the Isaiah 7:14 text a "preformed religious belief" was of such a strength that it cause the mistranslation and corruption of a previous Hebrew Scripture in our Christian Bibles; an idea that was never meant in the original. This corruption of the Hebrew Scriptures began with their translation into the Greek and later only carried over into the Latin and English translations of our Bibles by Rome. Had they been honest with the Hebrew instead of relying on their "religious belief system" the our Bibles today would have carried the correct idea which sadly they do not!

Now please pay close attention to what comes next.

Proverbs 30:19 tells of four paths or four ways:

- a way of an eagle in air,
- a serpent on a rock,
- a ship in the sea, and
- a man with an "almah" (young woman)

All four of these examples have in common that there is absolutely no way to demonstrate where an eagle has flown, where a ship has sailed, where a serpent has crawled on a hard rock, or a sexual experience after a woman has had other prior sexual experiences. Since a virgin has demonstrable differences in her physical body both before and following her first sexual encounter, the term to make distinction regarding the virginous state of a women in Hebrew would not be "almah" but "betulah" as mentioned above. Likewise, Isaiah tell us that a young woman (with prior sexual experience since he used "almah") shall conceive and bear a child, and before that child (verse 16) shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good, the land that you dread (the Assyrian invaders) will be forsaken by both her kings. Notice if you will that a child beings to learns right from wrong usually by the age of 2-3 years. If you keep reading the passage you will find that within about two to three years (before the child learns good from bad) God will bring His Presence (called "Immanuel"-of whom the child was a picture) upon Israel and destroy the attacking Assyrian army and both the evil kings that threatened Judah will be deposed. This is a long, long time before the birth of a supposed "literal" and "historical" Jesus as found in the New Testament. The time period given in this text is around 715 B.C.E.; not the first century. We are off almost 700 years in making this verse apply to Jesus. Let us not forget that Isaiah was speaking to King Ahaz of Israel who was being attacked by these two kings.Isaiah brings assurance to him to not to worry, that God was bringing a "sign" to Israel that before a small child (who would be born not of a virgin) learns to choose right from wrong, the battle will be won for Israel. The young woman's pregnancy was a "good sign" that something good was going to happen to Israel and very soon! The child was a sign of the soon coming delivering Presence of God as He liberates His people from Assyrian aggression. The civil war and its threat will be over for Judah. God's Presence (Immanuel-God with Israel) would come and destroy Israel's enemy (not Jesus). This passage has absolutely nothing to do with Jesus! The child was not to destroy them either. God was to destroy them. Thus we see that to adhere to a virgin birth as taught in Isa. 7:14 in front of such solid evidence is foolishness and to believe that this child is Jesus (as spoken of in this passage) is utterly ridiculous, because the Jesus of the New Testament is not made to be "historical" or "literally" born for another seven hundred more years! There is no fulfillment of any prophecy here as connected to the New Testament Jesus!

Answer for yourself: Don't you think the Christian church should be told the truth about their Bibles?

I have just demonstrated for you an approach to your Bibles where one reads one's preconceived religious beliefs into Biblical passages where such ideas never existed in the first place. In so doing we always are guaranteed of not obtaining the Truth that God desires we receive. This is often called "proof-texting." This erroneous way of reading our Bibles is done more than you know and you will not be able to discern the difference if you don't study.

THE CANONIZATION PROCESS OF THE BIBLE BY THE GENTILE CHURCH

The canonization process of the Christian Bible created many of these problems. Not only did canonization determine the books and their order, but it also separated the meaning of the texts from dependence on their historical or original use! We can find no greater deception than the placing of the book of Malachi at the end of the Christian's Old Testament right before the beginning of the New Testament when it is originally placed by the Rabbis as the last book of the Prophets yet before the "Writings" in the Hebrew Tanakh. Malachi for the Rabbis was not the "last word" before New Testament times as it is made to appear for the sake of Christian theological agendas (the announcement for the coming Christ). The result of this separation is that one does not read a passage as part of that Bible in its entirety, rather as a often disjointed or independent unit. Each passage is part of a Biblical book which becomes part of an even larger entity. The whole is thus greater and more authoritative than any of its parts.

This mutual interplay produces an accumulative effort which transcends any part of the text. The understanding and interpretation of an individual part must conform to the constraints resulting from that section's existence as part of a group's Bible. It is this process that creates many of the problems which the belief system attempts to answer. A Bible only has relative authority since its words are subject to the "interpretational" framework of the belief system of the religious community. Each community provides a method of assigning priorities to the Scriptures which it uses as the authority for its religious dogmas and doctrines. Traditions develop in each community as the Bible and the community interact with each other over time. The longer the time the more traditions! The result of this process is that religious communities tend to "read their beliefs into their respective Bibles" (eisegesis) instead of reading the writer's message out of the Bible (exegesis). When the members of "the community" read their Bibles, they do so with a common bond since they have accepted the faith of their religious community and understand the words of their Bibles as interpreted by this group. But there is one big problem here; their religious community may not have interpreted their Bible correctly and led people into error. The Isaiah 7:14 is one case in point out of hundreds in our Christian Bibles today when compared to the Hebrew Scriptures. Therefore the use and interpretation of a Scripture will vary depending upon which religious community is doing the reading, which Bible it uses, and what its belief system allows.

ORDER AND PLACEMENT OF BIBLICAL BOOKS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

Let us consider the chronological order in which biblical books originated. Even though First Thessalonians was the first of Paul's epistles to be written, Romans (some scholars believe to be his last epistle) preceded the earlier writing in Protestant Bibles.

Answer for yourself: Why is this done?

By establishing this order, the early church predisposed the reader to interpret the remainder of Paul's writings in consideration of the theology expressed in the book of Romans. Since the Roman Church was ultimately responsible for determining which books would be included in the New Testament, and their order, it is not surprising to find one of their major doctrines embedded within the canonization process. This is not surprising since Roman Catholicism is responsible for the canonization of your Christian Bible! Now you might need to set down for this one. Little do we know at the present stage of our studies that there are two opposing and conflicting Pauline theologies in the New Testament; one Gnostic and one anti-Gnostic. Rome places the anti-Gnostic "Romanized Pauline" theology of their making first in our New Testaments in order to set the foundation for one's "thinking" the rest of the way in the New Testament. In so doing when later reading the purely mystical and metaphysical writings of the true Gnostic Paul we are previously indoctrinated to read and interpret them "literally" and "historically" through the eyes of the "Romanized Paul" instead of the way that the authentic Paul intended. Lost in all this "placement" of religions ideas in an "ordered" sequence is the ancient Spiritual Wisdom which has remained cherished and intact for over 13,000 years.

The belief system of the Roman Catholic Church claimed that its authority could be traced from Jesus through the apostles to the leadership of the Roman Church. It is this apostolic line of authority that we see embedded in the canon of the New Testament. First we read about Jesus in the Gospels. Next we encounter the Jewish Apostles in the Book of Acts. But the Book of Acts starts out as a Jewish Expression of Faith in God only to end up as a Gentile expression of Faith in God. Then we move on to the heart of the Roman Empire, Rome, as we read the book of Romans. The reader encounters the tradition and succession of Apostolic Authority, or so it seems as planned by the Roman Church. Cleverly the reader has had his gaze moved from Jerusalem to Rome. Judaism is replaced by Roman Christianity. Let us not forget that Judaism was considered a world religion in the first century and had a place for the "non-Jew" within it. We are led by Rome to easily follow the transmission of authority from Yeshua, to the Apostles, to Rome, or if said differently, the removal of authority that had originally been given to the Jerusalem to the Gentiles and Rome ultimately.

Answer for yourself: Was this God's plan or man's?

This "scheme" or "theological agenda" of the Roman Church is easily seen by viewing Matthew as a Jewish Gospel, Mark moving away form the Jewishness of Jesus to a more tolerable "Gentile-Gospel" (along with Luke who is believe incorrectly to be a Gentile author but isn't, for he was Jewish and is called Silas in the Bible), and lastly to the Gospel of John that totally removed Jesus from his Hebrew roots by identifying him as God! Next as we examine the Book of Acts we should be startled to find that the authority given to Peter and James and the Jewish church is totally removed in 28 chapters and now totally resides with a Gentile church! Then Romans establishes for all the epistles the authority of the Roman church as we again are asked to believe the authority of Moses' seat has been transplanted to Ceasar's throne in Rome.

Answer for yourself: Where do we find the books written by Jesus' Jewish brother, Yaakov or James? You guessed it, at the end of the New Testament along with another Jewish epistle from another brother of James. Of course I mean Jude.

Answer for yourself: Have we forgotten that the New Testament designates James to personally pastor the Jerusalem Synagogue/Church? Rome never forgot it, but tried to bury it by manipulation of what books would be included in their canon and ordered them in such a way to insure that the authority of Jerusalem would be replaced by Rome. It would not be long before Rome will announce to the world that "there is no salvation outside of the Bishop and Roman Christianity".

We can easily see conflicts between the Jewish and Gentile communities that are reflected in the canonization of the New Testament. The domination of the Gentile community over the Jewish community can be seen in the placement of the books; not only in the Old Testament but the New Testament as well. . Notice that from Romans through Philemon we have a concentration of writings which address issues in the Gentile churches. After these we encounter writings to the Jewish congregations or writings by the Jewish leaders to the Jerusalem church. It seems a bit unusual and odd to you to find the writing from the first leaders of the powerful Jerusalem Church relegated to a position inferior to all other writings in the New Testament.

ARE YOU BEGINNING TO SEE FOR YOURSELF?

Ultimately the "religious belief system" of the various religious communities provided the appropriate answers for any differences and difficulties which arise. Since the "belief system" is so very important, should we not ask the obvious question: "How do people acquire their belief system?" Some of the manners of receiving your belief system may be surprising to you:

- We inherit them from our parents attitudes and actions.
- We decided which offered the best social opportunities.
- We were vulnerable at moments of tragedy in our lives.
- We selected on the basis of which offered the most affluent business contacts.
- We were evangelized by a group of missionary minded people.
- We located a religious group nearest to our home.
- We visited the group with a friend.
- We completed our own - personal- detailed study of the Bible; But way to few resort to this as they should!

DON"T CONFUSE ME WITH THE FACTS

Answer for yourself: Don't you find it strange that people, regardless of how they acquired their "religious belief system", will defend it without understanding it?

Most people do not realize that they have a "religious belief system" or how they acquired it. Even those who do realize they have a "religious belief system" hardly have ever examined it and tested its validity. The reason for this, unfortunately, is that many people are not intellectually curious! These people prefer to let others do their thinking for them. These people, whether they know it or not, desire it or not, seek it or not, lean toward dogmatism. Dogma, by definition is:

- A points of view put forth as authoritative without adequate ground (I just believe it!).
- Something held as an established religious belief without any factual basis supporting it, or worse, in light of factual evident that disputes and disproved it!

Bet Emet Ministries believes in examining our "religious belief systems" to see if we are in "the faith." We, at Bet Emet, through educational newsletters, attempt to examine our "religious belief systems," our Bibles, its religious concepts, doctrines, ancient meanings of biblical words, and the influence of ancient culture on the writers of the Biblical text, and much more. After all, what are we to do one day when standing before the Judgment Seat of God and after confession that we have prophesied in his name, and in his name cast out demons and in his name done many wonderful works (we thought), and hear: "I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity?" This frightening example is to warn us that "many" will have a "belief system" that will guarantee their disqualification from entering the Kingdom of Heaven. Is that you? Could that be You? How can you prevent yourself from awaking from the dead and finding that you are personally fulfilling Matt. 7? I sure don't want that to be me.

2 Pet 1:10 10 Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Don't you think you better start examining YOUR "belief system" while you still can?

We at Bet Emet Ministries have had to repent of many doctrines we were taught in good faith that could not stand the text of critical examination. God desires we have faith in "truth" and not faith in "error or lies." We invite you to tell your friends that such an opportunity is available at Bet Emet Ministries.

PROOF-TEXTING AND THE CREATION OF "FULFILLED MESSIANIC PROPHECY"

For some of the new readers of Bet Emet Ministries the topic of this article might be alarming if not troublesome. I want to speak about "proof-texting" in the writing of the New Testament; in particular when it comes to recording "fulfilled Messianic prophecy." When I began to study this area of Biblical studies many years ago as an ordained Pastor to say I was alarmed at what I began to see and uncover is an understatement. But after a couple of years of such study and as my studies expanded beyond the falsification and corruption of the Hebraic "messianic prophecy" in our Christian Bibles and spread into other areas of study like Gnosticism, Hermeticism, the ancient Egyptian Religion and Metaphysics I began to see the big picture and felt so much "better" about the New Testament Jesus and the Divine Spiritual Truths that I found were cleverly hidden and concealed behind these clumsy attempts to forge "fulfilled prophecy" when reading my Bible as a supposed "literal" and "historical" account of this Jesus Christ as we conditioned to read and interpret our New Testament. This will all come into focus when you get enough parts of this "theological puzzle" to see it for yourself so for the present just so relax and don't be alarmed but listen to what is being said next.

Not every "prophecy" in the New Testament is "Messianic" even though it is presented in such a fashion.

Not every "fulfillment" of Messianic prophecy in the New Testament is a "fulfillment of Messianic prophecy" even if presented as such!

In fact the vast majority of "fulfilled prophecies" concerning Jesus as recorded in the New Testament are "NOT MESSIANIC" at all.

Now before you think that I am mistaken or crazy all I ask is that you give me a chance to prove this to you beyond any doubt and show you things about the Bible we have inherited by Rome that you have never seen before.

Answer for yourself: I can hear many of you say: "How can that be? I have a Bible that is supposed to be a faithful translation from the Hebrew Scriptures with the quotes of Hebrew Scriptures in the New Testament on almost every page that shows me that these passages are a "fulfillment" of the Hebrew Scriptures so how can I say that "somehow" they are not 'fulfillments' after all"?

That is exactly what I once reasoned and in a second you will see clearly what I am saying about these supposed "fulfilled" Messianic prophecies in our Christian Bible. What the typical Christian does not know at the present is that those responsible for the translation of the Hebrew Scriptures into Greek changed and altered multiple and numerous Hebrew Scriptural texts in order to write into the Hebrew Scriptures their own sect's religious beliefs and did so in the Greek translation of the Prophets and the Writings. This was done in order that the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, would have their own "Divine" book from God that would tell the Greek speaking world that "they" were correct in their beliefs about the "Godman" and that the Greek speaking world needed to accept these same Essene religious beliefs since they supposedly came from God! Such an idea was carried over into this Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures unknown to the Greek speaking world of the 2nd century B.C.E.

There is only one problem!

In this corruption of the Hebrew Scriptures by the Essenes previous Hebrew Scriptures and prophecies were altered, changed, added to, deleted, and combined; a host of literary techniques were used by them to destroy the Divine revelation that Moses, David, Solomon, and the Prophets had preserved up to that point concerning the hoped for descendent of King David who was believed to once again return in a later day to be the salvation of the Jewish people as had King David previously. In so doing a host of "literalized" Hebrew Scriptures were inoculated with personified Astro-theology and this mixture was included among the pages of these falsified Greek passages and lost to the non-Hebrew speaking world by such literary devices is the Jewish concept of the "human messiah". The "human messiah" in the Hebrew Jewish Scriptures was now transformed into a Cosmic-Solar Godman that has little if anything to do with the human messiah prophesied for generations to the Jewish people. Now few know this has happened to the Hebrew Scriptures carried over into our Christian Bibles because great efforts have been expended not only by these Essenes to cover such corruptions of the Hebrew texts but also by the later Greek and Latin/Roman Church Fathers who were themselves also involved in a form of "literalized" Sun-worship since they were as well instructed by these same Essenes and subsequently adopted similar religious beliefs that are only reinforced by this corrupted Greek Old Testament of Essene Origin. Later these falsified prophecies and verses will be completely lifted out of context by these later Gentile Fathers and redactors of the New Testament and the "literalized" God-man myth is perpetuated not only in the Scriptural texts that make up our Christian Old Testaments but by the quotes of them carried over into our New Testaments. All the while the Rabbis and Jews of Palestine knew the difference; their Hebrew Scriptures were safeguarded and remained basically unchanged while the Greek world is given the corruptions of these prior Hebrew Scriptures as "Divine Revelation." And later you and I go into a Christian Book store and buy a Bible that we think is faithful to the Bible that a Jew like this Jesus would have used and read and simply is not! Nothing could be further from the truth and we never know it as Christians who only set in the pews of our Churches and hear sermon after sermon read from these forged texts never knowing the truth about the Hebrew Scriptures and their corruptions which we carry in our Christian Bibles. One thing is for sure and that is that the orthodox Jews of today KNOW IT. Sadly too few reach out to the Gentile Christian Church to tell us; having learned by the tragic history of their ancestors and their ashes down through history that such attempts led only to their deaths and the deaths of their families. I was lucky enough in my years of study to run across this information and believe that it is of such an important nature that all Christians should be told the truth. I could not believe it when uncovering this deception and only after encountering such alarming news in several books read over basically a year was I compelled to begin to check out the matter for myself in an attempt to defend my Christian birth faith against such charges since being an ordained Pastor on a large mega-church staff in Dallas, Texas. What I would uncover over the next two years would lead to my resignation as a Pastor at a this mega-church in Dallas and would be the impetus to found Bet Emet Ministries which in Hebrew means "House of Truth". Now the information I uncovered is presented on these various websites for the readership of Bet Emet and other truth seekers. The relevance of such information is earth-shattering; no longer will we look to a false messiah and "literalized" Cosmic-God man for our Spiritual salvation but can look to the true Christ who is no longer "externalized" from us but rather to the only Christ which has ever been given mankind, the "indwelling Christ" taught by the true Gnostic Paul and not the later one created by Rome that taught their forged Scriptures in their Bible given to the world in the fourth century.

FULFILLED PROPHECY...OR NOT?

In fact, and this is a sad thing to say, most if not almost all of the "fulfilled prophecies" recorded in the New Testament are purposeful misquotes of the Hebrew Scriptures, purposeful mistranslations of the Hebrew Scriptures, a collection of Hebrew passages take completely out of context and made to apply to this New Testament Jesus regardless if they were intended to refer to such a person or not. As if that is not bad enough many of these "fulfilled prophecies" are simply made up out of thin air and are just created lies made to appear "religious" which often have very catch introductory phrases attached as "thus being fulfilled by the Prophet...". But to the reader that does not posses competency with the true Hebrew Scriptures and the Jewish Bible in it's original language before it was corrupted in translation into the Greek by these Essenes then this information is not only "new" but "startling" and almost "unbelievable" to say the least! That is until you do your own study. It is almost unbelievable and will be until you see these original Hebrew texts compared, one by one, over and over again with their Greek and English counterparts and in so doing it will only be a short time until the scope of such deception became alarmingly apparent to yourself. Tears will flow and hearts will break at what you will find in light of a life lived before God "believing in untruths" about this Jesus as the historical Christ. The harsh reality will hit you like a mack truck; that you have spent most of your Christian life in idolatry and blasphemy of YHWH and never knew it because a "literalized" Astro-theological and Cosmic godman was given to you in your Christian Bibles instead of the truth about "the Jewish messiah and Christ". This is the Essene-Christian legacy to which we have fallen and not know it; that is until we die and find out the truth when we come face to face with YHWH. But then it is too late to do anything about the idolatry and blasphemy that such corruptions of the Hebrew Scriptures has submitted us to without our knowledge and understanding.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever heard of this before now?

Of course not. The reasons are many. First of all the Bibles we Christians and followers of Jesus carry are forged and not truthful to the Hebrew Scriptures in hundreds of places. But no one ever told us this simply because they never studied the Hebrew intently or ever compared "line upon line and precept upon precept" as Isaiah the Prophet instructs us. I am not speaking of the innocent varieties of interpretations of selected passages or minor translation mistakes in our Bibles. If such errors of which I speak were only minor in theological scope I would not be writing these articles or devoting my life to such an endeavor. I am speaking of the major theological agendas that went into the purposeful corruption and alteration of the Hebrew Scriptures when they were translated into the Greek by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, and later by the Greek and Latin Fathers who continued in this path with further alterations and corruptions to the Hebrew Scriptures and the later English translations and "reinterpretations" of them which we find today in both our Old and New Testaments.

Be not mistaken about this: if corrupted Hebrew texts are taken from the forged Greek texts are later quoted in the New Testament then we still end up with falsehoods in the New Testament. Understand clearly that the Holy Spirit has nothing to do with such lies and falsehoods no matter what emotions you might have when reading them. Your emotions have misled you and you have been innocently taught to attach your love and emotion to untruths instead of "the truth". We end up as religious Pavlof's dogs conditioned to respond with emotion to falsehood instead of truth and all the while God knows the difference; but we don't! Such is misdirected love toward God!

Understand that when you corrupt the Hebrew Scriptures with a "theological agenda" as did the Essenes then any readers of these falsified Greek Scriptures that are not acquainted with how the true Hebrew Scriptures were first written, read, and interpreted will fall into deception when reading these fraudulent translations as we have them in Christianity today. Later when again these forged Greek Old Testament Scriptures are translated into English and again having not the skills required to read Hebrew then you automatically fall into more deception when reading the English Old Testament as taken from this corrupted Greek translation and these theological errors are only perpetuated by the quotes from these corrupted Old Testament texts when found repeated in the New Testament. Then Sunday after Sunday were are indoctrinated over and over again in our lives with untruths never knowing the difference. THINK! Lastly when all the quotes for these previously forged English Old Testament texts are repeated in the New Testament then many of the verses and supposed "fulfilled" prophecies are nothing more than further corruptions and untruths, but again you don't know this because you again most likely lack the skills to read Hebrew or don't posses a Hebrew-Jewish Bible like the Stone Edition Tanakh that can show you these corruptions. Besides that you were never taught to even consider the idea that your texts might be flawed being constantly indoctrinated with the idea of the Bible being "inspired, infallible, and inerrant" over and over again in your Christian walk. You can "click" on the link and go toArtScroll and obtain one; I highly recommend that you do so and begin to compare these "Messianic prophecies" for yourself to see what I am saying. Or better yet, try to obtain Lillian Freudman's acclaimed book Antisemitism in the New Testament and follow her page by page and look them up and compare them one by one. I once was not aware of these corruptions in my Bible to this degree; that is until I began the most serious study of my life as a Pastor and after two years of laborious study studying great books like Mrs. Freudman's Antisemitism in the New Testament and a host of others I was almost devastated at what I uncovered. I realized that I was not a follower of the message of this "Jewish Christ" at all; rather I was a follower of a "literalized" cosmic Superman that never existed outside of the personification of the Sun and its path through the Zodiac along with the stars in the Heavens. This fact is presented in detail on other websites in order that the reader can trace such a theological invention from start to finish. But such study if for the "seasoned" student and "truth-seeker"; way beyond the level of such studies presented here. But save this link for later because at this level of our study you are not ready for such "meat" until you master the "milk" and our Bibles and in so doing see the "hidden truths" that lay behind our inherited "literal" and "historical" approach to our "Jesus Story". Only later as your studies advance to include such studies in Gnosticism, Hermeticism, and ancient Egyptian Religion is one ready to tackle such challenging materials in my opinion. Only now, in seeing such evidences presented in this opening website for yourself can you be fully persuaded, as I was, that we have followed many lies and not the truth concerning this New Testament Jesus. You have to be persuaded that you don't have "the truth" before you will begin to look for it. This is where we must start if we ever hope elevating the level of our studies to include the hidden ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Metaphysics hidden beneath our "Jesus Story"; it is here we find the truth that was kept from us by the Alexandrian Essenes and Rome that took the "Christ" from us and catapulted him into the Heavens; whose access could be attained only through the doors of the Roman Church and their "brand of salvation" which defines the Dark Ages.

The first thing you need to do to prepare yourself for such enlightening studies is to purchase a Stone Edition Tanakh or JPS Hebrew/English Bible to see these alterations in the Hebrew Scriptures as compared to our English Bibles for yourself. Only then can you begin to compare line upon line and precept upon precept" the numerous passages in the Hebrew Bible with our supposedly "faithful" translation of them as found in our Old Testament and New Testament today. You will quickly come to see in your own studies that "faithfully translated" is not a term that can be used to describe such mistranslation of the Hebrew Scriptures as we have today in our Christian Bible and their similar distortion as carried over by quotes in our New Testament. Next you only need find the time to compare these "Messianic verses in context" with those in your English Christian translations to see these things for yourself. That is why Freudman's book is so great; it carries you through this page by page and you see the evidence for yourself once armed with the Hebrew and a Greek Old Testament as well. All that is needed now is a good old KJV to trace from the Greek to the English Bible and there you see the progressive distortion and corruptions of Messianic prophecy for yourself. All the "thus being fulfilled" passages in the world cannot save such purposeful mistranslations and misquotations from the garbage bin. If you were to start with the Hebrew Scriptures and trace their translation into the Greek in the LXX, known as the Septuagint, and then their further and later mistranslation of them as found in the many and varied Christian Old Testaments and even the later quotes of them in the various versions of the New Testament as well then and ONLY then could you see fully this "path of corruption" as I have detailed above. I have done such studies over ten years now and the results of such investigative study are in the websites of Bet Emet Ministry. Because of this discovery it is important that we as followers of the New Testament Jesus as the personified "Krst/Christ" understand how "proof-texting" was used by the writers of the New Testament to create "fulfilled prophecy" about this Jesus when it reality it was never "fulfilled prophecy" in the first place and had nothing to do with a supposed historical first century person. At the very core of this "purposeful" mistranslation of these Hebrew Scriptures we find a religious agenda at work where the "Faith of Jesus", as practiced in Judaism, has been altered to evolve into a "replacement religion" that is solely based upon a "Faith in Jesus" an the theology created around his supposed identity for mankind's salvation before God. Judaism has maintained this falsification of their Hebrew Scriptures in both the Greek and English versions of the Old Testament and their later use in the New Testament as we have them today and has done so now for almost 2,000 years. You should expect and demand that your Christian Bibles contain "uncorrupted Hebrew messianic prophecies" but never knowing that they do not then this goes beyond notice by the vast majority of Christians unless they stumble across it most accidentally like myself. Again this information is not intended to hurt anyone or destroy anyone's faith; rather, it is intended to ground one's faith "in the truth" and not fantasy. Wherever you find truth you find God; wherever you find deception and lies you do not! Never forget this!

If what I say is "fact", and it is, and if it can be proven, and it can, then don't you want to know the truth about God, His messiah, and the New Testament "Jesus Story" before you die?

TIME FOR A STORY TO ILLUSTRATE A POINT

Notice how the following story applies to "Proof Texting." The basic technique that the writers of the New Testament used to analyze and corrupt the Jewish bible in making Jesus to be the "fulfillment of hundreds of Messianic prophecies" can be explained as a parable. The Dubno Maggid, who lived in Europe, was a great Jewish teacher over 200 years ago and he originally told this story. The story goes:

There was a man who was waling through the forest and comes across a tree. He decided to shoot an arrow at the tree. On the tree is a target, as is used for target practice. Right in the middle of the bull's eye, exactly dead center of this bull's eyes is an arrow. There are no bad shots around the area of this bull's eye, there is only this one shot and it is a perfect hit right in the middle of the bull's eye! The man continues his walk through the forest and comes across the same thing again. Another tree with an arrow dead center in the bull's eye! This scene of a tree with an arrow dead center in the bull's eye repeats itself over and over as he continues his walk through the forest. He becomes taken by this impossible site of every tree with an arrow perfectly dead center in the bull's eye and seeks the individual who is shooting these arrows. Eventually he comes across a man with a bow and an arrow quiver and asks the man: "Are you the man who is shooting these arrows"? The man says "yes". He then says: "I am amazed, how do you do that?" The man answers; "It is easy. You see I first shoot my arrow into the tree and then draw the target around it". This simple story paints the picture as to how Christianity basically has approached the Hebrew Scriptures and the Jewish Bible. The belief that Jesus was the Messiah is the starting point for these New Testament writers. Understand I have no problem with anyone in that day who hoped for the appearance of the Jewish messiah or even today for that matter. Desperate times inspire hope and messianic fever was everywhere in the first century. The great need of the Jewish people in that day was deliverance from Rome and their oppressions. But the corruption of the Hebrew Scriptures and the Holy Word of God in producing a document to espouse one's sect's religious beliefs in a cosmic-Godman as did both the Essenes and Rome is not only a crime against God but Divine Truth itself and blurs the truth about the real messiah promised to the Jewish people by God.

We must make a point right now in order to not confuse the reader. The Essenes corruption of the Hebrew Scriptures was not, I said not, to predict or prophesy "Jesus," rather they were promoting a solar concept familiar to all Gentile Sun-worshipping nations. That concept was of an Angel-Messiah of sorts which originally was nothing more than the personification of the Sun, Heaven, Stars, and later Nature. The Sun was the visible representation of the Invisible Cosmic Life-Energy whom we call God which as visibly symbolized to mankind by the Sun of our Solar System. However over time such allegory and metaphor of the "Cosmic Life-Giver" becomes mistakenly "literalized" and some 100 years after such forgery of the Hebrew texts by these Essenes they applied such "literalized theologies" to their historical Teacher Of Righteousness. This Teacher of Righteousness was for the Essenes a mediator figure. He is a priestly leader of a community; in this role he is seen to suffer, perhaps to face death. His interpretation of scripture is definitive for his community and may perhaps be understood as his legacy. There are a number of similarities between the earthly roles of Jesus and the Teacher, interpretation of Scripture, the establishment of a law which is the means of salvation; both suffer. After death the followers of both require further guidance. There are also differences, the Teacher does not appear to be worshipped, his community does not continue and expand after his death. It is possible that the Teacher of Righteousness could be understood as a stage in the development of thought that led to the worship of an individual. The Teacher reveals the prophetic mysteries - of which Jesus is later interpreted in the past-tense to have been the supposed fulfillment although not recognized in his day by such awareness.

Then after the death of the Teacher of Righteousness and hoped return and again almost one hundred years later again such "literalized theologies" were applied in the second century to the "invisible one" whom we recognize and the Jesus of our New Testaments. This "Jesus" was for them the hoped for returned "slain" Essene Teacher of Righteousness who passed among them unrecognized. The only major problem is that if he had come all of Israel had "missed him"; Israel being unworthy of her King and messiah. The prophecy of Daniel and the 70 Weeks had come and gone, the time for the unveiling of the Messiah had come and gone and no Messiah had shown up and the prophecies remained unfilled following 70 A.D. and Rome was still the plague of Israel. Evidently, the Essenes reasoned, he had come and walked among them and was never unveiled since Israel had been unworthy. They reasoned that Israel had "missed the day of their visitation". This explains what we find later in the Christian teachings of the "Messianic Secret" which we find in the Gospel of Mark. The Messianic Secret is a phrase that refers to Jesus having commanded his followers not to reveal to others that he is the Messiah in certain passages of the New Testament, notably in the Gospel of Mark. New Testament scholars, starting notably with Wilhelm Wrede's groundbreaking research published in The Messianic Secret in the Gospels (1901), have made various attempts to explain why this should be so. Wilhelm Wrede (also known as William Wrede) proposed that the secrecy theme was not original to Jesus's ministry, but rather it was a theological addition added by the writer of the Gospel of Mark. Wrede's argument, still influential today in religious studies, states that the Gospel of Mark had to come up with a convincing explanation for why Jesus did not seem like a messiah during the course of his life (as well as why the true Messianic Prophecies were never fulfilled as Judaism maintained). By emphasizing secrecy in his gospel, Mark could simultaneously claim that Jesus was the messiah and that nobody knew it until after he had died, and that his messiahship was revealed only through his supposed resurrection. Now if you don't know Hebrew and only read Greek then any Greek "New Testament" full of purposefully misquoted Hebrew Scriptures intent on making one, this Jesus, the "fulfiller of Prophecy" as the Jewish Messiah, would be an easy sell in light of damnation and hell reserved for those who refuse to "accept the Roman view of Jesus". It worked like a charm and the Roman Church built an empire upon it. All the while Judaism maintained that no such Jesus ever fulfilled any of the Messianic prophecies and maintains the same today. But a Bible full of forged Hebrew Scriptures which "thus being fulfilled" is placed adjacent to them does not make one see the need for such study; he sees only what he reads regardless of the fact that what he reads is not true. But much effort must be expended to see such falsification and few know to even do this or will invest the energy and time it takes to see the truth for themselves.

Next it is important to understand, and time and space does not permit here to do it, but the writers of the Gospels as we have them today are not Jews; if anything Jewish oral traditions are later again redacted and the documents in the New Testament are the creations of Gentile Church Fathers over hundreds of years. Again I don't expect you to believe this in light of the "traditions" we hear in church but honest scholarship over time prove this beyond any doubt to the investigating student. Next, these writers of the New Testament "Jesus story" must prove their "religious belief connected to the Jesus figure" by going back in the Greek Old Testament which was already corrupted and this they did. Understand these Gentile writers and redactors of the New Testament were either former or present Sun-worshippers as well. Just look at Constantine in the 4th century which espoused Sun-worship along with Christianity and sixty years after the Council of Nicea which was under his control will we have the formal acceptance of the Roman New Testament and the order for 50 Bibles to be produced under the watchful care of Constantine. The influence of such forces and their corruptions of the true texts are undeniable when you compare the New Testament texts with the true passages in the Hebrew Bible. Do it please!

It was easy to search the Greek Bible, already corrupted as you know, for solar/Astro-theological concepts about this Godman and apply it to Jesus who was made God by Rome at the Council of Nicea in 325 A.D. They only had to search the Greek Bible to find proof-texts for their beliefs that could be remotely associated with the idea of the "Cosmic God-man" and record such in the ever growing New Testament and out comes "fulfilled prophecy." Thus working backwards, if you will! The Christian/Hebrew-Christian will boast that there are hundreds of passages in the Old Testament (as they call it) which prove that Jesus was the messiah. Events in one's life is then either "created" or read back into these "religious Hebrew texts" or "twisted to make it fit" in order to make connections in one way or another to make it seem if these events in one' life were "fulfilled" prophecy. This could be done to anyone not just Jesus. Since we are working backwards of sort then anyone could be make it look as if they and their lives were fulfillments of earlier Biblical statements with just a little textual creativity and that is what we find when we take time to look closely. It is relatively easy to make something look like a prophecy but very hard to take known Biblical Prophecy and make it appear to fit a later individual unless the events surrounding his life were later "created" again to fit; a reverse of what we said before. One only need to take an event in the life of an individual or create one and then tie it to something said by Moses, the Prophets, or others and arrange the verse "creatively" to make it seem if they were talking about such an individual. This has been done and it passed off as "Messianic prophecy" when it fact it is not!

The test that you can perform regarding Christians claims that certain chapters in the Old Testament are speaking about the messiah (Messianic prophecy), is to make believe that you are reading this chapter an hour or a hundred years before the birth of of the New Testament Jesus. Then ask yourself, "what about the chapter would let you know that it is referring to the Messiah?"

To take it one step further, what about the chapter lets you know that it is speaking about THE MESSIAH JESUS? Answer- Nothing! You see if we refer again to The Archer and the Arrow.

Christianity/Hebrew-Christians have shot the arrow (riding on the arrow is already the belief that Jesus is the messiah). Therefore anything they come across in their corrupted Old Testaments that seems to back up their belief is used. However when the passages are examined in the proper Hebrew Bible context one sees that they do not back up the Christian/Hebrew-Christian claims as I will show in the following articles beyond any doubt!

Following on this website are articles that will absolutely take your breath away when you read and see for yourself how this technique of proof-texting was so widely used by the New Testament writers in their presentation of Jesus as the Messiah in out Bibles

Understand that I believe and hope with the Jewish nation that their "messiah" might yet come but what I know that you have yet to come to terms with most likely is that thetrue Messianic Hebrew Prophecies in the Hebrew Bible that remain unaltered today simply have not happened nor been fulfilled....by anyone! This was the "mark" so to speak to identify the anointed of HaShem and His messiah. In the absence of the failure of the uncorrupted Hebrew Scriptures being fulfilled then we must wait like the Jews before identifying "THE" messiah. So the Jewish nation waits and we must as well. But to corrupt these Hebrew Scriptures and adulterate the Jewish Bible in order to put forth one's own brand of religious agenda or theological belief in founding a "replacement religion" is a travesty and brings the curse of God.

Deut 4:2 2 Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you. (KJV)

Deut 12:32 32 What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it. (KJV)

The time for the Jewish messiah to appear according to Daniel, chapter 9, has come and gone.

But what I take great aversion to, and you should as well, is the corruption of the Hebrew Scriptures in the "selling" of Jesus to the world as "THE" Messiah when in fact we cannot say this since using for such a belief is a bunch of purposefully mistranslated and corrupted messianic prophecies! We at Bet Emet have devoted a whole website to these messianic problems as they exist cleverly concealed in our Christian Bibles and when the time is right then this is a study that all Christians need to undertake.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR IN THESE FOLLOWING ARTICLES REVEALING THE FALSIFICATION OF OUR CHRISTIAN BIBLES

The following are various ways in which the Christian Bible has been so badly misrepresented when compared to the Hebrew Scriptures:

- Hebrew Scripture were lifted completely out of context in which it is written and given a completely different meaning or context than intended by the original writer. This was purposefully done in order to lead the reader to think we have a "messianic prophecy" when in reality we do not. Jewish texts and phrases are therefore lifted out of the Hebrew Scriptures and given meanings which, at best, are forced.
- Preceding many of the prophetic verses which are quoted is the assertion, "What was said through the prophet was thus fulfilled." In this way the writers of the Christian Scriptures endeavored to show that the Tanakh anticipated and predicted the events recorded in the New Testament regardless whether it did or not! Those happenings, then, are presented as the fulfillment of the Hebrew Scriptures and are considered proof texts. Comparison of these "What was said through the prophet was thus fulfilled" when compared to the original Hebrew Scriptures and Biblical and Jewish history show they are not so "fulfilled"!
- Circular reasoning: This means that you begin with your conclusion and then you work backwards to prove your point. Since from the 2nd century and onwards the emerging Gentile Roman Church believed in Jesus as the messiah, every chapter in the Hebrew bible that refers to the messiah the Christians said automatically point to Jesus.
- The purposeful mistranslation or misquotation of the Hebrew Scriptures where words are changed or substituted that brings a completely different meaning than the original author is a common device used to created "fulfilled prophecy". The techniques employed to establish such "false proofs" include citation of verses out of context, mistranslation, and misquotation which goes unnoticed by those unfamiliar with the true Hebrew Scriptures and the Bible that a Jew like this Jesus used in the first century.
- Sometimes a figurative or poetic phrases or an allegory is mistaken for a straightforward statement and made "literal" and vice versa when the intent of the original Jewish writer was completely different.
- Sometimes sayings of different Biblical writers, living in different places, and in different centuries are run together and made to read as if it is "one" Scripture when it is not.
- Often two or more of these above methods are used in a single quotation.
- Fabricated references that simply don't exist and Scriptures quoted that never exit in the Hebrew Bible but the uninformed readers would never know this because these "creationisms" are worded in such ways to sound "Biblical."

So I guess the only question that needs to be asked at this point is this: Do you want to know the truth about our "Jesus Story" before you die and meet God?

The men who gave us these corrupted Greek Scriptures and the legacy that it produced; namely further corruptions in the English Old Testaments and New Testaments by the hands of Rome, succeeded more than they ever knew in destroying Divine Spiritual truth intended for the world. Unknown to the reader at this point most likely is the fact that these Essenes who began such a corruption of the Hebrew Bible when they translated it into Greek did so in order to write in among the passages their own version of their Messiah which has more in common with a "literalized" Godman than the human messiah from the loins of King David! Basically, being in Alexandria, Egypt, they were infusing "Osiris" with the expected and hoped for Hebrew human messiah. Instead of being a human Messiah he was for the Essenes an Angel-Messiah; a Cosmic Godman that finds it's origin in the Osiris "pattern" of Egypt. What was pure Spiritual Allegory and Metaphysical to the core becomes "literal" and "historical" first at the hands of the Essenes in the Book of Enoch and later further evolved at the hands of Rome. Remember that Egypt is where these Essenes lived and translated these Hebrew Scriptures and one would expect the find the "Osiris" influence and we do; but what we don't know as Christians is that what was purely Metaphysical in ancient Egypt becomes "literal" and "historical" on the pages of our Bibles. The Solar/Astral concepts of the ancients which were understood originally as allegory and metaphor became under the the influence of these Essenes "literal" and such concepts were first applied to their crucified Teacher Of Righteousness and later to the "missed messiah" who is termed Jesus some 150 years later. At the same time the normal conservative Jews looked to God for their anointed human leader to arise that would fulfill the long awaited Hebrew Scriptures. These Hebrew Scriptures were not fulfilled by Jesus or anyone else so the Jewish people await their deliverer. After the Jewish war with Rome in 70 A.D. and especially after the failed Bar Cochba revolt of 135 A.D. it was needful to continue to keep alive the hope of the people that the one thought by them to be their hoped for "deliverer" and "messiah", would yet come to deliver and save Israel from Rome. The time had come and gone and no messiah appeared and has not now for over 2,000 years. Instead of trying to understand why the Messianic Kingdom did not come and why the King of the Jews and hoped-for deliverer was not revealed to Israel, literary efforts like proof-texting, were used by Rome to focus mankind's attention away from Jerusalem to Rome. Salvation was no longer "of the Jews" but rather "Rome". Through the use of proof-texting and corruption of these Greek translations of the Hebrew Scriptures by the Essenes we find Rome later taking up where the Essenes left off and in so doing making themselves the vehicle for man's salvation through their corrupt versions of the "Jewish messiah". But to the uneducated Christian reader who is unacquainted with the Bible a Jew like Jesus would have used in the first century and its corruption and gross mistranslation today as it stands in our Christian Bibles then his only option today is to read his corrupted English Bible never knowing that what he is reading is forgery of the true Hebrew Scriptures.

We have a lot to "unlearn" and "learn anew". In closing, the articles exposing such purposeful corruption of the truth concerning the Jewish messiah as recorded in the Hebrew Scriptures follow in succession on this website. The articles are extensive and it is not a short study but if you want to know the truth about our Christian Bible and recover Divine Spiritual Truths long lost and kept from you then this information is essential. My prayer for you is that your heart and mind will be open to repentance as you see for yourself how the precious truths of God's revelation to us was stolen from us by men with "theological agendas"; men who are antisemitic to the core and hated the Laws of God. We truly live in a glorious time to day where such knowledge has come to light and where we have the opportunity to recover such Spiritual Truth and in so doing come to the unity of the faith though the recovery of Biblical truth as well the truth about the Indwelling Christ of God. And we have no greater need or place to start than with recovering the truth of Moses, the Prophets, and the Writings and what they originally had to say about God's human messiah and the Soul of mankind. In time once you see the Bible is a book not about one person but about you, a Metaphysical treatise of sorts, describing the evolution of Divinity within man, the evolving Christ mind in you and me, then you will be able to see not only the truth about the personifications of Osiris and Jesus, but the symbols that they represent regarding your Soul and its evolving Spiritual perfection on this Earthly plane of existence. But to get there we have to deal with this "literalism" of our Bibles first and a good place to start is the truth about "fulfilled messianic prophecy" as related to the Jesus of the New Testament. Only by exposing such mistakes can our eyes be opened to higher Spiritual Truth.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SEEING THE TRUTH ABOUT THE CORRUPTION OF THE CHRISTIAN BIBLE #1

Answer for yourself: Is there such a thing as "Bible Truth?" Why should we trust this "holy book" any more than any other spiritual, religious or philosophical treatise? How can we be sure that the Bible we read today is the same collection of 66 books that were originally written in ancient times? These are interesting questions with even more interesting and startling answers. But before we begin we must consider a few things.

Ultimately we are responsible for our own beliefs, which must mean that we should never blindly accept the dogmas of others. Fundamentalists will try to indoctrinate you, evangelists to "save" you, cults to arrange "re-birth" into their particular fold, atheists to ridicule your conclusions. Listen, probe, analyze, and then if necessary modify your own faith. Approach everything you are told with the same sympathetic caution that I hope you will bring to these pages.

There is one essential pre-requisite, however. You must be prepared to re-assess what you currently accept as true in light of truth, facts, and demonstrateable evidences gathered along the way of our studies. This may be particularly difficult for anyone brought up in a fundamentalist tradition, and taught that some particular dogma may not be challenged for fear of some terrible consequence. Such dogmas must be put aside, and if at the end of your search they are found to be incompatible with truth they must be rejected.

Now let us take a look at "Bible truth". Let's take a look! The Bible is unquestionably the world's all-time bestseller with an estimated 2 billion copies in print. The Bible was completed in its entirety nearly 2,000 years ago and stands today as the best-preserved literary work of all antiquity. The problem that confronts us right from the start of this study is the question of reliability of our current Scriptural texts as well as the "hermeneutic", "approach" and "interpretation" of these ancients Sacred Scriptures which were written more than 2,000 years ago; in fact some writings reaching as far back as 3,500 years ago and oral traditions giving rise to these later written texts that reach as far back as only God knows.

The fact of the matter is that much of the Bible does claim to be history, to be an account of real things that took place in real time. Interestingly, a 2005 gallop poll found that 63 percent of Americans & and 77 percent of Republicans believe in the Bible's literal truth. Today, in light of modern scholarship and with the great benefit of archeology the Bible is best viewed as "pseudo-history"; much of it can be seen without a doubt today as religious and Spiritual myths which tell of archetypal events that take place outside of time but which were related over and over again down through recorded time in various nations and their "religions" and cultures like ancient Egypt, Israel, Babylon, Persia, and others.

Given that as the foundation for where our studies will take us the aim of this site is to offer analysis and information to help to resolve some of these differences regarding the reliability of our Bible texts as well as our approach to our Bible and how we are to correctly interpret it given our current "literal" and "historical" approach to reading and interpreting our Bibles. Most startling we will come to see in the pursuit of our studies that these ancient texts in our Bibles were fashioned thousands of years ago by religious cultures which never intended their Sacred Scriptures be interpreted "literally" or "historically". It is in our Bible that we will come to find that Spiritual truth cloaked under the veil of Religious and Spiritual allegories myths and this is enmeshed in a type of pseudo-historical truth and so being are woven and bound together. Discernment of these differences is the "key" that brings sense to our Bible and the Spiritual realm in which we really live; a discernment that too few possess today since we live in a age of religious fundamentalism with its hard-nosed "literal" and "historical" approach to the Bible in most circles.

We find another problem that goes beyond the sole "literal" and "historical" approach and interpretation of our Bible; that being the reliability of our current texts in our Bibles as we have them today. In ancient times, prior to moveable type and the printing press, scribes replicated books by hand, one letter at a time. Not surprisingly, numerous transcription mistakes occurred, and for a variety of reasons, some scribes would intentionally add or delete passages. We know this for a fact since their "scribbling" can be found in the corners of earlier manuscripts only to found later "included in the Greek texts" as if it were the "Word of God". Again, "theology" is created and added as well as sometimes "deleted" to what we call our Bibles today. In spite of this alteration of our New Testaments the reformation held the doctrine of Sola Scriptura, the Bible is the only guide to truth, and any Christian who sincerely reads the Bible guided by the Holy Spirit can find the truth. Well that sounds good on the surface but the existence of over 2,000 different and conflicting denominations and rivaling "doctrines of Christ" prove this very foolish. What complicates this even more is the fact that often in our studies we run across heart-stopping quotes of early Church Fathers like the 3rd century Origin which complained about pervasive scribal mistakes and alterations of the Gospels "… they make additions or deletions as they please." As a result, early New Testament manuscripts are riddled with errors, inconsistencies, and "creative theology"; much of which denies the unbroken Spiritual Truths Judaism and the ancient Spiritual religions of mankind held sacred since recorded time. What's worse, it's impossible to know with certainty what the original manuscripts said because those first-generation examples no longer exist.

This fascinating history of New Testament textual criticism is the topic of a wonderful new book by religious scholar Bart Ehrman, Misquoting Jesus: The Story Behind Who Changed the Bible and Why. Ehrman chairs the Department of Religious Studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is considered an authority on the history of the New Testament, the early church and the life of Jesus. According to Ehrman, thousands of New Testament manuscripts exist, including over 5,700 in the original Greek language, but "among these thousands of copies, no two of them are exactly alike in their wording." Ehrman describes the sheer number of errors by way of comparison, "There are more variations among our manuscripts than there are words in the New Testament."

Most differences among early manuscripts are insignificant, merely misspellings or deleted lines, but unlike such insignificant changes there exits many manuscript differences and alterations that impact core Christian beliefs and the theology of our "Jesus Story" at its very core! In fact, Ehrman explains some scribes were theologically motivated to make alterations in the text based on conflicts of faith raging in the early days of Christianity; conflicts that existed between the earlier Gnostic "Chrestians" and followers of "the Christ" and the later "literal" and "historical" Christians who also became "followers" of a "literal" and "historical Christ". These alterations were motivated by disagreements over many central Christian beliefs, including the divinity of Jesus, his Christology, doctrine of the trinity, Emanationism, the virgin birth, the miracle stories, etc. At the core of this lies the validity and importance of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and its manner of interpretation of "the Krst/Christ" which finds its earliest origin and meanings as far back as ancient Egypt; the interpretation of which was argued for centuries between the Gnostic Chrestians and the later Roman Christians who eventually won this theological battle and provided us the Bibles we have in our possession today.

It's commonly believed by most Christians uneducated in the true origins of the Christian religion that the early Christian Church reflected an untainted purity of belief. Nothing could be further from the truth! In reality, however, early Christian cults embraced a highly diverse variety of beliefs and disagreed on numerous fundamental elements of faith. Some Christian groups believed Jesus was divine, but others believed he was merely a man. Some Jesus cults believed in One God, others believed in One God with many emanations of Himself which exist through the totality of all creation (like the Angels in Judeo-Christianity and the "neteru" in ancient Egypt). Ehrman writes, "All these groups claimed to be Christian, insisting that their views were true and had been taught by Jesus and his followers."

The New Testament eventually emerged from this conflict and Ehrman reminds us "the winning side decided which books were going to count as scripture and which books were going to be excluded. The books that were excluded, of course, are deemed heretical." Most "heretical" texts were destroyed by Rome along with their adherents; to the tune of 18 million people during the Dark Ages at best guess by the scholars today.

Thus it does not take a rocket scientist to see that the chaotic history of the New Testament simply isn't compatible with the concept of an inerrant text of our Bible transmitted perfectly by God. This fact should make us wonder just what we are reading in our Bibles today and how we are to interpret the Spiritual Truths within it when found.

The popular and influential King James Version of the Bible certainly doesn't escape the consequences of bad source material. Ehrman asserts that it was largely based on "one of the worst manuscripts that we now have available to us" and points out the obvious: "The King James was not given by God but was a translation by a group of scholars … who based their rendition on a faulty Greek text."

Christians who are blind to any dissimilarity between reality and their faith, will likely remain unconcerned with problems of Biblical reliability. For me, knowing this truth and the facts of the matter first hand from my twenty years of study simply cannot remain unconcerned! Rational people, however, will recognize that the Bible is a demonstrably imperfect, purposely altered and error-ridden collection of texts created by humans, not a mythical Supreme being. Given this, as ugly and disconcerting as it might first appear, does not preclude one from approaching our Bibles armed with enough knowledge that we can open this Sacred Book, as altered as it truly is, and obtain from it the highest Spiritual Truths that the ancients both knew and cherished. The Bible can yet illuminate our Souls to the highest Spiritual reality possible if we come to it possessing the very "Truth" of its real condition and the "keys" necessary to unveiling the Spiritual Mysteries within it despite its purposeful "theological" corruption at the hands of Rome. All that is necessary is that one must know "the Spiritual Truth" of the ancient Spiritual Mysteries as it existed and was understood for thousands and thousands of years prior to the rise of Roman Christianity and its later corruption of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and their Sacred Scriptures and religious dogmas which are today contained in our Bibles given us by Rome. This sounds easy, and it is; but it requires your diligent and personal study to known the difference between "truth" and "lies", for both lie side beside on the pages of our Bibles today.

So picking up our Bibles and believing that we can simply read our Bibles and approach them with a "literal" and "historical" manner of interpretation and thereby obtain "truth" since being led by the Holy Spirit sounds fine as long as the Bible is completely reliable and as long as the "literal" and "historical" approach to the whole of our Bible is the hemeneutic that is needed to obtain its Spiritual Truths. But neither assumed condition is true and can easily be discerned and proven when one does his personal study into these matters. The Bible is at best a "pseudo-history" relating over and over again the Divine Mysteries of the Spiritual Realm as understood and conveyed to the higher chronicling of the Spiritual Consciouenss of mankind since the beginning of time by God our Creator. By the time of the reformation once exegetes started to get to work on the Bible they showed that the Bible in not to be approached strictly in a "literal" or "historical" manner. In fact they found the opposite; that much of the Bible is fiction, albeit holy fiction, or termed more appropriately, much of the Bible is a Spiritual Divine Myth and Spiritual Allegory which is set into historical sequences in the evolution of mankind and his Spiritual Consciousness.

So we find today that there are maybe a dozen major Christian religions, hundreds of major sects, thousands of minor sects and offshoots. Nearly all of these exist because of theological differences with some parent body. Yet all have the same single source for their theology: the Bible. But they all interpret the Bible differently.

One important aspect of our Christian faith that we must base all our studies on is seeking the TRUTH. Anything we find to be false, we should throw out regardless of whether or not it might be more popular or taught in our Church. For obedience to the truth that has been revealed to us is the key to being led into more truth. This, I believe is very important:

The eyes of our Creator seeks those whose heart is perfect toward Him.

Here Yahweh is telling Jeremiah that if he can find just "one person" in Jerusalem that really seeks the truth, God will pardon the whole city!

Jer 5:1 Run ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof, if ye can find a man, if there be [any] that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth; and I will pardon it.

Here is the New Testament Christ speaking of the importance of knowing truth:

Joh 4:23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him. 24 Elohim [is] a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship [him] in spirit and in truth.

The Spirit is what guides us into all truth:

Joh 14:17 [Even] the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.

Joh 15:26 But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, [even] the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:

Joh 16:13 Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into ALL TRUTH: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, [that] shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come.

The path to truth will stop if we don't obey the truth He has given us:

1Pe 1:22 Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, [see that ye] love one another with a pure heart fervently

Having pleasure in unrighteousness is the same as not obeying the truth He has given us. Those that ignore His ways will never find Him, though they seek:

Pr 1:22 How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorners delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge? 23 Turn you at my reproof: behold, I will pour out my spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you. 24 Because I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded; 25 But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof: 26 I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh; 27 When your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you. 28 Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer;* THEY SHALL SEEK ME EARLY, BUT THEY SHALL NOT FIND ME: 29 For that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of Yahweh: 30 They would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof.

Jer 29:13 And ye shall seek me, and find [me], when ye shall search for me with all your heart.

SO WHY DID I SHARE THIS WITH YOU?

Simply because in the following web pages and articles you will be exposed to a vast amount of knowledge and facts which will challenge long cherished "religious beliefs" and "church traditions." Many beliefs held by the vast majority of Christians today are simply false and many are an offense to God and you simply are not aware of such a tragic situations that exists in your life. You can thank Rome for this as this tragic loss of "Spiritual Truth" was accomplished by them during the 2nd through the 5th century and we today yet continually fall into such great "religious darkness" and are not aware of this fact unless our eyes are opened to the "truth" of our current predicament. The problem is, as alluded before in earlier articles, that our Biblical "texts" which Christians hold sacred are not always accurate when compared to the Hebrew originals. That means much of the "theology" that we have "inherited" and are taught to "believe" for our salvation is simply WRONG! Upon diligent study these "texts" like the Christian's Old Testament and New Testament can be shown to be a purposeful corruption of the true Jewish Bible that a Jew like Jesus would have used in the first century of the common era. Consequently "religious beliefs" derived from these corrupted texts will lead one to error and sin without his knowledge; that is until he dies and finds out that he has been wrong about the most important thing in his life; namely his relationship with God and His "Krst/Christ". It is my hope to be of help in exposing such error and misinformation which we have been given by our Christian traditions and less than reliable Biblical texts and replacing them with the Spiritual and Divine Truths that you deserve. It is my hope that one's repentance when shown these higher truths will bring him closer to God and His "Krst/Christ". I do not wish to offend anyone and apologies are first given if such occurs, but in the Spirit of love and truth I lay down my life for the flock of God in hopes of shinning a light upon the hidden Divine and Spiritual Truths that yet today lay hidden behind our "Jesus Story" and in so doing I give my life to helping others to return to the unity of the faith and restoring "the Faith once given to the Saints."

When world-class biblical scholar Bart Ehrman first began to study the texts of the Bible in their original languages he was startled to discover the multitude of mistakes and intentional alterations that had been made to the Christian Bible by earlier translators. First let us get to know a little about Bart Ehrman. Bart D. Ehrman is a New Testament scholar and an expert on early Christianity. He received his Ph.D and M.Div. from Princeton Theological Seminary where he studied under Bruce Metzger. He currently serves as the chairperson of the Department of Religious Studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He was the President of the Southeast Region of the Society of Biblical Literature, and worked closely as an editor on a number of the Society's publications. Currently, he co-edits the series New Testament Tools and Studies. Much of Ehrman's writing has concentrated on various aspects of Walter Bauer's thesis that Christianity was always diversified or at odds with itself. Ehrman is often considered a pioneer in connecting the history of the early church to textual variants within biblical manuscripts and in coining such terms as "Proto-orthodox Christianity." In his writings, Ehrman has turned around textual criticism. His findings and evidence presented are absolutely startling to the Christian mind. From the time of the Church Fathers, it was the supposed Gnostic heretics, like Marcion, for example, that were charged with tampering with the biblical manuscripts. But he found that was not the case and such "traditions" are seriously flawed. Ehrman proves that that it was actually the Orthodox that "corrupted" the earlier traditions and earliest manuscripts. His scholarly output is extensive. He has authored or contributed to nineteen books. In Misquoting Jesus, Ehrman tells the story behind the mistakes and changes that ancient scribes made to the New Testament and shows the great impact they had upon the Bible we use today. He frames his account with personal reflections on how his study of the Greek manuscripts made him abandon his once ultraconservative views of the Bible.

Since the advent of the printing press and the accurate reproduction of texts, most Christians have assumed that when they read the New Testament they are reading an exact copy of Jesus's words or Saint Paul's writings. And yet, for almost fifteen hundred years these manuscripts were hand copied by scribes who were deeply influenced by the cultural, theological, and political disputes of their day. Both mistakes and intentional theological changes abound in the surviving manuscripts, making the original words difficult to reconstruct. For the first time, Ehrman reveals where and why these changes were made and how scholars go about reconstructing the original words of the New Testament as closely as possible. Ehrman makes the provocative case that many of our cherished biblical stories and widely held beliefs concerning the divinity of Jesus, the Trinity, and the divine origins of the Bible itself stem from both intentional and accidental alterations by scribes--alterations that dramatically affected all subsequent versions of the Bible. Other scholars today are re-evaluating the New Testament in light of the discoveries of the Nag Hammadi Gnostic Library discovered over 50 years ago in Egypt. It appears now, in light of these abundant alterations and purposeful changes to the earlier oral traditions of the nation's "Krsts/Christ Stories" as well as our "Jesus Story" that the New Testament should be seen more in a "Metaphysical", "Mystical", and "Mythological" light than a "literal" or "historical" account of "the Christ". This impacts all religions "dogmas" and "doctrines" we have inherited as traditional Christians. Truly in this information age in which we have been so blessed to have been born the "Truth" about our Christian Bible and its "Christ" is being made known like never before. By way of introduction we not proceed to the "meat" of these articles.

Answer for yourself: Has the faith once delivered to the early "pre-Roman" church nearly 2000 years ago been accurately delivered to the Churches of God today? Has our Bible faithfully represented the earliest beliefs in "the Christ" as held by the first Church in the first century of the common era? How can you answer this question accurately unless you know for certain what these earliest "Chrestians" and "Christians" believed way back then when compared with what we are taught today or what we are told to "believe today" by our inherited Roman traditions in vogue in traditional Christianity today?

This is a question that all church members should ask themselves, and prove one way or the other. But most members would not dare ask or bring up that question, nor will they even permit themselves to be challenged to do so.

2 Cor 13:5 5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates? (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Here is a great hypothetical question for our readers. If Jesus of Nazareth were to return to the earth today, would He recognize the religion that is using His name? Not at all! Mankind has twisted the Christ's teachings let alone the identity of "the Christ" so much over these last 1,800 years that the religion bearing the name of "Jesus" has practically no relationship to what messianic Judaism actually believed and taught in the first century of the common era.

Answer for yourself: Can you find a Church that strives to live by the teachings of true Apostolic Christianity as seen in the first century? Do you even know what theologies and "religious beliefs" were taught in the "doctrines of Christ" as found in normative Judaism in the first century and how they compare to what our traditional "post-Nicean" and "post-Constantinian" Christianity teaches today? Can you prove for yourself what God's Truth really is in light of what you have been taught to believe today? Does it matter to you? Should not our "faith" be established more upon "truth" than "tradition"? Is a man who believes "error" in his religious beliefs just as well off as a man who believes "truth"?

Answer for yourself: In John 8:32 the Jewish Christ said: "You shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Here we see that to "the Christ" truth was very important. He said we must know the truth, because it can make us free. Free from what? Verse 34 shows that "the Jewish Christ" teaches that this freedom is from sin. But if truth is necessary to free us from sin, then how could we please God if we believe error instead of truth?

Most genuine religious scholars recognize that vast changes have overtaken professing Christianity; changes that render it totally different from the Christianity of early messianic Judaism as followed by the disciples and Apostles who followed the message and teachings of the "Jewish Christ". As respected mainline Protestant scholar Jesse Lyman Hurlburt acknowledges: "For fifty years after St. Paul's life a curtain hangs over the church, through which we strive vainly to look; and when at last it rises, about 120 A.D. with the writings of the earliest church-fathers, we find a church in many aspects very different from that in the days of St. Peter and St. Paul" (Jessie Hurlburt, Story of the Christian Church, p. 41).

Answer for yourself: If the leaders, during this time that Mr. Hurlbut elsewhere called an "age of shadows," were filled with and led by God's Spirit, then why would the Church suddenly be "very different"?

Heb 13:8 8 Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What are we to do with the passage in Hebrews 13:8 which says that "the Christ" changes not in light of the fact that modern scholarship teaches us that the early Church "suddenly become very different" after 120 A.D.?

Acts 20:29-31 29 For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. 30 Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. 31 Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears. (KJV)

When Paul realized the depth of the apostasy that would overtake most of the Church, it hit him emotionally. He then "did not cease to warn everyone night and day with tears"! Very few people today seem to be concerned enough about this massive apostasy to even begin to shed tears over this awesome change; many are never aware that such a change has taken place and we today follow a completely "different religion" other than the one modeled and taught by "the Jewish Christ" in the first century of the common era.

This massive apostasy occurred because men and women back then, just like today, did not zealously prove to themselves where God's Truth was being taught. That is why the living Christ corrected those Christians living near the end of the Apostolic Era:

Rev 2:4-5 4 Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love. 5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: And what about today? How can we account for the more than 2,000 different Christian denominations and sects all of which call themselves "Christian" and all of which teach different versions of a supposed "literal" and "historical" Jesus? How can all of these variant Christian sects have different ideas, different religious beliefs, traditions and approaches and yet claiming to follow the same "mind" of Christ?

Part of the answer is the fact that extremely few professing Christians really study their Bibles, and when they do so they don't possess the "keys" so necessary for recognizing the reliable texts from the unreliable ones let alone how to correctly interpret these ancient texts as did the ancients before them! So they do not "prove" virtually anything they believe by carefully researching it in the Bible and in other extra-Biblical sources to confirm for themselves that these same dogmas found in their Bibles have not changed over these last 2,000 years. So few spend any time in learning how to actually "interpret" these ancient Sacred Scriptures in the same manner as the ancients who first wrote them and taught them thousands of years ago! Oh, we may enthusiastically study books and articles on health, on self-improvement or on investing and making more money. But somehow it does not occur to us to thoroughly study the most vital subjects of all:

- Is there a real God?
- If so, what is His purpose in creating human beings?
- What is man? Is he Divine? Where have we come from? Where do we go when we die?
- What is the role for our Soul in this Earthly incarnation?
- Who is this "Christ"? Is he to be understood "literally" and "historically" or "mystically", "metaphorically", "mythically" and "metaphysically"? How did the ancients understand "the Christ" and has this consistent ancient understanding of "the Krst/Christ" change over time during the 2nd through the 5th century at the hands of Rome?

- What really lies behind our "Jesus Story" which can be found taught as far back as ancient Egypt over 7,000 years ago?
- Are our Christian Bibles accurate translations of the Hebrew Scriptures and reliable for the dogmas and doctrines taught from them today by our traditional Christianity?
- Have the manuscripts of our New Testaments been purposefully altered and changed over the centuries in order to "radically reinterpret" the earlier understandings of "God's Krst/Christ"?

Most people have just "accepted" the religion passed down through their families. Most have just "gone along" with the beliefs and the traditions taught to them as children. Noting the publics' lack of attention to their religion, Los Angeles Times religion writer Teresa Watanabe reported:

"According to one religious research firm, two-thirds of Americans don't regularly read the Bible or know the names of the Four Gospels. More than half of Americans surveyed can't name even five of the Ten Commandments. And the majority say they find the Good Book irrelevant.… 'We still hold the Bible in high regard, but in terms of actually spending the time reading it, studying it and applying it; that is a thing of the past,' said George Barna. The reasons cited range from changes in American culture to the intrinsic difficulty of the text itself. Now religious organizations are making a major effort to jazz up the ancient Scripture's doddering image. Bible publishers are producing a dizzying array of products, with translations and editions pitched to every conceivable niche market, to convince people that the book is neither arcane nor irrelevant" (Los Angeles Times, July 23, 1999).

In the comfortable surroundings of western civilization, most people fail to realize that the overwhelming majority of human beings on this planet have never believed in any form of "Christianity" let alone the "real Christianity of Christ" as expressed through Judaism in the first centuries. Instead, mankind has made its own religion that is almost completely different from what the Jewish Christ preached through first century Judaism. This different religion of today is ironically called by the same name, "Christianity", as if it were connected with the message and teachings expressed by the "Jewish Christ" through Judaism in the earliest centuries. It is not! As the philosopher and theologian Soren Kirkegaard put it:

"The Christianity of the New Testament simply does not exist…what has to be done is to throw light upon a criminal offense against Christianity prolonged through centuries, perpetrated by millions (more or less guiltily), whereby they have cunningly, under the guise of perfecting Christianity, sought little by little to cheat God out of Christianity and have succeeded in making Christianity exactly the opposite of what it is in the New Testament"* (S. Kirkegaard, Attack Upon Christendom, , 1956, pp. 32–33).

Those are strong words, but they are hardly unique. Professor Rufus M. Jones concurs, noting how Christ's true teachings were quickly detached from the religion bearing His name:

"If by any chance Christ Himself had been taken by His later followers as the model and pattern of the new way, and a serious attempt had been made to set up His life and teaching as the standard and norm for the Church, Christianity would have been something vastly different from what it became. Then 'heresy' would have been as it is not now, deviation from His way, His teaching, His spirit, His kingdom.… What we may properly call 'Galilean Christianity' had a short life, though there have been notable attempts to revive it and make it live again, and here and there spiritual prophets have insisted that anything else other than this simple Galilean religion is 'heresy'; but the main line of historic development has taken a different course and has marked the emphasis very differently"* (R. Jones, The Church's Debt to Heretics, Jones, 1924, pp. 15–16).

The key issue, then, is our desire and willingness to get back to the true Christian faith, "the faith which was once for all delivered to the saints" (Jude 3).

Answer for yourself: Are you willing to genuinely try to follow the Christianity of the true "Krst/Christ" and not the one of Rome's making?

Let us note carefully what the Gnostic Paul was inspired to write to the Thessalonians:

1Thes 2:14 14 For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judaea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews: (KJV)

Amazing! The book of Acts makes it clear that the earthly "headquarters" of the Church of God, for many decades, was the Jerusalem Church and not Rome. We hardly ever take notice of that.

Now for an amazing fact that is unknown to most Christians today. As renowned historian Edward Gibbon wrote: "The first fifteen bishops of Jerusalem were all circumcised Jews; and the congregation over which they presided united the law of Moses with the doctrine of Christ. It was natural that the primitive tradition of a church which was founded ... and was governed almost as many years under the immediate inspection of his apostle, should be received as the standard of orthodoxy. The distant churches very frequently appealed to the authority of their venerable Parent" (E. Gibbon, The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, chap. 15, sec. 1, p. 389). Here we see the "standard of orthodoxy" is to be found in Jerusalem and not Rome!

Clearly the original Apostles and the Jerusalem Church of God set the inspired "pattern" for true Christianity, not just for that time, but for all time! Contrary to the heretical Roman and Protestant ideas penned under the "Romanized Paul" to "reinvent" Christianity, the real Gnostic Paul of the Bible constantly showed deep respect for the Jerusalem congregation and deferred to the leadership at Jerusalem in all major matters! And it was Paul who wrote the primarily Gentile church at Corinth: "Circumcision is nothing and uncircumcision is nothing,but keeping the commandments of God is what matters" (1 Corinthians 7:19).

And all along we are taught in our Churches that Paul teaches a "lawless" religion based upon "Faith in Jesus" alone; not "the Faith of Jesus"! It appears not, or at least not until we get to the later "Romanized Paul" and later New Testament corruptions as the hands of monks that write as this "Romanized Paul". But keeping the commandments of God is hard in a Christian religions which prides itself on "not being under the Law but under grace" and that "Christ is the end of the Law". Keeping the commandments of God is not needed in a "Faith in Jesus"; only in "the Faith of Jesus". Again, what lies at the very heart of the dichotomy between the "Faith in Jesus" and "the Faith of Jesus" is the wholesale destruction and corruption of the Hebrew Scriptures as found in today's Christian Bible.

Modern day Christian doctrine rests upon the premise that God preserved the Bible in an absolute infallible and pure state, in order that all men should know the "literal" and "historical" truth concerning the New Testament and so believe in the "literal" and "historical" Son of God. Their doctrinal position is that if God permitted the Bible to have been altered, then the present day church could not be genuine. Based upon this dogmatic presumption that the Christian Church must be maintained in order for man to be saved, they reason that God would not allow the written word of the Scriptures to be corrupted. Thus, modern Christians cling to this doctrine all the while ignoring overwhelming evidence to the contrary; evidence that demonstrates conclusively that our Bible has been severely altered and edited. They stubbornly do so because they fail to grasp the very foundational principles of the New Covenant itself; principles that are not "historical", but Spiritual. It is not until we understand that the Bible is a road-map that leads us to the Gate of the Kingdom, and the Word that is written in our hearts, rather than a final revelation from God to man, that we are able to even begin to come to terms with the Spiritual Gospel of Christ that can never be corrupted.

The very assertion of Christian Church Authority that either the Church or the Scriptures must be preserved in order for man to obtain salvation not only demonstrates a total inability to perceive the essence of the Gospel message but perhaps more importantly, has already been historically disproven and demonstrated to be in error. Once the Church was adopted by Rome in the fourth century, it became unlawful for the Scriptures to be given into the hands of the common believer. Therefore, throughout most of Christian history the written text of the Scriptures was not available to the people. Furthermore, the Church itself became so Pagan and corrupt, that it was often referred to throughout history as the "synagogue of Satan" (Rev 2:9;3:9). Let us look at the following evidences that bears out this sorry state of affairs affecting the earliest Gentile Roman Church.

In a letter to Pope Leo X on September 6th, 1520, Martin Luther wrote of the Christianity of his day that the church, "…once the holiest of all, has become the most licentious den of thieves, the most shameless of all brothels, the kingdom of sin, death, and hell. It is so bad that even Antichrist himself, if he should come, could think of nothing to add to its wickedness" (George Seldes, The Great Thoughts).

Of this future ruler of the church, the Gnostic Paul writes:

2 Cor 11:13-15 13 For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. 14 And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. 15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works. (KJV)

Moreover, in view of the fact that Paul warns that the church would be soon guided by false apostles, some of whom were the very scribes who copied the biblical manuscripts we use to make our translations today, then for the sincere believer to blindly accept the position of the modern church that the Scriptures were preserved in a pure state, is merely asking to be deceived and misled. In our search today for Truth and Light, it is imperative that we recognize the warning in Paul's 7 authentic Epistles where we can clearly see that Paul predicts that counterfeit apostles and ministers would arise, and would control the church of this world which the masses of people will mistakenly believe is the genuine church of God.

The problem is that, regardless of how much evidence is shown to the majority of modern Christians, evidence which demonstrates conclusively that the New Testament Scriptures were severely altered by the Church of Rome, they will refuse to acknowledge the facts.

Answer for yourself: Why do Christians when confronted with such facts and evidence regarding their Bibles refuse to acknowledge the facts and turn their heads and minds away from such truth?

The answer is simple; because the majority of modern Christians are a disenfranchised people, severed from the presence of the indwelling Spirit which is given to the truly faithful disciples in order to teach them, and they are afraid to deviate from their present-day doctrine and church dogma which has assured them that they are "saved". But because the modern believer has been alienated from the very essence of the fundamentals of New Covenant teachings, they fear the Spiritual journey associated with the beginning of the walk in "The Way" of "the Christ" which opposes the "Roman Road of Salvation". The "indwelling Spirit of Truth", the "indwelling Christ-Mind" calls out to them but because they are anchored to this world by religious indoctrination and religious "brain-washing", pernicious religious false doctrines and traditions of men, they are afraid to actually dare to question their own faith fearful of loosing their salvation. Sadly it never dawns upon them that such a salvation, if shown to be built upon lies and untruth, is no salvation at all from a God of Truth.

When directly confronted with the overwhelming evidence and facts with respect to the wholesale corruption of the Christian Bible, the fundamentalist defensively responds with the rather absurd assertion that "God wrote the King James Version of the Bible". Thus, no amount of rationale will convince them that because we are the prodigal sons of our Heavenly Father, and the Kingdom is within us (Luke 17:21), that all those who truly live a consecrated life will be shown the undefiled Word of God that can be accessed by journeying along the narrow path that opens the "strait gate" that leads to the indwelling Temple (1 Cor 3:16). The great truth which the modern Christian fails to comprehend is that, even in its corrupted form, the Bible as it has been passed down to us is sufficient to manifest the Living Word of God in the life of the individual believer. One only has to open the New Testament to almost any page to find the simple message: If the believer consecrates their lives, becomes teachable by releasing their minds from an adherence to the doctrines of men, forgives and judges no one, lives a simple life that is unencumbered, does no harm to any of God's creatures, and seeks in solitude the companionship of the Lord in the inner Temple, the Holy Spirit will Anoint and Teach you all the Mysteries of God as you begin your journey home to the Kingdom of God. If the believer begins to live the consecrated Christian life, free of the thinking and entanglements of this world, then the indwelling Word will reveal all things to those who are sincere in their search for the Truth.

If it is true that the fourth century Roman Church severely altered the written word of the Scriptures, then it is absolutely necessary for the modern believer to search out the facts. Faith in the Word means that if we are a truly faithful people, that the Son of God will open our minds and enlighten us to the Truth. When we therefore ignore the facts, and blindly cling to the error of the corrupt church of Rome, then we inhibit the Lord from teaching us the truth.

Most Christians believe that our Scriptures were protected from being altered. But, contrary to our many assertions of denial, the historical evidence shows conclusively that this is not the case and that our Christian Bible no longer represents the original form of the text. Yet, it is only because the modern church no longer possesses the Spiritual essence and vision of the original Church that was established in the first century, that the corruption of our Scriptures creates a hindrance to the believer in our present time. Make no mistake about this; such alterations have affected "religious dogmas" as they have come down the corridors of history to you and me. The bottom line as I have found it in my exhaustive studies is that we no longer have "the Faith of Jesus"; rather we have bought into a "Faith in Jesus" and God's true salvation message to mankind and the very identity of "the Christ" has been altered beyond recognition in the process.

Let us continue our study in the next article in this series.

We continue from the first article in this series.

In the earlier article in this series we maintained that unlike what most Christians believe the truth of the matter is that our Christian Scriptures have been severely altered in "key" theological places. We shared with the reader that the historical evidence shows conclusively that our Christian Bible no longer represents the original form of the text. Make no mistake about this; such alterations have affected "religious dogmas" as they have come down the corridors of history to you and me. The bottom line as I have found it in my exhaustive studies is that we no longer have "the Faith of Jesus"; rather we have bought into a "Faith in Jesus" and God's true salvation message to mankind and the very identity of "the Christ" has been altered beyond recognition in the process. Let us examine what other "authorities" have to say about this in our "information age".

One of the most common biblical manuscripts used to make our modern English translations is known today as the Nestle Text. Yet it was Prof. Eberhard Nestle himself who warned us in his Einfhrung in die Textkritik des griechischen Testaments: "Learned men, so called Correctores were, following the church meeting at Nicea 325 AD, selected by the church authorities to scrutinize the sacred texts and rewrite them in order to correct their meaning in accordance with the views which the church had just sanctioned." This is bombshell that should rock the whole of the Christian world. Evidence today proves that the Church of Constantine endeavored to make the teachings of the New Covenant align harmoniously with fourth century Roman Pagan religious thought and culture. To ignore these facts with respect to the manner in which the corrupters of the Word recreated the message of the New Testament Scriptures in order to make it compatible to Roman Church Orthodox dogmas and doctrines, is to make oneself disingenuous to God and His "Christ" whom we proclaim to be faithful to.

The truth and the facts to the matter is very clearly expressed in the words of Prof. Bart D. Ehrman in his book, The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture, where he warns us that: "...theological disputes, specifically disputes over Christology (theology concerning the identity of 'the Christ'), prompted Christian scribes to alter the words of Scripture in order to make them more serviceable for the polemical task. Scribes modified their manuscripts to make them more patently 'orthodox' and less susceptible to 'abuse' by the opponents of orthodoxy". Let me remind you that antisemitic Roman Orthodoxy was bringing the text of the Bible into conformity with the doctrines and tenets of the Church of the Roman Emperor Constantine. To close our hearts and minds to the facts, and ignore the truth, is from a New Covenant perspective synonymous with relinquishing any claim whatsoever with respect to being a follower of Jesus.

With regard to the condition of the Bible we presently use Dr. Vincent Taylor, in his The Text Of The New Testament states: "The surviving Greek texts of the book of Acts are so radically different from each other, that it has been suggested that perhaps there were multiple versions written". He goes on to say: "The manuscripts of the New Testament preserve traces of two kinds of dogmatic alterations: those which involve the elimination or alteration of what was regarded as doctrinally unacceptable or inconvenient, and those which introduce into the Scriptures proof for a favorite theological tenet or practice".

Let us try to summarize Dr. Taylor's words above. What Dr. Taylor is stating is that, whatever religious teaching, message or doctrine that was taught through Judaism by the Jewish Christ which the Church of the Roman Empire did not agree with, there exists overwhelming evidence that the church forgers and corrupters removed what was objectionable from their Gentile antisemitic perspective. In like manner, whatever doctrines the Church regarded as being true, or what they wanted to do irrespective and or regardless of whether that belief or action was supported in the Hebrew Scriptures, the Roman Church inserted this belief into the Biblical manuscripts and writings in order to make it appear as it was the authentic teachings of the earliest disciples and Apostles of messianic Judaism and followers of the "Jewish Christ". That means we cannot without serious study of Judaism know for certain if what is taught in the New Testament is sanctioned and taught by the "mind of Christ". This is the reason why the Roman Church has been nicknamed "the Forgery Mill" down through history. What Dr. Taylor is warning us as well as the whole of Christendom is that there is good reason to conclude that our Sacred Scriptures and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom in them have been rewritten and altered doctrinally by the antisemitic Church of Constantine. I became aware of this problem regarding the corruption of our Christian Bible while doing outside reading while I was in Seminary and this is the reason why I spent the first 5 years of my Pastorate seriously studying Judaism in order to acquire "the mind of Christ" as expressed through "JUDEO-Christianity" and not "Roman Christianity" which I had seen was "theologically" rotten to the core. I came to see beyond any doubt that Rome has "radically reinterpreted" almost all of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and its Spiritual Science including the "identity" of "the Christ" and God's message to the Souls of mankind. Now the question that is being posed here is whether you will once seeing this type of evidence continue to believe the theological tenets of Rome, or turn your gaze toward Jerusalem and the Jewish Faith and recover "the Faith once given the Saints" of which we read in our New Testament. Simply said, "the Faith of Jesus" is not the same as "Faith in Jesus" with its "easy believeism". We will look at the two opposing "Gospel Messages" in a soon coming article where we contrast the "Gospel of Jesus" expressed in "the Faith of Jesus" against the "Gospel of the Romanized Paul" with its "Faith in Jesus" theology.

We need to focus for a second on John Mill, a name uncommon to most. John Mill, in 1676, became chaplain to the bishop of Oxford, and in 1681 he obtained the rectory of Bletchington, Oxfordshire, and was made chaplain to Charles II. From 1685 till his death he was principal of St Edmund Hall, Oxford; and in 1704 he was nominated by Queen Anne to a prebendal stall in Canterbury. He died a fortnight after the publication of his Greek New Testament. Mill's Greek New Testament edition is a major landmark in the history of textual criticism; in its margin he amassed a collection of more than 30,000 various readings, gathered from every source available to him over a period of thirty years. But in doing this in 1707 he shattered all faith in the infallibility of the Bible by demonstrating 30,000 various readings which were produced from 80 manuscripts. Mill noted over 30,000 various "major" to mostly "slight errors" between some 100 extant New Testament manuscripts. The findings of, first Mill, and then Wetstein (1751), proved once and for all that the variations in the biblical texts, many of which were quite serious, had existed from the earliest of times.

In the Preface to the Revised Standard Version of the bible this notable statement is made regarding the need for a revision of the English translation: "Yet the King James Version has grave defects... was based upon a Greek text that was marred by mistakes, containing the accumulated errors of fourteen centuries of manuscript copying. It was essentially the Greek text of the New Testament as edited by Beza, 1589, who closely followed that published by Erasmus, 1516-1535, which was based upon a few medieval manuscripts. The earliest and best of the eight manuscripts which Erasmus consulted was from the tenth century, and he made the least use of it because it differed most from the commonly received text; Beza had access to two manuscripts of great value dating from the fifth and sixth centuries, but he made very little use of them because they differed from the text published by Erasmus".

I hoped you noticed that the King James Version of our New Testament chose not to follow "the oldest" and "the best manuscripts" existing earlier from the 5th and 6th centuries because they differed "theologically" from the older texts from the 10th century; later manuscripts that reflect the progressive "Christology" and "theologies" as developed from further church councils down through history.

One of the oldest copies of the Bible which dates back to the fifth century which just happened to be mentioned above is the Codex Bezae, of which the Britannica writes: "Codex Bezae…has a text that is very different from other witnesses. Codex Bezae has many distinctive longer and shorter readings and seems almost to be a separate edition. Its 'Acts, for example, is one-tenth longer than usual'".

Answer for yourself: How is it that we can we have a Bible that is said to be "almost… a separate edition"? If this is true, it is important for us to know which edition is the correct one? And in answering this question, we must also must ask what criteria should we use in our effort to choose which of these separate editions we should use in our Bible translations?

The answer may shock you. The traditional answer to this question is very simple: "We choose the Biblical texts that support our current 'religious beliefs' and 'religious doctrines' of our current beliefs, and reject the texts that do not support them".

Answer for yourself: But how can we be sure that this is the means by which we are able to be certain that we have chosen the correct edition let alone "the Truth". Should we not look to the "oldest" and "more trustworthy" texts which most likely have had the least amount of "alteration", "tampering" and "correction? Should we not look to the origins of such "religious dogmas" in these texts and see how they were understood, believed, and interpreted by those who first gave them to the world in the first place and then and only then compare them line upon line, and precept upon precept, with what we have been taught to believe concerning them in our later texts? If seeing that our later Scriptures and texts present opposite or conflicting "beliefs" concerning these same ancient Spiritual Dogmas should we not ask ourselves "who" changed them, "when" then were changed, and "why" they were changed?

Regarding this serious problem presented by Codex Bezae, Dr. Vincent Taylor writes that: "It is characterized by a series of remarkable omissions in Luke, especially in chapters XXII and XXIV, and by many striking additions and variations in the Acts" (Dr. Vincent Taylor, The Text of the New Testament). Rightly interpreted his statement means that our later Gospel of Luke, as it reads in our Bibles today, has had "theology" added in places not found in the original Codex Bezae and that much of the Book of Acts, as it originally was written, has been removed from our current Book of Acts.

Answer for yourself: How would these "remarkable omissions" and "striking additions and variations" effect our current and traditional Christian doctrines of belief; especially in light of the fact that the book of Acts chronicles the emergence of the Gentile Church? Could it be that the Jewishness of the early Gentile Church have been removed from the Book of Acts in keeping with Rome's antisemitism?

We really cannot say for sure, because we only translate what supports church doctrine and agrees with what we want to believe. From a biblical perspective, this is not only Spiritually dishonest, but could well be detrimental to our Spiritual well-being! History records for us that the non-Jewish "believers" in Christ kept the Biblical Festivals up until the 5th century but our experience as Christians today is almost totally devoid of such an experience let alone the instruction that lays behind each one of these Biblical Festivals as it relates to the Spiritual evolution of man's Soul. Christians who desire truth over error will want to know when the problem of Scriptural alteration began. Let us not forget that we are warned by Paul that after his death such deceptions will begin and that was around 60 A.D. So we see the corruption of the oral traditions and the 7 authentic Pauline Epistles begins early and today we have Paul as the supposed writer of 2/3 of the whole of the New Testament. This has been called today "Monk work"!

Something which no sincere believer today should take lightly is the charge against Christians by Celsus, the second century Epicurean philosopher. Celsus was a Greek philosopher and opponent of Christianity. In his writings Celsus alleged that: "Certain Christians, like men who are overcome by the fumes of wine and care not in the least what they say, alter the original text of the Gospels so that they admit of various and almost indefinite readings. And this, I suppose, they have done out of worldly policy, so that when we press an argument home, they might have the more scope for their pitiful evasions". To which allegation the third century Church Father Origen replied: "Besides, it is not at all fair to bring this charge against the Christian religion as a crime unworthy of its pretended purity; only those persons who were concerned in the fraud should, in equity, be held answerable for it" (Origen, Contra Celsus). Here we have the testimony of not only an opponent of Christianity but another great early Church Father to the "fraud" of the New Testament!

What we see is that the words of Origen, which were composed in the third century when he was commissioned by the church to answer the allegations of Celsus that were written in the second century, is an acknowledgment that there: "are some who corrupt the Gospel histories, and who introduce heresies opposed to the meaning of the doctrine of Jesus". This clearly states that "the mind of Christ" is being changed by various opposing antisemitic theologies created by the early Gentile Roman Church. No wonder we find Constantine changing the Sabbath to Sunday and doing away with the Biblical Festivals for the Christian Church. No wonder we find in the Book of Acts the Greek word for "Passover" being changed to "Easter" when the same word is translated correctly as "Passover" all the way through the New Testament in other places. God forbid that the Gentiles come to know that in ancient Egyptians who were Gentiles were keeping the Passover thousands of years before Moses. Evidently there is a Spiritual message in the Passover that eclipses what we thought only involved the Exodus thousands of years later with Moses. God forbid that the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and God's message to mankind and his Soul be taught to the Gentiles through Biblical Judaism instead of Rome. In this statement we can thus readily see that Origen not only admits to the alteration of the New Testament Scriptures, but alerts us to the fact the antisemitic alterations were made to the earliest New Testament texts purely for doctrinal reasons. This is a fact, and that many of these heresies that have been introduced into the New Testament texts of our Bibles are intended to oppose the genuine "doctrine of Jesus"; a doctrine I must remind the reader that was taught through the Jewish culture and religion and expressed through the "Jewish Mind of the Christ". Further, Origen's reply also verifies that this wholesale corruption of the Scriptures took place as early as the second century when Celsus originally made this allegation against the Church.

Answer for yourself: And what was it that Celsus alleged? That the Christian Scriptures "admit of various and almost indefinite readings" because "the original text of the Gospels" has been altered to coincide and substantiate the doctrines of the Gentile converts in an attempt to prove their tenets of belief and limit salvation of man's Soul solely through the doors of the Roman Church.

Let us regress for just a second and be read for a real "shocker". Among the Spiritual Mysteries that was concealed from the masses who were too carnal to receive the deeper truths of Christianity, was the doctrine of the pre-existence of the Soul. Again, in his writing known as The True Word, Celsus accused Christianity of teaching the masses the spurious doctrine of heaven and hell in an after death state, while teaching the elect the doctrine of reincarnation. Though this may astonish the modern believer, Origen does not refute Celsus, but rather explains that: "But on these subjects much and that of a mystical kind, might be said; in keeping with which is the following: It is good to keep close the secret of a king, (Tobit xii, 7), in order that the doctrine of the entrance of souls into bodies, not, however, that of the transmigration from one body into another, may not be thrown before the common understanding, nor what is holy given to the dogs, nor pearls be cast before swine. For such a procedure would be impious, being equivalent to a betrayal of the mysterious declaration of God's Wisdom". Notice please that Origen says: "It is good to keep secret the entrance of souls into bodies", Origen writes, but "not… the transmigration from one body into another". In other words, Origen openly acknowledges that the pre-existence of the Soul, as well as the doctrine of reincarnation are openly revealed to Christians who have been purified and matured sufficiently to comprehend the mysteries of God, while the knowledge of why the Soul even came into this world is kept secret, and is not openly revealed to carnal minds. In explanation, Origen quotes Scripture and writes that "It is good to keep close the secret of a king", and affirms that certain mysteries only belong to the spiritually mature in the word that one should not permit "what is holy given to the dogs, nor pearls be cast before swine". Origen, an early Church Father, is speaking of reincarnation. This only should make you wonder what other wonderful mysteries of the Spirit and God have been kept from you that was taught in the ancient Spiritual Mysteries that once abounded in Christianity before the rise of Rome.

Now let us consider Tyrannius Rufinus or Rufinus of Aquileia (between 340 and 345–410) who was a monk, historian, and theologian. He is most known as a translator of Greek Patristic material into Latin; especially the work of Origen. Quoting from The Apology Of Rufinus, we find: "Origen pointed out by certain marks of his own, namely, the signs of asterisks and obeli, which words had been, so to speak, killed by other translators, and those which had been superfluously introduced. But he put in no single word of his own, nor did he make it appear that the certainty of our copies was in any point shaken; but those things which, as the actual words run, seemed wanting in plainness and clearness, he showed to be full of the mysteries of a Spiritual meaning. What comfort then can the conduct of Origen give you in this matter, when your work is shown to be quite unlike his, and when all your labor is spent upon making one letter kill the next, whereas his endeavor, on the contrary, is to vindicate the Spirit which giveth life?" Rufinus tells it like it is and my studies have confirmed exactly what he says in the late 4th century. It appears that these alterations, additions, and deletions of words and religious dogmas from our New Testaments have contributed to the stripping of the Metaphysical and Spiritual from our New Testaments and in its place the "literal" and "historical" have been sadly introduced in place of them. This "substitution" of perspectives and "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom by Rome's forgers as they altered the Sacred Texts finds its genesis in Rome's desire to "literalize" and "limit" God's Christ to but one person whose only access and salvation of mankind could be found through the doors of Rome and the Vatican. Here, at the very core of Rome's "Christology" we find the need of Rome to alter the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the ancients in such a way that the "Spiritual" and "Metaphysical" was reshapended into a supposed "literal" and "historical" understanding and interpretation of "the Christ". Forgery of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom was not an option is such a dastardly destruction of ancient Spiritual Truth was to ever succeed. The only thing that Rome needed next was to do three things:

- Burn the known libraries of the world to conceal their treachery, distortion, and "radical reinterpretation" of the Divine Spiritual Wisdom and Mysteries of God,
- Forge a false theology that "literalized", "historicized" and "limited" God's Christ to but one person the access to whom was only through the doors of the Roman Church,
- Persecute Gnostic dissenters and in so doing murder an estimated 18 million people during the Dark Ages who refused to bow to a "false gospel" concerning "Rome's Christ".

Our focus again returns to the texts and we pick up with Jerome's Latin translation of the Bible called the Vulgate. Speaking of the altered text in Jerome's Vulgate, Rufinus then writes: "Last of all I have shown that be has altered the sacred books which the Apostles had committed to the churches as the trustworthy deposit of the Holy Spirit, and that he who calls out about the audacity shewn in translating mere human works himself commits the greater crime of subverting the divine oracles." And Rufinus then adds: "The causes of these discrepancies I have more fully set forth in the Apology which Pamphilus expressly wrote for the works of Origen, to which I added a very short paper in which I shewed by proofs which appear to me quite clear, that his books have been in very many places tampered with by heretics and ill disposed men..." Ironically these "heretics" so referred to are the Orthodox Christians themselves!

Answer for yourself: How can we claim today that our Bibles accurately portray what the Lord spoke, when in the second century and beyond it was continually alleged that our Scriptures "admit of various and almost indefinite readings"? Thus we must ask ourselves: On what basis do we choose which reading we will put in our Bibles, and which we will ignore?

Again, the answer is simple: We choose the readings that say what we want to hear. The problem is that there is strong evidence to support the position that many of the most important original passages of Scripture have been so cleansed from all the surviving Greek Manuscripts, that they no longer exist in the texts we use to make our modern-day translations.

The fact that the very people who copied the Scriptures often altered the original words and meaning in accordance with their own current beliefs is confirmed by St. Jerome when he wrote: "They write down not what they find but what they think is the meaning; and while they attempt to rectify the errors of others, they merely expose their own" (Jerome, Epist. lxxi.5). Thus, each copy was edited to clarify the beliefs of the copyist. Each scribe who copied the manuscripts and found something he did not agree with, viewed the offending verse of Scripture as an error of the previous copyist.

Under the title Versions of the Scriptures, The New Unger's Bible Dictionary states that: "Jerome had not been long in Rome (A.D. 383) when Damasus asked him to make a revision of the current Latin version of the New Testament with the help of the Greek original. 'There were,' he says, 'almost as many forms of text as copies.' The gospels had naturally suffered most. Jerome therefore applied himself to these first. But his aim was to revise the Old Latin and not to make a new version. Yet, although he had this limited objective, the various forms of corruption that had been introduced were, as he describes them, so numerous that the difference of the old and revised (Hieronymian) text is clear and striking throughout. Some of the changes Jerome introduced were made purely on linguistic grounds, but it is impossible to ascertain on what principle he proceeded in this respect. Others involved questions of interpretation. But the greater number consisted in the removal of the interpolations by which especially the synoptic gospels were disfigured".

It is true that many interpolations were inserted into the Scriptures by men who attempted to prove the validity of their beliefs. The problem was that many genuine passages of text were removed because they did not conform to the beliefs of the Roman Church and what was considered an interpolation, were in many instances the most important passages of the original Scriptures from the position of a Spiritual Church vs an Institutionalized one.

What we fail to realize today is that during this period, every single document was edited and revised to confirm the doctrine of the Roman Church. The noted Church Historian Eusebius quotes the Church Father Dionysius (Hist. Eccl., Bk. 4. 23), who reports that his own epistles had been tampered with: "When my fellow Christians invited me to write letters to them I did so. These the devil's apostles have filled with tares, taking away some things and adding others. For them the woe is reserved. Small wonder then if some have dared to tamper even with the word of the Lord Himself, when they have conspired to mutilate my own humble efforts".

Eusebius writes of a number of sects of Christians of his day: "Therefore they have laid their hands boldly upon the Divine Scriptures, alleging that they have corrected them. That I am not speaking falsely of them in this matter, whoever wishes may learn. For if any one will collect their respective copies, and compare them one with another, he will find that they differ greatly. Those of Asclepiades, for example, do not agree with those of Theodotus. And many of these can be obtained, because their disciples have assiduously written the corrections, as they call them, that is the corruptions, of each of them. Again, those of Hermophilus do not agree with these, and those of Apollonides are not consistent with themselves. For you can compare those prepared by them at an earlier date with those which they corrupted later, and you will find them widely different. But how daring this offense is, it is not likely that they themselves are ignorant. For either they do not believe that the Divine Scriptures were spoken by the Holy Spirit, and thus are unbelievers, or else they think themselves wiser than the Holy Spirit, and in that case what else are they than demoniacs? For they cannot deny the commission of the crime, since the copies have been written by their own hands. For they did not receive such Scriptures from their instructors, nor can they produce any copies from which they were transcribed". Here before us we see clearly that "theological agenda" are at play in copying and production of the New Testament. But here is hope.

"For you can compare those prepared by them at an earlier date with those which they corrupted later, and you will find them widely different".

Any serious Christian can today go to the earliest historical sources for these Scriptures and examine them in their "pre-forged" states. We can examine these earlier "pre-forged" Spiritual dogmas and doctrines of the ancients which were held sacred by the ancient Spiritual Masters for thousands and thousands of years. We can trace them being passed down through the corridors of time basically unchanged from nation to nation. We can follow a chain of integrity of transmission from nation to nation as the Metaphysical ideas and dogmas of Spirit are handed down from generation to generation, from religion to religion, until we find their ultimate desecration and "reinterpretation" by the hands of Rome during the 2nd through the 5th centuries. It is here with Rome that we find these ancient Spiritual teachings regarding God and His "Krst/Christ" so terribly mutated and sadly reproduced altered, adulterated, misinterpreted, and mischaracterized in our Christian Bibles today by Rome's "demoniacs" (quoting Eusebius).

Writing about the text of the Bible in his day, St. Augustine wrote: "For those who are anxious to know the Scriptures ought in the first place to use their skill in the correction of the texts, so that the uncorrected ones should give way to the corrected" (De Doctrina Christ., II. 14). With regard to the sect of the Manicheans who refused to accept the doctrine of original sin, Augustine wrote: "Which argument must be regarded as against the Manicheans, who do not receive the holy Scriptures of the Old Testament, in which original sin is narrated; and whatever thence is read in the apostolic epistles, they contend was introduced with a detestable impudence by the corrupters of the Scriptures". This truly is a strange statement given the fact that Judaism, who was given and entrusted with the Old Testament, never taught the doctrine of "original sin" nor her Rabbis ever found one in the Hebrew Scriptures when they properly interpreted. Thus, every group and every sect accused the others of corrupting the Scriptures with interpolations to prove their own particular brand and flavor of beliefs.

Irenaeus said of those he called heretics that they "certainly recognize the Scriptures; but they pervert the interpretations" (Adv. Haer. III.12). These perversions often rested on a corrupt biblical text. Tertullian attributes the intentional contaminations of the text to the heretics when he wrote "Now, inasmuch as all interpolation must believed to be a later process… One man perverts the Scriptures with his hand, another their meaning by his exposition… (De Praescript. 38).

Fraudulent Scriptures and epistles were so rampant in the early church, that no two copies were the same. This fact is especially seen in the Introduction to Ignatius in the Anti-Nicean Library where it reads: "There are, in all, fifteen Epistles which bear the name of Ignatius. These are the following: One to the Virgin Mary, two to the Apostle John, one to Mary of Cassobelae, one to the Tarsians, one to the Antiochians, one to Hero, a deacon of Antioch, one to the Philippians; one to the Ephesians, one to the Magnesians, one to the Trallians, one to the Romans, one to the Philadelphians, one to the Smyrnaeans, and one to Polycarp. The first three exist only in Latin: all the rest are extant also in Greek. It is now the universal opinion of critics, that the first eight of these professedly Ignatian letters are spurious. They bear in themselves indubitable proofs of being the production of a later age than that in which Ignatius lived. Neither Eusebius nor Jerome makes the least reference to them; and they are now by common consent set aside as forgeries, which were at various dates, and to serve special purposes, put forth under the name of the celebrated Bishop of Antioch".

With regard to those epistles which are acknowledged as the genuine writings of Ignatius, even among this group there are numerous intentional additions and interpolations that were introduced into the text to make them support the doctrine of the later Church of the Roman Empire. With regard to the variations in the readings, the Introduction to Ignatius in the Anti-Nicean Library states: "But after the question has been thus simplified, it still remains sufficiently complex. Of the seven Epistles which are acknowledge by Eusebius (Hist. Eccl., iii. 36), we possess two Greek recensions, a shorter and a longer. It is plain that one or other of these exhibits a corrupt text, and scholars have for the most part agreed to accept the shorter form as representing the genuine letters of Ignatius. This was the opinion generally acquiesced in, from the time when critical editions of these Epistles began to be issued, down to our own day. Criticism, indeed, fluctuated a good deal as to which Epistles should be accepted and which rejected. Archp. Usher (1644), Isaac Vossius (1646), J. B. Cotelerius (1672), Dr. T. Smith (1709), and others, edited the writings ascribed to Ignatius in forms differing very considerably as to the order in which they were arranged, and the degree of authority assigned them, until at length, from about the beginning of the eighteenth century, the seven Greek Epistles, of which a translation is here given, came to be generally accepted in their shorter form as the genuine writings of Ignatius".

Under the heading of Apostolic Fathers - Ignatius, the 1968 edition of the Britannica states: "In the 4th century (or perhaps later) his letters suffered interpolation, and six more were added by someone who found Ignatian theology hard to reconcile with the conclusions of the council of Nicaea (or of Chalcedon)".

The Council of Nicaea was convened by the Emperor Constantine, and was called for the express purpose of requiring all Christians throughout the empire to adhere to the doctrine of the Trinity -- which doctrine was founded upon the writings of Plato and is the doctrine later expressed that equates Jesus, the Father and Holy Spirit as all one and the same being. We know today that interpolations were added to most of the early Christian writings to find support for this doctrine that had always been part of the Pagan world.

As just one example of an interpolation to support the doctrine of the Trinity, Ignatius writes in the shorter version: "For if I be truly found [a Christian], I may also be called one, and be then deemed faithful, when I shall no longer appear to the world. Nothing visible is eternal. 'For the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal'". To this text which is taken from the shorter version, the longer version of Ignatius adds: "For our God, Jesus Christ, now that He is with the Father, is all the more revealed [in His glory]". The Church of the Roman Empire then used these interpolations in an attempt to bring their favorite doctrines which were of a Pagan origin into the new synthesized religion inaugurated by the Emperor Constantine.

Answer for yourself: It is one thing to forge Scripture, but why were later these epistles from Church Fathers corrupted? Ignatius was a first century Christian. If the Roman Church could demonstrate that Ignatius believed that Jesus was "literally" and "historically" God incarnated in the flesh, then the majority of Gnostic Christians at that time who held opposite and dissenting opinions and beliefs about "the Christ" could more readily be silenced.

In the endeavor to recreate New Covenant teachings as a secular institution -- an anti-Gnostic redemptive religion with its focus on the control of the masses -- many essential elements of the spiritual essence of the scriptures had to be modified and changed. There is nothing in the original Gospels that would affirm the opinion that Jesus had any great respect for secular authorities. Jesus viewed the governments of this world as being empowered by Satan. Therefore, in order to make Christianity compatible with the secular environment of Rome, certain additions to the scriptures were intended to bring the more radical anti-secular elements of the religion under control by the use of biblical edicts to obey the government. These numerous interpolations are found throughout the epistles, and can often be easily detected, as is the case in 1 Peter 2: 19-20:

(19) For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. (20) For what glory is it if, when ye are buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? But if, when ye do well and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God"

Verses 13-14 and 17-18, which instruct the reader to submit themselves to the ordinances of man and honor the kings and governors was put there to exert political and social control over the people by the secular authorities of the Roman Empire. This type of interpolation is easily seen in the Epistles of Ignatius.

In addition to the concept of submission to the king, emperor, or more appropriately, any government official, we also see the addition of the doctrine of hell connected to failure to obey the Bishop in Ignatius' Epistle to the Philadelphians, ch. 4: "In Hades there is no one who can confess his sins". This doctrine was of the utmost importance to the Roman Institutionalized Church because the doctrine of hell was a necessary foundational concept which was then used to control the masses and bringing them into subjection to the secular authorities.

Moving on to other early church writers, under the heading of Apostolic Fathers let us look at Polycarp. When looking up Polycarp in the Encyclopedia Britannica we find: "These apparent contradictions have led many scholars to suppose that they are two letters rather than one. It is also possible, though uncertain, that like Ignatius' letters, that of Polycarp has undergone later revision. The Monophysites, who were quite careful in citing authorities, provided quotations from Polycarp that do not exactly correspond with the existing text (much of which is available in a late Latin translation)". Quoting from the Introduction to Polycarp in the Anti-Nicean Library: "That this Epistle has been interpolated can hardly be doubted, when we compare it with the unvarnished specimen, in Eusebius... A great part of it has been engrossed by Eusebius in his Ecclesiastical History (iv. 15); and it is instructive to observe, that some of the most startling miraculous phenomena recorded in the text as it now stands, have no place in the narrative as given by that early historian of the Church".

Under Clementine Literature, the Britannica states that "It became the starting point of the most momentous and gigantic of medieval forgeries, the Isidorian Decretals', where it stands at the head of the pontifical letters, extended to more than twice its original length. This extension perhaps occurred during the 5th century".

In his book, Introduction to the New Testament, B.W. Bacon wrote: "The Christian can only mitigate the disrespect he feels for plagiarists and impostors by the reflection that the conscience of the second century had practically no recognition for those literary crimes, rampant as they then were in the Church" (p. 168). Yet it is the product of these "literary crimes" that believers put their faith in when they read their Bibles today!

In his Introduction to the Criticism of the New Testament, by Dr. F. H. Scrivener, he writes that: "In the second century we have seen too many instances of attempts to tamper with the text of Scripture, some merely injudicious, others positively dishonest". Scrivener states that "it is no less true to fact than paradoxical in sound, that the worst corruptions to which the New Testament has ever been subjected, originated within 100 years after it was composed: and that Irenaeus and the African Fathers, and the whole Western, with a portion of the Syrian Church" used inferior manuscripts.

Regarding the Codex Vaticanus (4th Century) he writes: "One marked feature is the great number of omissions which induced Dr. Dobbin to speak of it as an abbreviated text of the New Testament. He calculates that whole words or clauses are left out no less than 2556 times" (Scrivener, Page 120, Volume I).

In his book The Revision Revised, Dean Burgon asks "Ought it not sensibly to detract from our opinion of the value of their evidence, (Codex B and Codex Aleph) to discover that it is easier to find two consecutive verses in which the two manuscripts differ, the one from the other, than two consecutive verses in which they entirely agree? …On every such occasion only one of them can possibly be speaking the truth. Shall I be thought unreasonable if I confess that these perpetual inconsistencies, between Codd B and Aleph -- grave inconsistencies and occasionally even gross ones -- altogether destroy my confidence in either?"

With regard to the textual problems of the King James Version, Dr. Tischendorf writes: "…this text (the Received Text) differs in many places from the oldest authorities of the 4th, 5th and 6th centuries, and, therefore, must be replaced by a text which is really drawn from the oldest sources discoverable. The difficulty of finding such a text lies in this that there is a great diversity among these texts" (Dr. C. Tischendorf, Codex Sinaiticus; p. 85).

Dean John W. Burgon is cited by Dr. David O. Fuller in his book Which Bible?, when he wrote in reference to Codexes B, Aleph, D, and L: "I insist and am prepared to prove that the text of these two Codexes (B and Aleph) is very nearly the foulest in existence" (Pp. 126-127); and "That they exhibit fabricated texts is demonstratable… B and Aleph are covered all over with blots -- Aleph even more than B.... We suspect that these two manuscripts are indebted for their preservation, solely to their ascertained evil character" (Pg. 93, 128). Burgon then goes on further and states: "No amount of honest copying -- persevered in for any number of centuries -- could possibility have resulted in two such documents" (Pg. 93).

Answer for yourself: How can a copy of the Scriptures be said to be preserved "solely to their ascertained evil character"? What could have possibly been in them to elicit such a response? If biblical scholars Wescott and Hort are correct in their conclusion that the "original texts are forever lost" -- and all the remaining texts have been preserved solely because of their evil character, while the texts that more faithfully preserved the purity of the Gospel have all been destroyed because they did not agree with the later evolving theological doctrines of the Roman Church, then what was so objectionable in them to warrant such comments? What could these earlier copies of the New Testament contain that Rome so hated that they had to be destroyed and effaced let alone so ridiculed! Could these be parts of the Gnostic First New Testament so hated by Rome because they taught other than a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of "the Christ"? How much more important in the light of these quotes are the archeological finds of the Nag Hammadi Library in recovering the truth about the religious climate and religious beliefs concerning "the Christ" as they existed in first century Israel and Mystical Judaism? Could such remarks stem from what they taught about a Gnostic Christ and not about a "literal" and "historical Christ"?

Answer for yourself: In light of what we have seen regarding the continual corruption of the New Testament over the centuries, then how much more important are these Gnostic Library finds that laid buried under sand and away from the corrupting hands of mankind for 2,000 years which were only found 60 years ago? How important are these finds to us today in revealing to us how the earliest centuries both viewed and believed concerning "the Christ" when compared to the later "literal" and "historical" accounts of "the Christ" which we have received in our evidently forged anti-Gnostic and anti-Semitic Bibles given us by Rome?

Answer for yourself: Moreover, what is in the text that would cause a biblical scholar to call the copy "depraved"? Are they depraved, or is it possible that are these passages are just contrary to later accepted Roman Church doctrine? These are important questions that faithful believers should be asking. Do these Caudexes really contain "fabricated texts", or are they said to be fabricated and depraved simply because they fail to support modern Christian beliefs and dogma?

In the Hibbert Journal (1902), Conybeare writes: "These facts speak for themselves. Our Greek texts, not only of the Gospels, but of the Epistles as well, have been revised and interpolated by orthodox copyists. We can trace their perversions of the text in a few cases, with the aid of Patristic citations and ancient versions. But there must remain many passages which have been so corrected, but where we cannot today expose the fraud". With regard to the assertion of those many scholars who claim that the New Testament has not been interpolated to support what is known as orthodox doctrines, Conybeare goes on to write: "This is just the opposite of the truth, and such distinguished scholars as Alfred Loisy, K. Wellhausen, Eberhard Nestle, Adolf Harnack, to mention only four names, do not scruple to recognize the fact". The fact that Conybeare speaks of is that the text of the New Testament has been severely altered and revised by the so-called orthodox church of the past.

In the publication, The Fraternal Visitor, this assessment was made concerning the falsification of the Scriptures: "Codex B (Vaticanus) would be the best of all existing MSS, …if it were completely preserved, less damaged, (less) corrected, more easily legible, and not altered by a later hand in more than two thousand places. Eusebius, therefore, is not without grounds for accusing the adherents of Athanasius and the newly-risen doctrine of the trinity of falsifying the Bible even more than once" (Fraternal Visitor 1924, p. 148; translated from Christadelphian Monatshefte).

Under the title of Bible in the Church, the Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics writes: "In the first two centuries nearly all the various readings of the New Testament came into existence, the majority of them by deliberate alteration of the text, many for the sake of style, and several in the interests of dogma… Often readings were rejected as falsifications of heretics, but often the heretics were right in their counter-complaint… Every province, every order, every monastery, has a tradition of its own…"

In closing it needs be said that every Christian today who desires to know the Mysteries of God should be alarmed by the fact that his New Testament has been altered for theological purposes hundreds if not thousands of times. From a doctrinal standpoint with regard to the manner we must live in order to approach the alter of the Lord, one's adherence to much of what is written in our New Testament is an obstruction that inhibits the modern church from embracing the Spiritual essence of what the Jewish Christ actually taught let alone his true Identity. Nowhere in the New Testament does the text even hint that Jesus is to be worshiped in any other manner than as a pattern for each of us to imitate. Let me say as my last word in this series of articles that you will be shocked at what you find when you begin to look at what the "Christ" has taught since the beginning of time about God and what we have been told by Roman Catholicism which was presented as "the truth" down through history. It will take courage to do such study but let me close in saying that God never gave us a lie and any recovery of truth brings us that much closer to God; the God of truth. Shalom.

PROHIBITION AGAINST ADDING TO OR SUBTRACTING FROM THE WORD OF GOD; A TEST OF YOUR LOVE FOR GOD?

Deut 4:2 2 Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you. (KJV)

Deut 12:32 32 What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it. (KJV)

Now for a real shocker:

Deut 13:1-3 1 If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder, 2 And the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them; 3 Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the LORD your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul. (KJV)

It is a fact that the Hebrew Scriptures have been purposefully forged, misquoted, mistranslated, and lifted grossly out of context for various theological agendas down through the years by the apostate Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt as well as the Roman Christian Church. As a Christian Pastor I was devastated when I first learned of this through my years of detailed and concentrated study both while in Seminary and then later during my pastorate. Sadly few if any contemporary Christians are aware of this problem. Quickly, the bottom line in all of this is that we as Christians in the Western Hemisphere accept, buy, and cherish a Bible that is terribly unfaithful to what the true Hebrew Scriptures say. That simply means that many of the religious beliefs we accept and cherish today as taught by our Christianity, even many theological dogmas concerning our "Jesus Story" and especially the Christology built around him are untrustworthy and often lead to the grossest idolatry as defined by the Jewish Scriptures. Sadly, few Christians know it, having never done the studies into the textual reliability of their Bibles. The harsh reality is that millions, even billions will move on to meet their Creator with hidden idolatry in their lives because of the falsification of the Hebrew Scriptures and the hundreds of misquotes of them in our New Testaments. All along God has allows this corruption of Sacred Scripture to happen in order to see if you and I LOVE HIM ENOUGH WITH ALL OUR SOUL AND HEART to seek Him in Spirit and in Truth!

This is a matter of love as I see it; loving God enough in order to draw so close to Him that He reveals these things to you. I was a man of unclean lips as a traditional "pew-setting" Christian mouthing what I was taught to "believe" but once dedicating my life to God to seek Him with all my heart then the Bible became for me serious study. In was then, and only then did I begin to awaken to see these tragic falsifications of the Bible and eventually I came to a point that I could no longer continue my Pastorate and resigned; now knowing the truth for myself. It was time to tell others and I have dedicated the last fifteen years to such a glorious attempt: to help all return to the true faith once given the saints.

Answer for yourself: Is this falsification of the Sacred Scriptures by the ancient Essenes and the early emerging antisemitic and anti-Gnostic Roman Christian Church during the 2nd through the 5th century fair? Who knows? Yet it has happened. Thus the dedication of myself as an ex-Pastor who discovered this horrible deception and my years of dedicated study in hopes of helping others love God in Spirit and in Truth. I find this is much harder than you might think; especially in light of the fact that our religious documents and texts as Christians are forged in "key" places where Jesus is made into God and where the religious belief system of this "Jewish Christ", as expressed through Biblical Judaism, has been tragically altered by the antisemitic and anti-Gnostic redactors of the New Testament.

I would hope that once you see such purposeful forgeries of the Hebrew Scriptures as you study with Bet Emet that you would align yourself on God's side and righteous indignation arise in your heart because of what has been done to Jesus' Bible and the faith that God intended that you and I have; which sadly we don't possess or even come to be aware of if we never study hard enough to find these issues dealing with the corruption of our Bibles. Again, it is a matter of love for God and He is testing us daily to see if we will draw close to Him in ways where He can show us the error of our ways. Often people would come to me as a Pastor and say: "I know something is wrong Pastor Craig; I just cannot put my finger on it." Sound familiar? Well with the grace of God and persistent effort in seeing both His face and His Truth we believe at Bet Emet that we have found the very crux of the problem: a forged Christian Old and New Testament that has not only tragically misrepresented the "Jewish Christ" and his religious belief system as taught through Biblical Judaism that once went into all the world as seen in Acts 16 but our sad state as ignorant idolators because we have accepted every word of our Christian Bibles never wondering for one second if anything could be wrong with its texts or their translations. It is time to repent of such foolishness.

Yahweh's Word and Commandments are everlasting and eternal. To ensure that His laws were obeyed the teachers and sages of Israel often built "fences" around each commandment in order to guard against the accidental or possible infringement of biblical laws. The "Jewish Christ" himself taught with "fences" in the Gospels ("but I say unto you" phrases are but one example). The Hebrew Scriptures (Torah) itself gives the power to Jewish leaders to issue such rules (as teaching "fences") in Deut. 17:9-11 and expressly mentions that they are enforceable by sanctions. Let us understand that in doing so the Rabbis never claimed their "fences" or "edicts" (such as introduction of the celebrations of the festivals or Hanukkah or Purim") had the same status as that of the original Laws of the Pentateuch and Torah. Such "fences" protected the people from sinning by imposing limits of conduct and behavior, that when obeyed, would ensure they would not break Yahweh's laws and sin, either accidentally or intentionally.

There is the constant danger that one may add some innovation which constitutes a form of worship that is foreign to Yahweh's revelation and laws. Such brings Yahweh's holy laws down to man's level, the sacred thus becomes secular, and instead of obeying and worshipping the Father in Spirit and Truth we, who follow such "replacement theology", innocently and ignorantly enter into idolatry and sin. This is why we are forbidden to add to the mitzvot (commandments and the Word of Yahweh). Let us never forget that Yahweh is perfect, and His Torah, is "God-breathed" and perfect. If we add or subtract from His Holy Word in effect we are challenging the perfection of the LORD. I truly believe the LORD desires we see and believe His revelation (the Torah) as being permanently valid and perfect, and man's "tinkering" to alter this ancient Divine Revelation for selfish motives destroys such perfection.

If additions and omissions were permitted, it is conceivable that the Torah would become an object for debate and controversy. But what we fear might happen has surely happened. Today, modern scholarship attests to us that without a doubt such additions and omissions to these Sacred Texts have occurred by the thousands. Included in them are a host of problems ranging from purposeful misquotations and mistranslations of the Jewish Scriptures, verses lifted out of their original context with the intent of changing the "original" revelation and meaning given to them as taught through the Jewish Faith, and even the unbelievable creation out of this air of Scriptures which are so often alluded in the New Testament as being "fulfilled". This is the sad legacy we never hear and which he have inherited left us by the Essenes and the later Roman Church. The magnitude of the problem is overwhelming when one studies to the point to see for himself these glaring errors in the Christian's "religious documents." Over 6000 New Testament manuscripts have been discovered and no "two" agree identically. Often they contain marginal "additions" which find themselves incorporated into the "inspired" text in subsequent copies. To the unlearned Christian, many of these marginal additions were the interpretations of the "monks" and their "interpretations" and "theologies" are found to be later no longer scribbled in the corners of the ancient manuscripts, but now we find them incorporated into the texts as if they were penned by the original writers of these Sacred documents when first created and written! Thus we create religious belief systems and religious dogmas and doctrines that often contradict the previous writings and revelations that Yahweh had given to His holy prophets! Such marginal additions have become "church doctrines" today; often much of it "required" for one to be "saved". This violates the Spirit of the Truth as well as the Hebrew Scriptures which are Eternal. This cannot be tolerated if the Torah is to constitute the only supreme authority by which the child of God must live.

Let us never forget when Paul penned "all Scripture is given by the inspiration of God, better understood as "God-breathed". But few stop long enough to think that at this time no Gospels had been written yet and most of his own 7 authentic Epistles were yet on the drawing board. This often quoted passage from our New Testaments refers ONLY to the Hebrew Scriptures which is sadly called the "Old" Testament today. These are the wonderful Hebrew Scriptures and there is nothing "old" about them as they are as important today as ever for humanity.

So we will begin to prove this reality and truth to the reader regarding the corruptions in our Christian Bible; corruptions of prior Sacred Texts that has created a "replacement religion" other than the one that God gave the Jewish nation and Israel to share with the world. This one major problem, a problem that few if any Christians are aware today, is this: the Christian's Old Testaments have been horribly altered from the existing Jewish Scriptures and much "creative replacement theology" has been incorporated in the Christian's Old Testament where many false beliefs have been added among the Jewish passages by the Essenes from 200 B.C.E. where they wrote their "unique" theology into the Greek Translation of the Hebrew Scriptures which only later were accepted and further corrupted by the emerging antisemitic and anti-Gnostic Roman Christian Church. What this means to the Christian today is that our Bibles have in places additions that cannot be found in the Hebrew Scriptures as well as many deletions due to the fact of the "religious creationism" by these groups over the past 2,500 years. This means that the traditional Christian ascribes beliefs to their "New Testament Christ", their Jesus, which are not only false and incorrect but render such a "New Testament" believer (since the New Testament is based off this corrupt Old Testament) an idolater before God. Behind such a sad truth is the fact that because of these alterations, addition, and deletions from the Hebrew Scriptures by later Christian writers we have a false concept in the New Testament regarding not only the Jewish Messiah but "the Christ" of God as well. This we will come to see as our studies advance. To say that this is serious is a gross understatement. This necessitates a serious study of our Christian Bible to see these isolated corruptions to such a degree than we can competently separate the "fiction" from "fact".

NEW TESTAMENT MANUSCRIPTS: THE CORRUPTION AND TRANSMISSION OF SCRIPTURE

The reliability of the text of the New Testament is a necessary prerequisite for accepting the historicity of the New Testament. Never has there ever been a more true statement made to mankind in the history of our existence. Of course, we all are taught to approach our Bibles assuming that the Biblical history in them is correct. We are all led to grow up assuming that our very texts of the Bible teach a "historical understanding" of events recorded by the Holy Spirit in both the Old and New Testaments. Hardly ever do we entertain thoughts that our passages in our Bibles might not be correct "historically" and meant to be interpreted always "literally" until one begins to get acquainted personally with both the findings of modern scholarship, archeology, and Comparative Religions where one finds that much of what we find taught in the mouth of the New Testament Jesus has been repeated previously not only in earlier Judaism but in the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of the ancient Mystery Religions going back as far as recorded records can take us today. Only when one begins to compare these "Sayings of the Lord", the sayings of Jesus previously known as "the Logia", with the Sacred Scriptures of texts of ancient Religions does he find that these sayings and teachings existed before they were later incorporated into what we know as our Bibles today. Seeing this evidence alerts us that many of the assumptions that we make about our Bibles are untrustworthy at best. This brings me to the point of this article. This should make you wonder just how reliable is this "literal" and "historical" understanding we are taught to bring to our Bibles. These many assumptions we have as we approach our Bibles are based upon a silent premise; that being that the texts in our Bibles as we have received them today are correct when compared to the ones from which the English and Greek texts have been translated. At the core of this is a huge question: How can the historicity of the Bible be correct unless the text is correct?

- After the original inspired New Testament authors wrote their documents, Scribes later transcribed them. We should ask: "Did the scribes make any "intentional" and purposeful "theological" errors as they copied down holy Writ?
- If so, what kind of errors are they? What theologies are involved?
- Why wouldn't God protect his Word from such errors?

Most Christians when they buy a Bible assume that the English translation is simply a faithful rendition of what the author had to say but in a different language. This is the assumption that the typical Christian makes concerning the Bible. This is a terrible wrong assumption as any serious investigation in the reliability of the Scriptures as we have received them in our Christian Bibles will show.

When it comes to the New Testament in our Bibles we find that it has the same problems as found in the Old Testaments of our Christian Bibles. The reasons for this are many. To begin with, it was a long time after Jesus died before any part of the New Testament was written and a much longer time before the Gospels were written; Paul's 7 authentic Epistles being the first writings that were to be included in later "New Testaments". We find first the 7 authentic Epistles of the Gnostic Paul which were written earliest around 56-64 A.D. Only later do we find Paul's Epistles enlarged with Rome's Second New Testament; a theological work carefully created to counter the Gnostics and Docetists which were the earliest expression of Christianity. Since the New Testament was written centuries before the invention of the printing press it had to be hand copied. The nature of hand copying inherently introduces opportunities for scribal errors; both accidental and purposeful as we have seen and will yet continue to see. In the early years copyists tended to be amateurs. What we as typical Christians fail to realize is the important fact that for large periods of time the gospels were carried by word of mouth. Only later were they hand copied.

The first complete New Testament that the world has, the codex Sinaiticus, was written in the second half of the 4th century. We have 5400 copies of the New Testament which are in Greek and are in manuscript form. None of the copies we have are originals. None of the manuscripts we have are copies of copies of the original. Not even copies of copies of copies of the originals. None of the copies that we do have, except for the earliest fragments, is identical to any of the others. Here is the alarming fact: There are more differences among these copies than there are words in the New Testament.

The reasons for the disparities are largely due to the method of reproduction. These documents had to be hand copied century after century because the printing press had not yet been invented. The most common errors were misspelled words. Sometimes lines and paragraphs were double copied or omitted. These were the innocent kinds of errors one would expect in a copying process. But sometimes phrases or paragraphs were altered, added or omitted for "theological agendas" which can be traced to the successive Roman Christian Church Councils where "theology" was often determined successively down through Church history by a "vote of hands".

Answer for yourself: Are the records and historicity found in the New Testament known to be 100% completely and fully authentic such that no intentional nor unintentional changes have ever been made by the church to the text of the New Testament? Honest Christians down through history have told the truth of the matter:

"It is well known that the primitive Christian Gospel was initially transmitted by word of mouth and that this oral tradition resulted in variant reporting of word and deed. It is equally true that when the Christian record was committed to writing it continued to be the subject of verbal variation. Involuntary and intentional, at the hands of scribes and editors"* (Peake's Commentary on the Bible, p. 633).

"Yet, as a matter of fact, every book of the New Testament with the exception of the four great Epistles of St. Paul is at present more or less the subject of controversy, and interpolations are asserted even in these."* (Encyclopedia Brittanica, 12th Ed. Vol. 3, p. 643).

Dr. Lobegott Friedrich Konstantin Von Tischendorf, one of the most adamant conservative Christian defenders of the Trinity and one of the Church's foremost scholars of the Bible was himself driven to admit that: "[the New Testament had] in many passages undergone such serious modification of meaning as to leave us in painful uncertainty as to what the Apostles had actually written" (Secrets of Mount Sinai, James Bentley, p. 117).

"Besides the larger discrepancies, such as these, there is scarcely a verse in which there is not some variation of phrase in some copies [of the ancient manuscripts from which the Bible has been collected]. No one can say that these additions or omissions or alterations are matters of mere indifference"* (Our Bible and the Ancient Manuscripts, Dr. Frederic Kenyon, Eyre and Spottiswoode, p. 3).

The Biblical world has in its possession a large collection of ancient manuscripts of the Bible. These ancient copies of the Bible were written in different locations around the world and in different ages. We are told that in our current age there are up to 24,000 such ancient copies of the Bible. These are the manuscripts that the scholars go to in order to produce our modern Bibles (such as the KJV, the RSV, the NIV, etc.). In most cases the most ancient copies of the Bible are the ones held in the highest regard and considered to be the most accurate. This, however, is not a hard and fast rule.

All biblical versions of the Bible prior to the revised version of 1881 were dependent upon the "Ancient copies" (those dated at about five to six hundred years after Jesus). The revisers of the Revised Standard Version (RSV) 1952 were the first biblical scholars to have access to the "Most ancient copies" which date roughly four hundred years after Christ. It is only logical for us to concur that the closer a document is to the source the more authentic it is. Upon discovering these "most" ancient copies of the Bible, what did the scholars of the Bible learn about their "King James Version" (KJV) of the Bible? In the preface of the RSV 1971 we find the following:

"...Yet the King James Version has GRAVE DEFECTS.."

They go on to caution us that: "...That these defects are SO MANY AND SO SERIOUS as to call for revision"

The New Revised Standard Version of the Bible by Oxford Press has the following to say in its preface:

"Yet the King James Version has serious defects. By the middle of the nineteenth century, the development of biblical studies and the discovery of many biblical manuscripts more ancient than those on which the King James Version was based made it apparent that these defects were so many as to call for revision."

Answer for yourself: Who says so? Who are these people who claim that the Bible in the hands of the majority of today's Christians contains "many grave defects" which are so "serious" as to require a complete overhaul of the text? Well, we can find the answer in the very same RSV Bible. In it, the publishers themselves (Collins) mention on page 10 of their notes:

This Bible (RSV) is the product of thirty two scholars assisted by an advisory committee representing fifty cooperating denominations"

Let us see what is the opinion of Christendom with regard to these scholars and their work in the revision of the Bible (revised by them in 1952 and then again in 1971):

- "The finest version which has been produced in the present century" - (Church of England newspaper)
- "A completely fresh translation by scholars of the highest eminence" - (Times literary supplement)
- "The well loved characteristics of the authorized version combined with a new accuracy of translation" - (Life and Work)
- "The most accurate and close rendering of the original" - (The Times)

Answer for yourself: So is the revised Standard Version of the Bible the only one that makes these changes? Is it just a matter of the KJV vs. the RSV? Far from it. These very same changes have become so widely acknowledged by the scholars of Christianity that we find the very same changes made to most other modern versions of the Bible, such as the New International Version (NIV), the New American Standard Version (NASV), etc.

No one can absolutely guarantee that what has come down to us from antiquity is either what the original author wrote or what was originally adopted as Canon. The Canon was only a list of books to be included in the Bible; it did not prescribe content. Scholars must use their best educated guess when producing an edition of the Bible because of the incredibly large number of variants in the manuscripts that have survived the ravages of time. They must take into consideration, the best attested, the earliest and best manuscripts, and quotes of the early church fathers about specific verses.

Today we are blessed by having the abilities to study the Bible through Textual Criticism. Now before you think I am trying to "criticize" the Bible understand that in this capacity the word "criticism" does not mean anything "bad"; instead it is "good". Normally we all think that the "the act of criticizing or being negative" when we hear the word "criticism". This is the typical definition that first comes to mind because of its widespread use. However, in relation to the Bible "criticism" means "the scientific investigation of literary documents in regards to such matters as origin, text, composition, character, or history." The two key words are "scientific investigation." They do not mean negative criticism. Further, this specialist in New Testament textual criticism says:

"Textual critics . . . sort through these [New Testament] manuscripts and the variant readings therein in an effort to reconstruct the original wording of the Greek New Testament.* (Philip W. Comfort, Encountering the Manuscripts: An Introduction to New Testament Paleography and Textual Criticism, Broadman and Holman, 2005, p. 289).

The Oxford Classical Dictionary has something interesting to say about this "Bible Criticism". It says that "textual criticism sets out to establish what a text originally said or meant to say."

Also of note is Harold J. Greenlee, who, in his Introduction to New Testament Textual Criticism states that "Textual criticism is the study of copies of any written work of which the autograph (the original) is unknown, with the purpose of ascertaining the original text" (J. Harold Greenlee, Introduction to New Testament Textual Criticism, Rev. ed. Hendrickson, 1995, p. 1).

Paul Wegner, in his A Student's Guide to Textual Criticism of the Bible: Its History, Methods, and Results makes the comment: "Briefly stated, textual criticism is the science and art that seeks to determine the most reliable wording of a text". He goes on to say: "Biblical criticism is a science because specific rules govern the evaluation of various types of copyist errors and readings, but it is also an art because these rules cannot be rigorously applied in every situation" (Paul D. Wegner, A Student's Guide to Textual Criticism of the Bible: Its History, Methods, and Results, InterVarsity, p. 24, 2006).

What should hold our focus is not the minor and insignificant changes but the major "theological changes" made to these New Testament texts over the earliest centuries, primarily beginning in the 2nd century, in which the ancient Spiritual Wisdom was so corrupted to almost be beyond recognition today as it is contained in the New Testament. The allegorical and Spiritual-Mystical understanding of these texts was lost when these same Sacred Texts were selectively altered to appear as if "literal" and "historical" accounts of events then before their alteration they had been understood Mystically and Metaphysically only. Those who have seen these corruptions of these Sacred Texts have termed this alteration of Sacred Scriptures in our Christian Bibles the "The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture".

A book entitled The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture, The Effect of Early Christological Controversies on the Text of the New Testament was published in 1993 by Bart D. Ehrmann. This is my opinion is a "must read" for every "thinking" Christian who wants to know for how "the Christ" of the New Testament has been altered by these earliest Scribes. In his book Ehrmann makes the case how proto-orthodox scribes of the second and third centuries modified their texts of Scripture to make them conform more closely with their own developing Christological beliefs, effecting thereby the "orthodox corruption of Scripture."

A corruption represents a change from the wording of the original author of a text. The corruptions tended to be in the direction of making the text less compatible with the theology of heretics. The term proto-orthodox is a backward projection. The church in Rome became the dominant or "orthodox" church. The individuals in ancient times recognized by the Orthodox Roman Church as having carried forward the true faith down through the centuries are referred to by them as "pro-orthodox" and later even as "heretics".

Scholars, like Ehrmann, are finding evidences that there was an incredible amount of diversity in the early Christianities. We as Christians are very familiar with the inherited traditions of Christianity which came from the ancient partisan writings by the Roman Church Fathers. In these writings and in many, but not all of the Scriptures in the New Testament, it is generally suggested there was only one true faith, the faith that we identify with Roman Christianity, from which history records that many dissented. However, the discovery of ancient documents like the Dead Sea Scrolls and the Nag Hammadi Libraries some 60 years ago in the deserts of Qumran and Egypt have challenged this view given us by Rome of a monolithic faith and these two major discoveries of Qumran's Dead Sea Scrolls and the Nag Hammadi Library have absolutely broken the back of these Roman deceptions inherent in these inherited Christian traditions. We have really known all along from Scripture that Paul was constantly battling views that dissented from his own. The winner of such feuds is the one who gets to write the history. Nevertheless, the world views that differed from these inherited traditions of Roman Orthodox Church are called "heresies". What I uncovered in my twenty years of study is the ironic face that what is termed "heresy" by the Roman Church was in reality the "Orthodox Faith" of the ancient Spiritual Masters since the beginning of humanity and the "heretics" were the emerging "literal" and "historical" Roman Church.

The victors not only write the history, they also reproduce the texts. But more than that they "alter" and "re-write" them.

"It is highly probable that not one of the Synoptic Gospels (Matthew, Mark, and Luke) was in existence in the form which we have it, prior to the death of Paul. And were the documents to be taken in strict order of chronology, the Pauline Epistles would come before the synoptic Gospels" (Rev. Charles Anderson Scott, History of Christianity in the Light of Modern Knowledge, p. 338).

This statement is further confirmed by Prof. Brandon: "The earliest Christian writings that have been preserved for us are the letters of the apostle Paul" (S.G.F. Brandon, Religions in Ancient History, p. 228).

Please note what is said by Dionysius, Bishop of Corinth, in the latter part of the second century: "As the brethren desired me to write epistles (letters), I did so, and these the apostles of the devil have filled with tares (changes), exchanging some things and adding others, for whom there is a woe reserved. It is not therefore, a matter of wonder if some have also attempted to adulterate the sacred writings of the Lord, since they have attempted the same in other works that are not to be compared with these."

Victor Tununensis, a sixth century African Bishop related in his Chronicle (566 AD) that when Messala was consul at Costantinople (506 AD), he "censored and corrected" the Gentile Gospels written by persons considered illiterate by the Emperor Anastasius. The implication was that they (the Gospels) were altered to conform to sixth century Christianity which differed from the Christianity of previous centuries (M.A. Yusseff, The Dead Sea Scrolls, the Gospel of Barnabas, and the New Testament, p. 81).

These "corrections" were by no means confined to the first centuries after Christ. Sir Higgins says:

"It is impossible to deny that the Bendictine Monks of St. Maur, as far as Latin and Greek language went, were very learned and talented, as well as numerous body of men. In Cleland's 'Life of Lanfranc, Archbishop of Canterbury', is the following passage: 'Lanfranc, a Benedictine Monk, Archbishop of Canterbury, having found the Scriptures much corrupted by copyists, applied himself to correct them, as also the writings of the fathers, agreeably to the orthodox faith, secundum fidem orthodoxam." (Higgins, History of Christianity in the light of Modern knowledge, p. 318).

In other words, the Christian scriptures were re-written in order to conform to the doctrines of the eleventh and twelfth centuries and even the writings of the early church fathers were "corrected" so that the changes would not be discovered. Sir Higgins goes on to say: "The same Protestant divine has this remarkable passage: 'Impartiality exacts from me the confession, that the orthodox have in some places altered the Gospels'." The author then goes on to demonstrate how a massive effort was undertaken in Costantinople, Rome, Canterbury, and the Christian world in general in order to "correct" the Gospels and destroy all manuscripts before this period.

Theodore Zahan, illustrated the bitter conflicts within the established churches in Articles of the Apostolic Creed. He points out that the Roman Catholics accuse the Greek Orthodox Church of remodeling the text of the holy scriptures by additions and omissions with both good as well as evil intentions. The Greek Orthodox, on the other hand, accuse the Roman Catholics of straying in many places very far away from the original text. In spite of their differences, they both join forces to condemn the non-conformist Christians of deviating from "the true way" and condemn them as heretics. The "heretics" in turn condemn the Catholics for having "recoined the truth like forgers." The author concludes "Do not facts support these accusations?" Let us not loose sight of the fact that it was these supposed "heretics" that had the earlier oral traditions and Sacred Scriptures that later fell under the power of Rome and forgery for centuries at their hands. It should make you wonder just what these "heretics" believed that was later changed by Rome! It does me! Though years of intensive study I found out and have made this information available on my websites.

Now please say attention to this. St. Augustine himself, a man acknowledged and looked up to by both Protestants and Catholics alike, professed that there were secret doctrines in the Christian religion and that "there were many things true in the Christian religion which it was not convenient for the vulgar to know, and that some things were false, but convenient for the vulgar to believe in them." Here St. Augustine admits to Christianity telling and teaching "lies" to the majority of the Christian world because is was "convenient" that the Roman Church do so. Sir Higgins admits: "It is not unfair to suppose that in these withheld truths we have part of the modern Christian mysteries, and I think it will hardly be denied that the church, whose highest authorities held such doctrines, would not scruple to retouch the sacred writings" (M. A. Yusseff, The Dead Sea Scrolls, the Gospel of Barnabas, and the New Testament, p.83). Even many of the epistles attributed to Paul were not written by him. Scholars tell us today that the true "historical" Paul was a Gnostic and opposed the "literalization" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and the corruption of the ancient dogmas concerning "the Christ". After years of research, Catholics and Protestants alike agree that of the thirteen epistles attributed to Paul only seven are genuinely his. They are: Romans, 1, 2 Corinthians, Galatians, Philippians, Philemon, and 1 Thessalonians; the rest are Roman forgeries and "theological inventions" intended to divert the "simple believer" away from the ancient Spiritual Mysteries and into the doors of the "literal" and "historical" Roman Church with their Roman Road to Salvation which is based upon "lies" as we see Augustine confess.

Today, Christian sects are not agreed on the definition of what exactly is an "inspired" book of God. The Protestants are taught that there are 66 truly "inspired" books in the Bible, while the Catholics have been taught that there are 73 truly "inspired" books, not to mention the many other sects and their "newer" books, such as the Mormons, etc. As we shall see shortly, the very first Christians, the Gnostic Chrestians, for many generations, did not follow either the 66 books of the Protestants, nor the 73 books of the Catholics. Quite the opposite, that generation believed in books that were, many generations later, "recognized" to be supposed fabrications and apocrypha by a more enlightened age than that of the first century of the common era and which have since been completely destroyed by the Roman Church. In the providence of God these "destroyed Gospels" of the "true Christ" were dug up just a little over 60 years ago and are challenging our accepted Christian traditions about our Bibles and the Church's traditional interpretation of "Jesus Christ".

The Christian world today is claimed to possess anywhere up to 24,000 "ancient manuscripts" of the Bible with a very few of them dating all the way back to the fourth century after Christ (but not back to Christ or the apostles themselves). In other words, they have with them gospels and epistles which date back to the century when the Trinitarians took over the Christian Church. All manuscripts from before this period have strangely perished. All Bibles in existence today are compiled from these "ancient manuscripts." However, any reputable scholar of the Bible will tell us that no two ancient manuscripts are exactly identical.

Bart Ehrman, The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture, on page 27 and beyond states: "In any event, none of [the original manuscripts of the books of the Bible] now survive. What do survive are copies made over the course of centuries, or more accurately, copies of the copies of the copies, some 5,366 of them in the Greek language alone, that date from the second century down to the sixteenth. Strikingly, with the exception of the smallest fragments, no two of these copies are exactly alike in their particulars. No one knows how many differences, or variant readings, occur among the surviving witnesses, but they must number in the hundreds of thousands."

People today generally believe that there is only ONE Bible, and ONE version of any given verse of the Bible. As we have begun to see, this is far from true. All Bibles in our possession today (Such as the KJV, the NRSV, the NASV, NIV,...etc.) are the result of extensive cutting and pasting from these various manuscripts with no single one being the definitive reference. There are countless cases where a paragraph shows up in one "ancient manuscript" but is totally missing from many others. For instance, Mark 16:8-20 (twelve whole verses) is completely missing from the most ancient manuscripts available today but show up in more recent "ancient manuscripts."

There are countless examples in the Bible where verses of a questionable nature are included in the text without any disclaimer telling the reader that many scholars and translators have serious reservations as to their authenticity. The King James Version of the Bible (Also known as the "Authorized Version"), the one in the hands of the majority of Christendom today, is one of the most notorious in this regard. It gives the reader absolutely no clue as to the questionable nature of such verses. However, more recent translations of the Bible are now beginning to be a little more honest and forthcoming in this regard. For example, the New Revised Standard Version of the Bible, by Oxford Press, has adopted an extremely subtle system of bracketing the most glaring examples of such questionable verses with double square brackets ([[]]). It is highly unlikely that the casual reader will realize the true function these brackets serve. They are there to tell the informed reader that the enclosed verses are of a highly questionable nature. Examples of this are the story of the "woman taken in adultery" in John 7:53-8:11, as well as Mark 16:9-20 (Jesus' resurrection and return), and Luke 23:34 (which, interestingly enough, is there to confirm the prophesy of Isaiah 53:12).....and so forth.

However, in spite of all we have said up to now, we find that many ancient manuscripts of the Bible do not only differ with the text of our modern Bibles in many hundreds and thousands of words, phrases and even whole paragraphs, rather they even contain in them whole Gospels which were in the first four centuries considered authentic and "inspired" such as the "Letter of Barnabas" and the "Shepherd of Hermas" which are both found in the Codex Sinaiticus but not in our modern Bibles today. This should make you ask yourself "Why not?" When our modern editors set about their task of harmonizing the text of our modern Bibles with the continually expanding list of more and more ancient manuscripts of the Bible, they do so with the fundamental goal of doing whatever it takes to stay as close to the text of our modern Bibles as humanly possible so as not to fall pray to the ill will of the orthodox who have grown accustomed to the modern "orthodox" reading which it has taken them centuries to achieve. This means that these editors will even go so far as to include in the text of our modern Bibles verses which can not be found in the most ancient manuscripts simply by obtaining the missing text from the most ancient manuscript which does contain it. This is called an "ecletic texts"; I call it "salad bar" theology. The other "extra" Gospels are also conveniently discarded since they are obviously "not canonical" and not accepted by the orthodox Church in modern times nor their recent predecessors. No telling what types of Divine Truth we have lost let alone possibly another whole perspective as to how to interpret these Sacred Texts in our Bibles other than the usual "literal" and "historical" approach.

Answer for yourself: What has been the official Church position regarding these "discrepancies"? How did the Church decide to handle this situation? Did they call upon all of the foremost scholars of Christian literature to come together in a mass conference in order to jointly study the most ancient Christian manuscripts available to the Church and come to a common agreement as to what was the true original word of God? No! Well then, did they immediately expend every effort to make mass copies of the original manuscripts and send them out to the Christian world so that they could make their own decisions as to what truly was the original unchanged word of God? Once again, No!

Answer for yourself: So what did they Roman Church do? Let us ask Rev. Dr. George L. Robertson. In his book Where did we get our Bible? he writes: "Of the Manuscripts of Holy Scripture in Greek still existing there are said to be several thousand of varying worth ... Three or four in particular of these old, faded out, and unattractive documents constitute the most ancient and the most precious treasures of the Christian Church, and are therefore of special interest."

First in Rev. Richardson's list is the "Codex Vaticanus" of which he says:

"This is probably the most ancient of all Greek Manuscripts now known to exist. It is designated as Codex 'B.' In 1448, Pope Nicholas V brought it to Rome where it has lain practically ever since, being guarded assiduously by papal officials in the Vatican Library. its history is brief: Erasmus in 1533 knew of its existence, but neither he nor any of his successors were permitted to study it... becoming quite inaccessible to scholars, till Tischendorf in 1843, after months of delay, was finally allowed to see it for six hours. Another specialist, named de Muralt in 1844 was likewise given an aggravating glimpse of it for nine hours. The story of how Dr. Tregelles in 1845 was allowed by the authorities (all unconscious to themselves) to secure it page by page through memorizing the text, is a fascinating one. Dr. Tregelles did it. He was permitted to study the MS. continuously for a long time, but not to touch it or to take notes. Indeed, every day as he entered the room where the precious document was guarded, his pockets were searched and pen, paper and ink were taken from him, if he carried such accessories with him. The permission to enter, however, was repeated, until he finally had carried away with him and annotated in his room most of the principle variant readings of this most ancient text. Often, however, in the process, if the papal authorities observed he was becoming too much absorbed in any one section, they would snatch the MS. away from him and direct his attention to another leaf. Eventually they discovered that Tregelles had practically stolen the text, and that the Biblical world knew the secrets of their historic MS. Accordingly, Pope Pius IX ordered that it should be photographed and published; and it was, in five volumes which appeared in 1857. But the work was very unsatisfactorily done. About that time Tischendorf made a third attempt to gain access to and examine it. He succeeded, and later issued the text of the first twenty pages. Finally in 1889-90, with papal permission, the entire text was photographed and issued in facsimile, and published so that a copy of the expensive quartos was obtainable by, and is now in the possession of all the principle libraries in the biblical world" (Rev. Dr. George L. Robertson, Where did we get our Bible?, Harper and Brothers Publishers, pp.110-112).

Answer for yourself: What were all of the Popes afraid of? What was the Vatican as a whole afraid of? Why was the concept of releasing the text of their most ancient copy of the Bible to the general public so terrifying to them? Why did they feel it necessary to bury the most ancient copies of the inspired word of God in a dark corner of the Vatican never to be seen by outside eyes? Why? What about all of the thousands upon thousands of other manuscripts which to this day remain buried in the darkest depths of the Vatican vaults never to be seen or studied by the general masses of Christendom? What is being kept back from us?

Well Rome can control the ancient manuscripts, they can even forge them, add to them, delete from them but they have no control over the providence of God in allowing the discoveries of the Dead Sea Scrolls and the Gnostic Nag Hammadi Library which reveal to us the most ancient Spiritual Texts of the earliest Chrestian/Christian centuries before the rise of Rome. The discovery of these more ancient Sacred Texts of these earliest "Chrestians/Christians", when compared with the later texts of Rome, show us without a doubt Rome's "radical reinterpretation" of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and their forgery of these previously existing Sacred Texts. Seeing this information and textual "theological" manipulation and forgery by Rome gives us a clear picture as to how the ancients understood "the Christ" in comparison as to how we have been taught about "the Christ" today from the altered texts we have received. Let me tell you now; God's Christ was never understood to be "literal" or "historical" being and "limited" to but one person. The Christ is incarnated, personalized and "literalized" in you when you awaken to the Presence of the Christ Mind dwelling within you for it is you in which "the Christ" has come and incarnated; not in but one person but in the whole of humanity. This is Rome's "secret" kept from the world because along with it comes freedom from fear and the manipulation of mankind through such religious fear so keenly used by Rome during the Middle Ages.

In a study that explores the close relationship between the social history of early Christianity and the textual tradition of the emerging New Testament, Ehrman, in The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture, examines how early struggles between Christian "heresy" and "orthodoxy" affected the transmission of the documents over which, in part, the debates were waged. His thesis proves beyond any doubt in this book by multiple examples that proto-orthodox Christian scribes of the second and third centuries occasionally altered their Sacred Texts for polemical and theological reasons; altering the Mystical and Metaphysical understanding of God's Christ resident in every child of God into a corrupt concept that later "literalized" and "historicized" and "limited" "the Christ" to but one person. The Christ had to be "literalized" and "limited" by Rome if they were to tell the world that access for mankind's Salivation was tied to their new interpretation of "the Christ" whose only access was through the doors of the Roman Church. For example, existing Sacred Texts were later altered by Rome to oppose the adoptionists like the Ebionites, who having only the oral traditions at that time, claimed that Jesus must have been only a man but certainly not "literally" God. A variant of this idea is found in the Docetists like Marcion and the Ptolemaeans, who claimed that "the Christ" was never limited to but one person, rather "the Christ" was tabernacling within each child of God and was within mankind as a "slumbering Divinity" in need of awakening. Ehrman's thorough and incisive analysis makes a significant contribution to our understanding of the social and intellectual history of early Christianity and raises intriguing questions about the relationship of readers to their texts, especially in an age when scribes could transform the documents they reproduced to make them say what they were already thought to mean, effecting thereby the orthodox corruption of Scripture.

The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture unfolds the argument boldly emblazened on its cover, namely, that the ancient scribes who transmitted the New Testament texts to later generations occasionally altered those texts "theologically" in order to make them conform to theological positions deemed "doctrinally correct" at the time. Both Ehrman's title and its implicit thesis contain an edge of irony, an irony that will be familiar to readers of Walter Bauer's classic Orthodoxy and Heresy in Earliest Christianity. Just as Bauer claimed to demonstrate that those Christians conventionally labelled orthodox represented neither the original nor the majority theological position in the pre-Constantinian church, so Ehrman undertakes an analogous unmasking of the "proto-orthodox," who prove on his analysis to have been not faithful guardians of the purity of the ancient Sacred Tradition and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom of mankind but, rather, corruptors of the ancient Sacred Scripture and Wisdom itself. Roman Christian Orthodoxy's monolithic insistence that there is but a single, simple truth, basically their interpretation of these Sacred Texts and their alterations as their hands, necessitated at the same time Rome's denial of both the diversity and the ambiguity of competing theological positions. Ehrman emphasized this point in his book and this diversity of theological positions in the first century of the common era is easily verified by reading the attacks by Rome upon these earliest positions and interpretations of "the Christ". Such a denial by Rome of the earlier understanding of the nations regarding "the Christ" will cause them as well to create a completely new hermeneutic and interpretation of these same ancient Sacred Texts that challenged not only these earlier ancient interpretations but even the very words of the most ancient Sacred Scriptures themselves. This was only exaggerated by Rome's later forgery and corruption of the earlier Scared Texts since the "New Testament manuscripts were not produced impersonally by machines capable of flawless reproduction" but "were copied by hand, by living, breathing human beings who were deeply rooted in the conditions and controversies of their day;" so rooted that intentional forgery and deception in their copying and reproduction was no problem for Rome who was bent upon positioning itself as the only route for the salvation of mankind.

Ehrman makes it plain to the reader that the "Scribes altered their sacred texts to make them "say" what they were already known to "mean,". Of course he means they altered the texts to agree with Rome's evolving creation of theology and Christology regarding "the Christ" which changed with each successive Church Council. Yet, the fact remains and we must not miss it; our New Testament texts were altered. Ehrman goes on to say: "The truth of the matter is that we may never recognize the full extent of the orthodox corruption of Scripture".

The quest for a pure, or at least a purer, biblical text is by no means abandoned and indeed continues to define the goal of even such an unconventional textual criticism as Ehrman's. The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture should be of interest to every Christian who desires to have the "Truth" regarding the New Testament and their "Jesus Story". Ehrman makes a critical point in his book. He shows the reader that the process of textual corruption is closely correlated with the history of doctrine in the pre-Nicene period and particularly with the development of Roman Christological thought. For the readers not familiar with the word "Christology" let us define it now: Christology is a field of study within Christian theology which is concerned with the nature of Jesus as "the Christ". In particular, it is concerned how the divine and human are related in his person; either:

- Adoptionist...."the Christ" was a man who was "anointed" (the term for Christ) at his immersion; basically that Jesus became the Son of God at his immersion, but yet was not fully God. Adoptionism states that Jesus was born fully human, and he became Divine at a later point in his life (his baptism), at which point he became the adopted son of God. Adoptionism was condemned by the church as heresy at various times, most explicitly at the Council of Nicaea.
- Separatist...the Divine Christ and human Jesus were "different" beings
- Docetism...Christ is the Divine Mind of God incarnated into the flesh of humanity; man is dual-being; both a "god" in an "animal body". That being so then all of life is to allow the Spiritual evolution and progressive Spiritual growth of man's Soul in overcoming the animal nature within him, thereby Spiritually evolving himself into the "fullness" and "nature" of "the Christ Mind" thereby becoming true Sons of God.

Christology is generally less concerned with the details of Jesus' life and message than it is with how the human and divine co-exist in one person. This can be said that Christology is more concerned about "Faith in Jesus" rather than "the Faith of Jesus". Throughout the history of Christianity, Christological questions have been very important in the life of the church. Christology was a fundamental concern from the Council of Nicaea (325 C.E.) until the Third Council of Constantinople (680 C.E.). Here we see that for over 300 years the idea of the relationship of the Divine with "humanity" was the central concern for the evolving Roman Catholic Church. This is the basic reason for the alteration of the ancient Spiritual Texts; Rome was creating a "theology" around Jesus as "the Christ" based upon what they wanted it to be. In this time period, the Christological views of various groups within the broader Christian community led to Rome accusing them of being "heretics", and, infrequently, subsequent religious persecution and death was their plight. In some cases, a sect's unique Christology is its chief distinctive feature; in these cases it is common for the sect to be known by the name given to its Christology.

Of course it goes without saying that all Roman Christian Christology is based upon a "literal" and "historical" interpretation of "the Christ". It is when we begin to look into Docetism and Gnosticism that we are recovering the earliest pre-Roman ideas of "the Christ" as well as "the faith" once given the Saints. This is the "theology" of the most ancient Sacred Texts which sadly fall prey to later Roman forgery and adulteration. It is in them we find the earliest expression of the "Logia of the Lord" which can be paralleled with the most ancient Spiritual Wisdom in the world which we also find in the mouth of the New Testament Christ; thus liking the two! The bottom line in all of this is that many of the most familiar passages of the New Testament may not be "original" at all and corruptions of earlier ancient Spiritual Dogmas of the Metaphysical "Christ". With that goes the need for a honest reevaluation as to how we are to interpret our Bibles as it appears the more we study that the "literal" and "historical" interpretation of "the Christ" and the Scriptures in our New Testament might be better served if approached and interpreted in other ways than "literally" and "historically".

RELIGIOUS FACTS OR FICTION...WHAT DO YOU PREFER?

I can remember when long ago one of our readers told me:

"Craig, you can't present all the facts to the average person; it would destroy their faith!"

I have heard this statement from so many ministers, theologians, and even scholars that I have literally lost count. I know that something is drastically wrong with our religious system. I know it, and I know that many of you know it as well because in almost all of my conversations this topic continually emerges in one way or another. If I could use one word to summarize observations made about the American religious system, it would be that it is SICK.

Upon much contemplation I have come to believe that the initial step in solving the problem is to consider the cause of it. For over the past twenty years I have pursued a course of independent study in which I examined my religious doctrines, not only the ones I believe but also those I proclaimed from the pulpit. Almost as soon as I embarked on this journey, I discovered that I had been the victim of a cover-up that made Watergate look like child's play.

Having the benefit of training in Greek and Hebrew studies of the Bible, I learned facts that challenged the very foundation of my belief system. During the years I pastored at a large non-denominational church in Dallas, I had occasion to often inform other teachers and pastors of my discoveries. In almost every case they either told me I was wrong and I should immediately stop my research, or even more shocking to me, they told me not to make my findings public cause it could hurt the Church.

Answer for yourself: Truth hurting the Church? Are we crazy. Is God the Author of lies?

Many told me, "Craig, you can't present all the facts to the average Christian; it would destroy their faith!" I disagree!

I continued to question my beliefs since what I had learned in Seminary, as well as my own further studies, revealed facts that I could no longer overlook or avoid. I became aware of some universal facts that could withstand examination by individuals within my faith and, more importantly, individuals outside my faith. It soon became clear to me that some of my doctrines had to be set-aside when confronted with new facts that proved them in error, or else I would have to continue to accept as sacred "old-truths" which were now revealed to be outright falsehoods.

Here comes the hard part. For those of you who are pastors, teachers, evangelists, deacons, and elders, if you decide to embark on this journey for truth, you may find yourself in a major crisis. Some of you may be asked to resign, while others may be openly slandered. If you are an ordained minister, you may lose your papers, pay check and or retirement. However, the decision you will make is very simple: "Are you going to be honest with those who trust in you, or are you going to be an active participant in one of the greatest cover- ups in history?" To all others I ask:

"Are you going to be honest with yourself and your God?"

I came to the decision that I had to present the facts to you even if it meant causing you to question your faith! Just take a look at some evidence.

Answer for yourself: Did you know that the Bible gets the unique credit from being the motivating force behinds the actions of some of the most significant people in history-from Yeshua to Hitler, Mother Teresa to Jim Jones, Hillel to Falwell?

There have been days that I have wondered if I were the only person confounded by the reality of this fact.

Answer for yourself: How can so many contradicting doctrines and philosophies in the over 1500 denominations in Christianity today all be based on the one common source?

FACT OR FICTION AFFECTS YOUR VIEWS ON SALVATION

One of the earliest conflicts I faced along the journey was concerned with the doctrine of salvation. Being from a major denominational background, I assumed that the doctrine of "once saved, always saved" was without question. I was taught that this doctrine was based on scriptures such as John 6:37,

"All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that commeth to me I will in no wise cast him out."

Everything was "OK" until I read Romans 11:21-22,

"For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee. Behold therefore the goodness and severity; but toward thee, his goodness, if thou continue in his goodness; otherwise thou also shalt be cut off."

I quickly had a real problem on my hands. On the one hand, my religious training, which was based on the Bible, taught me I could never be cut off, but the Bible was also telling me that I could. A question now confronted me that I had never considered before, "Could I lose my salvation?"

Seeking an answer to this questions led me directly to my next conflict which was the question of salvation: Grace or Works. The way I understood my denominational teachings was that after being saved it really didn't matter how I lived or what I did because I was still going to heaven when I died. This was a very convenient doctrine because it allowed me to do anything I wanted to do while I was on earth, good or bad, and still get my mansion in heaven. My understanding was that this doctrine was based on Romans 10:9-10, "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

Such confession was accomplished by responding to the invitation at the close of the service and that once I had been down the aisle my place in heaven was assured. This is how I understood grace. This belief was reinforced through many sermons based on verses such as Romans 11:6, "And if by grace, then is it no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace; otherwise work is no more work." When this verse is coupled with Romans 10:9-10, there seems to be an air-tight doctrine proclaiming that actions have nothing to do with eternal life.

Thank goodness I read the Bible for myself and not just my Sunday School Quarterly because I read Revelation 20:11-13, "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." As you may guess, I had another major crisis on my hands.

My church doctrine was telling me that I was saved by grace and works were not important; but, I kept studying my Bible, and it says that I was saved by grace but will be judged by my works! To the best of my reasoning ability, I concluded that anyone following my denomination's doctrine could live a lifetime believing they were saved, while possibly ending up in the lake of fire on Judgment Day.

Torn by this dilemma, I continued my studies and came to understand by returning to the original languages and culture of the people of the Bible, that salvation must be understood in relationship to righteousness, which consists of both grace and works.

WHOSE BIBLE IS THE REAL BIBLE?

In coming to terms with understanding Biblical salvation, I needed only to consult my Bible.

Answer for yourself: But, why was my Bible the real Bible when others carried different Bibles from mine? My American Jewish friend's Bible is what we call the Old Testament, while to my Catholic friends the Bible consist of the Old Testament, New Testament and Apocrypha. My Bible contains more than the Jewish Bible and less than the Catholic Bible. To make matters worse, I soon discovered that none of these Bibles was "the Bible" but only a translation.

I learned that all translations supposedly came from the "original Scriptures." The answer was simple, all I needed to do was obtain a copy of the original scriptures to see which Bible was the right one. I was then told, "We do not have any original scriptures, although we do have some ancient copies of them." Hoping that a quick glance at them would solve this problem only led me to another major problem. One of the most ancient copies of original scriptures included "The First and Second Epistles of Clement to the Corinthians," while another included "The Shepherd of Hermas" and "The Epistle of Barnabas," none of which is included in the Jewish, Catholic or my Bible. Why?

Other questions flooded my mind.

- Answer for yourself: Why doesn't the Jewish Bible include the New Testament and or the Apocrypha?
- Answer for yourself: Why doesn't my Bible contain the Apocrypha?
- Answer for yourself: Why doesn't the Catholic Bible contain the Epistles of Clement and Barnabas or the Shepherd of Hermas? After all, they were read by the earliest church?

These questions led to a more basic question:

- Answer for yourself: Who made the decision as to which books should be included in the Bible and which should be excluded?

At first I didn't really understand the magnitude of this question; but, as time passed, I began to face the reality that certain men (Gentiles belonging to the Church of Rome-Roman - Catholics) decided which writings were to be considered sacred and which were to be considered non-sacred. And to make matters worse these men were shown to be blatant anti-semites and Jesus was a Jew. More problems.

What this means is that someone who was anti-Semitic shaped the content of what many call "The Word of God."...does that sound right to you?

IF ANY SHALL ADD OR TAKE AWAY FROM THE WORDS OF THIS BOOK.....(THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES)....

Having opened a can of worms with the above questions, I quickly decided to use multiple translations in my Bible study. Problems surfaced again. In reading John 5 in the New International Version, I discovered that the verses were numbered, 1,2,3,5, 6, etc.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that verse 4 was missing?

Answer for yourself: Do you have several different versions around the house?

If you do, stop and check it out (by the way this isn't the only instance). When I was investigating why verse 4 was missing, I soon made another major discovery. There are literally thousands of manuscripts and fragments of New Testament writings. When you line them up and compare their words, they are not always the same. Sometimes there are additional words, changes in word order, different endings and prefixes on the Greek words, and entire verses added or omitted. Many times verses from the Jewish Scriptures are not merely "mistranslated" but purposefully altered to bring completely new meanings to the Christian's Bibles that were not in the earliest Jewish texts from which the Christian's Bible was supposed to come.

Even after being able to determine which words were most likely to be the original words I still was unable to understand their original meaning because I applied my American meanings to ancient Jewish words. It is an indisputable fact that the meaning of words is determined by their author's culture and system of thought. Therefore, in order for me to understand the meaning of words of the Old or New Testament, I had to identify and learn the culture of the writers. This is not as hard as it sounds, for all the writers of the New Testament, as well as the Old Testament, were Jews. The answer was simple, one only has to understand the Hebrew culture and religious system of thought before he can understand correctly the author's message as presented in any book of the Bible. This simple fact seems to be almost unknown to the average person and most Christian Bible translators, for many Bible translators apply American meaning to Hebrew words without considering the differences between the two systems of thought. The fact of the matter is that they were not translating the Bible, but rather completely reinterpreting it to reflect evangelical theology.

HEBREW...GREEK...OR ENGLISH?

The earliest Christian church had no Gentile members. Therefore, the members of that church had no need to study Hebrew culture and thought since they were Hebrews. Before the death of the Apostle John, however, new cultures and systems of thought invaded the church as Greek-speaking Gentiles became its leaders and interpreters. They were very familiar with the Greek manuscripts or both the Old and New Testaments but not familiar with the Hebrew culture or system of thought from which the Scriptures originated. It was inevitable that conflicts concerning the interpretation of Scriptures would arise in the church between its Gentile and Jewish members. In order to solve these conflicts, the elders used their Gentile cultures and systems of thought to give new meanings to the Jewish Scriptures.

This process that originated by the Gentile leaders of the early church had three significant consequences. First, the original message of each author became unknown to the church; second, Christian Gentiles came to regard the Jews as their enemies; and third, the original purpose of the church was lost. These consequences were based on a single, fundamental difference between Hebrew and Gentile (Greek) thought--namely, that certain words (such as love, righteousness, forgiveness, etc.) to the Hebrew mind signified concrete actions, but to the Greek mind these same words signified abstractions. In other words, statements such as , "A new commandment I give unto you that you love one another as I have loved you," were understood in different ways by the Gentile Christians. The Christian Gentiles believed they had fulfilled this commandment simply through abstract or emotional feelings, whereas Christian Jews believed that this commandment was fulfilled only when they put their feelings into actions.

Let me give you a good example how these two Christian groups (Jew and Gentile) would have reacted to the same situation. Suppose a member of the church did not have enough food to feed his family. The Christian Gentile could go to that person, knowing the situation, pray for them, have a good feeling about the situation, and leave waiting for God to meet the need of the person. The Christian Gentile would believe that he had fulfilled the new commandment. If the Christian Jew encountered the same family, he would obtain food for them and know that he had fulfilled the commandment. Only in this way could he say that he loved them; he was personally the "answer" of the prayer for the other person.

Having spent much time thinking about the differences between the Jewish and Gentile cultures and systems of thought, it didn't take long to realize that the Gentile mindset was responsible for the illness of the church. I suppose that this illness can be reflected in no greater capacity as in the perversion of the tithe as preached in Gentile Christian churches today, as God's tithe goes toward building bigger and fancier buildings instead of building up people by meeting their needs. This is a horrible sin which can be blamed upon ignorance of the Jewish Scriptures and greed.

The conclusion that God will ultimately judge mankind on the basis of their actions was reinforced by my study of Matthew 25, which describes the final judgment. This same sentiment seems to be reflected in the following quotation from Mother Teresa in summing up Jesus' position on the matter: "At the end of life we will not be judged by how many diplomas we have received, how much money we have made, how many great things we have done. We will be judged by "I was hungry and you gave me to eat, I was naked and you clothed me, I was homeless and you took me in." Hungry not only for bread, but for love. Naked not only for clothing, but naked of human dignity and respect. Homeless not only for want of a room of bricks, but homeless because of rejection. This is Christ in distressing disguise."

THE BOTTOM LINE AND THE ULTIMATE QUESTION...TRUTH IN RELIGIOUS....DO YOU REALLY WANT IT?

Looking back, my entire journey was, in reality, an attempt to answer one question: "As a person who believes in God, what am I supposed to do with my life?" I had been taught the only place to look for such an answer was the Bible. However, in retrospect, I learned that my perception of the Bible proved to the origin of many of my problems because my "teachers" taught conflicting doctrines, each of which was supposedly based on the Bible. My dilemmas, which are undoubtedly shared my many, sprang from the teaching that every word of the Bible is to be taken "literally". In reality, however, what was called a literal meaning turned out to be my preacher's theology.

Most leaders in the religious world are very much aware of the various problems with their doctrines. They are usually aware of those "other scriptures" that disagree with their published teachings. But the average man or woman on the street is never presented with this information. You are not allowed to see all of the information so that you can make your own intelligent decisions.

It is my goal as Pastor and teacher of Bet Emet Ministries to provide you with that factual information, not just conclusions which represent one side of the issue. From the biblical point of view to withhold information is a form of fraud or theft. To steal a man's mind is the greatest form of theft.

As stated earlier, I firmly believe that you can handle factual information and you can make solid decisions once you are presented with all the facts. I am committed to a course that consists of gathering factual information from all sources and getting that information into your hands, even if it disproves what I have thought to be truth previously.

EXPOSING THE ERRORS THAT PREVAIL

Two of the greatest errors that have been allowed to prevail and dominate our religious world are: "We will never be able to agree" and " Everyone must interpret the Bible for himself." We would never apply this principle in our businesses, marriages, etc. and expect to achieve any degree of success.

We must make the facts public and expose the "cover-up." We must jointly and openly test all doctrines and tell the results to all people. Let's not be afraid to ask questions and seek facts about the Bible. Let us begin with these questions:

- Do you know the history of your Bible?
- Are all Bibles the same?
- What role does your Bible play in your life?
- Should a Christians use the same Bible as Yeshua and is he aware that he does not?
- Do you believe your Bible is the inerrant and infallible "Word of God?" but have you studied enough to see these "purposeful additions, deletions, corruptions" of what I speak?
- What role should a Bible play in the lives of a Christian community?
- What are the various reading of the manuscripts and what relevance do they hold for me?
- Who decided which books would be included or excluded from the Bible I carry and if I cannot accept their "religious belief system" -Catholic- how can I accept "their Bible"?
- What difference does it make when the author's culture, way of thinking, and existing religious belief system, are factors in the translation?
- Does the Bible really support the numerous conflicting doctrines within the churches today?
- Has there always been a Bible?
- Do you want your religious beliefs to be based on facts you learn or on an imposed doctrinal system that you accepted only by faith without any personal study and verification of it's credibility?

We must face reality! Truth is not to be feared but sought!

SHOULDN'T YOUR RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM BE FOUNDED UPON THE BIBLE JESUS USED?

You probably think that the title for this article is absolutely silly because you believe you have Yeshua' bible already. Well you don't! You are not reading the same scriptures in your churches that were read in the churches and synagogues of the first century. I always thought that Christianity used the same Bible as Yeshua until I began to study for myself. I had a rude awakening. It is time for you to awake also!

Answer for yourself: Which Bible should be used as the ultimate authority for modern Christianity...the Jewish, the Catholic, or the Protestant?

I believe that the Religious Belief System of every Christian should be as close as possible to the Religious Belief System of Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: Can you agree with that statement?

Answer for yourself: Wouldn't it be absolutely insane for a Christian to have a Religious Belief System that was not only in opposition to, but also an insult to everything that Yeshua believed and taught?

I ask you as a Christian to face reality as it is laid open to you and make whatever changes are necessary. God would have you do so. Let's us examine the issues together.

LET US BEGIN WITH YESHUA'S BIBLE

The first step in assuring ourselves that we have the same Religious Belief System of Yeshua is to agree as to the same Bible Yeshua used for the authority for his beliefs. The Bible of the Jew in the first century A.D. consisted of 12-20 scrolls of varying lengths. None of the scrolls contained the writings which are now called the Catholic New Testament. Most of the writings found in the Catholic New Testament would not be written, depending on whom you believe, for another twenty to sixty years to well over one hundred years and then constantly altered and changed and added to after that. For example Galatians chapter 3 was not "in" Paul's Galatians until after 180 A.D. and this is fact!

Answer for yourself: Why did the writers of the Gospels, for instance, decide to wait over 40 to 100 years to record the words of Yeshua?

Answer for yourself: Even more important, why were Yeshua' words not considered on the same level as "scripture-Old Testament" at that time?

Answer for yourself: If they had been then why were they not recorded immediately by his hearers?

It might surprise you but it would be almost another fifteen years or so before Paul would write his first epistle. That means he began to write about 50-55 A.D. which is around twenty-five years after the death of Yeshua and then Paul only mentions "two" teachings of Jesus and both references are just one sentence.

Answer for yourself: What did the new fledgling Messianic Community use for their Bibles during this time period?

Answer for yourself: What Bible did the Apostles carry with them, as well as others, as they went into all the world to preach the Gospel?

The Early Christian Church had no New Testament. After Paul's epistles were in circulation for about ten to twenty years the authors of Luke and Mark decided to write their Gospels. This would be around 70 C.E., the time that the Second Temple was destroyed by the Romans. Again, this might surprise you, but it would be another 70 years before anyone would decide that a collection of writings from the Messianic Community should be gathered together as a rival authority for the Old Testament. Marcion, the heretic, would combine (most probably) the Gospel of Luke with some of Paul's writings which would become the replacement for Yeshua' Bible.

We now have a new canon and authority that would eventually replace the authority of Yeshua' Bible for the Messianic Community.

WHAT WAS THE PURPOSE OF A CANON (BIBLE)?

It is a documented fact that a religion cannot exist without a revelation. The Bible is a book that contains "revelations" which are authoritative for a religious community. There are many religious communities, thus there are many Bibles. It is through these revelations that a religious community develops its understanding of God and God's requirements for man.

Man is limited in his knowledge of God, and it is by the vehicle of revelation that man received knowledge of God that is outside of his natural ability to know or discern. The major obstacle confronting man in his search for God is that the reality of God is beyond discernment through man's senses. Man's knowledge is limited to the information that he receives from his sensory organs: hear, taste, touch, feel, see. But when we talk of the supernatural realm and not the natural realm, then everything changes. Man does not have the capability to penetrate into God's dimension at will. What we know of God is because God desired to reveal it to man. We must wait for God to break into our dimension and show Himself first. Since it is God, and not man, who determines when and where and how contact is to be made with His creation, then our knowledge about God is limited to the information that God chooses to reveal about Himself. After God makes contact with the natural realm and imparts His message, the resultant message is called a "revelation." The accumulation of "revelations" over time becomes the cornerstone of what a community or group of people come to understand about God. Such a group of revelations is called the community's "canon" or "Bible". It is my personal opinion that today we receive no new revelations from God; only illumination from the Holy Spirit concerning past revelations.

It is easy to see that the canon or Bible of such a community becomes the most important document they possess and is cherished as the ultimate authority for the communities' religious beliefs. Given enough time teachings & interpretations concerning the "received revelations" will accumulate around one's canon. It is from these interpretations and teachings that the community will gradually build and produce its "Religious Belief System." This simple process is best explained as follows:

1. God gives man a revelation.
2. Men canonize the revelation and it become their "Bible".
3. The canon becomes the authority for the Religious Belief System of the community.

4. The Religious Belief System becomes the "Standard" of measurement for all other religious data, information & practice of the religion of the community.
5. The canon becomes the authority to judge & correct all other canons & all other religious beliefs (regardless of whether it is right or wrong).

WHO DECIDED WHAT IS CONSIDERED TO BE RIGHT OR WRONG (OUR BIBLES)?

This newly formed Religious Belief System (as seen in our canons and Bibles) quickly becomes the standard which will be used exclusively to test and evaluate all other religious beliefs. If statements agree with the "Standard" they are considered correct and true. If they conflict or disagree with the "Standard" they are considered incorrect and false. There is only one major problem:

Answer for yourself: Who determines the "Standard?"

Unfortunately since the death and resurrection of Yeshua the Catholic Church has for the most part determined the "Standard" to be used in evaluating revelation, both past and present. Little consideration is given to Yeshua and his teachings as the "Standard". Few seem to realize that he is the "Standard" and his Religious Belief System (his teachings and interpretations which happen to be Jewish) make for the correct canon and Bible, both yesterday and today!

You can easily see that such a "Standard" becomes a potential source of enormous power for those who control it (organized religions). Such "Standards" have been used by priests, preachers, ministers, translators, evangelists, rabbis, etc., to control and manipulate people to do their (the organization's) bidding and not God's.

LET'S MAKE OUR OWN BIBLE...WHAT DO YOU SAY?

Often such "Standards" are challenged in one or more of the following methods:

- Reinterpretation of the words in the Canon into other meanings which change the revelation.
- Often words are added or deleted from the Canon. This changes the whole meaning.
- Often one will come up with a "new revelation" to correct a prior revelation.
- The physical destruction of the competitive canon.
- Often we see a combination of the above four.

History will give the details concerning how the above four methods of challenging & eventually replacing the canon (the previous authoritative Religious Belief System of the Jewish Church). It would be this Jewish Messianic Belief System which served as the foundation for the new move of God at Pentecost as God began to bring all men together in one body through His Messiah. This Jewish Religious Belief System for both Jew & Gentile would, in the span of three hundred years, be completely replaced with a totally Gentile, Hellenized (Greek influenced) replacement faith which would serve as the new Religious Belief System which would serve as the replacement foundation for the Church of Yeshua even up until today.

As we look at Yeshua's canon (Bible), we must examine its foundation first through the study of history, culture, & language. Jesus did not intend to create a new religion. Yet we have one. In fact, we have thousands of different sects all claiming "authority" by his name. Let us examine undeniable facts that will go a long way in proving this point:

- Jesus was Jewish from the day he was born until his last day upon the earth.
- Jesus was a Jewish Rabbi (teacher).

- Jesus' canon was the Jewish canon (Tanakh: Law-Prophets-Writings plus the Oral Law).
- Jesus never renounced his Judaism or joined or created another religion. To have done so would have been the greatest of sins.
- Jesus was not a Christian.
- Jesus adhered to the Festivals of the Lord.
- Jesus adhered to the Sabbath.
- Jesus' Apostles were Jews and never renounced their Judaism.
- Jesus' Apostles required Gentiles to adhere to many Jewish laws (the laws of Noah).
- The canon of the Apostles was the same canon that Jesus used.
- The Apostles did not see the need to make any changes in the Jewish canon after Yeshua's death.

CANONS, CANONS EVERYWHERE: WHO HAS THE CORRECT ONE?

Today we have three canons or Bibles that are in existence: Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant. Each Bible consists of a group of books, which have been selected as authoritative by "the powers that be". The books that are found in Bibles, whether Jewish, Catholic, or Protestant), all fall into 3 basic categories:

- Jewish books canonized by those with Jewish authority.
- Jewish books canonized by those with Catholic authority.
- Jewish books canonized by those with Protestant authority.

From this you can quickly see that there are three levels of authority to be recognized today: Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant.

Answer for yourself: Which does God stand behind?

Answer for yourself: Does He condone all three?

Answer for yourself: If so, how do we account for the differences, conflicts, and contradictions?

Answer for yourself: Is God schizophrenic?

Answer for yourself: If God is the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow; then why can't He make up His mind?

THE JEWISH CANON-GOD'S GRACIOUS GIFT TO MANKIND -THE LEGACY OF SINAI LIVES

The Jewish canon has existed for over 1900 years. This is the Bible Jesus used! It is called the "Tanakh" and consists of three major groups which consist of 39 books.

Torah: (Law):

Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy.

Nevi'im (Prophets):

Joshua, Judges, I & II Samuel, I & II Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zachariah, and Malachi.

Ketuvim (Writings):

Psalms, Job, Proverbs, Ruth, Song of Solomon, Ecclesiastes, Lamentations, Esther, Daniel, Nehemiah, and I & II Chronicles.

It is important to note that the Jewish Religious Belief System gives different levels of authority to each of these three divisions. The Torah is the most authoritative, followed by the Nevi'im (Prophets) which are followed by the Ketuvim (Writings). Whenever there are two possible courses of action for a particular situation and one is found in the Torah and the other in one of the lesser two divisions, the one in the Torah is considered as the most authoritative. The Torah is the focus of the Tanakh.

THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT...A COMPETITIVE & ANTI-SEMITIC CANON (MARCION'S BIBLE-140 C.E.)

Marcion is the first person known to us who published a fixed collection of what we would call New Testament books. Others may have done so before him; if so, we have no knowledge of them. He rejected the Old Testament totally, as having no relevance or authority for Christians; his collection was therefore designed to be the "first Bible". I wonder what Yeshua thought of Marcion's endeavors since Marcion threw out the Bible Yeshua (Jesus) used. It is amazing that before Marcion we find no evidence of the "church" using or even having a need for any writings other than the Jewish Bible of Jesus. Think about that for a minute. The Messianic community did not have a need for a new canon for over 110 years.

Answer for yourself: How did they manage?

CANON WARS

To counteract the authority of Marcion and his canon the proto-Catholic Church (in its infancy) responded with a canon of their own to validate their own Religious Belief System and refute Marcion's Religious Belief System.

The Catholic Canon consisted of two major divisions which contain 75 books instead of the original 39 of Yeshua's Bible. Notice very carefully that those who were in charge of creating the Catholic canon chose to alter the Bible of Jesus:

- They destroyed the primary authority of the Torah by lumping all the books of Yeshua's Bible into one group which was given the title of "Old Testament", thus signifying that God was giving something to replace the "old" with something "new".
- They rearranged the order of the books of Yeshua's Bible.
- They added nine new books to the books of Yeshua's Bible: Tobit, Judith, I & II Maccabees, The Book of Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, Susanna, & Bel and the Dragon.
- As stated before they renamed Yeshua's Bible "The Old Testament".
- They created an entirely new division of canonical books which they called "The New Testament"; conveniently replacing the Bible Jesus used with the Bible the Popes used.

WHO CHANGED THE AUTHORITY AND RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM OF YESHUA? HOW DARE THEM!!!

Ask yourself these questions:

Answer for yourself: Who gave them (the Roman Catholic Church) the right to decide what books should be added to Jesus' Bible?

Answer for yourself: Did they benefit from making such changes to Yeshua's Bible?

Answer for yourself: Who decided which books were to be added or deleted?

Answer for yourself: Was their Religious Belief System the same as Yeshua's?

Answer for yourself: Why was there a need for new books anyway?

After all, the Great Commission was fulfilled and the whole world heard the "Word" when using only Yeshua's Bible (The Old Testament).

Answer for yourself: Could Yeshua's disciples adequately preach "salvation" to the world using Yeshua's Bible? Well, they did!

Answer for yourself: Why was it necessary to rename Yeshua's Bible the "Old" Bible? Why call the additional books the "New" Bible?

Answer for yourself: What was the rationale behind forming a new canon?

Answer for yourself: Ask yourself why there was a need for Marcion or the Roman Catholic Church to create a new canon?

Remember a canon gives a group authority for their revelations & sanctions whatever they wish to do. How else could you "replace" something with something else unless you had the authority to do so?

Answer for yourself: And what gave them the authority?

You guessed it, a new revelation.

It would be this "new revelation", based upon the old revelation, that would be added to, deleted, changed, & reinterpreted into the replacement canon of the Catholic Church which would give them power and authority to replace the religion of Jesus with the religion of Jeroboam (which God hates). It is this religion of Jerobaom which has come down to us today as a mixture of Gentile Paganism and Judaism. Literally it is contemporary "calf-worship" and we worship what we know not most often (John 4).

Jesus most assuredly taught that the Jewish Bible was his Bible and that the words of that Bible should not be changed (Matt. 5:17). Read it for yourself! From the time of Yeshua's crucifixion, around 33 C.E. (A.D.), through the lifetime of the last Apostle (John in 96 C.E.), Yeshua's followers and disciples continued to use the Jewish Bible as their canon. This continued for another 44 years until approximately 140 C.E. when Marcion set about to set in motion the stirrings for replacing the religion of Jesus with the religion of Gentiles. Marcion desired to complete the work of Paul of divorcing the emerging Gentile Church (proto-Roman Catholic Church) from Judaism the religion of Jesus). Think for a moment, it was the Roman Catholic Church that should be built upon the teachings of Jesus the Jew, not replacing Yeshua's foundations of Judaism with Gentile paganism. Marcion's attempt to replace Yeshua's religion was the first known attempt of the proto-Roman Catholic Church as a fully Gentile institution to create a canon to replace the Jewish Bible & the Jewish Church. This new canon, as stated above, eliminated all of Yeshua's Bible. Marcion's canon included only Paul's epistles and selected portions of what is today called Luke's Gospel. Marcion was in the middle of a grown anti-Jewish movement which was sweeping through the Roman Empire in the second century.

Although the Roman Catholic Church rejected Marcion's canon, they quickly adopted the idea; they decided to draft their own canon (Bible) to help support and give authority to their further separation as a Gentile organization from their Jewish Roots and the religion of Jesus. If they were to stand apart as a replacement faith & avoid the persecutions coming upon the Jews by Rome, then they had to show they had the authority to do so, and what could be better authority for such a "revelation" but a new canon. Around 180 C.E., forty years after Marcion and 150 years after Jesus we see the emergence of a new canon for the Roman Catholic Church.

Thus began an ongoing struggle that would last over 1000 years over which books should be included in the new Catholic Canon. There were at least 19 additional writings that the Roman Catholic leadership refused to include. Thomas was one of the original 12 Apostles whose Gospel of Thomas was accepted by some and was rejected by others. A book entitled Third Corinthians appeared in an early Armenian canon. See my previous hand-out for a comparison of books and their acceptance and rejection throughout the years. By the year 200 C.E. numerous new canons were in use. Some were fairly well defined, while others were much more informal. What we find upon examination is that each canon which was accepted in different regions reflected local beliefs and traditions unique to that region. Different canons reflected different beliefs in other areas. Thus we find great diversity.

Answer for yourself: What does this have to say for inspiration in the gathering of a universal canon believed as given by God in the New Testament? Inspiration in gathering the canon of the New Testament was non-existent!

The many variations in canons produced very erratic religious practices and inconsistencies. The Roman Catholic leaders felt they had better quickly take action concerning such diversity. They quickly went to work to decide & identify which writings were sacred or inspired. This confusion and chaos continued in Christianity for over 300 years. Finally, the official canon of the Roman Catholic Church was agreed upon in 380 C.E., over 240 years after Marcion and 350 years after Jesus. Stop & think about this for a moment. It was 350 years after the death of Jesus before the need arose for a new revelation to replace the revelation given to men by God at Sinai! Wow! Even after the Catholic canon was officially closed, new writings continued to appear. The last two books to be admitted to the Catholic canon were Hebrews and Revelation. The debate over inclusion of Revelation lasted over 600 years. The newly created Catholic canon provided the authority for the Catholic Church to propagate their anti-Jesus & anti-Jewish doctrines and dogmas. The power of the Roman government gave the Roman Church the power to deal with those who opposed them. At last the embarrassment could stop; there was a single Catholic canon and it would remain the sole authority for the next 700 years. Important questions should be asked:

WHERE WAS GOD'S LEADERSHIP ALL THESE YEARS?

Answer for yourself: Why didn't God protect the canonization of His Word in the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Where was the inspiration in selecting books, deleting books, and re-including books hundreds of years later?

Answer for yourself: Why the conflicts?

Answer for yourself: Doesn't God know what He wants to do?

Answer for yourself: What about the people who lived and died during these times?

Answer for yourself: Are they "saved" even though they did not have a New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Were believers deprived of the Word of God by organized religion, or worse, given the word of men instead and lead astray in their worship of God as they followed a canon given to them by Roman Catholic Theology which believed in purgatory, infant baptism for salvation, the mediatorship of the Virgin Mary, Papal infallibility, prayers to the dead, etc.?

Answer for yourself: What happened to the religion God gave us through Jesus?

Answer for yourself: How close to the "faith once given to the saints" is your religious beliefs?

Answer for yourself: Whose Religious Belief System do we have today in our churches? A Jewish or Gentile?

The anti-Jewish Roman Catholic Church had achieved its goal; it established itself as "The Absolute Authority" over a Jewish movement whose origins, canon, and beliefs were Hebraic. Idolatrous Gentiles now interpreted for all men a "Jewish Religious Belief System". The long awaited and prophesied Jewish Messianic Movement had now become A Gentile replacement faith based on a mixture of truth and lies (see John 4 for a mixture religion and notice the response toward it by Jesus). The Jewish Messianic Movement of Jesus was totally recreated into a new Catholic Religious Belief System that was, and still is, in direct opposition to the original Jewish Belief System of Jesus. Just because you are a Protestant or non-denominational believer you have no right to feel comfortable & insulated from such a tragedy, because you are nothing more than a quasi-Catholic yourself. You have adopted the Roman Catholic replacement Bible as well as their modified Religious Belief System which is a false religious system of the age. How did we get here? There is nothing new under the sun. Let's reiterate:

- The Roman Catholic Church reinterpreted the words of the canon/Jewish Bible of Jesus.
- They added words to and removed words from the canon/Jewish Bible of Jesus.
- They rearranged the books of the canon/Jewish Bible of Jesus.
- They declared that their "new revelation" nullified and replaced Yeshua's canon/Jewish Bible.
- They added their "new revelation" to the Yeshua's canon/Jewish Bible.

YOU WILL KNOW THEM BY THEIR FRUIT!

Upon a little understanding of what I have shared with you in this, as well as past articles, a blind man could see the tragic results of such gross errors in judgment and practice of the faith once given to the saints. Just look realistically at modern Christianity today (Catholic or Protestant). Just look at the conditions of most Christian communities in the world or America. It should not take you long to notice that something is desperately wrong with the fruit of such religious folly.

The United States of America is known as the Christian center of the world. In the United States of America there are more Christians, more churches, more priests & preachers, and more money spent promoting Christianity, than any other place in the world. We like Jesus, should expect to find good fruit when we examine our "olive tree". What do we find? The USA is known not for its righteousness, but rather for its huge consumption of illegal and legal mood altering drugs, alcoholism, suicides, greed, fraud, immorality, exploding divorce rates, terrific numbers of fatherless children, governmental and political corruption, child abuse, homosexuality, incest, murder, theft, rape, etc.

Answer for yourself: Why does America today look like Sodom yet there is a church on every corner and the message of the Gentile Church fills the airways of our televisions?

I thought that God overlooks His Word to fulfill it…doesn't He? There sure is a lot of His Word being broadcast (or is it really His Word?).

Answer for yourself: Maybe instead of it being God's Word as found in the Bible Jesus used, can you see that it is instead a collection of words that took 1000 years to be established by the Roman Catholic Church which was intended to function as a "replacement word" & "another Gospel" to nullify the Bible Jesus used?

Answer for yourself: Could this possibly be a contributing factor to the mess we finds ourselves in today?

I strongly feel that our current state of affairs is directly linked to the canon used as the "Standard" for our lives today.

WHAT DO I DO NOW?

Let's get real for a moment. You can tell if the "Standard" you have been given by the Gentile Church is working or not by taking a look at your relationship with your spouse, your children; the quality of life in your family, the quality of life that other believers have with whom you fellowship, and the quality of life in your community.

Answer for yourself: If Christianity returned to the canon of Jesus, would the faith and teachings of Jesus in his canon affect the moral and ethical conditions of America and of the world more than a man-made canon of the Roman Catholic Church?

Answer for yourself: Or do we continue to hear messages of grace instead of obedience to Law, getting more faith in order to get more from God, give to get, or God wants you rich sermons? Where is the beef? It has been, and always will be in the Bible Jesus used.

Answer for yourself: Do We Throw Out Our New Testaments? Absolutely not!

Contained within the pages of our New Testaments are living words given to us by God. However, along with much "life" is "death" from man's additions, deletions, changes, and hidden agendas intended to remove us not only from the Bible Jesus used but his religion as well. Every Gentile who came to Christ in the first centuries were called God-Fearers and accepted the yoke of the Torah, was immersed into Yeshua, and obeyed the Law of Noah as given by the Apostle James (who headed up the Messianic Movement of Jesus) in Jerusalem. I believe that divorcing the church from its Jewish heritage has caused a great many of the problems facing us today. I believe that if every Christian would return to the original teachings and Religious Belief System of Jesus that many of our problems, both individually and corporately, would be corrected. We need to return to our Jewish Roots of the Christian faith and discern those parts of our New Testaments which are placed there with the intent of removing us from the faith (Sinai Religion) of Jesus. We need our New Testaments to accomplish this monumental task. But, we must constantly remember that the words in our New Testament were copied, transmitted, edited, translated, and defined by people who had very specific agendas and beliefs; namely to replace the Hebraic Messianic version of Christianity with a purely separated Gentile mixed paganism. Let us never forget that the Roman Catholic model for Protestantism today is a creation of Romans and Gentiles and not of a Jew named Jesus! Let us never forget that our churches of today, unless following a return to the true religion of Jesus, are far off the track. Please consider joining God and people like those of Bet Emet who have dedicated their lives to rediscovering the Jewish Jesus so that we can look at his words and the words of the Bible through Jewish eyes and truly then have "the mind of Christ". If you haven't thought about it, to have the "mind of Christ" is to have the same mind, will, emotions, attitudes, concepts, conduct, and beliefs of the Jewish man named Jesus. It is a Jewish mindset, not a Greek pagan mindset.

HOW DO WE FIND OUR WAY BACK TO PLEASING GOD?

It is not too late if we seriously confront the issues addressed by Bet Emet and others and repent when shown and proven of our errors and mistakes.

- First, we must make a return to Yeshua's Bible (Jewish Bible) along with our Jewish Roots. The Torah had primary authority for all men and still does. God spoke it to man directly!
- Second, we must arrive at an understanding concerning how to arrive at the correct interpretation of the words found in this Jewish document called the Bible. Since all the writers most likely were Jewish, it stands to reason that for the correct interpretation of what the words meant originally we need to trace their meanings back to the Hebrew. We must learn to study and become experts in using the resources God has given us today to help us "rightly divide (interpret) the Word of Truth".
- Third, we must rid ourselves of the anti-Semitism inherent in all of us because of the negative influences of the Gentile church which has rejected its Hebraic heritage for over 1700 years. Jesus was a Jew and we must look at the words of the Bible through Jewish eyes and not be afraid to admit our errors. Salvation is of the Jews yet today. It is time for you and I to return to the faith of Jesus.

WHICH DID GOD INTEND US TO HAVE...A JEWISH BIBLE, A CATHOLIC BIBLE, OR A PROTESTANT BIBLE?

In the Jewish and Christian communities, our Bibles play very important roles. One could rightfully say we grew up in America under the influences of religions that were religions that founded their authority upon a "book". Since Judaism had their writings containing the Torah, the writings of Moses ("Teaching/Law" also known as the Pentateuch), the Former and Later Prophets along with the Writings, it became mandatory that the later emerging Christian should likewise need a book in order to establish themselves as a religion commanding authority that came as well from an authoritative "book". Therefore the need for a "New" testament. Accordingly, in both communities we hold that our Bibles are based on revelation from God and thereby are "inspired" from God. In both the Jewish and Christian communities we find that each religious community teaches their religious doctrines are based on "the" Bible.

Answer for yourself: So what is the problem with that?

The only problem is that these "religious doctrines" that are taught to the world are often contradictory and oppose each other in what they teach but even more alarming is that they both supposedly cite the Hebrew Scriptures for their authority. Somebody has to be wrong somewhere. The problem is deciding whether Judaism or Christianity is teaching religious doctrines and dogmas that are incorrect since they both say they are teaching the revelation of the Hebrew Scriptures.

Here is the bottom line. Never did I realize when I was in Seminary that my Christian Bible and it's Old Testament was not accurately translated when compared to these earlier Hebrew Scriptures. In fact one could say upon doing comparative personal study of both the Hebrew and later Christian Bibles that our Christian Bible has been "selectively" and "carefully" corrupted in "key" theological positions in order to promote the later evolving theologies of the early emerging Gentile Christian Church. This revelation and truth is most alarming for a Christian to both hear and study out thus proving this premise to himself.

Now in every part of the world, and in all ages, people have been seeking for this knowledge of God; and the different ways of their seeking and the different ways of worshipping Him, have been called "religions". As you are aware, the national religion in most of the countries of Europe, Canada and North and South America is Christianity; in India it is Hinduism; in Ceylon it is Buddhism; in Palestine it was Judaism; and in Arabia and Persia, Zoroastrianism and Islam. But this simplification is terribly inadequate but you get the picture. There is not "one" religion out there that unties all; or is there?

You will have learnt from your history books that in times past (and alas! even to-day the same thing happens in some places) terrible persecutions have been carried on in the name of religion, the followers of one religion persecuting and torturing the believers of another. It is not the religion that is at fault in these cases; rather it is that those who profess a particular faith have not grasped one of the central truths of all religion, that although there is but one God in the Universe, He may be worshipped through many different forms, and that whilst we may give to Him whom we worship as Supreme Being the name of God, our brothers in Asia or Africa may be equally worshipping Him under the name of Brahman, or Allah, or by refusing to call Him by any name at all.

Today we live in a world emerging from the Dark Ages of fear and ignorance and many Spirit-led people the world over have been used by this One God to bring back to the world the knowledge of this great truth, that had in the course of time been forgotten-this important fact, that all the religions in the world come forth from the one Divine Being whom we worship under different names, and that therefore the main teachings of them in all their Sacred Books are very similar; for all the great religions teach that the Universe, and everything within it, comes forth from God; that man is an immortal being, a child of his Heavenly Father, and that his work is to struggle against the lower side of his nature, and to strive to become true and pure and holy, and Spiritually minded, so that in due time he shall grow into the likeness of his Father. This commonality is too often overlook by the glaring disagreements that exist between the teachings of Judaism and the teachings of Christianity; especially the disagreements regarding Jesus Christ as the historical and literal Messiah of the Jews which yet today separates and divides Judaism and Christianity.

And the differences, dissimilarities, distinctions, and cultural and racial divergencies that are seen on the surface of all religions, even Judaism and Christianity, and which have for so long blinded men to the likenesses of religious truths buried underneath, are such as were necessary in order that each faith might be suited to the nation to which it was given and the time in which it was given to a certain people by this God through His "angels" or "messengers".

For you must know that just as we are all of us first babies, then children, then young men and women, and afterwards older men and women, so do the peoples of the world grow and pass through different stages. A "young" nation, that is to say a nation of which the men and women who compose it, a nation of "savages" whose chief pleasures are in eating and drinking and hunting creatures for food, such a people would need a very simple kind of religion, a religion perhaps which would teach them that there is a difference between right and wrong, and that there is a Divine Being above them Who is just and good, that they please Him when they do right, but that when they do wrong He has to punish them. Such ideas as these we find to be the principal ones in the religions of what are called "primitive tribes" or races; and there is generally also the doctrine that if a man does right he will be happy after death, while if he does wrong now he will suffer hereafter.

But when later men and women are born into more civilized nations, they will have learnt a great deal that their forefathers did not know when they were "savages," and they will need a different and a higher form of religion. Although they may not be much more able than was the "child-man" to unravel the great mysteries of the Universe, yet they will have developed to a much greater degree their intellectual and moral faculties, and will in consequence need a more Spiritual and intellectual form of religion than the races whose higher faculties are entirely undeveloped. So you see we need not be surprised or distressed when we find that everyone does not worship in the same way as we have been taught to worship; but when we come across any who use different forms of worship, or to whom some other Scripture is as sacred as the Bible is to some of us, then we can quite contentedly recognize that we have met someone who is searching in a different way for the same Truth which we also are seeking; and putting aside any feeling that our way is best, we may humbly and gratefully learn from him anything that he may be able to teach us, whilst gladly sharing with him any knowledge that we possess.

Now this sounds easy but history records this with the blood of the saints as one warring "religious" faction destroys another. This becomes somewhat more confusing as we recognize that there are two basic camps in the Christian community: Catholic and Protestant. It goes without saying that the Bibles of these two communities differ not only in their "theologies" regarding the same "Christ" but in the number of books that they contain. When we include the Jewish community in this equation we soon arrive at the grand total of "three" Bibles. This presents us with our first question. It goes without saying that is you are born in the Americas then you are taught to look at the Bible for your source for God and His plan for mankind. The first big question we are faced with is the selection of a Bible to help us learn of God.

Answer for yourself: Which Bible is "the Bible?"

I am sure that if a Jew, a Catholic, and a Protestant was asked that question the expected response would be "MINE!"

THE BIBLES OF JEWISH, CATHOLIC, AND PROTESTANT COMMUNITIES CONTAIN CERTAIN BOOKS THAT FALL INTO 3 BASIC CATEGORIES

- TANAKH-let us not forget that the Jewish Bible and the Christian Old Testament disagree considerably when compared line upon line and precept upon precept.
- NEW TESTAMENT
- APOCRYPHA

Below I have given you a breakdown of the three basic Bibles:

- Jewish Bible-Tanakh (the Hebrew Scriptures)
- Catholic Bible-Tanakh (the Christianized Hebrew Scriptures), New Testament, Apocrypha
- Protestant Bible-Tanakh (the Christianized Hebrew Scriptures), New Testament

Notice if you will, that all three faiths (Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant) are all in agreement that the Tanakh (Old Testament) is an inspired document, but that is where the agreement stops. Notice also that the Catholic and Protestant communities are in agreement that the New Testament is inspired, but not the Jewish community. Notice also that only the Catholic community alone considers the Apocrypha in the same category as the Tanakh and the New Testament.

Answer for yourself: Why doesn't the Jewish community and their Rabbis accept the New Testament with it quotes from the Hebrew Scriptures? Could it be that the Jewish community and their Rabbis know that many of the quotes taken from the Hebrew Scriptures as found in the Christian Old and New Testament are purposefully misquoted, mistranslated, and falsified when compared to the original Hebrew texts as taken from the Hebrew Bible? Just remember these question as the answers to them will be forthcoming the more you study the truth about our Bible, a Bible given us by Rome that is supposed to lead us to God and His will for our lives.

WHAT YOU SHOULD ASK YOURSELF REGARDING THE CANON OF THE JEWS AND THE CANON OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

Answer for yourself: When did each of these Bibles comes into existence? Under the surface reading where we see racial and cultural differences could there be an esoteric secret and hidden deeper Spiritual teaching that connects both the Old and New Testaments? Are are "lesser" and "greater mysteries" in the books of our Bibles which only the "initiated" eye of the enlightened see? Were these "hidden teachings" once there but today are removed or the books made to appear otherwise?

Answer for yourself: Who decided which books would be included or excluded from each Bible?

Answer for yourself: Were were certain books later added and why were they?

Answer for yourself: Were certain books excluded from our Bible which were once in it and why? Why are some books in some Bibles and not in other Bibles?

Since each Bible is directly linked to a community, our first question must begin with the origin of each of the communities in question.

Answer for yourself: When did each of these communities originate?

- The Jewish community accepts the inherited tradition that the origin of the Jewish faith originated with Abraham who lived in the time period of approximately 1700 B.C.E. but yet today modern scholarship traces its true origin to ancient Egypt thousands of years B.C.E.
- The Catholic community officially began around 400 C.E. (A.D.) but its unofficial roots began in the 2nd century and culminated as full-blown Orthodoxy in the 5th century.
- The Protestant community (Luther's protest against Catholicism) originated with Martin Luther who was born November 10, 1483 and died February 18, 1546 C.E. Let us also understand that the origin of the community is not synonymous with the origin of their Bible (canon).

The development of the canon proved to be a revolutionary step in the history of religion. This concept is distinctive and characteristically Jewish according to tradition but the real truth is the ancient Egyptian Religion was the first "religion of the Book" with is found in the ancient Egyptian Book of the Dead in which we find a multitude of its religious dogmas and doctrines taught later in almost all world religions. We find these ancient Egyptian religious dogmas and doctrines contained in our Bibles and in Judaism as well as Christianity; although sadly they exist radically reinterpreted in later Christianity but not so in Judaism. Regardless of what you have seen in the way of bumper stickers of late, the Jew's "canon" caused other nations to call the people of Israel "the People of the Book." Judaism needed a book because the originators of the earliest expression of what was later to become the Jewish Faith had a book as well; it was called the Egyptian Book of the Dead. The Jewish concept of "canonization" of their Sacred Texts was to be largely adopted by Christianity and later Islam. It appears we need a "book" for our authority no matter what it says or what is in it. Some of these Sacred Books, dear ones, are better than others as you will come to see.

Canon is the Greek word that originally meant "a straight rod." Later it was used to mean a "carpenter's measuring rod." Finally it became a figurative term for "a standard by which other things could be measured." As applied to Biblical canonization, it designated "the closed nature of a body of sacred literature which had been accepted as 'authoritative'." This is because it has come to be understood in our day that a "canon" is "divinely revealed" to the community, regardless of whether it was or it wasn't!

Answer for yourself: How did we develop a Canon?

Although the process of "officially" assigning authority to a select group of books and thus creating a "canon" originated with the Jewish nation, the word "canon" and the word "bible" originated within the Greek language. Most reputable scholars agree that there was no canon of the Hebrew Scriptures (Tanakh) until the end of the 1st century C.E. (A.D.). Prior to that time there were a number of pieces of Hebrew literature with varying degrees of authority. The authority of this material, as well as the material itself, depended on the particular sect or community within Judaism.

Tribal traditions, collections of community laws, cultic and ritual laws, songs and hymns, oracles from priestly circles, utterances of the prophets, sayings attributed to wise sages, and chronicles of court events were gathered together and preserved. Not all of the materials recorded were related to the religious practices of the community, although much of it did concern their religious life. As national life stabilized and the "RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM" of the community developed, literary material of this kind was used in the religious rituals and woven into historical narratives telling the story of the community of Yahweh's people. Gradually, and most unconsciously, there emerged out of this body of literature certain writings which the community recognized as speaking with unique authority for their religious life. As such it was given a special designation and treated with a reverence not accorded to other writings in use among them.

In Israel the community came to recognize these words as God speaking to them. Once the words became an approved collection, this "collection" developed into the basic authority for Israel's "RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM." The books that make up the Bible did not comprise the whole literary production of ancient Israel.

The Scriptures make mention of the existence of an extensive literature which is now lost! Let us look at some examples:

- Numbers 21:14-The War of the Lords
- Joshua 10:13 & II Samuel 1:18-Jashar
- I Chron. 9:1 & 2 Chron 16:11; 20:34; 27:7; 32:32; 33:18-The Chronicles of the Kings of Israel and Judah.

In the process of determining which books would be included in the canon we have a record of the disputes between the rabbis as to the validity of certain writings. Customs and traditions were used as one of several guidelines for including or excluding questionable books. Other criteria included the content of the book and the position of the writer within Jewish history. The Bible of the Jews considered of some twelve to twenty scrolls of different sizes and did not include the New Testament which did not exist at that time.

The Apostle Paul wrote, regarding the Old Testament, "Now these things happened to them as an example, and they were written for our instruction, upon whom the ends of the ages have come" (1 Cor. 10:11). The use of the Old Testament Scriptures by the Christian Church has been the subject of some debate from the early church fathers up to the present day. The debate is primarily concerned with the question of what writings are truly in the canon of the Old Testament Scriptures. Yet for some Christians the "revealed truth" represented more than for others. Augustine is a fine example of this, as he ". . . regarded the church to be the custodian of Scripture and thus may easily have concluded that on matters of the extent of the canon the church had the authority to decide. . . Augustine seemed to consider church reception to be sufficient warrant for canonical authority; this he gave as the reason for accepting the Maccabean books as canonical" (Schultz, Samuel J. "Augustine and the Old Testament Canon," Bibliotheca Sacra , Vol. 112 #447 -- July, 1955, 230, 232). Initially, it was not as if the canon itself was debated as much as it was looked at differently. Some held that the canon was extensive enough to encompass all the books read in the church for edification, which would include the Apocrypha and sometimes the Pseudipigrapha (anonymous apocalyptic writings). Others held that the canon was simply that of the Jewish Bible, representing also the Protestant Bibles of today (Roger Beckwith, The Old Testament Canon of the New Testament Church, Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1985, p. 2). It was not until the age of the Reformation that the debate began to rage. In 1546 when the Council of Trent made a formal statement that all not accepting the selected Apocryphal writings should be damned, the Protestants retorted with an equally resolute voice. If there are disputes about what is Scripture, the validity of faith itself is greatly at stake. For as Beckwith puts it so well, ". . . with no canon there is no Bible" (Roger Beckwith, The Old Testament Canon of the New Testament Church, Grand Rapids: Eerdmans, 1985, p. 5).

Contrary to common belief, there was never a one-time, truly universal decision as to which books should be included in the Christian Bible. It took over a century of the proliferation of numerous writings before anyone even bothered to start picking and choosing, and then it was largely a cumulative, individual and happenstance event, guided by chance and prejudice more than objective and scholarly research, until priests and academics began pronouncing what was authoritative and holy, and even they were not unanimous. Every church had its favored books, and since there was nothing like a clearly-defined orthodoxy regarding Christian Scripture until the 4th century. The truth of the matter is that before the 4th century there were in fact many simultaneous literary traditions of Scripture. The illusion that it was otherwise is created by the fact that the church that came out on top simply preserved texts in its favor and destroyed or let vanish opposing documents. Hence what we call "orthodoxy" is simply "the church that won."

Astonishingly, the story isn't even that simple: for the Catholic church centered in Rome never had any extensive control over the Eastern churches, which were in turn divided even among themselves, with Ethiopian and Coptic and Syrian and Byzantine and Armenian canons all riding side-by-side with each other and with the Western Catholic canon, which itself was never perfectly settled until the 15th century at the earliest, although it was essentially established by the middle of the 4th century. Indeed, the current Catholic Bible is largely accepted as canonical from fatigue: the details are so ancient and convoluted that it is easier to simply accept an ancient and enduring tradition than to bother actually questioning its merit. This is further secured by the fact that the long habit of time has dictated the status of the texts: favored books have been more scrupulously preserved and survive in more copies than unfavored books, such that even if some unfavored books should happen to be earlier and more authoritative, in many cases we are no longer able to reconstruct them with any accuracy. To make matters worse, we know of some very early books that simply did not survive at all (the most astonishing example is Paul's earlier Epistle to the Colossians, cf. Col. 4:16, where the mentions the Epistle of Laodicia), and have recently discovered the very ancient fragments of others that we never knew existed, because no one had even mentioned them.

Most alarming for traditional Christian today is the fact that the Gospel of John shows the clearest similarity to later gnostic writing style in general, and parts of the gospel have a similar dream-like quality to the writing (compare the Gospel of Truth, and more especially the Trimorphic Protennoia). The opening verses of John, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God" allude to Heraclitus and the Gnostic concept of the Logos (which translates as Word), a Divine presence. The themes of light and knowledge contrast with the themes of physical being and worldliness throughout the Gospel John which is so characteristic of Gnosticism and Hermeticism.

It has been suggested by scholars, such as Hyam Maccoby and Elaine Pagels - Professor of Religion at Princeton - as well as Timothy Freke, that Paul of Tarsus (the Christian Saint Paul) was a Gnostic believer who developed the early Christian church as a mystery religion with a Jewish flavor, and that elements of this church over time and centuries forgot or misunderstood the deeper mystical and hidden Spiritual mysteries and mystery elements; thereby largely abandoned its Jewish foundation, and took up a perverse literal interpretation of the text as well as the interpretation of "the Christ" as a solidary individual!

The argument for Paul being a gnostic relies heavily on arguments about the authorship of the Pauline Epistles. Though no where in the works of Saint Paul does he write that within God is both parallel energies or forces (positive/negative; or good/evil) and is thus the solution to the problem of evil as understood by mankind, which is at the very core of gnostic belief. The pastoral epistles (those to Timothy and Titus), are generally acknowledged as being clearly anti-gnostic, and the second Epistle to the Thessalonians clearly refutes certain gnostic interpretations of the first Epistle to the Thessalonians. Thus we find in the New Testament both a "Gnostic Paul" as well as a "anti-Gnostic Paul". Both cannot be right! Consequently, with the clearly anti-gnostic epistles being seen as later Roman forgeries and falsifications of the true beliefs of Paul and thereby discounted by a majority of scholars, those of Paul's writings which are more compatible with gnostic interpretations are also the only ones thought today to be the only genuine writings worthy to carry his name.

Answer for yourself: What should this mean to the traditional Christian? We should at all costs study to find our what the earliest Christian Gnostics believed about "the Christ" before this ancient religious and Spiritual idea was later "radially reinterpreted" and "mutilated" by Rome as it currently exists in the New Testament today. This alteration of the ancient understanding of "the Christ" can be found initially in the difference existing in the Christianized Old Testament rejected by Judaism today as well as its later "quotes" in the New Testament which cannot find textual validity when examined in the original Hebrew Scriptures. Here before is the enigma concerning which Bible is "correct" or the "more correct"; the Jewish or Christian Bible?

A few scholars have claimed that it was Irenaeus who was the forger of the earliest Christian Bible, and that he forged the documents to support his strongly anti-Gnostic views. With a Gnostic Paul, Paul's assertion that salvation is by faith alone must be interpreted as an assertion that salvation can only come about by achieving gnosis - that one can only achieve enlightenment by achieving enlightenment concerning his True Self and the indwelling Christ and Divine Mind within himself and not as an assertion that one must hold certain mental religious belief or dogmas of a certain religious system of beliefs to be saved as Rome has maintained now for over 1,800 years.

The continual growth of Gnostic followings throughout the second century so troubled the non-Gnostics that to refute it Irenaeus wrote a vast five-volume book (On the Detection and Overthrow of the So-Called Gnosis commonly referred to as Against Heresies). The significance of Paul's influence was sufficient for Irenaeus to consider it important to proclaim that Paul was never gnostic and never supported gnostic teachings, using the evidence of the later forged Pastoral epistles and the Gospel of John to support it. Despite Irenaeus' claims for Paul's non-gnosticism, Valentinus, the leader of a large faction of gnostics, claimed that Paul had initiated his own teacher Theudas into the Deeper Mysteries of Christianity, which revealed a secret gnostic doctrine of God and His Christ.

Answer for yourself: So what does all of this have to do with the cannon? Everything!

We have before us two developing and diverging branches of "Christianity" in early Christianity, a prior Gnostic Christianity (Metaphysical, Mystical, allegorical and symbolical interpretation of Sacred Texts) and a later Literal-Historical Interpretation of Roman Christianity's Sacred Texts (anti-Mystical and anti-Metaphysical interpretation of Sacred Texts) with a strong anti-Gnostic or anti-Allegorical interpretation of these same Sacred Texts. The question for us concerns "Which Bible" is the more correct and which better represents to us the intended understanding of God and His Christ for mankind. One thing is certain, these two different Bibles, the Jewish and the Christian Bible, as well as the Gnostic New Testament as well as the anti-Gnostic New Testament is of primary importance for any Christian let alone "truth-seeker".

LET'S LOOK AT THE VERY FIRST NEW TESTAMENT...NO! NOT ROME'S BUT THE GNOSTIC NEW TESTAMENT OF MARCION

The Christian Gnostics were a rather diverse group of early movements finding a basis often in Christianity or Judaism. These people did not refer to themselves as "Gnostics"; rather they called themselves "Christians" but the label of " Gnostics" was applied mostly by their opponents and modern scholars. The Christian Gnostic movement were strongly associated with mysticism, and the concept of gnosis, which refers to an intimately personal kind of knowledge. The Gnostic movements were centered around gnosis of the divine rather than faith (pistis) and therefore are often associated with mysticism. While Gnosticism proper was stamped out by Rome in the 4th and 5th centuries, the Albigensian and Cathar movements of the Middle Ages are often linked to it, which is rather questionable from a historical and philosophical perspective. Many Gnostic movements made extensive use of allegory and metaphor in their interpretation of Spiritual texts.

Another gnostic leader, and the most powerful, Marcion, was the first person to construct a formal New Testament Biblical canon, and in it he included only the Gospel of Luke (in a version that differs from the orthodoxically known text which we have today from Rome), the Epistles of Paul (except the Pastoral Epistles), and the Book of Acts, which primarily recounts the activities of Paul. He excluded all of the Jewish text of the Septuagint. If you have every studied the LXX, the Septuagint and its forgery of the Hebrew Scriptures which our websites detail in making a "god-man" out of a purely human "messa" or "messiah" then you understand why. The importance of Paul to Marcion's faction of gnosticism even led to one of the main anti-Marcion writers, Tertullian, going as far as to declare that Paul was the heretic's apostle. Marcion himself claimed to be the rightful heir of Paul's authority, and although clearly at odds with the position taken by later orthodoxy, it was certainly true that Marcion was, in his time, the leader of the seven communities to which Paul's epistles were earlier addressed. Though it is possible that Marcion's movement had converted the communities in question from literalism to Marcionism (allegorical interpretation of the Scriptures), it is significantly more plausible for him to have gained control had the communities already been gnostic when Paul was writing to them. Ultimately the church even ex-communicated these communities and the communities to which Paul's epistles were addressed since Rome feared the ancient Spiritual Mysteries as taught by Marcionism.

Early Christian narratives that supported the position which later became Roman orthodoxy also exhibit a distaste for Pauline Gnostic positions. The Book of Acts, which appears in the New Testament and mostly concentrates on Paul, contains what most biblical scholars view as veiled criticism of the Gnostic Paul. For example, by the criteria of Acts 1:21, Paul is undeserving of apostleship because he had neither been with Jesus during his lifetime nor seen the resurrected Jesus in the flesh, merely seeing him as a vision. Amongst biblical scholars, the prevailing Christian view is that Acts favors the Jewish Christian Jerusalem Church, in conflict with a Gentile Christian Paul, though advocates of the idea that Paul is gnostic often argue that it was Paul's gnosticism that later "literalizers" of the Christ in seen in the Book of Acts was criticizing.

From the beginning of modern biblical criticism with Ferdinand Christian Baur, it has been argued that the Pseudo-Clementines, texts that in early times were frequently regarded as part of Biblical canon, are a disguised and coded attack on the Gnostic Paul, fictionalizing him under the name of Simon Magus, in deliberate contrast to Simon Peter. All surviving references to Simon Magus in ancient literature present him in a decidedly negative and highly caricatured light, frequently portraying him as adhering to gnostic theology, and figures in the 2nd century early church, such as Irenaeus, referred to Simon Magus as being the source of all heresies. Thus the conclusion that Simon Magus is a polemical parody of someone, not a real figure in itself, is quite plausible. A clearer connection between Simon Magus and Paul can be found in Marcion's teachings. Marcion claimed he had obtained his teachings from Paul, while Irenaeus stated that Marcion's teacher was Simon Magus, a man whose existence Marcion never even mentions. In all likely hood Simon Magus is a code for the Gnostic Paul.

In 144, Marcion proposed a reform of Christianity for which the church leaders expelled him merely for suggesting: that the Old Testament was contradictory and barbaric and only the Gnostic Paul's teachings are true. Marcion struggled with origin of evil that comes from a loving God; a God not always portrayed so "Loving" in the Old Testament. Marcion, like all philosophers, tries to reconcile the existence of evil and good in the cosmos with the idea of only One God. Not wishing to lay evil at the feet of God Marcion proposes exactly what the ancient did. Marcion postulated that this One God had to emanate from Himself other "Elohim" or "gods" responsible for matter and inherent evil thereby protecting God's reputation as being "all loving". Ancient Egypt had done the same with the Ennead and Ogodod, Judaism the same with the Kabbalah. Moreover, Marcion rejected the idea that Jesus was a historical fleshy individual, rather that "the Christ" was incarnated within each child of God awaiting "birth" from the death imposed on them by their material incarnation and fleshly existence. This is nothing more than the reiteration of the secret teachings of all Sacred Books found in nation after nation. Once one get below the surface "literal" reading of the texts and discovers the hidden wisdom and gnosis of the higher mysteries than the beauty and depth of this allegorical interpretation of the ancient Scriptures and the Christian Bible becomes evident. Marion denounced the profane literal interpretation of the Old Testament and saw it at best as a pseudo-history that overemphasized the evil of God than the love of God. Such characterization of God as being vengeful and evil comes from, as we mentioned above, the evolution of mankind from a tribal and primitive understanding of Nature and the forces of the cosmos. But now, in the first century, such primitive ideas of God were seen to pale in comparison of higher revelations of this One God to mankind over the centuries when these oral traditions of God were first given to mankind by tribal mentalities. As mankind grew in character over the centuries and moved away from a savage mentality so did their understandings of God as being a loving God and not a vengeful God to be feared. Marcion saw the genius of the ancient higher mysteries and the ancient Wisdom Religions as taught by the Gnostic Paul. Rome would not for if they had tried to control mankind through love instead of fear and ignorance of the truth mankind would never had been able to be manipulated so thoroughly as history shows it was by the dogmas of Roman Catholicism. Fear of damnation and the Bishop coupled with ignorance has always been the most powerful tools of religion to control the masses.

Expelled as a Christian from Christianity, Marcion started his own church and was the first to clearly establish a canon, consisting of ten of the Epistles and one Gospel, which Tertullian decades later identified as the Gospel of Luke, though stripped of "unacceptable features" such as the nativity, Old Testament references, etc. Common to all of these items missing from the Lukian account used by Marcion are all the features contributing to a supposed literal & historical existence of a solitary Christ when "the Krst/Christ" was known to be incarnated in all of God's children' a Spiritual dogma which had been taught since ancient Egypt and even before to whole humanity.

Marcion's canon influenced the final canon of the Church. His prefaces to the letters of Paul that he thought authentic were even retained in several versions of the Latin Vulgate Bible, and many of his proposed emendations of these letters and the Gospel of Luke have turned up in numerous surviving manuscripts, showing that his legacy was intimately integrated at various levels throughout the surviving Church, affecting the transmission as well as the selection of the final canonical texts. Marcion, in 145 C.E., as mentioned earlier, created the first fixed canon of Scriptures and the First New Testament regarding "the Christ" which eliminated all of the Old Testament Scriptures and most of the writings of the early Jewish believers with the exception of Paul and a part of what would later be recognized and called Luke's Gospel. Several factions of Christianity went beyond Marcion's stance and retained the Tanakh and most of today's New Testament canon but added as many as fourteen additional writings. In northern Mesopotamia the early Messianic Community of Judaism (Christianity) included a Gospel of Thomas, since Thomas was the one who had brought the Gospel to that regions. Even after the canon officially closed in the later 4th century, new writing appeared that were considered "inspired" by those individual communities. Early printed editions of Bibles in the Armenian church contained a book entitles, "Third Corinthians."

The followers of the later Gnostic Valentinius systematically decoded the Epistles, claiming that most Christians made the mistake of reading the Epistles literally rather than allegorically. Valentinius understood the conflict between Jews and Gentiles in Romans to be a coded reference to the differences between:

- Psychics (people who are partly Spiritual but have not yet achieved separation from carnality) and
- Pneumatics (totally spiritual people).

The Valentian Gnostic argued that such codes were intrinsic in gnosticism, secrecy being important to ensuring proper progression to true inner understanding and Spiritual growth and evolution of Divinity within mankind. In 2 Corinthians, Paul states he had heard ineffable words which it is not lawful for a man to utter:

2 Cor 12:4 4 How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter. (KJV)

2 Corinthians 12:4 supports the position that gnostic initiates supported with respect to the higher gnostic teachings. However, Paul does also suggest Gnosis puffeth up:

1 Cor 8:1 1 Now as touching things offered unto idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge (gnosis) puffeth up, but charity edifieth. (KJV)

Too often this passage is found with gnosis translated as "knowledge" that puffeth up, which appears to diminish support for gnosticism.

Let us focus for a second. I am sure by now you can imagine the "erratic practices" that developed over time from one group to the next as well as their various interpretative approaches to the Sacred Scriptures. Here we have the Jews, the Gnostic Christians, the anti-Gnostic Christians; both the Jews, the earliest Gnostic Christians, and the later anti-Gnostic Catholics and their daughter the anti-Gnostic Protestants which each relied upon a book, Bible for their religious dogmas.

Unique to all of this were the Gnostics which claimed not the Jewish Old Testament Scriptures for reasons elicited above but yet relied heavily upon the allegorical interpretation of Genesis and creation narratives. Christianity, both Catholic and Protestant, shared common Hebrew Scriptures that both agreed and disagreed with the Jewish Tanakh as well as a host of other New Testament texts; many of which again disagreed with the Hebrew original texts. Then let us not forget the texts common to both that were interpreted gnostically by some and anti-gnostically by others, allegorically by some and literally by others. In light of such a situation we must consider where unity could to be found if any with every community having their "own canon" and "authority" for their own beliefs actions, and often using "their canon" to correct the other communities.

Such inconsistencies were perceived as a big danger by the leaders of the young emerging Gentile Roman Church. This prompted these leaders to define what was "sacred" or "inspired", "accepted" or "rejected" as to the canon and what was to be included as well as excluded from the Bible. Finally, in the latter part of the 4th century the church's canon was closed. The last two books to be admitted were Hebrews and Revelation. Hundreds of Gospels were rejected by Rome that were in circulation in that day and time along with many other writings and in time they made their way to the fires of Rome.

Once the canon was "closed" by the Gentile leaders of the Christian church, the church was free to establish their doctrines and dogmas. Besides relying on the Scriptures, the Gentile leaders of the Christian community, particularly Irenaeus and Tertullian, did irreparable damage to "the faith" by relegating the Scriptures to "second place" in matters of doctrine and authority. Tertullian develop a universal antidote for all heresy in his argument which cuts off heretics at the outset. Tertullian denied every right of appeal to the Holy Scriptures on the grounds that the Holy Scriptures were entrusted to the church of Christ, and only in her (Gentile Christian Church) and by her can they be rightly understood. For your information this violates Scripture for in Romans 9:3 the apostle Paul states: "Who are Israelites (notice he did not say Christians); to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the services of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen."

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that Paul contradicts Tertullian by saying the Scriptures were given to Israel and from Israel would come the Scriptures teaching concerning covenants, law or commandments, services (worship), promises (again allusion to Scripture), and who has been established as the "authority" over all flesh by God....Israel! Are you aware of the 4 levels of Scriptural interpretation used by the Rabbis which are to be used to interpret any and all Sacred Scriptures no matter what? Are you aware that the "literal" reading and interpretation of these Sacred Scriptures were only for children and beginners and that when of "full age" the Sod or Mystical and Metaphysical interpretation of these Sacred Texts was the goal for each Soul? Most likely being raised in a Christian Church you are not.

Heb 5:11-14 11 Of whom we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing. 12 For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat. 13 For every one that useth milk is unskilful in the word of righteousness: for he is a babe. 14 But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. (KJV)

Here above is a veiled allusion and reference to the Kabbalah or the Ennead and Ogodod of ancient Egypt which teaches cosmology, the truth about "the Christ" mistakenly believed to be limited to but one person by the literalizers of the Sacred Scriptures, the true identity of man and his role in creation. It is in such study that one sees that all religions proceed from one source, and are given to different nations of the world from time to time according to their development. It is in such study that one sees why there are so many different forms of religion since mankind is separated from each others and therefore in different stages of growth and Spiritual development. Thus, there are many Sacred Books and in Christianity many different Bibles, some containing books that other branches of the same Christian tree centuries ago decided to cut off to others. It is one thing to have a Bible that is touted correct and inerrant but there is sadly no such thing since being handed down by the hands of finite mankind; many of which had unrighteous religious agendas which not only cut out important teachings of the ancients intended for the whole of mankind but altering the books contained in them at the same time before given to the nations. But that is only half of the problem. Along with this came a never before rigidly imposed "literal" and "historical" interpretation only of the texts; a severely limited hermeneutic that guarantees that one will live and die with such an interpretation never understanding correctly what this Sacred Book, our Bible, truly is teaching. The only salvation for such Bibles is the restored knowledge and gnosis of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and mystery religions that the Gnostic Paul taught before such sacred teachings were butchered during the 2nd through the 5th century by Rome in the making and editing constantly of their Bible.

Tertullian, as well as Irenaeus, are perfect examples of men bent upon given mankind a radical reinterpretation of the ancient Spiritual Wisdom, today called "replacement" theology which is so violently contrary to the true interpretation of the ancient existing mysteries of Sacred Scripture found repeated and veiled by an imposed "literal" and "historical" interpretation of our Bibles. Let us not forget that the KJV version of the Bible says the exact opposite of what Tertullian and modern preachers preach today; namely, that authority was given in the Bible to Israel to teach and rightly interpret the Scriptures for the Gentiles! It is here in Judaism we see the growth of interpretation of all Sacred Scripture culminating in the Mystical and Sod interpretation of Scripture; an interpretation sadly lacking in Christianity today. In this proclamation by Tertullian, the the Church is the only interpreter of Scripture, he establishes a "false" succession of Gentile authority and mistakenly gives it to the Gentile community in hopes to protect them from sects of heretics; in particular referring the earlier Gnostic Christians and their Mystical and "non-literal" and "non-historical" interpretation of "the Christ". There is only one problem! The Jews and Gnostics were not the heretics, in fact, the Jews are the vehicle given to us, the Gentile church, by which we are to learn about the Jewish Scriptures (every book in your Old Testament Christian Bible was written by Jews and not one was written by a Gentile). Ironically, in supposedly protecting the Gentile church from error, Tertullian accomplished what he tried to prevent. We need only look to the over 2,000 different Protestant denominations present today, with over 2,000 different interpretations of the same Bible, and the lack of unity which abounds among them to discern that at least 1,999 have not rightly divided the Word of Truth. The reason; God gave the Jews as the interpreters of the Jewish Book called the Bible and not the Gentiles. What we must to is realize that Scriptural interpretation must be progressive; beginning only with a "literal" interpretation and progressing ultimately to a "Sod" or "Mystical" interpretation if we ever desire to have the ultimate truth concerning what we are to believe about God and His Christ. For me to say that a Baptist's interpretation of the Bible is just as valid and correct as the Jew's interpretation is no less ludicrous than saying that an Eskimo is just as valid interpreter of Judaism as the Rabbi. No wonder that the Jewish nation has rejected our Roman Christian "literalized" and "historicized" theology of Jesus for the last 1,900 years and will continue to do so forever.

At the end of the 15th century when, through the actions of Martin Luther, the Protestant Reformation was born. Luther understood that this "choke-hold" of Roman Catholic authority and interpretation of the Bible had to be wrestled from Rome. The mechanism for achieving this was the very Bible itself. Martin Luther simply removed the Catholic Church as the final authority and substituted his personal belief system and deleted the Apocrypha from the Catholic Bible. The effect of this was that he not only created a "new Bible," the Protestant Bible, but he provided a new standard for interpretation for the Bible. This was a step in the right direction but woefully inadequate as we shall see.

Answer for yourself: First of all, don't you think it strange that a Catholic priest create a Protestant Bible?

Luther not only deleted sacred books from the Bible, but sadly gave authority to the leaders of the newly emerging religious community and the people of God to interpret or misinterpret Scriptures for themselves as they pleased. For Luther, training and education in Scriptural analysis, both linguistical, historical, cultural, and political was not necessary according to Luther. Boy was he wrong and we suffer for this idea today. We call it the "priesthood of the believer" but when you truly understand it and see its awful fruit it a sad joke. The Holy Spirit will guide us into all truth. Really now! I know Christians that will tell me the same thing as Luther, that the Holy Spirit taught me...this...or that...yet they are 180 degrees opposite in their understanding between themselves on the matter from what the Bible clearly teaches; no matter which of the 4 levels of interpretation they use. Most absurdly they usually only use the "literal" or "historical" manner of interpretation and cannot even agree among themselves on this.

It never ceases to amaze me that Protestant Christians accept the New Testament given to them by the early anti-Semitic Catholic Church but refuse the doctrines that these same men teach. Let us take a moment to look at the doctrines taught by those who also gave us the New Testament. As you read as yourself this question:

Answer for yourself: Why do you accept their book but not their doctrines?

Answer for yourself: Can we trust the Holy Spirit to have led these early anti-Semitic Catholics into all truth, and should we trust their collection of writings called the New Testament when they, in many places, contradict Moses and Judaism?

We at Bet Emet cannot, and we offer no man apologies.

Answer for yourself: How can the Holy Spirit, the Christian Bible, teach of the same doctrine yet arrive at diametrically opposite conclusions (just look at the conflicting and contrasting 2,000 different denominations in Christianity today) and not be schizophrenic? Could our interpretation of the Scriptures we inherited be the culprit? Does there exist an ancient understanding of these same or similar Scriptures as found in various nations and Scared Books that held a common understanding among them? Do we have it in Christianity today and if not then why not?

History teaches us that five factors fueled the growth of the Protestant movement and paved the way for countless numbers of denominations, non-denominations, inter-denominations and cults in the 20th century:

- a broad-based public acceptance of an anti-Catholic movement
- a new belief system whose aim was to protest against the established system
- the translation of the Bible into the modern language of the people
- invention of the printing press giving the masses access to the Bible
- the acceptance of untrained leaders as authorities and authoritative interpreters of the Bible (remember the Eskimo example?)

Answer for yourself: What has history recorded for us concerning the last four hundred and fifty years since Martin Luther began his protest? Even before his death Luther was confronted by those who were protesting "his" belief system and within a few years the cycle was repeated over and over again.

HOW CAN WE NOT REPEAT THE SAME MISTAKES OF HISTORY?

We must be willing to go back behind Protestantism, Catholicism, and Rabbinic Judaism, back to the time period in which the concept of canon began to first take hold. We must be willing to go behind these religions and their canons as they exist today to find the ancient Spiritual ideas sacred to mankind for thousands of years which, for better or for worse, are but blurred distortions in the Sacred Scriptures which we have inherited today. We must be willing to go behind the inherited "literal" and "historical" interpretations of our Bibles today to uncover the hidden sacred Mystical and Metaphysical interpretations of our Scriptures as the ancients understood them since they gave them to the world in the first place. Be must begin with the "faith once given to the saints" and this is not just a reference to Judaism but to its forefathers the ancient Egyptians. Such a faith and truth regarding how to best approach and interpret our Sacred Scriptures today is best sought beginning with Judaism and tracing the origins for its dogmas and doctrines to their earliest origins. Having see the "radical reinterpretation" of almost all religious dogmas by 2nd century Roman Catholicism, the hope for find original truth is useless here. We must begin our study before these religious dogmas were "radically reinterpreted" by Rome; that is why Judaism is the place to begin and having done that then we only need to trace them backwards in religious history as well as follow their interpretations to its ultimate fount and source; that being ancient Egypt and it is here we find the "common" link and thread of interpretation running through thousands of years until Rome's 2nd century alteration of this ancient Sacred Wisdom.

In so doing you will find what I did; namely the founders of all world religions, the Givers of the Scriptures of the world, are all members of a mighty Brotherhood of Spiritual Teachers, who watch over and guide the nations. These Divine Men have charge of the body of teaching known as the Ancient Wisdom. When you study the different religions you will find that always much the same events are recorded for their Founders; they are often said to be "born of a virgin" in a cave or a dungeon; to be in danger of being slaughtered as infants; to be worshipped by wise men who recognize their divinity, and so on; and they are always represented as being tempted, and as undergoing great suffering on account of the sin and sorrow of the world. Not only that when you get beneath the different cultural representations and unique symbolisms particular to every culture and religion there lies a "commonality" in the esoteric interpretation of their religion that goes unnoticed by most when only viewing the exoteric and surface dissimilarities between them. Just because "symbols" are different from culture to culture and religion to religion does not mean that when you "crack" the esoteric understanding of these symbols that you will not find an astonishing similarity in all world religions and what they taught; that is until you come to the 2nd through the 5th century when this esoteric understanding of God and His cosmos and His interconnections with all that exists though "His Krst/Christ" was "literalized" and "historicized" and confined to but one solitary supposed person in the form of a supposed "literal" and "historical" Christ as the 3rd Logos. The Kingdom of Heaven is within each child of being being created in the image of this God but Rome saw fit to distance this Spiritual reality from mankind and limit such blessedness to but one solitary supposed person of their own creation; this creation of Rome being a "literalization" of a "Mystical" understanding of man's True Self as "the Christ". And yes, there are 3 Logi but that is a study for another day. Let me give you a hint such a study is connected to the principle expressed in the two different and conflicting creation stories in Genesis chapter 1 and chapter 2. Metaphysics is the key that unveils this secret and mystery to the sincere seeker of truth.

In closing, we have many Bible that share among them a common "pattern" that is to be understood and identified in our Sacred Scriptures and the common "literal" and "historical" understanding only of these Scriptures is devoid of such an understanding. Our task is not easy but yet not impossible. We must begin with our first feeble steps trying to understand that what was common to all canons and this cannot be done with only a superficial and primary "literal" and "historical" understanding of these pseudo-historical texts. To do this we must examine the culture of the people who gave us the Tanakh at first and go beneath the symbols which appear to separate Judaism from other world religions. Remember that beneath the exoteric interpretation of all Sacred Scripture and it apparent cultural and religious differences resides an undercurrent of esoteric interpretation that is similar if not identical shared by all world religions and Sacred Books. Yes, we can use our Bibles but we need knowledge concerning the integrity of our Bibles when compared with the Hebrew to begin with; then and only then can we then look at methods of interpretations. But our texts must be accurate and honestly interpreted from the Hebrew if we are even to try such such an endeavor. This is where we must begin; textual analysis before we even try to graduate to interpretative analysis. We can start by examining the words of our Bibles from the perspective of first the Jewish culture, within their own time period, and according to the original language they were spoken from. This means first of all a Jewish interpretation of the Bible and the Hebrew Texts from the Jewish Tanakh and not the later forgeries of them as they exist in our Christian Bibles. If our understanding of the Bible is different from the understanding we would have had in the first century then rest assured then we have the wrong understanding today no matter how we might interpret it. Arguing over interpretation is foolish if our texts are wrong in the first place. If the words of our Bible are interpreted in English, and they have different meanings when examined from the Jewish Scriptures and their interpretation of them, then we have the wrong meanings attached to these words today, regardless of what Webster says. Once we have this information we will be able to examine Judaic, Catholic, and Protestant belief systems and their interpretations of these Scriptures and in so doing note particularly the divergence and difference we find that should not be there. Only then can be assured we have "the" truth that is taken from our restored texts after they are compared to how they exist in the Hebrew Tanakh. The next step once we are assured of the accuracy of the texts is to learn their meaning using the 4 levels of Rabbinical exegesis of these "corrected" Christian texts since compared with their Hebrew originals. Having graduate to the Sol level of interpretation we see the highest Spiritual hidden mysteries of which we never dreamed. Only then are we ready for the last step in such study as we move beyond the 4 levels of Jewish interpretation of their own Scriptures and trace the Sod meaning back through history and connect the dots with the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and see for ourselves that truly there is nothing "new" under the Sun; that the ancients had this marvelous and breath-taking understanding of our Spiritual existence and True Self since the beginning of time. Only then can we for certain see the fallacy of such a rigorous and foolishness imposed "literal" and "historical" interpretation of our Bibles and its "Jesus Story".

When one is ready let me recommend astounding authors to help you in such a pursuit of Divine Truth like Alvin Kuhn, William Kingsland, Gerald Massey, and others.

WHY CANNOT CHRISTIANITY AGREE ON THE INTERPRETATION OF THE RELIGIOUS TEXTS WHICH MAKE UP THEIR BIBLES?

It is a tragedy but many of those in positions of power and authority, especially in our churches, work diligently to keep their followers ignorant of Biblical truths. Many of these Biblical truths would challenge existing teachings by mainline denominations, and if followed, would elicit repentance in both methodology or ministry as well as practice of the Christian faith as we know it today. History has proven that ignorance is an essential ingredient in the manipulation and control of people. We truly are sheep led to slaughter because we don't know the truth let alone how to understand this Bible correctly that we cherish!

Ignorance I can understand, but I cannot and will not wink at deception. When speaking of deceiving the people of God I refer to those numerous religious scholars, theologians and church leaders who know the "truth" but allow lies to abound to preserve their "easy" way of life as well as their empires. I will not name names, but you only have to turn on Christian television to see many of whom I speak.

Lies and falsehoods are permitted to linger when they are needed to protect established authorities. Such authorities know for certain that "knowledge is power" and if that knowledge becomes "common knowledge" their kingdoms will crumble. Thus the need for Bet Emet Ministries. We desire for you to know the truths of God's Word in order for you to come to unbiased conclusions regarding both your faith and correct practice of your faith.

Such a correct practice of your faith can come only from a correct translation and understanding of the words of the Bible. Jesus of the New Testament, revealing the "Mind of Christ" to the world was represented as a Jew and he spoke Hebrew and not Greek or English. In the struggle for power, the primary objective of your church has been, most likely, to make sure you agreed with the pastor's interpretation of the Bible, which may or may not be correct. If your pastor has not consulted both a Greek lexicon or dictionary, as well as the Hebrew lexicon, then you cannot be assured you have been given the correct meaning of the Bible as taught by him. In the struggle for power, the primary objective of most churches was for all the congregation to hold exactly the same meaning concerning that particular's church doctrine regardless of the teachings of Jesus on the matter. Many have succeeded marvelously.

For the most part, membership and acceptance in most churches is determined by adherence to creeds of faith. Often this can be also a requirement for salvation. Such churches emphasize "correct beliefs" instead of living a moral and ethical life-style. It might be a shock to them, as well as you, but Jesus would not have adhered to their creeds and would often fall outside of their categories of salvation.

Leaders of such churches usually insist that their members hold the same beliefs and the same definitions of doctrinal words accepted in that congregation. If these accepted meanings are challenged and compared to the religion and words of Jesus, the results could be devastating for the powers that be. The usual manor of dealing with those "trouble makers" who want the real words of Jesus is expulsion from the group or church.

Today we have thousands of different Christian religions. The list is endless and there is little agreement in all points of doctrine between them. In order to find our way through the maze of different Christian religions we must have a "key" to open the doors of truth to the real religion of Jesus. We must become aware of basic principles of finding the truths of God's Word. Such principles involve linguistics. The best assurance for accuracy that one possess is the basic understanding of how words work.

Words are useless if they cannot be understood by the other person. Not only is it paramount to have the correct understanding of the words we use that in our everyday vocabulary, but we needed understanding for everyday words that are receiving new meanings. Since this is often done on an individual basis there is not always a consensus of opinion on every word. It is very common to have various shades of meaning for the same word. In some cases, the shades of meaning may range for almost identical meanings to exact opposite meanings.

New words are continually coming into "being" in the English language, and old ones are continually going out of use and eventually into disuse.

We arrive at a problem that confronts sound Biblical interpretation today. How can we arrive at the older, more correct Biblical meanings of words when they have fallen into disuse? Such disuse of words make them unfamiliar, and because of this, often unpleasing when their meanings are discerned because they contradict established and accepted teachings of the churches of today. But, I ask you who is more correct; Jesus or your church? I hope you do not even have to think about that one.

The meaning of a word is in its use. To accurately understand a word, we must know how it is used. A word derives its meaning from both usage and mutual agreement.

YOU NEED TO ASK 4 QUESTIONS EVERY TIME YOU READ AND STUDY THE BIBLE

Not surprising, but countless religious battles have been fought over the meaning of a word. New words have been created, old words redefined, and some words even censored and finally forgotten. Knowing this it is imperative we ask ourselves some very important questions:

- What did the word in question mean to the person who spoke or wrote it in his day and time?
- What did Jesus' words mean to him, in Hebrew and in his culture?
- How were Jesus' words understood by his audience?
- Should we not have the same meanings attached to the words and Spiritual concepts as shown taught by Jesus or should we think it not strange when we discover that many of the religious teachings two thousand years ago or earlier have alternate meanings imposed upon them today since the rise of Roman Christianity and Orthodox Christianity?

You protect yourself from errors in interpretation of the Bible by gaining a historical perspective of the person's life as well as obtaining a knowledge of possible changes of the meanings of his words through time and the conditions under which said changes occurred. But possessing a detailed knowledge of the person's culture you become better equipped to understand the laws concerning the speaker's language.

When it comes to understanding the words of the most important figure in Christianity, Jesus, we have only to ask "what did Jesus' words mean to him?" To look these words up in a Webster's Dictionary is foolish and a waste of time. One must use a Greek and Hebrew Lexicon if he ever hopes of ascertaining the truth behind what he reads in his Bible today.

There have been countless interpretations of Jesus' words by an uncountable number of theologians, scholars and religious leaders over the last 2 millennia. But, probably 99% of the people who attempted to explain Jesus' words and message never began their study by asking "The" biggest question of all: "What did Jesus' words mean to him and those people in the first century in Judaism?"

THE FOUR LAWS CONCERNING LANGUAGE

To arrive at the meanings of words as they were understood by Jesus we must follow 4 laws concerning language.

Laws of Language

1) To understand a word one must possess knowledge of the author's culture.

We define culture as "the composite behavior of a people which is passed on from generation to generation. This behavior is again composed of knowledge, beliefs, laws, morals, religion, customs, concepts, habits, institutions, and any other capabilities of a given people in a given time period."

In the search for the correct and original meanings of the words of Jesus one must acquire a detailed knowledge about Jesus' beliefs, morals, laws, religion, customs, concepts, habits, and institutions of the Jewish people in the land of Israel during the first century of the common ear. Jesus' Jewish culture becomes the primary ruler and standard by which one can accurately test any doctrine or translation of a passage ascribed to Jesus. This is the most accurate test one can use to identify heretical and false teachings. The same standard and rule of thumb can be applied to the words of every book and writer in the Bible.

2) One cannot accurately understand the words of people from another culture if he or she interprets them in the terms of one's own culture.

People instinctively have the tendency to consider their way of life as the best or most correct way. They feel that their life is the standard and should be used to evaluate others. Thus, others are rated by how much they are "alike" or "unlike" ourselves. We are the norm.

We incorrectly believe that the American culture is superior to any culture; past or present. This tendency results in the using of our culture as the yardstick by which we measure all other cultures and people. When other cultures differ from ours, they are not considered "right, good, progressive, superior, or true", but rather "wrong, bad, backward, incorrect, inferior, and in needed of repentance."

If we are unaware that correct understanding of a word is only possible if we project ourselves back into the meaning in the culture when the word and document was written, then our culture becomes the standard for understanding the words of Jesus. You may have not noticed but God did not choose to give mankind His revelation to Gentiles, nor to give it in the English language, let alone in 1994.

For example, most translators chose to translate the Greek word "ekklesia" in Matt. 16:18 as "church". If you are a Protestant American you already have a picture & a host of ideas concerning the concept of the "church". But we make one fatal mistake. We mistakenly assume that our image of the "church" is synonymous with Jesus' concept of the church or synagogue in the first century. His meaning cannot be what ours might be in contemporary Christianity today because Catholic Christianity, from which we get our pictures of the church, was not even created until the 3rd through the 5th century. The same can be said about Protestant Christianity which only began in the sixteenth century. Such later concepts never existed in the "Mind of Christ" and the texts we read in our Bible. The church of today is not the standard, but rather the church of the book of Acts. Have you looked and compared your church, its doctrines, and obedience to the Word of God to the original "pattern" given by God in the first century for both the Jew and non-Jew? Well, maybe you should, and quickly. Such is the beginning of "knowledge" and "wisdom" necessary for one's Souls enlightenment.

We look to the Jewish culture of Jesus for the correct meaning of the Greek word "ekklesia" we quickly discover that it is the Greek word used to translate the Hebrew words "qahal" and "miqra". The English translation for "qahal" would be "community" or "assembly" and the English translation for "miqra" would be "assembly called out to celebrate the appointed times (Biblical Feasts and Festivals) of the Lord." Now let me point out something to you. The Christian Church does not observe nor celebrate the Festivals of the Bible nor the same holy days of God as did the Jews for instance. These "appointed times" with God have connection to the equinoxes and solstices and the Sacred Science of the Old Testament and mystical Judaism, as well as the Mystery Religions, connect the path of the Sun through the Zodiac and the year with the "pattern" for the Souls' evolution on this planet Earth. A hundred books could be written on this subject as well as how the "Jesus Story" in the New Testament is both a picture of the path of the Sun through the Heavens (symbolic for the invisible Living Energy of the God of the cosmos" as well as the evolution of the Soul of man while in his present incarnation. The Jesus or "Krst/Christ", Divine Mind of Christ, has instructed us that he was calling out an assembly of people to celebrate the appointed times (festivals of the Lord).

Answer for yourself: Does your church celebrate Passover, Pentecost, Unleavened Bread, Rosh HaShannah, Yom Kippur, Sukkot, Channukah, etc.? What have these Festivals to do with the evolution of mankind's Soul? Are they for the Jews's only? If so, then why do the non-Jews in the Hebrew Scriptures keep these same festivals with the Jews? What have we missed due to Rome's antisemitism and fabrication of parts of our Bible that steer us away from Judaism and these Spiritual Truths? If our current Christianity today does not participate in these Biblical Festivals, then what is the reason for their existence since the expressed purpose of being called out by Jesus (the Mind of Christ expressed through the Jewish faith) was for the people of God to meet with God at His appointed times? Why do you go continue to meet with a congregation and assembly when they are meeting for purposes not expressed by "the Christ" as the reason for meeting together in the first place? What are we learning today instead of what we should have been taught" by more gifted teachers? What agenda is there higher than the one expressed through the teachings of "the Christ" which, I might add, were also the central focus of the ancient world religions who also recognized the importance of the Sun and these special "appointed times" with God such as the equinoxes and solstices? Isn't it about time we learned the truth about our Soul and its intended Spiritual evolution and how it is connected to the path of the Sun as did the ancients which came before us? Why is the word for "Passover" correctly interpreted 27 times out of 28 instances in the New Testament except in the book of Acts where it is translated as Easter? Could it be that Rome did not want the non-Jews to discover the truth that all mankind are intended to celebrate and observe the "Passover"? Is they why they altered the word to make it Easter instead of Passover? How much more truth have we lost? Dare we look any deeper?

3) The reading of translated material calls for a sensitive appreciation of the author's culture.

An accurate translator of the Bible understands both languages and recognizes the various shades of meaning between words. Being careful he guards against projecting his culture into the translation and reproduces the original message in Hebrew or Greek into the closest natural English equivalent. Not only are we at danger from the writer interjecting his culture into the material, but also the reader may project his culture and world into the document. This takes place automatically without premeditation. Regardless of the reasons for it, the original message is never understood. Many have spent their entire lives wanting to live according to the words of the Bible, while in fact they never really understood its message.

An example to prove my point is with the mistaken interpretations surrounding the Sabbath. The Catholic Home Encyclopedia states: "The seventh day of the week in the Jewish calendar, from Friday evening to Saturday evening. The Sabbath no longer has any particular significance in the West except in so far as it is regarded as specially dedicated in honor of our Lady. It was formerly the law that Saturday as well as Friday should be observed as a day of abstinence; the law is now definitely abolished. Among Catholics it is the first day of the week, Sunday." Protestants basically agree with the above definition of the Roman Catholic Church. There are always exceptions to this heresy, like the Seventh Day Adventists, Seventh Day Baptists or Seventh Day Church of God. For what ever reason, Protestantism decided to follow the Roman Catholic definition instead of Jesus' definition of the Sabbath as well as "his custom".

Luke 4:16 16 And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read. (KJV)

To this let me add that the same custom was held for the non-Jew by the Jerusalem Council as well when discussing the problem of so many non-Jews turning to God and their responsibility to the Torah:

2 Cor 3:14-15 14 But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same veil untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which veil is done away in Christ. 15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read (Moses is read in the synagogues on the Sabbath), the veil is upon their heart. (KJV)

Let me say that for Jesus and the "Mind of Christ" expressed through Judaism the Sabbath was, is, and forever will be from Friday evening through Saturday evening. It may not have dawned on you yet, as it has not on the majority of the Protestants and Roman Catholics alike, that the commandment to keep the Sabbath is one of the Ten Commandments! This commandment is given more space for explanation and emphasis than any of the other commandments. This Sabbath commandment carries the same weight as the other nine. Do you or your pastor desire to change "You shall not murder"? Then why change the one about the Sabbath?

If you desire to keep the Sabbath and imitate Jesus as we are commanded, then you must look to Jesus' Jewish culture. It is much more than simply attending a church on Saturday instead of Sunday. Do you know that if you wished to go and worship with Jesus you would have to change your day of worship you now practice to the Sabbath instead of the Day of the Sun? You might say, "well Jesus could change to Sunday." If he did so he would be committing a sin and I wonder what Yahweh would think about that. Are we sinning because we do not keep the Sabbath? Yes we are, so what else in new in the Christian church which broke away from the real religion of Jesus.

4) When reading the Bible, the words, sentences, and paragraphs must be examined in context.

The context is that which precedes and or follows any part of a discourse which throws light on its meaning. A word can have both a central & a contextual meaning. The central meaning of a word is the meaning generally understood when the word is given without a context. The contextual meaning is the meaning which is determined by its contextual setting. A good rule of thumb is to read a chapter ahead and following the verse in question as this will do a lot to clarify and bring a better understanding of the verse. Let us look at an example.

Acts 21:20 states "You see, brother, how many thousands of Jews have believed and all of them are zealots for the law." It is simple to see that those who "believe" are admirers and zealots for the Torah (law). In other words, the disciples of this Christ in the first century were teaching their fellow Jews a message which caused them to return to the teachings of Torah, the Jewish Bible.

We are in immediate conflict with several foundational doctrines of the modern church when we understand the above scripture in context. One Christian dogma and doctrine declares that "We are no longer under the law" and another states that "The Christian Bible is not the same as the Jewish Bible." These doctrines would have been not only absurd to Jesus, but also heretical.

If you practice these few principles in your Bible study you will quickly discover that many of the teachings of modern Christianity are unrelated to the beliefs held sacred by the New Testament Jesus let alone the Jewish faith. Greek philosophers who came to faith in the God of Israel along with the later Roman Catholic Church redefined numerous key words and then labored to prohibit the use of these words in their original languages.

I would like to share with you a few words whose meanings have been dramatically altered. Changes in these words were necessary in order to validate the Roman authority as the "replacement authority" as well as their "replacement religion" that was to surpass Judaism. Thus Rome ripped from Jerusalem and the Jewish Congregation and its leaders the right to "sit in Moses seat". The "keys to the Kingdom" were given to Jews and not Gentiles (Rom 9:4). Check it out! Where has the Jewish Faith which has survived unbelievable odds let alone Hitler ever been replaced by Roman Christianity in the mind of God? Where? Compare the definitions given by the Catholic Home Encyclopedia with those of both Protestantism and then look at what these same words and religious dogmas meant to a Jew exampled to us as Jesus in the first century to whom we look for the "Mind of God's Christ" expressed through the Jewish Faith. Instead of the "Mind of Christ" in Judaism sadly Christians have unwittingly inherited the mind of Constantine. What a loss!

AS YOU STUDY AND READ THE BIBLE...KEEP THESE FOLLOWING QUESTIONS IN MIND

As we examine these words please keep the following question in mind:

- Which definition is most closely related to yours as taught by your church?
- How would using Jesus' definition (as interpreted from a Hebraic and Jewish perspective since Jesus is a Jew) affect the practice of your faith in your church?
- Did the "re-defining" of these terms enhance one group's authority over the other? Which group benefited, the Roman Gentile Catholic Church or the Jewish Church in Jerusalem?
- Why did Protestantism change the meanings of words which had been accepted by Christianity for over 1000 years?

I challenge you to approach your pastors and teachers and find out if they are capable of working with the Greek and Hebrew in their Bibles. If not, I suggest you tell them to begin by getting, as I did, necessary books that help to correctly interpret the Scriptures. Ask them if they know anything about the culture of Jesus and if not suggest that they learn the truth about this "Mind of Christ" expressed through the Jewish faith and not Rome who yet today denies the truths of Judaism.

Answer for yourself: Are you being taught about Jesus' culture in your church?

I suggest you begin to study even if your pastors don't. Get the facts and make sure you are getting the right message God desires you hear every Saturday.

Answer for yourself: Your church does keep Jesus' and God's Sabbaths like His Biblical Holy Days or just the Constantine calendar? Which would you look to if you were seeking to set next to this Jesus the next time you gathered in your assembly? Sorry, not only would you never find him in an assembly on Sunday but never would he attend an Easter service or any of the other Constantine Church Calendar days. God gave all mankind the Biblical Holy Days and this is "forever"!

Things to ponder without a doubt!

WHAT SHOULD WE DO WITH AN UNRELIABLE NEW TESTAMENT?

Recently we encountered a rather common reaction by some connected to this ministry when presented with certain facts concerning the New Testament that challenged its "inerrancy" and "infallibility." When people are exposed to such information after "believing otherwise since childhood" they often are shaken and make decisions which are less than wise in an over-reaction to what they have learned. Conservativism is always the best course to take, but when confronted with facts that challenge one's belief system and expose much of it as error, these newly "frustrated skeptics" usually voice repeatedly and make sweeping statements to the fact that since the New Testament (NT) has been shown to contain numerous errors and inaccurate accounts of both historical facts that the New Testament should not be used "at all." In other words, they believe since it can be shown to much less than inerrant and infallible; it has no value any longer. Such I believe is not the right course to take even when confronted with many errors, additions, and deletions concerning the religion of Judaism (not to mention the inclusion of multiple accounts of paganism mixed in with Judaism and passed off as "normative" Christianity). Let me say again that we at Bet Emet believe that the New Testament CANNOT be ignored in its entirety due to a "biased agenda" on the part of the early Church in their attempt to replace the religion of Yeshua with one of their own making (which is our legacy today).

What are we to do with such charges, but more than that, with the others who lack adequate understanding, knowledge, and stability in this area who are swayed by other's comments and totally desire to do away completely with the New Testament instead of studying to correctly interpret it? How reliable is the New Testament? What should be the role played by the New Testament in the life of an "informed believer" who has been awakened to the hidden truths within the New Testament which only consistent scholarship will reveal? Instead of letting "the knowledge of the truth set them free," too often these new initiates to conflicting truths that expose much of the New Testament as fable respond in panic and "lose their faith" instead of interpreting such experience as God removing the error from their life in order to draw them closer to Him and allowing them, maybe for the first time in their lives, to worship Him in Spirit and in TRUTH. With this as the goal I wish in this article to reveal to the average Christians the role of the New Testament for his life after he has come to such knowledge of the unreliability of the New Testament and is convinced of this fact from multiple attestations from facts, language, and history.

THE FALLACY OF "ALL OR NOTHING" MENTALITY

The skeptic who wishes to dismiss the entire NT as a "pious fraud" misunderstands the purpose and historical origins of the NT texts. Although NT contradictions exist concerning both Yeshua and Paul (changes regarding both what they originally believed and taught), it does not discredit the historical basis of the NT record of the New Testament event which is only the "record" of the oral tradition concerning the events recorded. However, not all is as simple as that, for we know from narrative criticism that many NT events were invented to tell a story about Yeshua (in particular to pit him against his religion and his religion against him; thus creating the need for a new religion, as well as mixing within Judaism elements of paganism and mystery religions). Please request newsletter #2 of the series "Jewish Origins Of Christianity" where beyond a doubt I prove to you by factual as well as historical analysis that events recorded in the New Testament COULD NEVER HAVE HAPPENED because they involve "issues" where are easily provable as inaccurate when considering the religion of Judaism. We can be certain of this because of inaccuracies in dates, historical events, and things said about Judaism which are entirely incorrect thus revealing a non-Jewish writer who got his facts incorrect (which no Jewish child would, let alone record as fact things which are not). But you see, because the average Christian knows little or nothings about Judaism, we read the accounts of the New Testament as if they are recorded FACTUALLY, when only a slight understanding of Judaism (the religion of Yeshua) will quickly show you that what is recorded as occurring to Yeshua could not have since it would require conditions to exist which never would or could. Read that newsletter and see for yourself.

Having understood the problem as stated above, when we are able to do so we should give the benefit of the doubt to those passages that seem historically or contextually probable within the New Testament as the New Testament is the chronicle of evens first possessed as "oral traditions" which were eventually written and recorded.

The problem seems to lie with an irrational "all or nothing" approach to the NT texts. When the debate over "all or nothing acceptance of the New Testament" is objectively viewed as representing only the extreme views of both sides of the ideological spectrum the result is often little more than a glimpse at the insecurity of the believer or the stubborn pride of the skeptic when encountering truths which challenge his belief system. What we need in modern Biblical scholarship and criticism is less dogmatism from both extremes and more understanding of current conservative mainstream biblical scholarship.

Josh McDowell [1976] feels that any biblical interpretation which deviates from Fundamentalist orthodoxy (and who is to determine that?) will result in a "slippery-slope" ending in agnosticism. I believe he is severely in error, for to agree with his stance means you uphold your church tradition over conflicting Biblical facts or truths which often correct your church. Such action discredits the Bible and God Himself. If you think of it, if your experience is to be the barometer of your "truth" you literally make God a liar when His Word contradicts your experience.

At the other extreme are a handful of dogmatic skeptics who, in their enthusiastic fantasy to bring the whole Bible crashing down around us, proceed to engage in poor exegesis and confused interpretation. Many of these "enlightened" skeptics would themselves benefit from "trips to the library" where they can spend years of investigative research to help them arrive at truths not quickly seen or understood.

Despite this charged atmosphere, we can still look critically at the NT and analyze those parts of it which are based in historical fact, and contrast them to those passages which seem contextually or historically improbable. Biblical scholars have many tools at their disposal to analyze the NT texts and to arrive at working hypotheses and conclusions. What is required to use these tools is an open mind and attention to detail; preconceived conclusions will only get in the way and hamper your search for truth. Simply said if Yeshua is portrayed differently in a passage from that of known fact or history, then that passage must be treated with greater suspicion.

FOR EXAMPLE...

For example, some passages portray Yeshua in ideological conflict with Pharisaic bystanders (Mt. 23:23-25). But many of Yeshua' own actions and teachings are uniquely Pharisaic in origin: "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath".

Many scholars believe that Yeshua was a Pharisee himself. Therefore those passages which attempt to portray Pharisees fervently disagreeing with Yeshua are suspicious due to this problem of context and must be analyzed further in light of what Judaism both believed and taught. The answer to this problem of context may be a simple one, because with little reading and research, you can easily see that many times when Yeshua is challenged by Pharisees over the washing of hand, healing on the Sabbath, or eating on the Sabbath, or doing "work" on the Sabbath, enlightened research reveals that Judaism and the Pharisees NEVER, NEVER, NEVER held such positions that would lead to "supposed" conflicts with Yeshua. NEVER! These supposedly instances of conflict between Yeshua and the leaders of his religion are easily provable to be "inventions" of the Gentile church which would later try to lay the groundwork for having Yeshua being forced to reject his faith, thus paying the way for the creation of a new religion and Gentile faith (contemporary Christianity) to replace a Jewish faith which disowned Yeshua. It never happened. Perhaps the writer couldn't remember who it was that argued with Yeshua and so inserted the Pharisees into that portion of the text out of convenience instead of "Sadducees" which inquiry would suggest. This happens a lot in the New Testament. One quick example...Paul was carrying letters to arrest those of this new faith in Damascus (no less) as recorded in Acts as he persecuted the "elect.". One problem, a Pharisee NEVER had such a right or power of arrest, but only those working in league with the Chief Priest or Sadducees. So which was Paul....a Pharisee or Sadducees, for one thing is certain, Gamileal tells the Sadducees and Chief Priest to quit beating Peter and John and to let them alone.....this is the stance of Phariseeism toward this Messianic Movement within Judaism. It was Paul who sided with and worked in league with the Sadducees because no Pharisee could or would understanding the extreme conflict between the two camps. So who is writing that Paul had always been a Pharisee..."a Pharisee of Pharisees?

ANOTHER EXAMPLE

An example of "narrative" that seems to conflict with fact and history is the story of Yeshua' arrest and trial. Pilate is introduced as a confused, yet sympathetic peace-maker in the focal crowd-scene prior to the demand for the release of Yeshua Barabbas. (Mk. 15; Lk. 23; Jn. 18) The narrative seems entirely made up for several reasons: "Barabbas" is Aramaic for "Son of God," a title thought to be Yeshua Christ's. Also, there was NEVER a custom of releasing prisoners on Passover or any Jewish holiday. Pilate's persona seems absurdly out of place from the bloodthirsty monster that Philo wrote emperor Augustus about. Crucifixion was a Roman punishment reserved for sedition but Yeshua seems to have been accused of blasphemy in the Synoptics (a purely Jewish religious offense). Rome didn't care if Yeshua had blasphemed God. They did it all the time themselves. There are reasonable explanations for this narrative appearing as it does, primarily that many early Christians were afraid to portray Rome as an antagonist to their movement for fear of persecution. By shifting the blame for Yeshua' death to the Jews (an already defeated people from the Jewish Revolt of 70 CE) Christian apologists could convince their pagan neighbors that they held no grudge against them. This narrative however began a long tradition of anti-Semitism that flourishes in the Gospel of John as the writer "lumps and dumps" all Jews as guilty of unbelief by calling them collectively as "the Jews." As the church gains secular power after Constantine's conversion (312 CE) Augustine writes that Jews are allowed to live in the Empire, but only in ghettos and with reduced rights as citizens. (City of God 18.46) After Yeshua was "declared to be God" by the Chalcedonian Definition (451 CE) Jews were accused of deicide (God-killers) and were persecuted until many resettled in Spain and in Moorish lands in North Africa.

Or the answer may be more involved in that the entire event never really occurred at all (for example Yeshua nullifying the Levitical Laws concerning clean and unclean foods in Mark 7 for to do so would have amounted to sin for him to violate the Law. If Yeshua only "says" what he hears the Father say, then how is it possible for him to say something different than the Torah which commands certain foods to be unclean and unfit for consumption. Creative fiction was a frequent tool of the Gentile church as they would put words in the mouth of the Pharisees and Yeshua as well. With some informed study these accounts in the New Testament which are at first understood to say one thing, will upon such study, say something quite different from what we read and the account in question quickly becomes a "non-issue." Such account were usually created to separate Yeshua from his faith, they necessitating the creation of a replacement religion. It is in this gray area that biblical scholars must operate. Never is there a time when a scholar decides to "throw out" the entire NT because of such contextual problems. For only by accurate interpretation and examination of the NT will we come to understand the dynamics involved that caused the Gentiles to follow "another Gospel" when warned not too, and only through "informed" study of the New Testament can we see how the Gentile fit into Israel before the artificial and total separation of "Jewish Christianity" from "Biblical Judaism" in the fourth century.

Also, there is never a time when a scholar takes the entire NT "prima facie". It is incorrect to argue that the entire NT is "divinely-inspired" or historically valid in every detail. Yet it is just this position that the average church member seems to believe. There are hundred and hundreds of errors and contradictions in the New Testament alone which the casual reader often overlooks. Send for my list of Biblical Contradictions to quickly understand that there is no such thing as "inerrancy" and "infallibility" to the Bibles we carry today. In their zeal to refute such attacks on the presumed "infallibility and inerrancy" of the Bible, average "unknowledgeable" Christians defend ferociously this biased fallacy of inerrancy. In the face of conflicting facts only heard but never studied for themselves they contend that the NT is completely reliable and unbiased in its entirety. As I have just pointed out, when the NT is seen in the proper context this pendulum swing is unwarranted and just as awkward as the radical skeptic's bias charge.

EVOLUTION OF THE JESUS TRADITION

When we do critique the NT texts further we find that there were many "layers" of tradition and story piled atop the historical Yeshua. This dynamic process obscures the historical Yeshua from the later Christology that most contemporary Christians advocate which was created in the fourth century, but had no such previous foundation.

Today Christians and Jews disagree as to who this obscured historical Yeshua really was, but they do agree that the post-Easter Christ which is taught today is far different from the real wandering rabbi and Jewish peasant of first-century Palestine. That this very metamorphosis of Yeshua took place is the subject of this work and this ministry. I shall attempt to show that both the NT texts and the resultant portrayal of Yeshua have changed radically since the early first century when Yeshua lived. Not only has the Christian Church believed in "another Gospel," but they put their faith and trust in "another Yeshua" other than the historical Yeshua who actually lived. Having said that let me ask you this: "Don't you want the facts concerning the "real Yeshua" and don't you desire to have your faith placed in the truth concerning this Jewish Rabbi named Yeshua? If you do then please read on.

WHY THE ALL OR NOTHING MENTALITY IS WRONG

There are generally seven arguments for the integrity and veracity of the NT in general and the four canonical gospels in particular:

The apostles are never legendized and are portrayed as normal, human beings complete with the failures that such humanity entails. The apostles stood the most to gain from exaggerating their own exploits, but since they did not aggrandize themselves this argues against bias on their part. The texts themselves look and feel like narrative history, not a work of fiction. There is only one problem, the Bible we carry today is not the collection of documents used by Yeshua' church in the first century, but consist of Paul's writings along with Gentile renditions called "Gospels" created at the turn of the century. The "texts" considered Scripture by the early Yeshua Church can be found today, however, mainline Christianity have inherited a "Catholic Bible" and seem little interested in knowing differently. It never ceases to amaze me that since we use a "Catholic Bible," then why do we refuse to attend the Catholic Church? Lastly, by the way, those who determined which writings were to be in the "New Testament" prayed to Mary, prayed to the dead, believed in purgatory, gave money (indulgences) to buy out of punishment loved ones who previously perished, believed the wine and bread of the Eucharist (Lord's Supper) actually became the ACTUAL flesh and blood of Yeshua, etc. Need I go on? Does it not bother you that you cannot accept anything of which I just recorded, but yet we trust "their spirituality" in selecting a groups of writings that completely replaced the authority of Yeshua' Bible...the Torah and Tanakh?

- The early Jewish Church acted consistently in an anti-bias fashion, purging heretical texts from its own canon. This preserved the integrity of the texts as we have them today because they "knew the difference" between "reliable and unreliable reports" and "opted for the truth."

- The miracles that Yeshua performed were unique in their telling and were not told with a flair that would indicate exaggeration or fabrication.
- Each gospel was written without the influence of the other writers in different parts of the known world. As such, they constitute "five to eight independent witnesses" to the miracle accounts which indicates that the miracles ring true. Although the gospels share "some data" they have a very different "development path" using different literary styles and oral traditions as their foundation. Since each gospel seems to derive from a different source (the Synoptic problem) and yet tell the same story, we have excellent evidence for an unbiased and historically truthful account of Yeshua' ministry.
- Even where the gospels do share a like source, (Mark was used by both Matthew and Luke, "there is no tendency to embellish the narratives. The writers seem to function as responsible scribes, in an area in which it would be easy/natural to embellish or fabricate." Given that there were many places where the authors could have placed "innocent" statements to embellish Yeshua and they did not, we can rely on the gospel narratives as historically valid accounts.
- Another reason for not throwing out the entire New Testament because of inaccuracies and fabrications is the argument that says that the time period was too short between Yeshua' own ministry and the appearance of these documents to indicate wholesale fabrication in the manner so typical of the Hellenistic "divine man" gods of the period. Because the Yeshua movement arose so quickly, there must have been a real, historical Yeshua that catalyzed it early on. The fabricated gods of the pagan world took centuries to fully develop into their final characterization.
- Since we see a good number of seemingly contradictory statements, where different authors seem to disagree with each other on minor points, this further argues for veracity over legend because if the authors were creating a legend, they would have smoothed over all of these contradictions. Just because we find a few problems with the texts, that is no reason to throw out the entire NT as too problematical to accept.

BUT NOT ALL WILL ACCEPT THE NEW TESTAMENT WITH ERRORS

Often when speaking with typical Christians I hear their argument that the apostles were themselves the gospel authors, and that their original writings are more or less exactly as we have them today. As we shall see, both of these premises are naive, unfounded, and haven't been taken seriously by biblical scholars for decades. Yet this is the mentality of the church and too many pastors. To expose these two fallacies, we must look closer at the origins of early Christianity as well as the evolution and historicity of the NT manuscripts.

EVOLUTION AND HISTORICITY OF NEW TESTAMENT MANUSCRIPTS

The manuscripts of the NT were written in Greek. It is argued that there may have existed an Aramaic source for the Synoptic gospels, especially Mark's gospel, but the evidence is still inconclusive. The earliest incomplete texts of the NT (the Beatty papyri and the Bodmer papyri) date from the third century CE. Unfortunately these exist only as tiny fragments of various texts. Papyrus was in use prior to the fourth century and was a very perishable substance. Beginning in the fourth century, the more durable vellum, made from the scraped skin of goats and sheep, quickly replaced papyri as the preferred writing medium. The first complete manuscripts we have (the Codex Vaticanus and the Codex Sinaiticus) date to the fourth century. These complete codices are also in Greek and their dates of composition have been well-established among biblical scholars and linguists. We have no original autographs, extant (existing) fragments or manuscripts which date to the first or second centuries and to the time of Christ. With respect to everything that we know about Yeshua, these manuscripts are our only authority and despite the 300-year gap between these two extant codices and the "real" Yeshua, they will have to suffice.

Before there existed any writings of Yeshua on papyri, stories about Yeshua were spoken orally between people and communities. If the earliest manuscripts began appearing around 50 CE as many scholars conclude, then the oral tradition, as it is known, preserved the deeds and activities of Yeshua for around 13 years prior to their eventual codification in written form. These "proto-gospels" were copied and reproduced well before the invention of the printing press and so they had to be copied by a scribe, line for line and word for word in a very time consuming and expensive process. In the centuries after Yeshua' death, most people could not afford to own a copy of a gospel themselves and those Christian communities that could afford a copy used only a single gospel that they read aloud to each other on the Sabbath. Since most communities did not own a copy of a gospel, they preserved the teachings and sayings of Yeshua by retelling these stories (oral traditions) to each other. Most of these communities preferred to use only their own gospel tradition and so a proliferation of gospel traditions arose.

It is important to realize that not everything which was preserved in the oral tradition automatically made its way into the written texts. By the end of the second century, early church fathers like Serapion and Irenaeus argued for the acceptance of only four gospels. Irenaeus was especially passionate for acceptance of only the four, but many other bishops and leaders disagreed. It was not at all clear in the second century which of the various forms of Christianity then in existence--Marcionian Paulinism, Montanism, Gnosticism, Soteriology, or Catholicism--could claim a superior criteria of legitimacy. Many early Church Fathers who led these Yeshua movements fought bitterly amongst themselves and each declared the others heretical. Also, each leader preferred his own oral and textual traditions. Papias seems to have been familiar with at least Mark, Matthew and John, but preferred the authority of the continuous and dynamic oral tradition that still circulated instead. Justin Martyr quotes frequently from the early gospels, but also from the oral tradition as well.

Marcion, a colorful church leader preferred his own edited version of Luke where he pulled out all references to the Jews and rejected all other gospels. (Marcion seems to have been aware of the charges of pagan critics like Celsus that the gospels were self-contradictory and so this may have influenced his drastic measure of relying only on Luke.) In one interesting case, a very popular writer named Tatian composed a gospel "harmony" that smoothed out the discrepancies that appeared in the gospels. The Syrian community used Tatian's harmony as their sole gospel until the fifth century. In the end however, Irenaeus' views won. In a now famous passage, Irenaeus declares the reason for choosing no more or fewer than the four gospels: "It is not possible that the gospels can be either more or fewer in number than they are, since there are four directions of the world in which we live, and there are four principal winds adv. Haer. 3.11.8)."

By the end of the second century, the first canon had taken shape (Marcion-the "heretic") and from then on the oral tradition slowly died out to be replaced by the authority of the written word.

COMPETING IDEAS OF JESUS AND THEIR LEGACY TODAY

Almost from the beginning this "Yeshua movement" was split among many different communities who each had their own ideas about who Yeshua was and what his teachings meant to them. Over time a "kerygma" emerged, a message "which is proclaimed" (the literal translation of kerygma from the Greek). But it wasn't always clear what this proclamation was in the decades immediately following Yeshua' death since each community enjoyed the freedom to interpret their stories about Yeshua for themselves as they saw fit. Bauer [1934] first realized that this diversity existed throughout the early communities and regions of the Yeshua movement.

Fredriksen [1988] describes these communities and how their diversity played an important role in formulating the kerygma: "Early Christians grouped together, preserving some of Yeshua' teachings and some stories about him, which became part of the substance of their preaching as they continued his mission to prepare Israel for the coming of the Kingdom of God. At the same time or very shortly thereafter, these oral teachings began to circulate orally in Greek as well as in Yeshua' native Aramaic. Eventually, some of Yeshua' sayings, now in Greek, were collected and written down in a document, now lost, which scholars designate "Q" (from the German Quelle, "source" which reportedly were a collection of the oral sayings of Yeshua). Meanwhile, other oral traditions--miracle stories, parables, legends, and so on--grew, circulated, and were collected in different forms by various Christian communities. NOTICE that up to now we are dealing with an oral tradition among the people concerning Yeshua. In the period around the destruction of the Second Temple (70 CE) an anonymous Gentile Christians wrote some of these down. This person was not an author nor was he a historian--he did not deal directly and critically with his evidence. The writer was an evangelist, a sort of creative editor. He organized these stories into a sequence and shaped his inherited material into something resembling a historical narrative. The result was the Gospel of Mark."

This gospel, written around 70 CE, was the Original Mark. Original Mark was much shorter than Canonical Mark, the Mark which is in the Bible today. It did not contain Canonical Mark's 6:45-8:26 verses or the resurrection appendix of Mark 16:9-20.

Those extra passages not in the Original Mark were "interpolated "(or inserted) after 70 CE, but sometime prior to canonization in the fourth century. What may have happened was that a dominantcommunity took the gospel and incorporated their own oral traditions into it (this would be done often), with the result being passages 6:45 through 8:26. This provided them with a complete codified form of their own values along with the authority of the written gospel, all in one book. In the earliest versions of Mark and Q, Yeshua' resurrection account was not yet included. At some point in the second century however verses 16:9-20, the resurrection account, was included in order to harmonize it with the other gospels. This editorializing was common and acceptable practice in the ancient world.

There existed many different varieties of proto-gospels, each based on the local communities own oral tradition as it was preserved from the time of Yeshua. Although Q is the most famous of these early Sayings Sources (as Q is also called) it was not the only one. The Gospel of Thomas, for example, is based on a more primitive strata of Q; a strata that swapped stories about Yeshua before the apocalyptic expectations that came to be attributed to Yeshua and the "Son of Man" sayings found their way into the Q. In other words the Yeshua sayings--from oral tradition to the final canonized form that we have today--constantly evolved in a dynamic process which reflected the zeal and enthusiasm of the early Christians who preserved them. Robertson remarks on the reasons why it is difficult to separate the various Yeshua traditions from each other: "Within a hundred years from the date commonly assigned to the Crucifixion, there are Gentile traces of a Jesuist or Christ movement deriving from Jewry, and possessing a gospel or memoir as well as some of the Pauline and other epistles, both spurious and genuine; but the gospel then current seems to have contained some matter not preserved in the canonical four, and have lacked much that those contain."

I have heard and read Christians say that the "picture that emerges [from modern scholarship] is one of increasing authentication of the NT by a wide range of scholars."

Answer for yourself: Which picture emerges? Do we stop at a certain point along the evolutionary path of these traditions and say that "here" is where they become authentic?

Answer for yourself: Should we prefer instead to say that the furthest point in time away from the historical Yeshua (earliest record) is the more desirable picture?

Answer for yourself: Let me ask you this: Should we desire after all to obtain the most factual information and portrayal of Yeshua? Should we look at the time frame in which he lived long with its source materials rather than risk these interpolations and insertions of conflicting oral traditions concerning Yeshua that have been added by the Gentile Church from 100-500 C.E.? I hope you said the earlier time will give us a truer picture of Yeshua than when the accounts about him were altered and mixed with created fiction!

If the true "Christian's picture of Yeshua" is to be considered at all, we must first reconcile what we know about the dynamic evolution of the NT texts and determine where we draw the line on authoritativeness in time.

Typical Christian writers today would rather we ignore the evolutionary process of the texts and accept the canonical texts as they exits today (the New Testament) as if they were protected in a vacuum from the time of Christ (which they were not). Can we dare do this without problems which cause us to accept less than the truth? More than that, if we accept "less than the truth" often our conduct and behavior will be "less than the truth" as well.

MY PERPLEXITY WITH THE TYPICAL CHRISTIAN

What saddens me is that when Christians are informed of the "creative evolutionary process" which went into the creating of a contemporary Yeshua (which is 180 degrees opposite of the real Yeshua of history), they almost unanimously prefers this vacuum to an otherwise rational exegesis and understanding. In other words, too many will not repent of their erroneous beliefs and conduct when shown they are in error.

Answer for yourself: Does the truth matter? Does our obedience matter?

That the disciples' names are attached to two of the four gospels in no way indicates that they were the actual authors. The headings which read "The Gospel according to . . ." were second-century additions called "pseudepigraphia"--authorship by an anonymous person which is then attributed to a famous biblical character for authority. Pseudepigraphical works flourished in ancient Palestine from two centuries before Yeshua to around 300 CE after. The unknown Jewish and early Christian authors of pseudepigraphical works felt that, while they themselves had something important to say, their material might not be taken seriously unless it seemed to come from the pen of a famous person such as a disciple or a prophet. All four of the gospels are pseudepigraphical works and today we use the names "Matthew" or "John" merely as convenient labels for the work. It is particularly disturbing to see the multitude of uniformed Christians advocating disciple-authorship of John's and Matthew's gospels because this kind of propaganda clouds the real truth and damages the reputation of Christian apologetics.

Sellew [1991] reviews the modern perspective on the evolution of the Yeshua teachings which formed the four gospels and the Acts of the Apostles. Let's look closely at the earliest gospel upon which Matthew and Luke were based, the Gospel of Mark.

CHRONOLOGICAL EVOLUTION OF THE GOSPEL OF MARK

As we see from Mark's history, it is not so simple a matter as claiming that Canonical Mark in the fourth century contains an "underlying eyewitness account" of the events that occurred in first century Judea. The author of Original Mark had never even met Yeshua and probably wrote in Rome. Two chapters were interpolated in Augmented Mark (6:45-8:26) as well as the entire resurrection account of Yeshua (16:9-20). Two strata of the manuscript later and we end up with the gospel that we know today. Matthew and Luke are almost entirely based upon pre-canonical versions of Mark and the late stage of Q. These gospels could and did change over time (additions and deletions). Sometimes the changes were subtle, other times sweeping and even of a different genre as Kee states: "Justin Martyr (100-165 CE) relying on the testimony of Papias refers to the gospel of Mark as the "memoir" of Peter. . . . It must be acknowledged that the gospels as we have them today do not match the description that Justin Martyr offered for them in the middle of the second century A.D. The gospel of Mark is not a "memoir" of Peter, either in the sense that it recounts in a special way the associations of Peter with Yeshua or in the sense that Mark reports first-hand recollections about Yeshua. The material on which Mark drew passed through a long process of retelling and modification and interpretation, and it reflects less special interest in Peter than does Matthew's gospel."

SYNOPTIC PROBLEM

Many seem to quickly gloss over the heavy dependence that Matthew and Luke have on Mark and Q (oral traditions that circulated in the first century) . They claim that "most of the NT documents were written with minimal influence between each other . . . they share some data, but show a very independent development path." In saying this they pay some tribute to the Synoptic problem--as the Luke/Matthew dependence on Q and Mark is called--but only in passing as if to hastily wave it aside. But, are we to believe that the gospels are creations with "very independent development?"

The Q material is present in nearly 200 verses in both Matthew and Luke. Also, out of Mark's 661 total verses all except thirty-one are paralleled or repeated in Luke and Matthew. Thus the assertion that the Synoptics exert "minimal influence on each other" can hardly be supported. Considering that Luke and Matthew were written anonymously much later than Yeshua and by Gentiles who did not know Yeshua personally, it can hardly be attested that they "constitute 5-8 independent witnesses to the base set of miracles." Merely retelling an older tale does not constitute being a witness to anything first hand.

Compounding the problem of which portions of the NT texts are authentic to the time of Yeshua is the grim fact that the texts changed so much over the centuries. As I stated earlier, scribes had to copy the texts from one scroll to another and text critics have found numerous errors, both intentional and unintentional, that have crept into each subsequent copy. The conservative scholars Westcott and Hort have listed over 250 suspected or rejected readings in the canonical gospels and Acts. Let me say I can excuse and forgive UNINTENTIONAL errors and changes because to err is human, but what I struggle with is the fact that what God originally intended I be taught and live out was altered by less than "holy men of old" who corrupted the revelation intended for me and you, thus creating a substitute revelation that served their flesh and their bigotry. That is a fact and in undeniable if only you will examine the evidence for yourself.

Enslin still speaks authoritatively to this point:

"Before an ancient writing can speak for itself, can tell of its author's outlook on life, and the situation that confronted him, we must have that writing in the form in which it was originally written. . . . during the centuries that elapsed between the time of composition and the appearance of our earliest manuscripts the writings had been frequently copied. As a result numerous changes had been made, both intentional and accidental. But not alone minute changes such as alteration in spelling or word order, but more drastic alterations occur. . . . Hence the question of "integrity" is of great importance.

By this is meant simply: Is the book as we possess it exactly the same as it was when it left the author's hand?" Sadly no.

If we are to explore the veracity of the texts in the manner in which they are currently interpreted by Christianity, then we must try to discover what the original author wanted to say. Even though the gospels (which purport to speak authoritatively on Yeshua) are not first-hand accounts of his deeds and activities, they were based in part on earlier traditions that were closer to the historical Yeshua. Our job should not be to ignore the problems of the texts as some seem to do, but to separate the later interpolations (insertions) from the earlier Yeshua traditions in order to study them more easily. We must not choose an "all or nothing" mentality or a "lump and dump" technique for our study of the documents.

Even this detailed analysis is no guarantee of authenticity of the gospels themselves as seen by the "scanty" use of the gospels "by the Christians even a hundred years after Yeshua' death" is "amazing," and "would appear to justify the view that when these gospels appeared they were by no means accorded universal acclaim." This should be a warning to the church today to be cautious in trusting all in the New Testament as "fact," thus all the more reason to study to show ourselves approved, thus verifying that we be in "the faith" and not practicing "another gospel."

Especially compounding the problem of individual gospel integrity was the formulation of the canon in the second century; first by an anti-Semitic heretic, and then the reaction to him by the Catholic Church from 180 C.E. to 390 C.E.. Once the emerging four gospels began to be considered as a cohesive unit and were circulated together, scribes who became used to seeing them together passively harmonized them when discrepancies were found. There is only one problem...conflicting oral traditions from different sources and communities were not always correct, and much of them were incorporated within written documents we have come to consider as valid "Scripture." The mixing of paganism and Judaism in oral traditions which were later written down by Gentiles were NEVER intended to be considered Scripture by God let along used as authority for our faith since we already possessed such in the Law and the Prophets as the early Jewish church and Yeshua attests.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE GOSPEL OF MARK AND HOW AUTHORITATIVE ARE THOSE EXTRA PASSAGES IN THE LATER GOSPELS?

The evolution of the Gospel of Mark, the earliest of the Synoptic gospels, was born with a real, historical Yeshua, the man who gave them life to begin with. After Yeshua' death, the stories and tales about him spread rapidly from community to community. Eventually some of these stories were written down or "codified" on scrolls of papyrus in a long lost work we now call Q. A few decades later our first gospel appears with a little more material added in order to fill in the gaps about Yeshua that the oral tradition did not contain. Throughout all of this process one pattern is clear: with each new strata a little bit more material was added in an "upside down pyramid" fashion. The earliest version of the Q lacked the "Son of man" and "kingdom of God" material that became a part of the later Q. In turn, the later Q, lacked the resurrection accounts of Yeshua that became a part of Augmented Mark. Augmented Mark lacks still more material that shows up in Matthew and Luke and so on. There is a tendency among conservative scholars today to gloss over this very real evolution of the texts and to pretend that the developed canon differs little, if at all, from the early stages of the Yeshua movement. Such is not true. This tendency is extremely short-sighted and leads only to confusion.

The question we should ask ourselves is "How authoritative are those extra passages in later gospels?"

Do we want to strive to get closer to the core of Q where the historical Yeshua resides? Or do we instead prefer the post-Easter interpretations of later anti-Semitic Gentile writers who developed a Christology on top of the historical Yeshua and Q source? You may not know it but our churches today are filled with the second option of a fictitious creation of a post-Easter Yeshua that never existed the way he is portrayed.

THE MIRACLE ACCOUNTS

Several place an extraordinary emphasis on Yeshua' miracle accounts as evidence for the NT texts authenticity. They claim variously that "the very manner in which the miracles are recounted provide an argument for their authenticity" and that the earliest extra-biblical sources "never dispute the fact of his miracles." They argue that because Yeshua' miracles claims are modest in number as well as execution and that they exist in the core sayings of Q, that they render everything that Yeshua was later said to have done with "carte blanche" validity as well.

It is true that Mark's gospel, even from the early stages, places an emphasis on Yeshua' miracles. But this does not render all of the material that made its way into the canon during the next three centuries that purports to tell us something about Yeshua as equally valid.

There exists two modern-day misconceptions concerning the miracle accounts of ancient writers. The first misconception is prevalent in secular society and assumes that since we know today that miracles are impossible, then the ancients must have "made it up." The second misconception is that Yeshua' miracles indicate that he was a divine god and therefore we should take the NT and his teachings as more authoritative than other writings. Both misconceptions aggravate each other and each commit the fallacy of hindsight--the luxury to look back and impose on past societies, the knowledge that we take for granted now. These misconceptions fail to consider the cultural context of that period of time in history. If we entertain these misconceptions we risk losing sight of what the ancients really thought about their world and the place of miracles in it.

For the Hellenistic world as well as the Jewish one, miracles were not only possible, they were quite normal and expected from prophets and holy men. It was believed that various gods routinely intervened into the affairs of humankind for the purposes of changing history or to reveal their wishes. Mental illness wasn't understood as we know it now. A person who suffered from what we would now call epilepsy, was thought by the ancients to be demonically possessed. Josephus tells us quite unequivocally that Jews inherited the "Wisdom of Solomon" and therefore were especially adept at miracle-working and cures. Jewish miracle-working was world-renowned. Josephus tells the story of how King Solomon himself told how to perform healings. Josephus describes Eleazar, an exorcist and one of those descendants of Solomon's techniques: "I have seen a certain man of my own country whose name was Eleazar, releasing people that were demoniacal in the presence of Vespasian . . . He put a ring that had a root of one of those sorts mentioned by Solomon to the nostrils of the demoniac, after which he drew out the demon through his nostrils; and when the man fell down immediately, he abjured him to return into him no more . . . when Eleazar would persuade and demonstrate to the spectators that he had such a power, he set a little way off a cup or basin full of water, and commanded the demon, as he went out of the man, to overturn it, and thereby let the spectators know that [the demon] had left the man." ("Antiquities" 8.2.5)

It does not contextually follow that just because Yeshua performed miracles, he was considered divine and indeed we do not find this to be the case among the earliest of Christians. The assertion that "Yeshua' wide variety of miracles" were performed "on his own" authority, without including rain-making is just not true. Israel was full of Jewish miracle-workers, healers, and magicians that roamed ancient Palestine. Only the Egyptians were regarded higher than the Jews for their miracle and healing abilities. Yeshua' own miracles were well within the context of the period. Any wandering rabbi who was worth his salt would of had a full repertoire of miracles to work and perform among the villagers that he encountered. This is the proper context to view Yeshua' miracles in not, as some infer, as some sort of prerequisite for divinity. As Sanders [1993] points out: "It is difficult to discuss Yeshua' miracles historically, however, because convictions about what Christians believe or should believe interfere very strongly. . . . Yeshua' miracles are to be studied in the light of other miracles of his day, not in the context of the subsequent Christian doctrine that he was both human and divine. . . . The early Christians thought that Yeshua was the Messiah, the Son of God, "and" a miracle-worker. Interestingly early Christians pictured Yeshua as a "magician". In cave motifs depicting the raising up of Lazarus, Yeshua always holds a magic wand and is motioning with it when calling Lazarus out from the burial cave.

This had led many modern Christians to think that first-century Jews looked for a Messiah who performed miracles, and that Yeshua' contemporaries would conclude that a miracle-worker was the Messiah. This view is incorrect."

For many modern Christians, Yeshua' miracles are no longer seen in the historical context in which they occurred. They treat these miracle accounts as if they alone represent historical validity for all NT texts. There is no argument that from the earliest strata Yeshua is credited with performing many miracles. The argument is that these demonstrations by Yeshua somehow lend authenticity to the NT. When we consider the account of Eleazar's exorcism in "Antiquities", we do not consider Josephus' work to be either fraudulent or divinely-inspired. Josephus is merely a product of the context of his time; a time when many people believed that miracles, exorcisms, and healings occurred with regularity. We must also look at the NT in this same fashion rather than assign either more or less importance to Yeshua' miracle accounts than they were meant to be taken when written.

If the argument is to take on a characteristic that says that Yeshua' miracle-accounts indicate that he was the Messiah or a god, then we must immediately object to this as well. The questions of Yeshua' divinity did not even arise until the second century.

Historically, we have already seen how miracle-workers were not divine, but ordinary human beings. There was no expectation among the Jews for a Messiah who would perform miracles. The Messiah's role was be largely political since he was expected to restore the kingdoms of Israel by military force. Yeshua' own miracles were not seen by his contemporaries as evidence for divinity or the Messiah; miracles were seen within the context of their day as indicative of a well-learned rabbi or in Yeshua' case, a skilled magician.

CONCLUSION

Discussions of the historical origins of early Christianity have filled whole books. This article is not meant to substitute for the exhaustive research of others to which I owe much here. This article is meant only to rebut the overly simplistic argument of accepting the New Testament as if created infallible and inerrant in a "vacuum," as well as "discarding it" because it can be shown to have numerous inaccuracies and errors within it. To do either as an approach to our faith and the canonical texts of the NT is a gross error. Hopefully I have made it clear that modern biblical scholarship has moved away from such a false position of "infallibility and inerrancy" that uninformed pastors and their congregations may yet hold. Instead, those who desire to know realize that the NT evolved in a dynamic process throughout the many centuries leading up to their final canonization. It would not speak well of Christianity if its texts did not change during those formative years prior to canonization; only dogmas and ideologies are cut into stone. Dynamic, passionate movements require constant reflection and interpretation if they are to flower and grow.

Although we are not likely to ever get a clear picture of who the real historical Yeshua really was due to the layers of material that were later added, we can come pretty close through honest inquiry. A consensus of critical scholarship outlines for us the most realistic picture of Yeshua through purely form-critical means of inquiry. Although not authoritative by any means, it does represent most of the common elements that modern scholarship has come to accept in discovering who the historical Yeshua really was: "Yeshua appeared on the Palestinian scene as an itinerant teacher, probably self-taught, so there was deep resentment of his authoritative manner among the official religious leadership of Palestine. He held his central mission to be the announcement of the imminent coming of God's Kingdom, and he regarded his extraordinary powers of healing and exorcism as evidence that the powers of the Kingdom were already breaking into the present situation...It was through the false charge that he was a revolutionary that he was put to death by the Romans--a charge brought by the religious leaders whose authority his pronouncements seemed to threaten."

After that time the Jewish as well as Gentile post-Easter Christian community slowly arrived at an interpretation of what their Messiah's death meant to them. They disagreed. This took on various forms that are beyond the scope of this essay, but in 451 CE the Chalcedonian Definition finally transformed Yeshua into the divine god that most Christians are familiar with today. Despite these subsequent layers of interpolation, the upstart Jewish rabbi who changed the ancient world can still be extracted from those texts and appreciated within the proper context of history if so desired. I hope this article stimulates your thinking and your study. Let us not be so unkind to discard that corpus of literature that is so very valuable in our search for the historical Yeshua....the less than reliable New Testament that is far from inerrant and infallible. That being the case, it yet remains the most important resource we have if we try to discover the "Christ of history" and separate him from the "Christ of faith." Thus, to treat the New Testament with an "all or nothing" mentality only shows one's irrational approach to the NT texts.

My desire for you dear brother and sister in the Lord is not to let your insecurity caused by further study or stubborn pride and blindness to truth rob you of the quest for the historical Yeshua. If you

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT - WHAT YOU WERE NEVER TOLD BY YOUR PASTOR

In the two thousand years since the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, the world of Christendom has seen incredible changes, including a split with the Eastern Orthodox Church and a Protestant Reformation, accompanied by a rejection of much core ideology. Yet throughout it all, the collection of scripture called the New Testament has remained unchanged and largely unquestioned, even though it was assembled by the same church leaders whose beliefs many now refute. It has always amazed me that as a former Protestant I always accepted the "Catholic's Bible".

Answer for yourself: Do you not see the folly of the collection of these documents by those who are understood by most today to have been blatant idolaters?

To challenge the veracity of the canonical New Testament is, at best, an uncomfortable position; such questions strike at the very heart of most Christians' faith. Nevertheless, we at Bet Emet understand that these sacred writings have come to us only after decades of oral traditions and centuries of scribal rewrites, additions, deletions, and fictional creationism much according to the beliefs of select denominations in the early days of Christianity.

It is only by attempting to study the origins and evolution of the New Testament scriptures that one can hope to discover the true historical Jesus—a worthy goal of any Christian believer.

When reading the New Testament, one is poignantly reminded of how translation, particularly of archaic language, is subject to personal interpretation. It is therefore vitally important that we get as close to the original source as possible. It is therefore vitally important that we get as close to the original source as possible. The oldest surviving complete text of the New Testament is the Codex Sinaiticus, dating back to the middle of the fourth century. The oldest fragments, the Bodmer and Beatty Papyri and Papyrus 52, date back to the second century but only contain bits of the Gospel of John. All of these texts are Greek. This presents a few disturbing problems. If one wants to uncover the truth about a Jewish Rabbi named "Yeshua" he has to look at Jewish sources and not foreign Greek ones.

First, Jesus's native tongue was Aramaic, and even if he knew Greek, he certainly did not speak it to his apostles, many of whom were uneducated fishermen. Without any surviving Aramaic texts, the actual words of Christ are lost forever, mired in a sea of subjective translation by ancient scribes.

Second, we are faced with a gap of as much as three hundred years between the composition of a text and our surviving copies. In a world without a printing press, texts would often undergo drastic evolution through centuries of handwritten duplication. The sooner you face this reality and deal with it by adjusting your religious beliefs to accept only what the Jewish Scriptures had said the sooner you will be able to cast out the leaven of today's pharisees.

ORIGINS OF THE CANON...AND WE CALL THIS "INSPIRED"?

Our four canonical gospels did not begin their lives as the gospels of "Matthew," "Mark," "Luke" and "John." Different groups of early Christians maintained their own oral traditions of Yeshua's wisdom, as writing was a specialized skill and not every fellowship enjoyed the services of a scribe. When written accounts of Jesus's teachings began to circulate (i.e., the theoretical "sayings" gospel Q and the Semeia or Signs source), the independent groups would supplement them with their own traditions about Yeshua, each believing their own versions to be "the Gospel." Eventually, as these expanded writings spread through other communities, some versions were viewed as having more authority than others. It was not until the pronouncement of Bishop Irenaeus (185 C.E.) that Christians began to accept only the four familiar gospels as authoritative, and to refer to them by their modern titles. You may laugh but 4 Gospels were chosen because there were only four winds. That sure sounds like God to me!

The rest of the canon was much slower to develop. For the next two centuries, the four gospels would be coupled with a myriad of different letters, epistles, stories and apocalypses, according to what a particular congregation judged as relevant to their understanding of Yeshua and his message. Catholicism was only one of the dozens of denominations within the early church—Gnosticism was prevalent throughout Egypt, Montanism in Asia Minor, Marconianism in Syria. Eventually, the Catholic church was adopted as the state religion of the Roman Empire, and all other systems of belief were branded as heresies. The West won! Following the Epistle of Athanasius in 367 C.E., the Church finally reached agreement upon which writings were truly authentic and "inspired by God," thus forming the canonical New Testament. Although factions of the Church continued to debate the merits of various books for centuries, and many even used other writings in their liturgy, most uncanonical writings were ordered to be destroyed. In many cases, possession of heretical literature was punishable by death. We are extremely fortunate that many of these texts have survived the millennia, giving us insights into the development of various early Christian traditions. With such a short sketch as to how these "new" documents originated and the authority behind them, any thinking believer should see the necessity to study them in-depth if truth is your goal. Shalom.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE BIBLICAL CANON...A TIMELINE

1000-50 BC:

The Old Testament (hereafter "OT") books are written.

C. 200 BC:

Rabbis translate ONLY the first 5 books of the Tanakh (the OT) from Hebrew to Greek, the translation latter called the "Septuagint" (abbreviation: "LXX") would contain the Rabbis translation plus the translation of the rest of the OT done at Alexandria by Hellenized Jews and Hellenized Essenes. The LXX ultimately includes 46 books.

AD 30-100:

Christians use the LXX as their scriptures. This upsets the Jews due to the many discrepancies in the LXX not found in the Jewish Massoretic Text.

C. AD 51-125:

The New Testament books are written, but during this same period other early Christian writings are produced--for example, the Didache (c. AD 70), 1 Clement (c. 96), the Epistle of Barnabas (c. 100), and the 7 letters of Ignatius of Antioch (c. 110).

C. AD 100:

So Jewish rabbis meet at the Council of Jamniah and decide to include in their canon only 39 books, since only these can be found in Hebrew.

C. AD 140:

Marcion, a businessman in Rome, teaches that there were two Gods: Yahweh, the cruel God of the OT, and Abba, the kind father of the NT. So Marcion eliminates the Old Testament as scriptures and, since he is anti-Semitic, keeps from the NT only 10 letters of Paul and 2/3 of Luke's gospel (he deletes references to Jesus' Jewishness). Marcion's "New Testament"--the first to be compiled--forces the mainstream Church to decide on a core canon: the four gospels and letters of Paul.

C. AD 200:

But the periphery of the canon is not yet determined. According to one list, compiled at Rome c. AD 200 (the Muratorian Canon), the NT consists of the 4 gospels; Acts; 13 letters of Paul (Hebrews is not included); 3 of the 7 General Epistles (1-2 John and Jude); and also the Apocalypse of Peter.

AD 367:

The earliest extant list of the books of the NT, in exactly the number and order in which we presently have them, is written by Athanasius, Bishop of Alexandria, in his Easter letter of 367.

C. AD 400:

Jerome translates the Bible from Hebrew and Greek into Latin (called the "Vulgate"). He knows that the Jews have only 39 books, and he wants to limit the OT to these; the 7 he would leave out (Tobit, Judith, 1 Maccabees, 2 Maccabees, Wisdom of Solomon, Sirach [or "Ecclesiasticus"], and Baruch--he calls "apocrypha," that is, "hidden books." But Pope Damacus wants all 46 traditionally-used books included in the OT, so the Vulgate has 46.

AD 904:

Pope Damasus, in a letter to a French bishop, lists the New Testament books in their present number and order.

AD 1536:

Luther translates the Bible from Hebrew and Greek to German. He assumes that, since Jews wrote the Old Testament, theirs is the correct canon; he puts the extra 7 books in an appendix that he calls the "Apocrypha."

AD 1546:

The Catholic Council of Trent reaffirms the canonicity of all 46 books.

AD 1442:

At the Council of Florence, the entire Church recognizes the 27 books, though does not declare them unalterable.

AD 1536:

In his translation of the Bible from Greek into German, Luther removes 4 NT books (Hebrews, James, Jude, and Revelations) from their normal order and places them at the end, stating that they are less than canonical.

AD 1546:

At the Council of Trent, the Catholic Church reaffirms once and for all the full list of 27 books as traditionally accepted.

WHEN IS A SUPPOSED RELIGIOUS BOOK NOT RECOGNIZED AS AN "INSPIRED" BOOK?

"Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God." Deuteronomy 4:2

Answer for yourself: If we were to ask a Christian layman: "Where did the Bible in your hands come from?," would he more than likely tell you "from God"? Yes.

Answer for yourself: If you were now to ask him: "How do you know it is from God? Would he most likely reply, "He inspired it to many people who then wrote it down and preserved it for us"? Most likely.

Answer for yourself: If we now ask: "Are all of these inspired people prophets?" would he most likely answer: "No, they include both prophets and other faultless 'saints', etc.."? Probably Answer for yourself: If we were to ask: "Did these prophets and 'saints' signed their names to these documents? " would the typical Christian most likely respond: "No. But the Church knows who wrote them, and when they were written, and has irrefutable proof regarding this matter"? This would be a most typical response.

Answer for yourself: If we were to now ask: "would it be possible for any unscrupulous person who had access to the Bible in the past to modify it's books?" would the typical Christian reply: "Of course not! The church has told us that even the much older Old Testament was preserved with such diligent guardianship that they even counted and recorded every single word and every single letter in it. Thus, the church has justly reassured us that these words never have, and never could be, changed by mankind, even by scribal error or by accident"? Well, that is close to what I was told by my Christian teachers when growing up in Church.

Let us now ask a different question.

Answer for yourself: Are the 'New and Old Testaments' in your hands today the same "New and Old Testaments" available to the apostles of Yeshua till the present day?" The vast majority of Christians would answer "Of course! There has always been only one Bible!" Get ready for a shocker!

This is the general gist of any such conversation that is held between Christians who have studied the formation of the Bible and a Christian laymen who has not studied the formation of their Bibles, it's composition and preservation. However, if we were to ask our own Christian SCHOLARS the same set of questions we would be amazed to find a tremendous chasm in the responses supplied by the Christian lay-people as compared to their own Christian scholars.

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that if you were to go to a Western library and look up the history of the Bible as recorded by our own eminent Christian scholars throughout the ages, that you would find that they would tell you that the books of the "New Testament" in your possession today were not officially approved into the New Testament "canon" of "inspired" books until many centuries after the departure of Yeshua? This is astounding!

Answer for yourself: Did you pay attention to the last statement?

Answer for yourself: Are you now asking yourself: "Where then are the books used by Yeshua and the original church that comprised their authoritative text"? You should be.

It is a staggering fact, I admit, but tens of generations of Christians literally lived and died after the departure of Yeshua never having known nor seen such a "New Testament" or "Bible" as the one in our possession today.

HOW DID IT HAPPEN WE LOST THE ORIGINAL BIBLE USED BY YESHUA AND THE EARLY CHURCH?

After the departure of Yeshua, the apostles and many other people began to write "gospels." Each one of these authors would travel to other lands and be followed by a number of people who would adopt this man's gospel as his "Bible." Now, even the unscrupulous began to write "gospels" and to claim they were from a given apostle or that they themselves were receiving divine inspiration. Many new and innovative teachings began now to be introduced into the religion of Yeshua. Enmity, hatred and war began to break out between these groups. Each person claimed that they alone held the "true" Gospel of Yeshua and no one else. Their beliefs now ran the gamut, from those who believed Yeshua to be a mortal messenger of God and nothing more, to those who claimed partial divinity for Yeshua, to those who claimed Yeshua to be a true god, but independent of God himself, to those who called for a "Trinity," to those who claimed that Mary too was a god, to those who believed in two gods, one good and the other evil. This is when the war of the gospels began.

Everyone now cursed and damned everyone else. Christian sects butchered one-another right and left. There were more great debates and councils than you could shake a stick at. However, none of these groups had sufficient might to totally dominate and silence the others for good. They needed an undefeatable ally, so they began to look to the Roman empire for support. The Roman empire was a pagan empire, however, it was the dominant "superpower" of the time. Anyone who could enlist it's aid would have an unconquerable ally at their side and would themselves be undefeatable. On the Roman side, Emperor Constantine was greatly troubled by the swelling ranks of his Christian subjects and the great division among their ranks which did not bode well for the continued stability of his empire.

Most of these fringe sects now began to fade into insignificance and the matter was now left between those who believed in the Unity of God and those who believed in a "Trinity." The Roman empire's support fluctuated between these two groups for a long time until the Trinitarian's finally gained the upper hand and all but wiped the Unitarians off the face of the earth. They selected and collected the "truly inspired" gospels into one volume which later became the "New Testament." They burned all other gospels. Many sweeping campaigns if "Inquisition" were launched. Everyone found possessing any of these "false" Gospels was put to death and his Gospel burned.

This state of affairs continued for many centuries and many people were convicted of heresy and burned to death at the stake for a great variety of reasons. Yet others had their land and property confiscated and were imprisoned. Physical torture was casually used in order to extract a confession of guilt which would then be used to justify a verdict of death by burning. Some of the methods used to extract a confession of guilt were the stretching of limbs on the rack, burning with live coals, and the strappado (a vertical rack). Denial of the charges without counterproof or refusal to confess resulted in the most severe punishments such as life imprisonment or execution and total confiscation of property. The number of those who fell victim to these inquisitions are far to numerous to list here. Examples of these people include the philosopher Giordano Bruno, Galileo, Joan of Arc, and the religious order of knights called the Templars among countless hundreds of thousands of others. If the Trinitarians did not have the power to burn these people at the stake during their lifetime, then they would exhume their bodies after their death and burn them after their death (e.g. John Wycliffe). In the end, over twelve million people were put to death by the Church inquisitions (Apology for Muhammad and the Qur'an, John Davenport).

The inquisitions reached their height around the middle of the fifteenth century in a massive and vicious persecution campaign the major targets of which were the Marranos (converts from Judaism) and Moriscos (converts from Islam), many of whom were suspected of secretly adhering to their original faiths. When things began to quiet down a little, the victor's historians and philosophers wrote their history books explaining how they managed to overcome the wicked, to defeat the blasphemers, and to burn the devils, sorcerers, and witches at the stake. These are the books which have had the greatest influence on the Western history books we have in our hands today.

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN WHEN TRUTH WAS RE-DISCOVERED?

Whenever a scholar of Christianity would stumble upon the truth and begin to write about it his works would invariably be destroyed (e.g. Sir Isaac Newton, the 16th century Spaniard Michael Servetus, etc.). In all cases, it was recognized that there was no need to disprove the author's evidence or refute it, rather, it was sufficient to muzzle the opposition, burn their books, extract a confession from them under duress, and expel them from society or kill them.

Even the Popes themselves would sometimes recognize the falsehood of the "Trinity" and the fact that it was a later fabrication of mankind. One of these popes, Honorius, was officially cursed forty eight years after his death by the Synod which was held in Istanbul in 680 C.E.

Sometimes it is an individual's own silence which proves to be the most deafening proclamation. For the period of a century and more the only "Scriptures" used by the first Jewish followers of Yeshua were:

- The Hebrew Old Testament, "the Law and the Prophets and the Writings", supplemented by...
- Various Jewish apocrypha
- The Sibylline Oracles (150 BC to AD 180) and...
- The Greek Septuagint translations (commonly designated LXX) of the Hebrew Old Testament was used in Greek speaking areas of the world

These were the only "authorities" appealed to by the early "Church Fathers" when preaching their new faith. Nowhere do they quote the books which we know today as the "New Testament."

WHY DID THE EARLY GENTILE CHURCH ORIGINALLY NOT QUOTE FROM THE NEW TESTAMENT WRITINGS WE USE TODAY?

That is a good question. Naturally, if the "history" of the Trinitarian Church regarding their chosen Gospels and what are claimed to be the inspired writings of Yeshua's first Apostles were true, and these writings had indeed been accepted as authoritative at that time, then they would have been the most precious and potent documents of preaching for their doctrine. Undoubtedly, they would have spoken of nothing else, but would have quoted them and appealed to their authority at every turn as they have been doing through the centuries since. But, for some 150 years, little or nothing besides the Old Testament and these Oracles were known or quoted. As said by the great critic, Solomon Reinach,

"With the exception of Papias, who speaks of a narrative by Mark, and a collection of sayings of Yeshua, no Christian writer of the first half of the second century (i.e., up to 150 C.E.) quotes the Gospels or their reputed authors." Orpheus, Reinach, p. 218

HOW AND WHEN WERE THE LETTERS MADE INTO THE NEW TESTAMENT WE CARRY TODAY?

But let us back up a little and study how and when the "inspired" books of the Bible were incorporated into the Christian "canon" of the Bible. Let us now have a very brief look at some of the details.

In the city of Nicea (modern: Iznik, Turkey), in the year 325 AD, a great conference of Christian theologians and religious scholars (Council of Nicea) was convened under the order of the Emperor Constantine to examine and define the status of these countless Christian Gospels. After a thorough investigation it was decided that the Epistle of Jude was genuine and believable. The rest of our current books of the Bible were declared doubtful. This was explicitly mentioned by Saint Jerome in the introduction to his book. St. Jerome, of course, was a Christian scholar and a great philosopher. He was born in 340 AD He translated the Bible into Latin. He was a famous bibliographer and wrote many books on the Bible. Before the year 325 C.E., it is known that the Gospel of Barnabas was accepted as canonical in the churches of Alexandria. It is known to have been circulated in the first two centuries after Christ from the writings of Irenaeus (130-200AD). After this council, four Gospels were selected out of a minimum of three hundred available and the rest, including the Gospel of Barnabas, were ordered utterly destroyed. All Gospels written in Hebrew were also ordered destroyed.

In the year 364 AD, another council was held in Laodicea for the same purpose. This conference of Christian scholars and theologians not only confirmed the decision of the council of Nicea regarding the authenticity of the Epistle of Jude but also declared that the following six books must also be added to the list of genuine and believable books: The Book of Esther, The Epistle Of James, The Second Epistle of Peter, The Second and Third Epistles of John, The Epistle of Paul to the Hebrews. This conference pronounced their decision to the public. The book of Revelations, however, remained out of the list of the acknowledged books in both the councils.

In 397 another great conference was held called the Council of Carthage. Augustine, the celebrated Christian scholar, was among the one hundred and twenty six learned participants. The members of this council confirmed the decisions of the two previous Councils and also added the following books to the list of the divine books: The Book of the Songs of Solomon, The Book of Tobit, The Book of Baruch, Ecclesiasticus, and The First and Second Books of Maccabees.

At the same time the members of this council decided that the book of Baruch was a part of the book of Jeremiah because Baruch was the deputy of Jeremiah. Therefore they did not include the name of this book separately in the list.

Three more conferences were held after this in Trullo, Florence and Trent (1545-63). The members of these meetings confirmed the decision of the Council of Carthage. The last two councils, however, wrote the name of the book of Baruch separately.

After these councils nearly all the books which had previously been doubtful among Christians were now included in the list of acknowledged books.

The status of these books remained unchanged until the Protestant Reformation in the 16th century. The Protestants repudiated the decisions of the councils and declared that there are only 66 truly "inspired" books of God, and not 73 as claimed by the Catholics. The following books were to be rejected: The Book of Baruch, The Book of Tobit, The Letter of Jude, The Songs of Solomon, Ecclesiasticus, and The First and Second Books of Maccabees. They excluded these books from the list of acknowledged books.

Answer for yourself: Books in, books out....where is the inspiration and infallibility we have come to believe about the New Testament when our spiritual forefathers could not agree among themselves for over 1500 years?

The Protestants also rejected the decision of their forbears regarding some chapters of the book of Esther. This book consists of 16 chapters. They decided that the first nine chapters and three verses from chapter ten were to be rejected. They based their decision on the following six reasons:

- 1 These works were considered to be false even in the original Hebrew and Chaldaean languages which were no longer available.
- 2 The Jews did not acknowledge them as revealed books.
- 3 All the Christians have not acknowledged them as believable.
- 4 Jerome said that these books were not reliable and were insufficient to prove and support the doctrines of the faith.
- 5 Klaus has openly said that these books were recited but not in every place.
- 6 Eusebius specifically said in section 22 of his fourth book that these books have been tampered with, and changed. In particular the Second Book of Maccabees.

Answer for yourself: What is the tragic implication we must draw from such a scenario?

It now becomes apparent that books which had been lost in the original and which only existed in translation were erroneously acknowledged by thousands of theologians as divine revelation. This state of affairs leads a non-Christian reader to distrust the unanimous decisions of Christian scholars of both the Catholic and the Protestant persuasions. The followers of Catholic faith still believe in these books in blind pursuance of their forebears.

It is a prerequisite of believing in a certain book as divinely revealed that it is proved through infallible arguments that the book in question was revealed through a prophet and that it has been conveyed to us precisely in the same order without any change through an uninterrupted chain of narrators. It is not at all sufficient to attribute a book to a certain prophet on the basis of suppositions and conjectures. Unsupported assertions made by one or a few sects of people should not be, and cannot be, accepted in this connection.

We have already seen how Catholic and Protestant scholars differ on the question of the authenticity of some of these books. There are yet more books of the Bible which have been rejected by Christians. They include the Book of Revelation, the Book of Genesis, the Book of Ascension, the Book of Mysteries, the Book of Testament and the Book of Confession which are all ascribed to the Prophet Moses. Similarly a fourth Book of Ezra is claimed to be from the Prophet Ezra and a book concerning Isaiah's ascension and revelation are ascribed to him. In addition to the known book of Jeremiah, there is another book attributed to him. There are numerous sayings which are claimed to be from the Prophet Habakkuk. There are many songs which are said to be from the Prophet Solomon. There are more than 70 books, other than the present ones, of the new Testament, which are ascribed to Yeshua, Mary, the apostles, and their disciples. In this day and age, some Christian scholars are even making the case for the authenticity of the Gospel of Thomas as the "fifth" Gospel (see "The Five Gospels," written over six years by 24 Christian scholars from some of the USA and Canada's most prestigious universities)

The Christians of this age have claimed that these books are false and forgeries. The Greek Church, Catholic church and the Protestant Church are unanimous on this point. Similarly the Greek Church claims that the third book of Ezra is a part of the Old Testament and believes it to have been written by the Prophet Ezra while the Protestant and Catholic Churches have declared it false and fabricated.

Groliers encyclopedia says under the heading "New Testament, canon":

"The process by which the canon of the New Testament was formed began in the 2d century, probably with a collection of ten letters of Paul. Toward the end of that century, Irenaeus argued for the unique authority of the portion of the Canon called the Gospels. Acceptance of the other books came gradually. The church in Egypt used more than the present 27 books, and the Syriac-speaking churches fewer. The question of an official canon became urgent during the 4th century. It was mainly through the influence of Athanasius, bishop of Alexandria, and because Jerome included the 27 books in his Latin version of the Bible called the Vulgate, that the present canon came to be accepted.."

Notice how the writings of Paul were the first to be accepted by the Trinitarian church. All other gospels were then either accepted or destroyed based upon their conformance to the teachings of Paul

As mentioned previously, Lobegott Friedrich Konstantin Von Tischendorf was one of the most eminent conservative Biblical scholars of the nineteenth century. One of his greatest lifelong achievements was his discovery of one of the oldest known Biblical manuscripts know to mankind, the "Codex Sinaiticus," with the monks of Saint Catherine's Monastery in Mount Sinai. In this oldest known copy of the Bible known to humanity we find contained two gospels which would later be discarded by a more enlightened generation. They are "The Epistle of Barnabas" (not to be confused with the Gospel of Barnabas), and "The Shepherd of Hermas." Today, of course, neither of these two books is to be found in our modern Bibles. Many later "insertions" of the church were exposed through the study of this manuscript. However, following in the tradition of true conservative Christian scholars before him, Tischendorf managed to apply 12,000 "corrections" to this manuscript's 110,000 lines before he was through "transcribing" it (see "secrets of Mount Sinai", James Bentley, Doubleday, NY, 1986, p. 95)

I can't leave this article without a summary statement about the Apostle Paul. Let is be understood that "St. Paul" all but totally obliterated the religion of Yeshua based upon the authority of his alleged "visions". His teachings were based more upon his personal philosophy and beliefs than any attempt to cite words or actions of Yeshua himself (e.g. Galatians 2). His followers slaughtered all Christians who would not forsake the teachings of the apostles for his teachings and how he was later made the "majority author" of the Bible and countless authentic gospels were burned and labeled apocrypha by his followers. Remember, "St. Paul" is claimed to be the author of Romans, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Phillippians, Colossians, 1 and 2 Thessalonians, 1 and 2 Timothy, Titus, Philemon, and Hebrews.

"All the evidence indicates that the words of Yeshua were authoritative in the Church from the first, and this makes it the more remarkable that such scanty attention is paid to the words or works of Yeshua in the earliest Christian writings, Paul's letters, the later Epistles, Hebrews, Revelation, and even Acts have little to report about them... Papias (ca. AD 130), the first person to actually name a written gospel, illustrates the point. Even though he defends Mark's gospel (Euseb. Hist. III.xxxix.15-16), and had himself appended a collection of Yeshua traditions to his 'Interpretation of the Oracles of the Lord' (Euseb. Hist. III.xxxix.2-3), his own clear preference was for the oral tradition concerning Yeshua, and the glimpses that Eusebius provides of Papias' Yeshua tradition give no hint of his dependence on Mark. Neither do the more frequent citations of Yeshua in the APOSTOLIC FATHERS, largely 'synoptic' in character show much dependence on our written gospels"

The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, Supplementary Volume, p. 137

The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible contains much more revealing information in this regard, far too much to reproduce here. The reader is strongly encouraged to locate a copy in their local library and read the details.

The popularly accepted dates for the authorship of the current books of the Bible are approximately as follows:

Approx. AD Event / Document

- 30 Crucifixion (Ascension) of Yeshua
- 50 First Epistle of Paul
- 62 Last Epistle of Paul
- 65-70 Mark's Gospel
- 70 Epistle to Hebrews
- 80 Luke's Gospel
- 85-90 Matthew's Gospel
- 90 Acts
- 90-100 John's Gospel and First Epistle
- 95-100 Revelation
- 100 I & II Timothy and Titus

Uncertainty about James I & II, Peter, John and Jude does not allow historians to estimate their origin dates. (See "The Early Church And The New Testament," Irene Allen, 1953). We begin to see the degree to which our current religion of "Christianity" is based more on the teachings and writings of Paul than anything else. The Gospels which are popularly believed to have been written first were in actuality written long after the writings of Paul. Now Christian scholars are even beginning to uncover extensive evidence that these Gospels were not even written by their claimed authors. The more Christian scholars study the Bible, the more it becomes painfully apparent that what is popularly referred to today as "Christianity" should more appropriately be named "Paulanity."

Even when a book is claimed to be truly "inspired" we still find that the Church cannot say with 100% assuredness who wrote this "inspired" book. As mentioned there, the authors of the RSV Bible by Collins say that the author of "Kings" is "Unknown," the book of Isaiah is "Mainly credited to Isaiah. Parts may have been written by others." Ecclesiastics: "Author. Doubtful, but commonly assigned to Solomon." Ruth: "Author. Not definitely known, perhaps Samuel." and on and on.

Answer for yourself: Is this how a truly unbiased mind defines "inspired by God"? You be the judge.

OVERALL VIEW OF THE NEW TESTAMENT DOCUMENTS...THE REASON FOR THE CONFUSION

THE FOUR GOSPELS

With these four brief biographies, the Four Gospels, Christianity must stand or fall. These four documents, it is admitted, contain practically all the evidence which can be adduced in proof of the divinity of Jesus Christ. Secular history, affords no proof of this. The so-called apocryphal literature of the early church has been discarded by the church itself. Even the remaining canonical books of the New Testament are of little consequence if the testimony of the Four Evangelists can be successfully impeached and shown to be in error. If one is able to disprove the authenticity and credibility of these documents then the Christian must not only reevaluate his faith in light of such evidence, but the portrayal of Jesus as a Christian deity is removed to the mythical realm of Apollo, Odin, and Osiris.

WHEN WERE THEY WRITTEN, BY WHOM, AND WHAT CAN WE TRUST IN THEM?

The Four Gospels, it is claimed, were written by Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, two of them apostles, and two companions of the apostles of Christ. I wish that were true, but it is not. If this claim be true the other writings of the apostles, the writings of the Apostolic Fathers, and the writings of the early Christian Fathers, ought to contain some evidences of the fact. We will see shortly that the silence of such writers and the absence from quotes from these "named Gospels" is quite troublesome to the early dating of such documents as originating from these Apostolic authorities. This means that these "Gospels" did not exist at such times or else quotes from such "named Gospels" would be found in the earliest writings of the Early Church Fathers and they are not. This means simply that with such a lack of testimony that it would have been impossible for the actual apostles of Jesus to have been their authors or else the earliest prolific Early Church writers would have quoted from such "named" Gospels and they do not!

Twenty books—nearly all of the remaining books of the New Testament—are said to have been written by the three apostles, Peter, John, and Paul, a portion of them after the first three Gospels were written; but it is admitted that they contain no evidence whatever of the existence of these Gospels.

There are extant writings accredited to the Apostolic Fathers, Clement of Rome, Barnabas, Hermas, Ignatius, and Polycarp; written, for the most part, early in the second century. These writings contain no mention of the Four Gospels. Understand that even in the early part of the second century we do not find quotes from the Church Fathers designating such "gospels" as those of "Matthew, Mark, Luke, John." These "names were simply added later to the "accepted theology" of the Early Church Fathers. This also is admitted by Christian scholars. Dr. Dodwell says:

"We have at this day certain most authentic ecclesiastical writers of the times, as Clemens Romanus, Barnabas, Hermas, Ignatius, and Polycarp, who wrote in the order wherein I have named them, and after all the writers of the New Testament. But in Hermas you will not find one passage or any mention of the New Testament, nor in all the rest is any one of the Evangelists named" (Dissertations upon Irenaeus).

THE FOUR GOSPELS WERE UNKNOWN TO THE EARLY CHRISTIAN FATHERS

Justin Martyr, the most eminent of the early Fathers, wrote about the middle of the second century. His writings in proof of the divinity of Christ demanded the use of these Gospels had they existed in his time. He makes more than three hundred quotations from the books of the Old Testament, and nearly one hundred from the Apocryphal books of the New Testament; but none from the Four Gospels.

Answer for yourself: If they were available, don't you think he could have referred to at least on of them in his apologetics toward the Jews?

The Rev. Dr. Giles says:

"The very names of the Evangelists, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, are never mentioned by him [Justin]—do not occur once in all his writings" (Christian Records, p. 71).

Papias, another noted Father, was a contemporary of Justin. He refers to writings of Matthew and Mark, but his allusions to them clearly indicate that they were not the Gospels of Matthew and Mark. Dr. Davidson, the highest English authority on the canon, says:

"He [Papias] neither felt the want nor knew the existence of inspired Gospels" (Canon of the Bible, p. 123).

THE "NAMED" GOSPELS SHOW UP IN THE LATTER HALF OF THE SECOND CENTURY

Theophilus, who wrote after the middle of the latter half of the second century, mentions the Gospel of John, and Irenaeus, who wrote a little later, mentions all of the Gospels, and makes numerous quotations from them. The evidence and facts before us show us that it was in the latter half of the second century, then, between the time of Justin and Papias, and the time of Theophilus and Irenaeus, the Four Gospels were undoubtedly written or compiled. That means 150-180 C.E.

These books are anonymous. They do not purport to have been written by Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. Their titles do not affirm it. They simply imply that they are "according" to the supposed teachings of these Evangelists. As Renan says, "They merely signify that these were the traditions proceeding from each of these Apostles, and claiming their authority." Concerning their authorship the Rev. Dr. Hooykaas says:

"They appeared anonymously. The titles placed above them in our Bibles owe their origin to a later ecclesiastical tradition which deserves no confidence whatever" (Bible for Learners, Vol. III, p. 24).

It is claimed that the Gospel of Matthew originally appeared in Hebrew. Our version is a translation of a Greek work. Regarding this St. Jerome says:

"Who afterwards translated it into Greek is not sufficiently certain."

The consequences of this admission are thus expressed by Michaelis:

"If the original text of Matthew is lost, and we have nothing but a Greek translation; then, frankly, we cannot ascribe any divine inspiration to the words."

THE INTERNAL EVIDENCE FROM THESE GOSPELS BETRAY THAT THEY WERE NOT WRITTEN BY JEWS LET ALONE THE APOSTLES OF JESUS

The contents of these books refute the claim that they were written by the Evangelists named. They narrate events and contain doctrinal teachings which belong to a later age. Matthew ascribes to Christ the following language. "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church" (Matt. 16:18). This Gospel is a Roman Catholic Gospel, and was written after the beginning of the establishment of this hierarchy to uphold the supremacy of the Petrine Church of Rome. Of this Gospel Dr. Davidson says:

"The author, indeed, must ever remain unknown" (Introduction to New Testament, p. 72).

The Gospel of Luke is addressed to Theophilus. Theophilus, Bishop of Antioch, who is believed to be the person addressed, flourished in the latter half of the second century.; therefore the authorship of the Lukan writings is in serious doubt!

Dr.Schleiermacher, one of Germany's greatest theologians, after a critical analysis of Luke, concludes that it is merely a compilation, made up of thirty-three preexisting manuscripts. Bishop Thirlwall's Schleiermacher says:

"He [Luke] is from beginning to end no more than the compiler and arranger of documents which he found in existence" (p. 313).

The basis of this Gospel is generally believed to be the Gospel of Marcion, a Pauline compilation, made about the middle of the second century. Concerning this Gospel, the Rev. S. Baring-Gould, in his Lost and Hostile Gospels, says:

"The arrangement is so similar that we are forced to the conclusion that it (Marcion's Gospel) was either used by St. Luke or that it was his original composition. If he used it then his right to the title of author of the Third Gospel falls to the ground, as what he added was of small amount."

Mark, according to Renan, is the oldest of the Gospels; but Mark, according to Strauss, was written after the Gospels of Matthew and Luke were written. He says: "It is evidently a compilation, whether made from memory or otherwise, from the first and third Gospels" (Leben Jesu, p. 51). Judge Waite, in his History of Christianity, says that all but twenty-four verses of this Gospel have their parallels in Matthew and Luke. Davidson declares it to be an anonymous work. "The author," he says, "is unknown."

Omitting the last twelve verses of Mark, which all Christian critics pronounce spurious, the book contains no mention of the two great miracles which mark the limits of Christ's earthly career, his miraculous birth and his ascension.

Concerning the first three Gospels, the Encyclopedia Britannica says:

"It is certain that the Synoptic Gospels took their present form only by degrees."

Of these books Dr. Westcott says:

"Their substance is evidently much older than their form."

Professor Robertson Smith pronounces them "unapostolic digests of the second century."

THE NON-SYNOPTIC GOSPEL OF JOHN

The internal evidence against the authenticity of the Fourth Gospel is conclusive. The Apostle John, depicted as a Jew, did not write this Fourth Gospel. The author of the Fourth Gospel was not a Jew. John was born at Bethsaida; the author of the Fourth Gospel did not know where Bethsaida was located. John was an uneducated fisherman; the author of this Gospel was an accomplished scholar. Some of the most important events in the life of Jesus, the Synoptics declare, were witnessed by John; the author of this knows nothing of these events. The Apostle John witnessed the crucifixion; the author of this Gospel did not. The Apostles, including John, believed Jesus to be a man; the author of the Fourth Gospel believed him to be a god.

Regarding the authorship of the Fourth Gospel, Dr. Davidson says:

"The Johannine authorship has receded before the tide of modern criticism, and though this tide is arbitrary at times, it is here irresistible"* (Canon of the Bible, p. 127).

That the authenticity of the Four Gospels cannot be maintained is conceded by every impartial critic. The author of Supernatural Religion, in one of the most profound and exhaustive works on this subject ever written, expresses the result of his labors in the following words:

"After having exhausted the literature and the testimony bearing on the point, we have not found a single distinct trace of any of those Gospels during the first century and a half after the death of Jesus"* (Supernatural Religion, Vol. II, p. 248).

Fifteen hundred years ago, Bishop Faustus, a heretical Christian theologian, referring to this so-called Gospel history, wrote:

"It is allowed not to have been written by the son himself nor by his apostles, but long after by some unknown men who, lest they should be suspected of writing things they knew nothing of, gave to their books the names of the Apostles."

The following is the verdict of the world's greatest Bible critic, Baur:

"These Gospels are spurious, and were written in the second century."

ACTS, THE CATHOLIC EPISTLES, AND REVELATION

The Acts of the Apostles is supposed to have been written by the author of the Third Gospel. Like this book it is anonymous and of late origin. It contains historical inaccuracies, contradicts the Gospel of Matthew, and conflicts with the writings of Paul. Concerning the last, the Bible for Learners (Vol. III, p. 25) says:

"In the first two chapters of the Epistle to the Galatians, he [Paul] gives us several details of his own past life; and no sooner do we place his story side by side with that of the Acts than we clearly perceive that this book contains an incorrect account, and that its inaccuracy is not the result of accident or ignorance, but of a deliberate design."

This book purports to be the product chiefly of three minds: that of the author who gives a historical sketch of the early church, and those of Peter and Paul whose discourses are reported. And yet the three compositions are clearly the products of one mind—that of the author. The evident purpose of the work is to heal the bitter dissensions which existed between the Petrine and Pauline churches, and this points unmistakably to the latter part of the second century as the date of its appearance, when the work of uniting the various Christian sects into the Catholic church began. Renan considers this the most faulty book of the New Testament.

The seven Catholic Epistles, James, First and Second Peter, First, Second and Third John, and Jude, have never been held in very high esteem by the church. Many of the Christian Fathers rejected them, while modern Christian scholars have generally considered them of doubtful authenticity. The first and last of these were rejected by Martin Luther.

"St. James' Epistle," says Luther, "is truly an epistle of straw" (Preface to Luther's New Testament, ed. 1524).

Jude, he says, "is an abstract or copy of St. Peter's Second, and allegeth stories and sayings which have no place in Scripture" (Standing Preface).

The First Epistle of Peter and the First Epistle of John have generally been accorded a higher degree of authority than the others; but even these were not written by apostles, nor in the first century. Dr. Soury says that First Peter "dates, in all probability, from the year 130 A D., at the earliest" (Jesus and the Gospels, p. 32).

Irenaeus, the founder of the New Testament canon, rejected it. The Dutch critics, who deny the Johannine authorship of the Fourth Gospel, and assign its composition to the second century, say

"The First Epistle of John soon issued from the same school in imitation of the Gospel" (Bible for Learners, Vol. III p. 692).

Second Peter is a forgery. Westcott says there is no proof of its existence prior to 170 A.D. Smith's Bible Dictionary says,

"Many reject the epistle as altogether spurious."

The brief epistles of Second and Third John are anonymous and of very late origin. They do not purport to be the writings of John. The superscriptions declare them to be from an elder, and this precludes the claim that they are from an apostle. The early Fathers ignored them. Revelation is the only book in the Bible which claims to be the word of God. At the same time it is the book of which Christians have always been the most suspicious. It is addressed to the seven churches of Asia, but the seven churches of Asia rejected it. Concerning the attitude of ancient churchmen toward it, Dionysius, Bishop of Alexandria, says:

"Divers of our predecessors have wholly refused and rejected this book, and by discussing the several parts thereof have found it obscure and void of reason and the title forged."

"The most learned and intelligent of Protestant divines," says the Edinburgh Review, "almost all doubted or denied the canonicity of the book of Revelation."

It is a book which, Dr. South said, "either found a man mad or left him so." Calvin and Beza both forbade their clergy to attempt an explanation of its contents. Luther says:

"In the Revelation of John much is wanting to let me deem it either prophetic or apostolical" (Preface to N.T., 1524).

Considered as evidences of Christ's historical existence and divinity these nine books are of no value. They are all anonymous writings or forgeries, and, with the possible exception of Revelation, of very late origin. While they affirm Christ's existence they are almost entirely silent regarding his life and miracles.

THE EPISTLES OF PAUL

Of the fourteen epistles ascribed to Paul, seven—Ephesians, Colossians, Second Thessalonians, First and Second Timothy, Titus, and Hebrews - are conceded by nearly all critics to be spurious, while three others, Philippians, First Thessalonians, and Philemon are generally classified as doubtful.

The general verdict concerning the first seven is thus expressed by the Rev. Dr. Hooykaas:

"Fourteen epistles are said to be Paul's; but we must at once strike off one, namely, that to the Hebrews, which does not bear his name at all.... The two letters to Timothy and the letter to Titus were certainly composed long after the death of Paul.... It is more than possible that the letters to the Ephesians and Colossians are also unauthentic, and the same suspicion rests, perhaps, on the first, but certainly on the second of the Epistles to the Thessalonians" (Bible for Learners, Vol. III, p. 23).

The author of Second Thessalonians, whose epistle is a self-evident forgery, declares First Thessalonians to be a forgery. Baur and the Tubingen school reject both Epistles. Baur also rejects Philippians:

"The Epistles to the Colossians and to the Philippians . . . are spurious, and were written by the Catholic school near the end of the second century, to heal the strife between the Jew and the Gentile factions" (Paulus).

Dr. Kuenen and the other Dutch critics admit that Philippians and Philemon, as well as First Thessalonians, are doubtful.

That the Pastoral Epistles are forgeries is now conceded by all critics. According to the German critics they belong to the second century. Hebrews does not purport to be a Pauline document. Luther says:

"The Epistle to the Hebrews is not by St. Paul, nor, indeed, by any apostle" (Standing Preface to Luther's N.T.).

Four Epistles—Romans, First and Second Corinthians, and Galatians—while rejected by a few critics, are generally admitted to be the genuine writings of Paul. These books were written, it is claimed, about a quarter of a century after the death of Christ. They are the only books of the New Testament whose authenticity can be maintained.

Admitting the authenticity of these books, however, is not admitting the divine origin of Christianity. Paul was not a witness of the alleged events upon which Christianity rests. He did not become a convert to Christianity until many years after the death of Christ. He did not see Christ (save in a vision); he did not listen to his teachings; he did not learn from his disciples.

"The Gospel which was preached of me is not after man, for I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it" (Gal.1:11-12).

The true Gnostic Paul accepted only to a very small extent the religion of Rome's version of what later becomes Jesus' religion as the hands of Rome. He professed to derive his knowledge from supernatural sources—from mystical experiences and visions. Many today, not understanding the metaphysical aspects of God and His relationship with man, regard the value of such testimony as almost worthless. This is sad. The author of Supernatural Religion (p. 970) says:

"No one can deny, and medical and psychological annals prove, that many men have been subject to visions and hallucinations which have never been seriously attributed to supernatural causes. There is not one single valid reason removing the ecstatic visions and trances of the Apostle Paul from this class."

Let us not forget that the Kingdom of God is and has always been "within" man. It is not "meat or drink", it is not physical or "literal". Therefore, the corporeal existence of the Christ of the Evangelists receives slight confirmation in the writings of Paul. His Christ was not the historical or "literal" incarnated Word of John, nor the demi-god of Matthew and Luke. Of the immaculate conception of Jesus he knew nothing. To him Christ was the son of God in a Spiritual rather than in a physical sense.

With the Evangelists the proofs of Christ's divinity are his miracles. Their books teem with accounts of these. But Paul evidently knows nothing of these miracles. With him the evidences of Christ's divine mission are his Spiritual resurrection within mankind and the spiritual gifts conferred on those who accept him.

The Evangelists teach a material resurrection. When the women visited his tomb "they entered in and found not the body of Jesus" (Luke 24:3). The divine messengers said to them, "He is not here, but is risen" (Luke 24:6). "He sat at meat" with his disciples; "he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them" (Luke 24:30). "Then he said to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side" (John 20:27). This is entirely at variance with the teachings of Paul. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead" (I Cor. 15:20-21). "But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die; and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be" (I Cor. 15:35-37). "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body" (44). "Now this I say brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God" (50).

The true Gnostic Pauls' Christ was not a "literal" or "historical" person. Let us see what he really said.

2 Cor 13:5 5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you (in you, not apart or outside from you), except ye be reprobates? (KJV)

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

Eph 3:4-5 4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ) 5 Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit; (KJV)

Answer for yourself: How many ages can a "literal" or "historical" person actually live? Are we not born once as flesh and blood? Could this be a Spiritual Concept that was later "literalized" and backwritten into history in books that Constantine commanded written after the Council of Nicea?

Col 1:26-27 26 Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

It would appear to a "thinking-believer" that this passage concerns an enlightenment or awakening internally as to the identity of "the Christ" living within a person; an awakening of a person's understanding of his "True Self" and the "Divinity" within him. Such a revelvation of one's Higher Self equips one to be truly "born again" whereby he can walk through life evolving his True Self as the god that he truly is. Such is the heart and secret of the ancient great Mystery Religions which taught love and the Brotherhood of all humanity; a Brotherhood that Rome did not want nor would accept.

The Christ that Paul saw in a vision was a spiritual being—an apparition; and this appearance he considers of exactly the same character as the post mortem appearances of Christ to his disciples. "He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve; after that he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; . . . after that, he was seen of James; then of all the Apostles. And last of all, he was seen of me also" (I Cor. 15:5-8).

Had this been a "literal" and supposedly seeing by five hundred people of a resurrected "literal" being somewhere in the history of mankind then something would have been written about a "dead man walking" but nothing could be found today on this subject outside of the New Testament. No Roman, Greek, or Jewish writer, no philosopher mentions such a magnificent event in the histories of mankind. Not a "peep"; this is unbelievable. Not one records of 500 "literal" graves that were supposedly graves that were open and former dead bodies walking the streets of Jerusalem. The reason is simple. The reference is not to dead bodies in the grave clothes of "decaying flesh and matter" that were quickened but the "awaking from the deadness" of Spiritual slumber to whom all Souls have fallen of what they speak. This passage speaks of the revealing of the the indwelling Christ within the Spiritually dead; within themselves. Again, and sadly so, Divine Metaphysical Spiritual Allegory has been mistakenly taken for a "literal" and "historical" occurrence which it is not!

Eph 5:14-15 14 Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light. 15 See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, (KJV)

The ancients knew it. Man is born in "swaddling clothes" of "matter" whereby all of life is lived in hopes of "awakening" the "Divinity" within him whereby God can "live and move and have His being" through man and not an animal created in the image of Himself. Such has always been the true "born again" experience which sadly today is relegated to "signing a card" and "joining a church" and "accepting a creed" So sad.

CONCLUSION

We have seen that the Four Gospels are not authentic, that they are anonymous writings which appeared late in the second century and even later. If their contents seemed credible and their statements harmonized with each other this want of authenticity would invalidate their authority, because the testimony of an unknown witness cannot be accepted as authoritative. On the other hand, if their authenticity could be established, if it could be shown that they were written by the authors claimed, the incredible and contradictory character of their contents would destroy their authority.

Since children most of us have been told in church that these documents which comprise the New Testament are inspired, infallible, and inerrant," in the light of the information presented above it would behoove us to investigate for ourselves the credibility of such documents. Not only that, but we have been taught that they were written by the closest followers of Jesus. As you can see for yourself such is not the case.

To believe the impossible is gross superstition; to believe the possible, simply because it is possible, is blind credulity.

These books are presented as the credentials of Christ. A critical analysis of these credentials reveals hundreds of errors. You will see as you proceed though this web site the hundred of misquotations, mistranslation, and verses taken out of context from the Old Testament which not only destroys the intended meaning of the original writer, but cause one today to read and be misled. In fact such distortions cause you to practice another gospel and another religion without ever knowing your are. Such purposeful deception by the writers of these documents, as well as those who altered them throughout history, has cause you and I to depart from the faith once given to the saints and literally oppose God in may ways in our lives without knowing it. We have followed fables and lies instead of truth. A presentation of these errors along with necessary background information will occupy this web site.

If it can be shown ...AND IT CAN...that they contain errors, however trivial some of them may appear, this refutes the claim of inerrancy and divinity. If it can be shown that these New Testament documents abound with errors, this destroys their credibility as historical documents and their authority for one's faith and practice.

Lost in these "errors" are the greatness of the indwelling Christ and the ancient Spiritual Wisdom. Within these documents are religious truth mixed with religious error. I am often asked by many "how can I tell the difference when reading the New Testament"? It is simple. If you look toward Jesus as the Christ-like life and example that one is to model his life after for godliness, then it become imperative to understand what Jesus believed about all facets of his faith…Biblical Judaism and not Christianity. The New Testament Jesus is not a Christian. His religion by which the "Mind of Christ" was revealed to man is Judaism and not Christianity, Israel and not Rome. The religious dogmas and doctrines believed by our example, the "Jewish Jesus" must be compared to these same or similar religious doctrines as they evolved at the hands of Rome and their Bibles. Then the differences must be noted and one must ask "How can God change His Mind"?

Having done that and this requires an in-depth study of the tenants of Biblical Judaism, then when reading the New Testament you are then able to read with a "Spiritual radar" spotting those things which are Jewish and Biblical which a Jew like Jesus believed as well as his life followed while at the same time "spotting" sayings, passages, and things which oppose Biblical Judaism; the faith of this New Testament Jesus.

Coupled with this is the necessary study of the ancient Mystery Religions and comparative religion that allows your "radar" to spot the similarity to and ancient's understanding of God and the similarities between that and many of the metaphysical dogmas expressed in the later "Jesus Story" . When we notice such similarities as well as Rome's "literalization", "historization", and "limitation" of these ancient Spiritual beliefs to but one person, the person of Jesus at the hands of Rome, then spotting "replacement religion" within the Christian's Old and New Testament documents becomes much easier. In order to accomplish such a task I hope to help you in your quest for such truth by exposing to you the knowledge and information gathered over the last 20 years of ministry as we look to both the Christian's Old and New Testament and evaluate if for Divine truth as well as man's error. May God's Holy Word be true and every man a liar who contradicts it and opposes such Divine Truth.

NECESSARY BACKGROUND INFORMATION FOR UNDERSTANDING THE NEW TESTAMENT CORRECTLY

The New Testament, like any other literature, is easier to understand and more interesting when it is seen in its historical context. For a still better picture of the age in which the books of the New Testament were written, it is necessary to step back a bit and review important events in Jewish history leading up to that period. The social, political, and religious conditions in Judea at the time of Christianity's birth are of great significance in understanding the direction which that religion took.

The sects or parties prevalent in Judea at the dawn of Christianity had an impact on early Christians, as well as on Jews. The names-Sadducees, Pharisees, Zealots--are mentioned throughout the Gospels, Acts, and Epistles. The Sanhedrin occupies a significant place in the recounting of Yeshua's trial as does the Roman procurator, Pontius Pilate. No study of the New Testament is complete without an awareness of the character and influence of Paul, the great proselytizer, if not founder, of Christianity. Paul's role was pivotal in transforming Nazarene Judaism into Gentile Christianity.

It is hoped that this short presentation about the important people, parties, and institutions during the life of Yeshua and the period in which the New Testament was composed will add to a better understanding and evaluation of the events recounted in Christian Scriptures.

HISTORICAL REVIEW

Let us turn back now to a brief historical review of Jews in their own land in order to gain a clearer perspective of the stage on which events were enacted during the time of Yeshua and Paul, the writing of the New Testament, and the development of Christianity. The historical summary also throws some light on the forces influencing most Jews who clung tenaciously to their land and faith.

After the destruction of the First Temple in Jerusalem and the fall of Judea in 586 B.C.E. many Jews, especially the Jewish leadership and aristocracy in Jerusalem, were sent into exile in Babylonia. Less than fifty years later in 538, the Babylonian Empire fell to Cyrus the Great of Persia. Cyrus was a benign monarch who allowed and encouraged the Jews to return to Judah and rebuild the Temple in Jerusalem. Many welcomed his offer. They returned to their former capital, built a modest Temple, and enjoyed a certain degree of autonomy. Despite some conflicts with the Samaritans, the Jews lived in peace and enjoyed religious freedom. Samaritans were people of diverse origins. They were a mixture of Israelites with people from Central Asia who were settled in Samaria by Sargon after the fall of the Northern Kingdom in 721 B.C.E. The Northern Kingdom was called Israel and contained ten tribes. They were sent into exile by Sargon of Assyria. The Southern Kingdom was called Judah or Judea and included the tribes of Judah and Benjamin. Transfer of populations was common in ancient times. The Samaritans worshipped God and also practiced idolatry. The Jews (Judeans), returning from exile, rejected the Samaritans' offer to help rebuild the Temple. They sensed that their survival depended on the preservation of their religion free from corrupting elements. The Samaritans, thereupon, became the inveterate foes of the Jews using every unscrupulous method to prevent them from rebuilding their Temple, constructing protective walls around Jerusalem, and establishing themselves in Judea. They told slanderous lies to the Persians in order to prevent or delay construction of the Temple. By 516 B.C.E., despite Samaritan opposition, the Second Temple was completed.

The Persian Empire extended from India to Ethiopia, as stated in the first chapter of the Book of Esther. Some Jews fared well under the Persians and rose to positions of influence. This too is corroborated in Esther even though details of the story are considered literary embellishments by most scholars.

In the ensuing two centuries, Persian imperial power decayed and declined. The independent city-states of Greece were conquered and united by Philip II of Macedon and his son, Alexander. As Alexander rose to power and endeavored to unite the Greek states of Europe and Asia, he met the Persians in combat and overcame them. After two centuries of ascendancy the Persian Empire fell to Alexander the Great of Macedon in 332 B.C.E. The Greeks now ruled all of the known world. Greek civilization or Hellenism spread throughout Europe and the ancient Near Eastern centers of civilization in Asia and North Africa. In 323 Alexander died and his empire was divided among three generals. While Alexander had been friendly to Jews, his successors were not consistently so. Under the Greeks Jews encountered more difficulty and strife than they had under Persian rule. In the Middle East one of Alexander's generals, Ptolemy, received Egypt and another general, Seleucus, acquired Syria. In 310 Ptolemy I declared himself king of Egypt and Judea. The latter included at various times not only the land area of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin but also Samaria, Galilee, and Trans-Jordan. The country was tranquil for the most part under the Ptolemaic hegemony although there were periodic battles on its territory between the Ptolemics and the Scleucids.

In 198 B.C.E. the Syrian Greeks wrested Judea from the Egyptian Greeks. Judea continued at peace for the next thirty years until Antiochus IV ascended the Syrian throne in 168. He attempted to impose his repressive rule on the Jews and to forbid their practice of Judaism. Revolt ensued under the leadership of Mattathias, a priest of Modi'in, a town northwest of Jerusalem. His five sons, Judah, John, Eliezer, Jonathan, and Simon, were known as the Maccabees. The war which the Maccabees fought under the successive command of the various brothers lasted from 168 to 134. It ended with the final liberation of Judea. The country had a measure of independence under the Hasmoneans, the name of the successors of the Maccabees. The Hasmoneans were priest-kings. That is, they ruled as kings and came from the priestly class. The members of the families were regarded as heroes because they had liberated the land from Greek domination. Although their family was not descended from that branch of the priesthood from which the High Priest came, the Maccabees' claim to that role was accepted by the people in light of their leadership role in the wars for religious freedom.

This did not preclude differences with certain elements in the population, especially among the Pharisees, who wished an earlier end to the warfare. The Hasmoneans had nationalistic goals to expand Jewish dominance to the areas that had been part of the kingdom when David and Solomon reigned. The opponents of this view were satisfied to end the state of war as long as the Temple was secured and religious freedom assured.

The Maccabean-Hasmonean dynasty lasted for over one hundred years. During that time Rome replaced Greece as the greatest power in the world. The Romans did, however, adsorb and assimilate Hellenism. Greek culture, if not Greek political power, prevailed throughout the Roman Empire. Judea lost its independence in the year 63 B.C.E. with the rivalry of two brothers for the throne: Aristobolus and Hyrcanus. They both appealed to Rome for help and that power played one against the other and finally moved into the breach. Pompey entered Jerusalem with his army. While a Hasmonean sat on the throne for the next two and-a-half decades, there was continuous encroachment by the Romans. The situation deteriorated as Judea lost its independence and Rome became more oppressive.

In 47 B.C.E. Antipater, ruler of Edom (Idumea), became procurator of Judea through political intrigue with the Romans. His son, Herod, continued the crafty maneuvering of his father. He became governor of Galilee. In that position he crushed a revolt of the Jews against Rome which was led by Hezekiah the Zealot. Shortly thereafter, in 40 B.C.E., Herod went to Rome for backing, having already demonstrated his loyalty to that government. The Romans then proclaimed him king of Judea. Herod killed Antigonus, the Hasmonean ruler, thus ending the dynasty. He undermined the Sanhedrin and the internal organization of the Jewish community. He brought the kingdom of Judea into the Roman Hellenistic orbit. The Jews hated him for Hellenizing their country, for subverting their institutions, and for his wanton brutality. He murdered his Hasmonean wife, Mariamne, and their sons in a psychotic rage. His reign lasted from 37 to 4 B.C.E. Toward the end of his rule a Jewish baby was supposedly born in Nazareth, and given the name of Joshua. Years later he became known by the Greek translation of his name, Jesus. Thus, the beginning of the "Jesus Story" is at hand.

DISTURBING QUOTES ABOUT THE CHRISTIAN FAITH...CAN THIS BE TRUE AND I NOT KNOW IT?

Let us begin this serious study with a series of very disturbing quotes. The information presented in these Web Pages is not provided as a form of entertainment. I strongly suggest that you do not continue your study and search for truth in these pages unless you are willing to take responsibility for what you learn.

2 Peter 2:21..."For it had been better for them not to have know the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandments delivered unto them. (KJV)

THE TESTIMONY OF THE APOSTLE PAUL INCRIMINATES THE FAITH THAT HE IS TEACHING THE GENTILES

We find Saint Paul, the first Apostle of the Gentiles, avowing that he was made a minister of the Gospel which had already been preached to every creature under heaven...

Col 1:23 23 If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister; (KJV)

Answer for yourself: Did you catch that?

Paul is stating that he, the Apostle to the Gentiles, is preaching a message that HAS ALREADY BEEN PREACHED TO EVERY CREATURE UNDER HEAVEN! This bears some deep thought. I did just that. This opened my heart and mind to considerable in-depth study to fathom out the depths of what this one verse alluded.

Simply said, Saint Paul was preaching a God manifest in the flesh, who had been believed on in the world before the commencement of his ministry. Dear one, this could not have been Jesus of Nazareth, who had certainly not been preached at that time, nor generally believed on in the world till ages after. Saint Paul owns himself a deacon, which is the lowest ecclesiastical grade of the Therapeutan church. Many wonderful books yet exist which explains this verse. Unfortunately it is not comforting to a Christian to learn the truth about "the Gospel" which Paul taught. I will now quote from a rather old book by Bunsen called The Angel-Messiah published in London in 1867. The following quote is taken from page 240:

"The Gospel of which Paul's Epistles speak had been extensively preached and fully established before the time of Jesus by the Terapeutae or Essenes, who believed in the doctrine of the Angel-Messiah, the Aeon from heaven; the doctrine of the "Anointed Angel," the doctrine of the atoning sacrificial death of Jesus by the blood of his cross; the doctrine of the Messianic ante-type of the Paschal lamb and of the Paschal omer, and thus the resurrection of Jesus Christ the third day according to the Scriptures-these doctrines of Paul can with more or less certainty be connected with the Essenes...It becomes almost a certainty that Eusebius was right in surmising that Essenic writing have been used by Paul and the evangelists. Not Jesus, but Paul, is the cause of the separation of the Jews from the Christians."

What Bunsen fails to tell us here explicitly, and which is alluded to only implicitly, is that the origin of this crucified "Angel-Anointed, Angel-Messiah" had its roots in the worship of the Sun by the Gentile nations.

What one fails to understand when he hears the word "Essene" is that in the time of Yeshua these "Essenes" were no longer a holy lineage from Zadok, but were rather Pythagorean in their beliefs. Such a religious synthesis explains on the part of the Essenes of the first century how they came to believe in the crucified Sun god-men of which I will explain later. Let us resume for now.

The very ancient and Eastern doctrine of an Angel-Messiah had been applied to Gautama-Buddha, who predicted that another Avatar (an incarnated deity in some shape in the earth; usually of Hindu origin) would come upon the earth in six hundred years after his death. This time had nearly expired; so Jesus of Nazareth was proclaimed as the expected Messiah by these Buddhist Jews, and the Sun-Myths were interwoven with his real history. Jesus unquestionably possessed a nature as divine as it is possible for a human being to possess, or he would not otherwise have been received as the Angel-Messiah by a sect so pure and holy as were the Essenes.

But let us not stop short of the other disturbing quotes.

THE EARLY CHURCH FATHERS INCRIMINATE THEMSELVES AND THE GENTILE CHRISTIAN FAITH...AND I BET YOU NEVER KNEW THIS...DID YOU?

In Seminary I remember looking at the Library shelves that supported the multiple volumes of the Ante-Nicean Fathers. I beheld thousand and thousands of pages of their writings. I even amused myself that to read and understand such a large volume of literature would take years. It did!

What I came to admire about such writings is when you read enough of them you find that these "pro-Christian" writers often incriminated themselves with what they wrote. The following examples are for your benefit.

JUSTIN MARTYR

Eusebius, in his Church History, tells us that Justin, in his Dialogue with Trypho, says "there exists not a people, civilized or semi-civilized, who have not offered up prayers in the name of a crucified Savior to the Father and Creator of all things" (Hist. Eccl. lib i. ch. iv).

The honesty of Justin Martyr as portrayed here is the heart of the subject matter of these web pages. I intend to show you that from the beginning of time the pagan nations had their "crucified Sun-gods" and much recorded about Jesus of Nazareth in the New Testament is nothing more than the "re-telling" of the same Sun-Myths; the only difference is that now they are applied to the life of Jesus the Jew. Do you want the truth before you die? Then keep reading.

EUSEBIUS

Eusebius says that "the names of Jesus and Christ were both known and honored by the ancients" (Hist. Eccl. lib. i. ch. iv). How could this be?

Eusebius, the great champion of Christianity, admits in his book: "that which is called the Christian religion is neither new nor strange, but-if it be lawful to testify the truth-was known to the ancients" (Hist. Eccl. lib. 2, ch. v.). How could this be?

Eusebius, who is our chief guide for the early history of the Church, confesses that he was by no means scrupulous to record the whole truth concerning the early Christians in the various works which he has left behind him (Eusebius, Hist. Eccl., ch. viii. p. 21).

Edward Gibbon, speaking of Eusebius says: "The gravest of the ecclesiastical historians, Eusebius himself, indirectly confesses that he has related what might rebound to the glory, and that he has suppressed all that could tend to the disgrace, of religion. Such an acknowledgment will naturally excite a suspicion that a writer who has so openly violated one of the fundamental laws of history has not paid a very strict regard to the observance of the other; and the suspicion will derive additional credit from the character of Eusebius, which was less tinctured with credulity, and more practiced in the arts of courts, than that of almost any of his contemporaries" (Gibbon, Rome, vol. ii., Philadelphia, 1876).

SAINT AUGUSTINE

Augustine is quoted as saying: "That in our time is the Christian Religion, which to know and follow is the most sure and certain health, called according to that name, but not according to the thing itself, of which is the name; for the thing itself which is now called the Christian Religion really was known to the ancients, nor was wanting at any time from the beginning of the human race until the time when Christ came in the flesh, from whence the true religion, which had previously existed, began to be called "Christian;" and this in our days is the Christian religion, not as having been wanting in former times, but as having in later times received this name" (Opera Augustini, vol. i. p. 12; quoted in Taylor's Diegesis, p. 42).

Now if you read these quotes you have to admit that they are very troubling to the contemporary Christian. I always heard: "Where there is smoke there is fire" [pardon the pun please]. If you find the courage to look beyond these quotes then you will find the kindling used for the paganization of Christianity by the Gentile Church whereby it become little more than another manifestation of Sun Worship.

TERTULLIAN

Tertullian, one of the Christian Fathers (A.D. 200), originally a Pagan, and at one time Presbyter of the Christian Church in Africa, reasons in the following manner on the evidences of Christianity: "I find no other means to prove myself to be impudent with success, and happily a fool, than by my contempt of shame, - as, for instance, I maintain that the Son of God was born. Why am I not ashamed of maintaining such a thing? Why, but because it is itself a shameful thing. I maintain that the Son of God died. Well, that is wholly credible, because it is monstrously absurd. I maintain that after having been buried he rose again; and that I take to be mainly true, because it was manifestly impossible" (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 326).

For example, early Church Father Tertullian (160-220 C.E.), an "ex-Pagan" and Bishop of Carthage, ironically admits the true origins of the Christ story and of all other such god-men by stating in refutation of his critics, "You say we worship the sun; so do you" (Wheless, Forgery in Christianity, p. 147).

Interestingly, a previously strident believer and defender of the faith, Tertullian later renounced Christianity. (Wheless, Forgery in Christianity, p. 147).

OTHER INCRIMINATING QUOTES CHALLENGING THE TRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHRISTIAN FAITH

THOMAS PAINE

"The Christian religion is a parody on the worship of the Sun, in which they put a man whom they call Christ, in the place of the Sun, and pay him the same adoration which was originally paid to the Sun."

AMMONIUS SACCUS

Ammonius Saccus, a Greek philosopher, founder of the Neoplatonic school, taught that Christianity and Paganism when rightly understood, differ in no essential points, but had a common origin, and are really one and the same religion" (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 329).

GODFREY HIGGINS

Godfrey Higgins, in Anacalypsis, states: "that every part of the vulgar Christian religion is the same as that of the vulgar religion of the Gentiles; that there is nothing new in the Roman Catholic religion; that, in short it is Reformed or Protestant Gentilism." He goes on to say: "several of the most important doctrinal parts of corrupt modern Christianity are nothing more than scraps of the Heathen mythologies of various kinds taught by different nations, long previous to the Christian era...the immaculate conception, the incarnation, the trinity, with its various hypostases, and the crucifixion and resurrection..." He further states: "It is more than probable that every part has been copied from some former religion; that no part of what has been really the system of the Christian priests was invented originally for their use. To tradition it is indebted for every doctrine and rite which it possesses; to fraudulent and dishonest practices it is chiefly indebted for their establishment."

CELSUS

Celsus, the Epicurean philosopher, wrote that "the Christian religion contains nothing but what Christians hold in common with heathen; nothing new" (Justin, Apol 2.).

Celsus, in the Octavius of Minucius Felix, says: "All these fragments of crack-brained opiniary and silly solaces played off in the sweetness of song by deceitful [Pagan] poets, by you too credulous creatures [that is, the Christians] have been shamefully reformed and made over to your own god]."

ISAAC DE CASAUBON

Issac de Casaubon, one of the greatest ecclesiastical scholars, says: "It mightily affects me to see how many there were in the earliest times of the Church, who considered it as a capital exploit to lend to heavenly truth the help of their own inventions, in order that the new doctrine might be more readily received by the wise among the Gentiles. These officious lies, they were wont to say, were devised for a good end" (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 44).

FAUSTUS

Faustus, writing to St. Augustine, says: "You have substituted your agape for the sacrifices of the Pagans; for their idols you martyrs, whom you serve with the very same honors. You appease the shades of the dead with wine and feasts; you celebrate the solemn festivals of the Gentiles, their calendars, and their solstices; and as to their manners, those you have retained without any alteration. Nothing distinguishes you from the Pagans, except that you hold your assemblies apart from them" (Draper, Science and Religion, p. 48. New York: 1876).

GREGORY OF NAZIANZUS

Gregory, writing to St. Jerome, says: "A little jargon is all that is necessary to impose on the people. The less they comprehend the more they admire. Our forefathers and doctors have often said, not what they though, but what circumstances and necessity dictated" (Hieron ad. Nep.,quoted in Volney's Ruins, p. 177, Boston, 1872).

ALBERT CHURCHWARD

Mythicist Albert Churchward stated a century ago: "The canonical gospels can be shown to be a collection of sayings from the Egyptian Mythos and Eschatology"(The Origin and Evolution of Religion).

JOSEPH WHELESS

"The reason why all these narratives are so similar, with a god-man who is crucified and resurrected, who does miracles and has 12 disciples, is that these stories were based on the movements of the sun through the heavens, an astro-theological development that can be found throughout the planet because the sun and the 12 zodiac signs can be observed around the globe. In other words, Jesus Christ and all the others upon whom this character is predicated are personifications of the sun, and the Gospel fable is merely a rehash of a mythological formula (the "Mythos," as mentioned above) revolving around the movements of the sun through the heavens." The logical question arises: Why, if Jesus is a historical character, are there are presently two dates for both Christmas and Easter? This purportedly well-known character, who set the world on fire, has no birthdate whatsoever, and the "historical" references and genealogies found in the gospel accounts differ from each other. The gospels are not history at all but a retelling of the Mythos. The historical Jesus is a phantom. "These, which cannot both be historical, are based on the two birthdays of the double Horus in Egypt." In addition, early Christian "doctors" were constantly contradicting themselves as to when exactly "the Lord" died or "ascended to heaven" after "he" was resurrected. Two of the most powerful early bishops, Irenaeus and Papias recorded that Christ lived to be very old, "flatly denying as 'heresy' the Gospel stories as to his crucifixion at about thirty years of age."

Joseph Wheless states, "The gospels are all priestly forgeries over a century after their pretended dates." "As said by the great critic, Salomon Reinach, 'With the exception of Papias, who speaks of a narrative by Mark, and a collection of sayings of Jesus, no Christian writer of the first half of the second century (i.e., up to 150 A.D.) quotes the Gospels or their reputed authors.'"In The Book Your Church Doesn't Want You to Read, John Remsburg states: "The Four Gospels were unknown to the early Christian Fathers. Justin Martyr, the most eminent of the early Fathers, wrote about the middle of the second century. His writings in proof of the divinity of Christ demanded the use of these Gospels had they existed in his time. He makes more than 300 quotations from the books of the Old Testament, and nearly one hundred from the Apocryphal books of the New Testament; but none from the four Gospels. Rev. Giles says: 'The very names of the Evangelists, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, are never mentioned by him (Justin) - do not occur once in all his writings.'" In A Short History of the Bible, Keeler says, "The books [canonical gospels] are not heard of till 150 A.D., that is, till Jesus had been dead nearly a hundred and twenty years. No writer before 150 A.D. makes the slightest mention of them." (J. Wheless, Forgery in Christianity).

"Those who concocted some of the hundreds of "alternative" gospels and epistles that were being kicked about during the first several centuries C.E. have even admitted that they had forged the documents." Wheless quotes the Catholic Encyclopedia: "Enterprising spirits responded to this natural craving by pretended gospels full of romantic fables, and fantastic and striking details; their fabrications were eagerly read and accepted as true by common folk who were devoid of any critical faculty and who were predisposed to believe what so luxuriously fed their pious curiosity. Both Catholics and Gnostics were concerned in writing these fictions. The former had no motive other than that of a PIOUS FRAUD."

Forgery during the first centuries of the Church's existence was admittedly rampant, so common in fact that a new phrase was coined to describe it: "pious fraud." Wheless, op cit. Mangasarian states: "The church historian, Mosheim, writes that, 'The Christian Fathers deemed it a pious act to employ deception and fraud.' [Ecclesiastical Hist., Vol. I, p. 347.] Again, he says: 'The greatest and most pious teachers were nearly all of them infected with this leprosy.' Will not some believer tell us why forgery and fraud were necessary to prove the historicity of Jesus. . . . Another historian, Milman, writes that, 'Pious fraud was admitted and avowed by the early missionaries of Jesus.' 'It was an age of literary frauds,' writes Bishop Ellicott, speaking of the times immediately following the alleged crucifixion of Jesus. Dr. Giles declares that, 'There can be no doubt that great numbers of books were written with no other purpose than to deceive.' And it is the opinion of Dr. Robertson Smith that, 'There was an enormous floating mass of spurious literature created to suit party views.'"

Such prevarication is confessed to repeatedly in the Catholic Encyclopedia. Wheless: "The clerical confessions of lies and frauds in the ponderous volumes of the Catholic Encyclopedia alone suffice . . . to wreck the Church and to destroy utterly the Christian religion. . . . The Church exists mostly for wealth and self-aggrandizement; to quit paying money to the priests would kill the whole scheme in a couple of years. This is the sovereign remedy" (J. Wheless, Forgery in Christianity). As Wheless says, "The proofs of my indictment are marvelously easy."

BARBARA WALKER

The assertion that Jesus Christ is a myth [reincarnation of Pagan Sun-Myths] can be proved not only through the works of dissenters and "pagans" who knew the truth - and who were viciously refuted or murdered for their battle against the Christian priests and "Church Fathers" fooling the masses with their fictions - but also through the very statements of the Christians themselves, who continuously disclose that they knew Jesus Christ was a myth founded upon more ancient deities located throughout the known ancient world. In fact, Pope Leo X, privy to the truth because of his high rank, made this curious declaration, "What profit has not that fable of Christ brought us!" (The Woman's Encyclopedia of Myths and Secrets, by Barbara Walker, p. 471). Rev. Taylor, in The Diegesis, reports a slightly different version of Leo X's admission: "It was well known how profitable this fable of Christ has been to us." (footnote, p. 35.)

KERSEY GRAVES

The Jesus story incorporated elements from the tales of other deities recorded in this widespread area, such as many of the following world saviors and "sons of God," most or all of whom predate the Christian myth, and a number of whom were crucified or executed. Many on this list come from The World's Sixteen Crucified Saviors by Graves. This is not to suggest that all of these god-men characters were utilized in the formation of the Christian myth, as overt contact had not occurred in such places as Mexico or Bermuda. Also, modern orthodoxy does not allow for the dates provided by Graves, i.e., that Quetzalcoatl originates in the 6th B.C.E., a date far too early in the orthodox perspective. However, we utilize this list to demonstrate that the same concepts are found worldwide with and without cultural exchange, because they are derived from the same astro-theological observations. Also, we are in concurrence with the "ancient advanced civilization" theory ("Atlantis") that would allow for one or more centralized civilizations to have spread throughout the world during a very remote period in protohistory, thus taking with it the well-developed Mythos and Ritual, which would then mutate into the various forms found around the globe.

M. TURRETIN

Mr. Turretin, in describing the state of Christianity in the fourth century, says "that it was not so much the empire that was brought over to the faith, as the faith that was brought over to the empire; not the Pagans who were converted to Christianity, but Christianity that was converted to Paganism" (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 50).

EDWARD GIBBON

Edward Gibbon says: "It must be confessed that the ministers of the Catholic Church imitated the profane model which they were impatient to destroy. The most respectable bishops had persuaded themselves that the ignorant rustics would more cheerfully renounce the superstitions of Paganism if they found some resemblance, some compensation, in the bosom of Christianity. The religion of Constantine achieved in less than a century the final conquest of the Roman empire; but the victors themselves were insensibly subdued by the arts of their vanquished rivals" (Gibbon, Rome, vol. iii. p. 163).

EMPEROR HADRIAN

The early Christians were charged with being a sect of sun-worshippers (Bonwick, Egyptian Belief, p. 283). The Emperor Hadrian could see no difference between them and the followers of the ancient Egyptian god Serapis, who was the Sun. In a letter to the Consul Servianus, the Emperor says: "There are there [in Egypt] Christians who worship Serapis and devoted to Serapis are those who call themselves 'Bishops of Christ'" (Giles, Hebrew and Christian Records, vol. ii. p. 86. London: 1877).

Answer for yourself: What are we to make of such information? Well for me, I had to know the truth that lays behind such comments. Study is the only way to find the truth about this matter and I have brought before the reader the findings of my scholarly research into these areas. Once you, the reader and student, sees the evidence that exists today concerning the real "truth" behind the "literal" and "historical" version of the "Jesus Story" given us by Rome, then I trust you can make up your own mind and be objective in such a decision and let the truths shown you lead you to the mystical and metaphysical Spiritual truths regarding your Soul that have been kept from you by organized Roman Christianity in their efforts to use fear and ignorance to control the masses when their swords failed them as historically they did.

SCHOLARS SPEAK OUT ON PAULINE AUTHORSHIP OF THE NEW TESTAMENT EPISTLES

Identifying forgeries in the Bible often calls for some hard detective work. There is no "royal road." Every clue, every nuance, no matter how subtle or insignificant it may seem, must be followed to its logical conclusion. Sometime the results are ambiguous and frustrating. They remain questionable, and I will point out a couple of examples. But perseverance often pays off, and the data confirm a suspected Bible forgery. So, although some of the suspected Bible forgeries may ultimately be proved authentic, others certainly will be substantiated. The so-called Pauline epistles are a good case in point.

Paul was a Jew born at Tarsus, a city in Cilicia. The year of his birth is not known exactly but scholars put it at about 5 CE. His Jewish name was "Saul" which he used within the Jewish community with "Paul" being the Greek version. He is believed to have died in Rome around 65 CE. Paul was a contemporary of Jesus. Outside the New Testament letters (epistles), there are no reliable sources for his life. In the New Testament the so-called Pauline epistles begin after the Book of Acts and include the next thirteen entries. They all begin with the words "The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the . . ."

Answer for yourself: But did he really write them?

According to scholarly analyses, Romans, I and II Corinthians, I Thessalonians and Galatians are genuine. Opinion is divided on the authenticity of Philippians and Philemon. Ephesians, Colossians, II Thessalonians, I and II Timothy and Titus are held by most scholars to be forgeries written considerably later than the time of Paul. The story of Paul's conversion to Christianity and his career as a missionary is given in the Book of Acts and was probably written many years after his death. Therefore its authenticity is also questionable.

The purpose of this article is to review the bases for evaluating the Pauline epistles as to their authenticity or lack thereof. Before reviewing the epistles themselves, however, let us consider some general observations of scholars concerning the Pauline epistles and other early Christian documents.

THE JESUS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

Graham, Lloyd M., Deceptions and Myths of the Bible, 1979
Page 410: Paul is but the Moses of the New Testament, carrying on where Joseph or in this case, Jesus, left off. The cue to this parallel is given in Acts, chapter 7 which recounts the whole story of Moses so that we may see the connection.

Martin, Michael, The Case Against God, 1991
Page 38: The first Christian documents to characterize Jesus in a way that roughly corresponds to the accounts in the gospels (1 and 2 Timothy, Titus, 2 Peter, 1 Clement, seven letters of Ignatius of Antioch) were written somewhere between 90 and 110. This is after the gospels had been written and circulated. Why does no biographical information appear in the earlier documents (2 Thessalonians, Ephesians, Hebrews, 1 Peter and possibly also the letters of James and 1, 2, and 3 John?) The only plausible answer to this question is that Jesus' biography is pure fiction invented late in the 1st century. It was unknown to the earlier writers such as Paul.

Page 56: An important clue against the historicity of the Jesus of the gospels is that the early and later non-Pauline epistles picture him differently. Those likely to have been written before 90 (2 Thessalonians, Ephesians, Hebrews, 1 Peter, and James,) refer to Jesus in basically the same way as do the authentic Pauline epistles. They stress the resurrection and second coming but do not refer to the ethical teachings or the miracles Jesus allegedly performed; they say nothing about his birth, baptism, trial, crucifixion, and death. On the other hand, the later epistles, those written after 90 (1 & 2 Timothy and Titus,) begins to portray Jesus as he is in the gospels placing him in a definite time period as do other late first century documents such as 2 Peter, 1, 2, and 3 John, Jude, the first epistle of Clement, and the letters of Ignatius and Polycarp. They obviously were influenced by the gospels.

Ephesians, thought to have been written between 80 and 90, is one of the earlier Pauline forgeries. It gives no detail of Jesus' life and teachings and consequently provides no conformation that Jesus lived in the early part of the first century. In 4:25-32 the author advocates speaking the truth, controlling anger, doing honest work, and being mutually forgiving and kind, yet he never cites the teachings of Jesus. One can only infer that he had no knowledge of them.

Wells, G. A., The Historical Evidence for Jesus, 1988
Page 20: - It often comes as a shock to many lay readers to learn that the (authentic) epistles of Paul predate the gospels. Although the gospels present versions of the life of Jesus (4BCE? - 30?), they were actually written between 70 and 110. The authentic Pauline epistles were written between 50 and 60. Therefore, it is these epistles, not the gospels, which provide the most plausible clues as to how the earliest Christians regarded Jesus.

Page 22: The Pauline epistles considered to be genuine are so completely silent concerning the events that were later recorded in the gospels as to suggest that these events were not known to Paul, who could not have been ignorant of them had they really happened.

These letters make not a single reference to the parents of Jesus nor to the virgin birth. They never refer to a place of birth (for example, by referring to him as Jesus of Nazareth). They give no indication of the time or place of his earthly existence. They do not refer to his trial before a Roman official, nor to Jerusalem as the place of execution. They mention neither John the Baptist, nor Judas Iscariot, Jesus' alleged betrayer. They do, of course, mention Peter, but do not imply that he, any more than Paul himself, had known Jesus personally and been associated with him during his alleged lifetime.

Paul's failure to mention Peter's denial of Christ (Mk.14:30, 66-72, and parallels) is highly significant. Paul's letter to the Galatians reveals that his position as leader of the Christian community at Antioch was threatened by Peter (a.k.a. Cephas), whom he calls a hypocrite (Gal. 2:11-13). The denial coupled with Jesus' stern warning in Matthew 10:33 would have been a powerful weapon he could have used against Peter. Why didn't he? Paul's silence is rightly interpreted as compelling evidence that the denial story is a late Christian forgery.

Paul claims to have won converts "by the power of signs and wonders" (Rom. 15:19). He seems to be completely unaware that Jesus said that there shall be no sign given to this generation (Mark 8:12). He also fails to mention the many wonders (miracles) which, according to the gospels, Jesus routinely performed. He obviously didn't know of them.

Another striking feature of Paul's letters is that one could never gather from them that Jesus had been an ethical teacher. In fact, Paul presents a considerable amount of ethical teachings in his own name, with no suggestion that Jesus had taught anything of the kind, even though the gospels later put exactly the same doctrines into Jesus' mouth.

AUTHENTIC

Mack, Burton L., Who Wrote The New Testament, 1995
Page 126: First and Second Corinthians are authentic but are actually collections of portions of six different letters.

Page 137: Romans is authentic. It provides a comprehensive elaboration of Paul's theology and is the earliest systematic treatise of a rationale for the Christian myth.

Remsberg, John E., The Christ, 1909
Page 41: Four Epistles, - Romans, 1st & 2nd Corinthians, and Galatians - are generally admitted to be the genuine writings of Paul. They are believed to have been written about a quarter of a century after the alleged death of Jesus. In fact, they are the only documents in the entire New Testament whose authenticity can be maintained and whose author is known.

Robertson, Archibald, The Origins Of Christianity, 1954
Page 105: The Paul of Galatians and the Paul the Acts are two different men.

First Corinthians is for the most part authentic but appears to have been altered probably after Paul's death (10:1-22.)

Page 109: Second Corinthians affords conclusive evidence that the Jesus of Pauline Christianity was not the same as the Jesus portrayed in the gospels. The Pauline Christ is "the Spirit" (3:17-18) and "the image of God" (4:4)as opposed to the real person of the gospels.

Page 144: Philippians is composed of three letter fragments crudely joined together.

Wells, G. A., The Historical Evidence for Jesus, 1988
Page 21: Romans, 1& 2 Corinthians and Galatians are universally accepted as authentic. The computer techniques tried on them by Morton and McLeman have confirmed that they have a common author. Internal evidence indicates that this author wrote before 70, for the references to his contacts with a Christian community at Jerusalem show that the catastrophic destruction of that city in the Judeo/Roman War (67 - 70) had not yet occurred. Indeed, Paul must have been a Christian before 40 for he tells how King Aretas of the Nabateans, who is known to have died in that year, had sought to have him arrested because of his Christian activities (2 Cor. 11:32). He probably wrote somewhere between 55 and 60 for he tells the Galatians that he had been a Christian for at least fourteen years at the time of writing.

THE PASTORALS

Eddy, Patricia G., Who Tampered With The Bible? 1993
Page 26: Although purported to have been written by Paul, the relatively complex church organization reflected by the Pastorals did not exist until many years after Paul's death.

Mack, Burton L., Who Wrote The New Testament, 1995
Page 206: The Pastorals were undoubtedly written during the first half of the 2nd century. They were not included in Marcion's list of Paul's letters (ca.140). Quotations from them first appear in Irenaeus' Against Heresies (180) and their content fits nicely into the situation and thought of the church in the mid-second century. Their attribution to Paul is a forgery for their language and thought are clearly unPauline. Also, references to particular occasions in the lives of Titus, Timothy, and Paul do not fit with reconstructions of that history taken from the authentic letters.

The New Oxford Annotated Bible
Page 300 NT: The vocabulary and style of these letters differ widely from the acknowledged letters of Paul;

some of his leading theological themes are entirely absent (the union of the believer with Christ, the power and witness of the Spirit, freedom from the law), and some of the expressions bear a different meaning from that in his customary usage ("the faith" as a synonym for the Christian religion rather than the believer's relationship to Christ).

Oxford Companion to the Bible
Page 574 (Paraphrase): Second Timothy, although attributed to Paul, is found by many scholars to be so unPauline in vocabulary, style, theological concepts, church order, emphasis on tradition and in contrast with the chronology of his career as given in Acts and Romans, that it is widely considered to be a forgery.

Remsberg, John E., The Christ, 1909
Page 41: That the Pastorals are forgeries is now conceded by all critics. According to German critics they belong to the second century. They were certainly composed after the death of Paul.

Robertson, Archibald, The Origins Of Christianity, 1954
Page 129: As to the Pastorals, most scholars now agree that they are second-century forgeries. They deal with second-century situations. These documents were not written by Paul.

Wells, G.A., Did Jesus Exist? 1986
Page 17-18: It is widely agreed that the Pastorals are mostly forgeries although Titus and 2 Timothy may contain some genuine notes from Paul.

Wells, G. A., The Historical Evidence for Jesus, 1988
Page 90: Analyses show all the Pastorals were from the same hand but not from Paul's hand. For example, Paul's theology is very imperfectly represented in them. Also, the controversy over keeping the Jewish law was a hot topic in the authentic Paulines. Whereas in the Pastorals it is no longer an issue. Therefore, they must be of a later date.

Page 94: The church hierarchy described in the Pastorals is much too advanced to represent that of the early church of Paul's day. In 1 Tim. 3:6 it says "the bishop must not be a recent convert," a statement which shows that at the time of writing the church had been in existence for quite some time.

SECOND THESSALONIANS

Eddy, Patricia G., Who Tampered With The Bible? 1993
Page 184: Second Thessalonians was forged in Paul's name shortly after his death or during the late stages of his imprisonment in Rome. Scholars believe it was written to offset the disappointment and unrest then rising in the Christian community resulting from the unfulfilled promise of an imminent second coming (2 Thes. 2:1-8).

Mack, Burton L., Who Wrote The New Testament, 1995
Page 112: Second Thessalonians was not written by Paul. It lacks the personal warmth, reminiscences, and references characteristic of the authentic letters. Almost one-third of it is verbatim copy from 1st Thessalonians. The eschatology reflects a development of Christian apocalyptic thinking of the kind that took place only after the Judeo/Roman war. Second Thessalonians adds nothing to our knowledge of Paul's gospel. Its only importance is in documenting the fact that some "Pauline epistles" were forged.

Remsberg, John E., The Christ, 1909
Page 41-42: Second Thessalonians, a self evident forgery, declares 1st Thessalonians to be a forgery (3:17).

Robertson, Archibald, The Origins Of Christianity, 1954
Page 108: Second Thessalonians is a forgery. Its vocabulary is peculiar; it deals with a theme (the persecution of the righteous which is to precede the second coming) mentioned nowhere else in the authentic Pauline epistles; and it seems to be written expressly to discredit the statement in 1st Thessalonians that "the day of the Lord" will come "as a thief in the night" (5:2,) i.e., any day now and without warning.

Wells, G.A., Did Jesus Exist? 1986
Pages 17-18: Second Thessalonians is considered to be a forgery. It presents an ecclesiastical organization of a more advanced kind than existed in Paul's day.

That letters were written in Paul's name (forged) is clear from exhortations not to be misled "by some letters purporting to be from us" (2 Thess. 2:2,) and from the fact that the author of this epistle finds it necessary (3:17) to authenticate himself with his signature.

Wells, G. A., The Historical Evidence for Jesus, 1988
Page 49-50: Most investigators regard Second Thessalonians (half the length of the first) as having been derived from the first letter. If Paul had written Second Thessalonians, it seems unlikely that he would have used so many of the same phrases. Also, The second letter is in an entirely different style than the first.

Second Thessalonians contradicts First Thessalonians regarding the second coming. In the first letter Jesus is expected to return soon and will come unheralded "like a thief in the night," at a time of apparent peace and security (5:1-3). In Second Thessalonians the second coming is not to be expected soon. According to chapter 2 it will be preceded by a series of upheavals. So the contradiction is sharp. If the end will be preceded by catastrophes, then it will not come when all is peace and security.

It is difficult to assign a precise date to Second Thessalonians. However, most scholars suggest the mid-80s.

EPHESIANS & COLOSSIANS

Mack, Burton L., Who Wrote The New Testament, 1995
Page 183: The letters to the Ephesians and Colossians, thought to have been written between 80 and 90, were not written by Paul. There is no suggestion of the personal Paul in either of them. The style, the vocabulary, and the rhetoric are different from the authentic Paulines. They were written in Paul's name after his death probably by scribes loyal to the school that survived him. They are included among the Pauline letters because by the time the church started drawing up lists of literature acceptable for public reading in the third and fourth centuries, Ephesians and Colossians were already a part of the "letters of Paul."

Martin, Michael, The Case Against God, 1991
Page 184: In Ephesians Paul's teachings are diluted. No mention is made of his heated arguments for freedom from the Jewish law, the justification of sinners, faith in Christ, scriptural precedence, epic revisions or apocalyptic scenarios and threats. These are the topics that dominate the authentic letters.

Page 188: Paul used the term "congregation" to refer to a local group whereas the author of Ephesians used the term in the singular to refer to the church universal.

The New Oxford Annotated Bible
Page 272 NT: There are important contrasts between Ephesians and the letters that we can confidently ascribe to Paul. Many of the words in Ephesians do not appear elsewhere in the apostle's correspondence, and some important terms have a different meaning here from their meaning in letters that are surely Paul's. The style, with its loose collection of phrases and clauses and long sentences, is not characteristic of Paul's writing. Ephesians is, therefore, judged to be a forgery.

Wells, G. A., The Historical Evidence for Jesus, 1988
Page 21: Colossians is judged to have been written not by Paul but by one of his pupils. Paul's ideas as expressed in Romans (6:3-5) have been greatly modified.

Page 53: Ephesians was written about 90, some 25 years after Paul's death. During Paul's lifetime the terms for admitting gentiles into the church was at the core of a protracted controversy. Ephesians addresses the gentiles

(2:11) in a situation where such problems have been solved. Therefore, it has to be of a much later date.

Wells, G.A., Did Jesus Exist? 1986
Pages 17-18: Colossians and Ephesians are considered forgeries. They present an ecclesiastical organization of a far more advanced kind than existed in Paul's day. For example, according to Ephesians 2:20-21 the faithful are said to be dependent for salvation not directly on Jesus but on officers of the Church. This is a clear contradiction of 1 Cor. 3:10-11 which reads: According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.

THE BOOK OF HEBREWS

The Epistle to the Hebrews, although not designated a Pauline epistle, is included here out of interest.

Graham, Lloyd M., Deceptions and Myths of the Bible, 1979
Page 410: "The Epistle to the Hebrews was written by Barnabas, not by Paul" said Tertullian (160?-230?)

Page 410: "Who wrote the Epistle to the Hebrews God only knows," Origen (185?-254?)

Mack, Burton L., Who Wrote The New Testament, 1995
Page 189: The author of Hebrews is unknown. However, it was not Paul. Its concept of Christianity is different from any of the early Christian writers.

Remsberg, John E., The Christ, 1909
Page 42: Hebrews does not purport to be a Pauline document. Martin Luther says in the Standing Preface to his N. T., "The Epistle to the Hebrews is not by Paul, nor, indeed, by any apostle." In fact, the spurious origin of Hebrews is recognized right away because it never claims authorship by Paul.

Wells, G. A., The Historical Evidence for Jesus, 1988
Page 55: Many Bibles ascribe Hebrews to Paul although it does not purport to come from him and is not written in his style. A major concern of the author of Hebrews is to argue that God had set aside as outmoded the sacrificial system of the old covenant. But the writer who intended to discredit Jewish sacrificial ritual might reasonably be expected to point to the destruction of the temple in 70, had he been writing after this date. If he had written after 70 he could hardly have been unaware of this catastrophic event. For this reason it is reasonable to assume that Hebrews was written sometime between 60 and 70.

The failure of the author to refer to gospel material germane to his argument is important. He was obviously unaware of the gospels and the Jesus they portray. Also, the author takes the view (unknown to Paul) that there can be no second repentance (6:4-6). Apostasy (the denial of scripture) is the unforgivable sin. Therefore, he could not have been aware of the story of Peter's denial.

CONCLUSION

Of the thirteen epistles ascribed to Paul in the Bible, only five can be identified as authentic with any degree of certainty. Yet, all thirteen are headed with the bold inscription, THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO . . . Such blatant subterfuge by the writers of these ancient religious documents in the face of undeniable evidence amounts to a most scandalous and irresponsible deception. As we have found and are continuing to see for ourselves is that the later writers of the New Testament were refuting Marcion's First New Testament and his "allegorical" Christ. This refutation consisted of letters forged in the name of Paul in order to not only claim authority for these forgeries by drawing upon the name of Paul but also to make it appear that Paul was anti-Gnostic when in fact the reverse is true. Marcion, a strong advocate of Paul, collected all the known letters of Paul that existed in and around 140 and presented them and his "allegorical" Christ in the First New Testament. Rome will counter this later through proto-Catholics like Irenaeus and others through the altering these earliest documents as well as the pure invention of others. Through deception, lying, and deceit Rome will alter the earliest held beliefs about "the Christ" and turn this Spiritual concept into a man and we find this man as Christ Jesus of the New Testament. Not only through the forging of the Gospels but the corruption of existing Pauline writings and the creation of others Rome was able to create a historical Jesus and make it appear as if Paul was a supporter of this historical Christ as well. If one takes the time to sift through what was contained in the First New Testament of Marcion and at the same time is familiar with Gnosticism and their allegorical understanding of the Christ then this deception become as plain as the nose on your face. Thus the scholars and their testimony above which helps us see the facts for themselves. Much written later in Paul's name is completely opposite of not only what he believed but the Jerusalem church as well concerning "the Christ." I know of no minister of the gospel who has ever had the intestinal fortitude go before his congregation and make this revelation. They, instead, proudly promote themselves as paragons of virtue and honesty; purveyors of truth - the only truth. Either ignorance of these facts or intellectual dishonesty is their stock in trade. During my life I have met both but far and away they simply don't know since never studying hard enough to learn these things.

Rom 11:25-26 25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in.

Col 1:27 27 To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory: (KJV)

THE SCHOLARS SPEAK CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT...HAVE YOU HEARD THEM?

Again we need to "think" and answer some questions before we proceed:

- What is truth concerning the Bible? What is the truth about "the Christ" and mankind's "salvation"?
- Who has the truth? Is it your Pastor or televangelist? Could it possibly be the scholar, archeologist, and intense students of religious history?
- Is the truth what we usually hear in our churches and over television or read today in the "top ten" of our corner Christian book store, or could the truth be buried in archeology, history, and antiquity and few today know of it today?
- Are the popular accounts and superficial rhetoric heard today by those today who never knew, investigated, or studied in-depth such fields as archeology, biblical history, biblical linguistics, and antiquity to be considered more trustworthy than the actual examination of the earliest documents first hand and those who originally wrote the documents and were closer to the events at hand than contemporary commentators?
- It is possible that those who lived in the earliest times of the common era and who wrote about the events of antiquity be closer to the truth than those who wrote some on the same events and religious ideas some 2,000 years later around 200 A.D.?
- Does the testimony of the earliest Church Fathers, when read, often incriminate themselves and their "theological" biases concerning the deceptions used in the formation of the New Testament?

Too many times our religious knowledge today (concerning the New Testament for example) in respect to spiritual matters is limited to our generation and our generation only. We seem to forget that the "top ten" at your corner Christian Book store pails in comparison to a scholarly book. To much "denominational bias" and "party line theology" occupy the bookshelves today. Most Christians I know have never read a scholarly Biblical book in their life, but yet to listen to them, they have all truth because the Holy Spirit led them to it. This always amuses me when the same Holy Spirit has evidently led almost 2 billion people into the idolatrous worship of a sungod man as "Jesus" is depicted in the New Testament let alone the worship of Mary as well.

Over the years of intense study I have seem first-hand how we have lost more knowledge than we currently possess. Even in Seminary I was beginning to get the "drift" that all is not what it is made out to be thanks to credible and honest professors who walked a thin line between their "paychecks" and truth.

Those who consider themselves "knowledgeable" today concerning the Christian religion seldom seem to know more than rhetoric or their "denominational company line." Antiquity possesses the truths we look for if we would only look into the history of our inherited Christian faith and our inherited religious documents; for much of what we would find if we did so is a blatant contradiction to what we have been taught today. Our complacency and our laziness to search out these matters to see if we have been taught the truth has robbed us of this precious commodity. Sadly few of us even know that such inquiry is necessary since being taught since childhood that we have the truth and that others do not.

In this article I wish to deal with the subject of our Christian Canon of Scripture. The idea of a complete and clear-cut canon of the New Testament existing from the beginning, that is from Apostolic times, has no foundation in history. The Canon of the New Testament, like that of the Old, is the result of a development, of a process at once stimulated by disputes with doubters, both within and without the Church, and retarded by certain obscurities and natural hesitations, and which did not reach its final term until the dogmatic definition of the Tridentine Council. The Council of Trent (Italian: Trento) was an ecumenical council of the Catholic Church held in discontinuous sessions between 1545 and 1563 in response to the Protestant Reformation. It clearly specified Catholic doctrines on salvation, the sacraments and the Biblical canon, in opposition to the Protestants, and standardized the Mass throughout the church, largely abolishing local variations; this became called the Tridentine Mass, after Trent.

DISTURBING QUOTES FROM SCHOLARS CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT AND THE CANON WE HAVE TODAY

The following I provide to provoke your thinking. These men saw severe problems with the Canon and New Testament which most likely you, the reader, have not seen yet. Again, your inability to see these problems does not negate their existence. It is our hope at Bet Emet Ministries that once reading these quotes you will awaken to the personal need of serious study into the document you have accepted "by faith" without your personal investigation and verification. Let us see what the scholars have to say about the book we trust for our Eternal Life in Western Christianity today.

"And no other Pope, Bishop or Father (until Irenaeus), for nearly a century after "Pope Clement," ever mentions or quotes a Gospel, or names Matthew, Mark, Luke or John. So for a century and a half-until the books bobbed up in the hands of Bishop St. Irenaeus and were tagged as "Gospels according to" this or that Apostle, there exists not a word of them in all the tiresome tomes of the Fathers. It is humanly and divinely impossible that the "Apostolic authorship" and hence "canonicity" or divine inspiration of these Sacred Four should have remained, for a century and a half, unknown and unsuspected by every Church, Father, Pope and Bishop of Christendom-if existent. Even had they been somewhat earlier in existence, never an inspired hint or human suspicion was there, that they were "Divine" or "Apostolic," or any different from the scores of "apocryphal or pseudo-Biblical writings with which the East especially had been flooded"; that they were indeed "Holy Scripture." Hear this notable admission: "It was not until about the middle of the second century that under the rubric of Scripture the New Testament writings were assimilated to the Old"! (Catholic Encyclopedia. iii, 275), that is, became regarded as apostolic, sacred, inspired and canonical, or "Scriptures" (Joseph Wheless, Forgery In Christianity, Alfred Knoph, New York, 1930, p. 182-183).

"In the Twentieth Century it is astounding to hear Christian people declare that the Bible and particularly the New Testament , says so-and-so, and that therefore it must be true. Do they not understand that the New Testament is a collection of books of varying credibility collected only in the Fourth Century A.D., by clergy having the limited mentality of that very uncritical age" (Authur Weigall, The Paganism in Our Christianity, G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, 1928, p. 34).

"The Scriptures were in the hands of the clergy only, and they had every opportunity to insert whatsoever they pleased; thus we find them (New Testament) full of interpolations". Johann Solomo Semler, one of the most influential theologians of the eighteenth century, speaking of this, says: "The Christian doctors never brought their sacred books before the common people; although people in general have been wont to think otherwise; during the first ages, they were in the hands of the clergy only" (Robert Taylor, Diegesis, p. 48).

"All the earliest external evidences points to the conclusion that thy synoptic gospels are non-apostolic digesis of spoken and written apostolic tradition, and that the arrangement of the earlier material in orderly form took place only gradually and by many essays..." (T. W. Doane, Bible Myth And Their Parallels In Other Religions, The Truth Seeker Co., New York, 1882, p. 463.).

"Dr. Hooykaas, speaking of the four 'Gospels,' and 'Acts,' says of them: 'Not one of these five books was written by the person whose name it bears, and they are all of more recent date than the heading would lead us to suppose'" (T. W. Doane, Bible Myth And Their Parallels In Other Religions, The Truth Seeker Co., New York, 1882, p. 463.).

"We cannot say that the 'Gospels' and the book of 'Acts' are unauthentic, for not one of them professes to give the name of its author. They appeared anonymously. The titles placed above them in our Bibles owe their origin to an ecclesiastical tradition which deserves no confidence whatever" (Bible for Learners, vol. iii. pp. 24-25).

"These Gospels can hardly be said to have had authors at all. They had only editors or compilers. What I mean is, that those who enriched the old Christian literature with these Gospels did not go to work as independent writers and compose their own narratives out of the accounts they had collected, but simply took up the different stories or sets of stories which they found current in the oral tradition or already reduced to writing, adding here and expanding there, and so sent out into the world a very artless kind of composition. These works were then, from time to time, somewhat enriched by introductory material or interpolations from the hands of later Christians, and perhaps were modified a little here and there. Our first two Gospels appear to have passed through more than one such revision. The third, whose writer says in his preface, that 'many had undertaken to put together a narrative (Gospel),' before him, appears to proceed from a single collecting, arranging, and modifying hand" (Ibid., p. 29).

Concerning the time when the canon of the New Testament was settled, Mosheim says: "The opinions, or rather the conjectures, of the learned concerning the time when the books of the New Testament were collected into one volume; as also about the authors of that collection, are extremely different. This important question is attended with great and almost insuperable difficulties to us in these later times" (Mosheim, Vol. i. pt. 2, ch. ii).

"Dr. Lardner says: 'Even so late as the middle of the sixth century, the canon of the New Testament had not been settled by any authority that was decisive and universally acknowledged, but Christian people were at liberty to judge for themselves concerning the genuineness of writings proposed to them as apostolical, and to determine according to evidences'" (Credibility of the Gospels, T. W. Doane, Bible Myth And Their Parallels In Other Religions, The Truth Seeker Co., New York, 1882, p. 464.).

The learned Michaelis says: "No manuscript of the New Testament now extant is prior to the sixth century, and what is to be lamented, various readings which, as appears from the quotations of the Fathers, were in the text of the Greek Testament, are to be found in none of the manuscripts which are at present remaining" (Marsh's Michaelis, Vol. ii. p. 160).

Bishop Marsh says: "It is a certain fact, that several readings in our common printed text are nothing more than alterations made by Origen, whose authority was so great in the Christian Church (A.D. 230) that emendations which he proposed, though, as he himself acknowledged, they were supported by evidence of no manuscript, were very generally received" (Ibid., p. 368)

"Though Irenaeus, in the second century, is the first who mentions the evangelists, and Origen, in the third century, is the first who gives us a catalogue of the books contained in the New Testament, Mosheim's admission still stands before us. We have no grounds of assurance that the mere mention of the names of the evangelists by Irenaeus, or the arbitrary drawing up of a particular catalogue by Origen, were of any authority. It is still unknown by whom, or where, or when, the canon of the New Testament was settled. But in this absence of positive evidence we have abundance of negative proof. We know when it was not settled. We know it was not settled in the time of Emperor Justinian, nor in the time of Cassiodorus; that is, not at any time before the middle of the sixth century, by any authority that was decisive and universally acknowledged; but Christian people were at liberty to judge for themselves concerning the genuineness of writings proposed to them as apostolical" (T. W. Doane, Bible Myth And Their Parallels In Other Religions, The Truth Seeker Co., New York, 1882, p. 464.).

"The Bible (New Testament) has been received by the Protestants on the authority of the church of Rome, and on no other authority. It is she that has said it is the word of God." Ingersoll's Works, Vol 5, Ibid., p. 364.

"None of those books have the appearance of being written by the persons whose names they bear, neither do we know who the authors were. They come to us on no other authority than the church of Rome, which the Protestant Priests...call the Whore of Babylon." Ingersoll's Works, Vol 5, Ibid., p. 365.

"...the bishop who has answered me has been obliged to acknowledge the fact, that the Books that compose the NT, were voted by yeas and nays to be the word of God, as you now vote a law, by the Popish councils of Nicea and Laodicea, about 1,450 years ago." Interviews, Ingersoll's Works, Vol 5, Ibid. p. 325.

"I admit that books were voted in and out, and that the Bible was finally formed in accordance with a vote...." Interviews, Ingersoll's Works, Vol 5, p. 300.

"Nothing can exceed the credulity of the early fathers, unless it may be their ignorance. They believed everything that was miraculous. They believed everything except the truth....They revelled in the mishapen and the repulsive. They did not think it wrong to swear falsely in a good cause. They interpolated, forged, and changed the records to suit themselves, for the sake of Christ. They quoted from persons who never wrote. They misrepresented those who had written, and their evidence is absolutely worthless. They were ignorant, credulous, mendacious, fanatical, pious, unreasonable, bigoted, hypocritical, and for the most part insane." Interviews, Ingersoll's Works, Vol. 5, p. 273

"The great religious historian, Eusebius, ingenuously remarks that in his history he carefully omitted whatever tended to discredit the church, and that he piously magnified all that conduced to her glory." Interviews, Ingersoll's Works, Vol. 5, Ibid., Vol. 1, p. 293

"Now, Sir, it is impossible for serious men, to whom God has given the divine gift of reason, and who employs that reason to reverence and adore the God that gave it, it is I say, impossible for such a man to put confidence in a book that abounds with fable and falsehood as the New Testament does." The Life and Works of Thomas Paine, Vol. 9, p. 128

"Taylor's [Reverend Robert Taylor 1784 - 1844], conclusion is: 'As we see Protestantism to be a mere modification or reform of Popery, so Popery was nothing more than a similar modification or reform of Paganism. It is absolutely certain that the pagans were in possession of the whole Gospel story many ages before its JEWISH ORIGIN WAS PRETENDED; and it was not until the first error had been committed of suffering the people to become acquainted too intimately with the contents of the sacred books that it became necessary to invent a chronology, and to 'give to airy nothing a local habitation and a name.'" H. Cutner [1881-1969], The Devil's Chaplain Robert Taylor (1784-1844), The Pioneer Press, c. 1950, 41.

"The gradual development of the canon, in our view, was primarily the achievement of gentile Christianity, although of course THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN NO NEW TESTAMENT IF AN OLD TESTAMENT HAD NOT ALREADY EXISTED. Among the earliest Christians there was no New Testament; their Bible consisted of the Old Testament alone." The Formation of the New Testament, Robert M. Grant, Harper & Row, 1965.

"Ironically, the more fully the individual documents of the NT have been understood, the LESS INTELLIGIBLE the NT as a whole has become, both historically and theologically." [13]. · · · from: The New Testament Canon, Harry Y. Gamble, Fortress, 1985. The New Testament Canon, Harry Y. Gamble, Fortress, 1985).

As von Harnack [Adolph von Harnack 1851 - 1930] has pointed out (The Origin of the New Testament [New York, 1925], p. 5), there were four possibilities open to the Church: [1] the Old Testament alone, [2] an enlarged Old Testament, [3] no Old Testament, and [4] a second authoritative collection." The Canon of the New Testament, Bruce M. Metzger, Oxford, 1987.

"...originally NONE OF THE DOCUMENTS NOW INCLUDED IN THE NEW TESTAMENT HAD THE TITLES TO WHICH WE HAVE BECOME ACCUSTOMED in the headings of the different books in traditional English versions....Only after several Gospels or several Epistles had been collected together was there need for separate designations in order to distinguish one from another." The Canon of the New Testament, Bruce M. Metzger, Oxford, 1987, p. 302).

'With respect to attribution, the [apocryphal] books resemble Jewish midrashim and the Old Testament apocrypha. TO SECURE AUTHORITY OR CREDIBILITY, THEY ARE WRITTEN UNDER THE HONORARY NAME OF AN APOSTLE OR SOME OTHER PROMINENT FIGURE. Put flatly, THEY ARE FORGED, but then SO ARE MANY [ALL!] OF THE CANONICAL NEW TESTAMENT BOOKS..." The Secret Gospels A Harmony of Apocryphal Jesus Traditions, Edited and Translated by R. Joseph Hoffmann, Westminster College-Oxford, Prometheus, 1996.

The Catholic Encyclopedia is quoted saying: "Until the Council of Trent, in 1546, there was no infallibly defined sanction of inspiration of these Jewish "apocrypha"; like the "canon" sacred Books of the Hebrew Bible, all alike were more or less eclectically accepted and used in the True Church; but, as said: "The Tridentine decree from which the above list is extracted was the first infallible and effectually promulgated pronouncement on the Canon, addressed to the Church universal. Being dogmatic in its purport, it implies that the Apostles bequeathed the same Canon to the Church as a part of the depositum fidei.... We should search the pages of the New Testament in vain for any trace of such action.... We affirm that such a status points to Apostolic sanction, which in turn must have rested on revelation either by Christ or the Holy Spirit" (Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. iii, 270.). This is luminous clerical reasoning: a lot of anonymous Jewish fables, derided by Jews and all the rest of the world for want of even common plausibility of fact or truth, and as to which the "inspired" Christian Books said to emanate from Apostles, are silent as the grave, are declared after 1500 years to have the ear-marks of Apostolic sanction, which "must have" been founded on divine revelation to them "either by Christ or the Holy Spirit,"—which the Church claims are one and the same Person; and it is curious that the "infallible" Council couldn't say which was which, but vaguely and uncertainly opined it must hate been one or the other. So much for infallible cock-suredness as to "inspiration" of Holy Scriptures. (Joseph Wheless, Forgery In Christianity, Alfred Knoph, New York, 1930, p. 54).

"The New Testament and the inspired Apostles are silent on the subject (inspiration) and left the matter to serious doubts and disputations for many centuries :''There are no indications in the New Testament . . . Of a definite new Canon bequeathed by the Apostles to the Church, or of a strong self-witness to Divine inspiration," admits the CE. (iii, 274); that is, there is nothing in the 27 booklets which would lead to the suspicion of their "inspiration" or truth. There was then no Church for them to bequeath to, nor was the Canon settled, as we shall see: "It was not until about the middle of the second century— [when we shall see the books were really written]—that under the rubric of Scripture the New Testament writings were assimilated to the Old.... But it should be remembered that the inspired character of the New Testament is a Catholic dogma, and must therefore in some way have been revealed to, and taught by, Apostles"! (Ibid., p.275.) This is a strikingly queer bit of clerical dialectic, and leaves the question of the "some way" of revelation to the Apostles and of their transmission of the "dogma" to posterity, in a nebulously unsatisfying state." (Joseph Wheless,Forgery In Christianity, Alfred Knoph, New York, 1930, p. 97-98).

"Further, the dubious and disputed status of the sacred writings through centuries, and the ultimate settlement of the controversies by the "ipse dixit" of a numerical majority of the Council of Trent, in 1546, after the Reformation had forced the issue, is thus admitted: "The idea of a complete and clear-cut canon of the New Testament existing from the beginning, that is, from Apostolic times, has no foundation in history. The canon of the New Testament, like that of the Old, is the result of a development, of a process at once stimulated by disputes with doubters, both within and without the Church, and retarded by certain obscurities and natural hesitations, and which did not reach its final term until the dogmatic definition of the Tridentine Council.... And this want of an organized distribution, secondarily to the absence of an early fixation of the Canon, left room for variations and doubts which lasted far into the centuries." (Catholic Encyclopedia. iii, 274.) The modus operandi of the Holy Council in ultimately "canonizing" Jerome's old Vulgate Version, and its motive for doing so, are thus exposed by the keen pen of the author ofThe Rise and Fall: "When the Council of Trent resolved to pronounce sentence on the Canon of Scripture, the opinion which prevailed, after some debate, was to declare the Latin Vulgate authentic and almost infallible; and this sentence, which was guarded by formidable anathemas, secured all the books of the Old and New Testament which composed that ancient version.... When the merit of that version was discussed, the majority of the theologians urged, with confidence and success, that it was absolutely necessary to receive the Vulgate as authentic and inspired, unless they wished to abandon the victory to the Lutherans, and the honors of the Church to the Grammarians." (Gibbon, A Vindication, v, 2; Istoria del Consiglio Tridentino, L. ii, p. 147.) A number of these books were bitterly disputed and their authenticity and inspiration denied by the leading Reformers, Luther, Grotius, Calvin, etc., and excluded from their official lists, until finally the Reformed Church followed the example of the Church hopeless of reform and swallowed the canon whole, as we have it today, minus, of course, the Tobit, Judith, and like inspired buffooneries of the True Bible" (Joseph Wheless, Forgery In Christianity, Alfred Knoph, New York, 1930, p. 97-98).

"To argue and prove that the Four (Gospels) were regarded as "Apostolic" and hence "canonical" after the middle of the second century, argues and proves that until that late date they were not so regarded,— which we have seen is impossible if they had been written by Apostles a hundred years and more previously and authorized by them "for the purpose of being read in the Churches," as the very ground and pillar of their foundation and faith....Follow the proofs and argument of the Church to its own undoing: 'From the testimony of St. Irenaeus (A.D. 185) alone there can be no reasonable doubt that the Canon of the Gospel was inalterably fixed in the Catholic Church by the last quarter of the second century to the exclusion of any pretended Evangels. [Sundry writings mentioned] presuppose the authority enjoyed by the Fourfold Gospel towards the middle of tile second century.... Even Rationalistic scholars like Harnack admit the canonicity of the quadriform Gospel between the years 140-175.' (CE. iii, 275.) Even CE. does not prove or claim that it was any earlier; so here the Church and the Rationalists are in accord on this fatal fact! Certainly Popes Peter and Clement I, not to review the silent others, would have "inalterably fixed" the Divine Canonicity of the Four a century before, if they had known about these precious productions of the Apostles;—if, in fact, they had existed, the known works of Holy Apostles and apostolic men! But until "towards the middle of the second century" there was no "canon" or notion of divinely inspired Apostolic Gospels—simply for the reason that until just about that period they were not in existence....The sudden appearance at a certain late date, of a previously unknown document, which is then attributed to an earlier age and long since dead writers, is one of the surest earmarks of forgery" (Joseph Wheless, Forgery In Christianity, Alfred Knoph, New York, 1930, p. 184-185).

I could go on and on but you get the point I hope. We have been deceived as Christians and followers of "the Christ" by Roman anti-Semitism into believing a forgery of texts mixed with pure invention mixed in for good measure. We have not the truth concerning either the Jewish Messiah or "the Christ" in our New Testaments. We have in reality, as shown earlier in this website, a falsification of the earlier truths concerning "the Christ" as once held by the earliest Gnostic Christians who never believed in a history fleshly Christ. That explains why so many of our passages and stories in our New Testaments can be shown to be but "literalizations" of Ancient allegories of "the Christ" which are presented to us in the names of the Jerusalem "apostles" to gain authority for their acceptance. What is passed off to us as a literal history of "Jesus" and the Jewish Messiah is anything but that. Surely after these few quotes you should be moved to want to know more about the document you have accepted "by faith" and trusted for your Eternal Life when it appears that often it is untrustworthy. I call for your personal investigation as to the claims made by the New Testament and its call to be the religious authority for your life.

GETTING STARTED...IT IS NOT AS HARD AS YOU THINK

I think it appropriate that we begin our investigation of this issue concerning the canonization of the New Testament by turning to The Light of Reason, volume one, a writing that appeared several years ago by Schmuel Golding, the editor of the Biblical Polemics newsletter. Golding's synopsis of the process by which the Bible was formed is not only accurate but succinct. On page 23 he says,

"First the NT was not written by any of the disciples of Jesus nor by persons who even lived in that era . . . When the church fathers compiled the New Testament in the year 397, they collected all the writings they could find and managed them as they pleased. They decided by vote which of the books out of the collection they had made should be the word of God and which should not. They rejected several, they voted others to be doubtful, and those books which had a majority of votes were voted to be the word of God. Had they voted otherwise, all the people since calling themselves Christians would have believed otherwise. For the belief of the one comes from the vote of the other."

It is important to note the key concept here is that the Bible was put together by a group of men who met, went through a collection of writings, and chose through voting those that are to be deemed divinely inspired. Many of them wound up on the cutting room floor. Golding continues,

Who the people were that did all of this we know little of. They called themselves by the general name of church fathers and this is all the average Christian knows of the matter.... Disputes, however, ran high among the people calling themselves Christians not only as to points of doctrine but as to the authenticity of the books.

Although not stated verbatim, the essence of Golding's next paragraph is that when disputes broke out the opposition was often either eliminated or ostracized. Then, he continues by saying,

Constantine, an unbaptized pagan, convened the Council of Nicea in the year 325 in order to settle these disputes. A major issue was the nature of the deity they worshipped. Based upon their decisions Jesus was changed from a man to God in the flesh, the sabbath was changed from Saturday to Sunday, the Passover was changed to Easter . . . and the NT was canonized as a holy book.

You may need to read that underlined passage above one more time for good measure.

Answer for yourself: Knowing the events just described, can you explain to yourself how the Holy Spirit could be leading the changing of the Eternal Sabbath to Sunday, or changing the Passover to the pagan holiday of Isthar (Easter), or making a human man or the Jewish messiah who was always but a man anointed of God into a God, which is admitted by most to be scandalous and idolatrous?

Answer for yourself: Are we to believe that in spite of such blunders by the Holy Spirit that we find in the New Testament manuscripts where we find over 600,000 variations in a little over 6000 fragments where no two fragments or pieces recovered agree that yet He got right the selection of a group of books in the early 4th century which for all practical purposed replaced the Hebrew Scriptures for the early church as their Bible?

Answer for yourself: Did the Holy Spirit have a bad day or something? Surely you can see that such events were not led by the Holy Spirit at all...for God cannot and will not contradict His Word...man may change it....man can deny it....man can invent and add to it as you saw...but the jots and titles of the Hebrew Scriptures are forever! In spite of what is said by New Testament scholars that the New Testament and the Christian Bibles are faithful to the Masoretic text....it is not. Read the references article and understand why the New Testament is not faithful to the Masoretic text when Christianity says it is.

THE CATHOLIC NEW TESTAMENT...THE WORK OF MEN OR GOD...WHO DO WE BLAME?

We have shown you earlier in this website through abundant proofs how the First New Testament given to us by Marcion taught the allegorical concept handed down by the Ancients of "the Christ" of God which lives within every man and woman and life's quest which is to awaken to this "Christ within us" and became aware of the indwelling Christ and not only yield to His direction but at the same time allow the Christ to make mediation for us with the Divine Creator. This truth is totally erased later by the proto-literalist Catholics like Ignatius, Papias, Polycarp, and Justin Martyr, who begin to teach the "literalization" of "the Christ" as a historical personage. The culmination of all of this is the falsification of many "gospels" and "epistles" in the names of long-dead Apostles and Paul to gain a false authority for such later doctrinal creations like the "historical fleshy Christ". We look to Irenaeus for the supreme invention when we find that it was he that provides the ultimate refutation of the earlier Gnostic Gospels and the First New Testament by Marcion by the presentation of his Second New Testament in roughly 180 C.E.

In the opinions shared above taken from the pens of many scholars then it was men, rather than God, who composed the New Testament which we have today. And for that reason our current New Testament is suspect "doctrinally" in many regards whether you knew it or not. Many Christians, especially Protestants, have great difficulty with any assertion to the effect that men and not God is responsible for the New Testament coming into existence. On page 6 in Answering Christianity's Most Puzzling Questions, volume one, apologist Richard Sisson states.

"In fact, after the death of Jesus a whole flood of books that claimed to be inspired appeared.... [Disputes over which ones were true were so intense that the debate continued for centuries. Finally in the fourth century a group of church leaders called a council and took a vote. The 66 books that comprised our cherished Bible were declared to be Scripture by a vote of 568 to 563."

Evidently not all approved of the selection of "books" that make up our New Testaments today as you can see. Sadly what was not approved and what found the cutting room floor were often the earlier books which the earliest Gnostic Christians held sacred which Rome will methodically eradicate along with the worlds' libraries in order to hid their "religious lies" that won by only 5 votes! Only in our generation have precious archeological discoveries brought to light the truth of "the Christ" as believed by the earliest Christians.

Historical evidence strongly implies that these "books" which were chosen by vote were not canonical but simply deemed as such by a group of highly influential religious and political figures. History states that men merely convened and determined which books were divinely inspired. The book was put together by a vote; it was not compiled by God and subsequently discovered to be God's work. The choices by the winners of this vote were motivated by their current "religious beliefs;" many of which can be shown to be in conflict with the Old Testament and the Bible that the Jewish nation used.

IT IS TIME FOR AN HONEST LOOK AT THE NEW TESTAMENT

SCHOLARS TELL THE TRUTH: THE EARLY CHURCH & THEIR THEOLOGICAL ALTERATIONS OF THE NEW TESTMAMENT OVER THE CENTURIES

If you have been faithful to study the articles in order on this website then you are seeing for yourself the truth concerning the alterations made to the New Testament over hundreds of years whereby important religious concepts originally held by the ancients and the earliest Christains were later changed and altered by the Roman Church in order to impose their own "flavor" of Christianity upon the world.

Now let our examination go even futher into this deception.

Three hundred years after the time of Jesus), there were many different versions of the Gospel story and the teachings of Jesus (Isaac Asimov, Asimov's Guide To The Bible: The Old and New Testaments (New York: Avenue Books, 1981). Asimov goes on to tell the truth about the presumed authorship of these New Testament documents when he says that then, as now, no one was quite certain who wrote them, or when or where they were written. The teachings of the Christian Church varied from one area to another and each geographical area contested with others for "authority" for their own unique understanding and interpretation of "the Christ" and Jesus. As you would expect different sects of Christianity evolved around these different teachings and there arose a need to decide on a uniform, unified code on which to base future Christian doctrine.

Bruce Metzger also comments regarding the development of the canonization of the current New Testament. In one of his many books entitled The Canon Of The New Testament: Its Origin, Significance & Development he shares with the reader that the Bible used by the early Jewish Christians consisted of the Old Testament and some Jewish apocryphal literature. They did not use a New Testament as it had not been written yet and disregarded the Pauline epistles as not accurate to the truth concerning the gospel preached by Jesus. Along with this written authority of the Jewish Tanakh and Jewish apocryphal literature went the accepted traditions, chiefly oral, of sayings attributed to Jesus. This is the Bible used by such as those we read about in Acts 15 at the Jerusalem Council. On the other hand, authors who belonged to the 'Hellenistic Wing' of the Church refer more frequently to writings that later came to be included in the New Testament. Metzger is very truthful when he says they very rarely regarded such documents as the Pauline epistles as "Scripture". Metzger also give us insights into the fact that at this time there was as yet no conception of the duty of exact quotation from books that were not yet in the full sense canonical. Consequently, it is sometimes exceedingly difficult to ascertain which New Testament books were known to early Christian writers; our evidence does not become clear until the end of second century (Bruce M Metzger, The Canon Of The New Testament: Its Origin, Significance & Development (Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1997) .

In other words, there was no specific 'canon' of the New Testament known to the early Christians. The 'canon' that we possess today was a late development of the Roman Church as they collected, sifted, selected, discarded, altered, wrote, and even invented much of what we carry around today in our Bibles believing it is the "inerrant" Word of God in the New Testament. As shown earlier in this website and as I will continue to reveal what we have today as our New Testaments is the refutation of the earliest First New Testament collected by Marcion which consisted of the collection of the Pauline writings in his day and a collection of oral sayings and oral traditions regarding Jesus which were written down from memory by followers in various places. Furthermore, even those who adhere to the documents that form the 'canon' of the New Testament today need to understand that these writings did not in their day posses the authority among people as did the Jewish Bible. These First and Second New Testaments were not regarded on the same level as the true "Scriptures" of the Jewish people.

But that was to change. In the year 325 C.E., it was agreed that representatives from several different sects of Christianity would have a meeting and each would bring with them the writings upon which they were basing their teachings. Some compromise of the various versions of Christian teachings as found in different localities would have to be agreed upon for the Christian church to grow as a unit, as each separate sect in these days had varying beliefs and spread different versions of belief where they went. Disunity instead of unity was the rule of the day. Political expedience necessitated the people find a common ground and this ground was to be interpreted by Constantine as the area of religions. Karl Marx understood such brilliant thinking when he said "religion is the opiate of the masses." It would be through religion and the unification of the diverse people of the Roman Empire throught religion that Constantine hoped for the continual power of the Roman Empire to continue. The meeting called the Council of Nicea was held in Nicea, Turkey and the disputes among all those calling themselves Christians were intense. The disputes were not only about the points of Christian doctrine, but also about which of these many writings were authentic since many varying beliefs about "the Christ" let alone Jesus reflected differences in beliefs of the people who by now had many of these beliefs commited to writing and attributed apostolic authority to them. In one letter from Fauste to St. Augustine, Fauste says

It is thus that your predecessors have inserted in the scriptures of our Lord many things, which, although they carry His name agree not with His doctrines. This is not surprising, since that we have often proved that these things have not been written by Himself, nor by his apostles, but that for the greater part they are founded upon tales, upon vague reports and put together by I know not what, half-Jews, but with little agreement between them, and which they have nevertheless published under the names of the Apostles of our Lord, and have thus attributed to them their own errors and their lies (Thomas Paine, The Age of Reason (New York, Prometheus Press, 1984).

Bart Ehrman, as a host of other scholars, informs us that the canonization of the New Testament was influenced and supported by the Emperor Constantine of the Roman Empire. Ehrman informs us that the Roman empire was a pagan empire, however, it was the dominant "superpower" of the time. Anyone who could enlist its aid would have an unconquerable ally at their side and would themselves be undefeatable. As mentioned above on the Roman side, Emperor Constantine was greatly troubled by the swelling ranks of his Christian subjects and the great division among their ranks which did not bode well for the continued stability of his empire.

Ehrman goes on in his book to tell us that most of these fringe sects now began to fade into insignificance and the matter was now left between those who believed in the Unity of God and those who believed in a "Trinity." The Roman empire's support fluctuated between these two groups for a long time until the Trinitarian's finally gained the upper hand and all but wiped the Unitarians off the face of the earth.Ehrman, in his The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture, informs us that over the next centuries they slowly selected and collected the "truly inspired" gospels into one volume which later became the "New Testament." They burned all other gospels; many of which found their origin with the earliest Jewish believers of Jesus. Many sweeping campaigns of "Inquisition" were launched by Rome against those who would not accept this religious compromise of evil where untruths were not taught about Jesus let alone "the Christ." Everyone found possessing any of these "false" Gospels was put to death and his Gospel burned. Orthodoxy was now unorthdoxy and to think or believe differently than what was prescribed now by Constantine and Rome meant sure death. The truth as well as true believers went "underground" and feigned Christianity in order to survive. The Knights Templar are a great example of Christians who held these earliest secret beliefs of the earliest Christians concerning Jesus that they could not share if they wished to live (Bart Ehrman, The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture, p. 7).

Ehrman further says that the classical understanding of the relationship of orthodoxy and heresy met a devastating challenge in 1934 with the publication of Walter Bauer's Rechtgläubigkeit und Ketzerei im ältesten Christentum, possibly the most significant book on early Christianity written in modern times. Bauer argued that the early Christian church in fact did not comprise a single orthodoxy from which emerged a variety of competing heretical minorities. Instead, early Christianity embodied a number of divergent forms, no one of which represented the clear and powerful majority of believers against all others. In some regions, what was later to be termed 'heresy' was in fact the original and only form of Christianity. In other regions, views later deemed heretical coexisted with views that would come to be embraced by the church as a whole, with most believers not drawing hard and fast lines in demarcation between the competing views. To this extent, 'orthodoxy,' in the sense of a unified group advocating an apostolic doctrine accepted by the majority of Christians everywhere, did not exist in the second and third centuries. Nor was 'heresy' secondarily derived from an original teaching through an infusion of Jewish ideas or pagan philosophy.

Beliefs that were, at later times, embraced as orthodoxy and condemned as heresy were in fact competing interpretations of Christianity, one of which eventually (but not initially) acquired domination because of singular historical and social forces. Only when one social group had exerted itself sufficiently over the rest of Christendom did a 'majority' opinion emerge; only then did the 'right belief' represent the view of the Christian church at large (Bart Ehrman, The Orthodox Corruption of Scripture, p. 7).

The text of the New Testament developed freely for quite some time depending upon the whims and fancies of Christians. As Kurt and Barbara Aland tells us their The Text Of The New Testament, p. 69, that until the beginning of the fourth century the text of the New Testament developed freely. It was the "living text" in the Greek literary tradition, unlike the text of the Hebrew Old Testament, which was subject to strict controls because (in the oriental tradition) the consonantal text was holy. And the New Testament text continued to be a "living text" as long as it remained a manuscript tradition, even when the Byzantine church molded it to the procrustean bed of the standard and officially prescribed text. Even for later scribes, for example, the parallel passages of the Gospels were so familiar that they would adapt the text of one Gospel to that of another. They also felt themselves free to make corrections in the text, improving it by their own standard of correctness, whether grammatically, stylistically, or more substantively. This was all the more true of the early period, when the text had not been attained canonical status, especially in the earliest period when Christians considered themselves to be filled with the Spirit. As a consequence the text of the early period was many-faceted, and each manuscript had its own peculiar character.

In face of all the evidences, we still cannot see the justification for the claim of Christianity that the New Testament is wholly the "inerrant" word of God. This short testimony above as presented just from these few scholars and not preachers tells the truth about the reliability and authority of the New Testament. I quickly began to see these same isues and problems surface in my exhaustive study of the New Testament. I was not only shocked but hurt by what I was uncovering in my years of study following graduation from Seminary. What I had been taught in Seminary could not hold up to the light of intense scrutiny and study where the evidences of such forgery of the New Testament could be seen by anyone if they had the time, desire, and resources before them that are all necessary if one wants to come to the truth about the New Testament.

We have in this website began to see the truth in these regards; namely what is passed off today in the Roman

Second New Testament as a Divine Revelation expressing the earliest beliefs of Christainty and what the earliest followers of Jesus believed of him is anything but the truth of the matter. Instead we are seeing that what the earliest Christians believed about "the Christ" and Jesus as pictured in Rome's refutation of the First New Testament as handed down to us today in Rome's Second New Testament. The implications for such facts and knowledge seeing the light of day are tremendous and threaten the very foundation of Christianity itself as it is known today.

THE ROLE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT AND ITS AUTHORITY FOR BELIEVERS...YOU BE THE JUDGE #1

In this article I would like to address certain aspects of the formation of The New Testament "Canon."

Before I proceed I would like to share with the readers the view to which I have come after diligently studying the formation of the New Testament Canon over the last fifteen years of Bible Study. First of all the traditional Christian today is not aware how the New Testament was put together. Often I hear many say that the New Testament is infallible and inerrant. Sadly, nothing could be farther from the truth as I will quickly show you. In the absence of a written authority such as the Hebrew Bible which the Jews possessed (consisting of the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings) which verified their faith in God and without a written document to which the anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic early Gentile Church could appeal for their authority in rejecting, altering, and distorting the then existing expression of faith in God as handed down by the Jewish Church in Jerusalem, we find the Gentile Church in the later part of the fourth century making a concerted effort in collecting and editing the then existing documents (gospels and epistles) to suit their man-made theologies. This is quite a mouthful I know, but the facts when examined with an open mind will reveal to the reader the same pictures I saw upon examining the facts for myself. The conclusion is inescapable….that reason and rationalization by Gentile authorities in the early Gentile Church was foundational in the formation and acceptance of man-made religious doctrines which often conflicted and contradicted the then existing expression of faith in God as seen in Judaism and which can be seen went into all the world in the Great Commission in the earliest years of the "church" before Rome's domination. What is startling for the educated Christian to see is how the creation of the New Testament see-sawed back and forth through centuries and a consensus of opinion as to what was to be deemed authoritative for them could not be agreed upon. I have taken special pains in these series of articles to carefully chronicle for you the formation process of the documents to which we have heard our whole life are infallible and inerrant. It is amazing to me, as I am sure it will be for you, after having seen for yourself how these documents were disagreed upon for centuries by church authorities, and then to realize that we have been taught by others not possessing this information that the Holy Spirit somehow led in the selection and canonization of these documents. With this information in this article to which most Christians do not possess, it is impossible to see God Spirit behind such confusion. You will have to be the judge and come to an intelligent decision, but such a decision is impossible without the facts. The facts are not at you disposal.

One last thing. Often when discussing the Bible with others I refer to the contradictions or additions made to the documents by the early Catholic Church. This might be surprising to you but good Study Bibles today like the Companion Bible, and others like it documents the same things to which I refer. Many jump to conclusions that I must be a heretic because I don't believe everything in the New Testament as if "God breathed" as Paul states in 2 Tim. 3:16. The glaring problem to which they fall victim is that the very "scriptures" to which Paul refers in his epistle is the Old Testament and not the New Testament for the majority of the writings and documents which would later become the Catholic Canon were not in existence when Paul said this. The irony of the whole matter is that rather than I, but others who hold to the infallibility and inerrancy of the New Testament are in reality the heretics, for the facts of the matter discredit their positions. Emotionalism is a poor substitute for truth and facts.

Now, as I close this part of this article, please understand that for me the New Testament is very important in spite of its problems for it is a record of the events surrounding the first advent and ministry of Yeshua as well as revealing how Gentiles become part of God's people through belief in God through Yeshua's ministry. The problems in our New Testaments come not only in the documents which were selected which the early Jewish Church headed by James did not use, and would never dream of calling "Scripture" on par with the Old Testament writings, or which the early Jewish Church disavowed such as some of the epistles written by Paul and others written by others in his name, but the later additions and alterations to these written documents by the anti-Semitic Gentile Church which came in step with the latest Catholic Church Councils and their theological decisions throughout the first several centuries of the Gentile Church are flagrant attempts to de-Judaize the Yeshua's Early Church and the faith which was once given to the saints. The facts concerning the formation of the New Testament Canon tell a different picture form what we have been told my our pastors and denominations, but when examined by an open minded believer whose faith is in God and not in corrupted documents and who desires to please Him, will be forced in honest evaluation to see exactly what I also have discovered. To this we now give our attention.

FORMATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

The word "Canon" literally means "Cane," or "Rod of Measurement." In Christian use it came to mean for the early Gentile Christian Church of the fourth century the "Written Rule of Faith," that is, the list of Original and Authoritative Books that was for them God's Inspired Word. The Canonical New Testament Books were those which came to be generally recognized by the Gentile Churches as the Genuine and Authentic Writings of Apostolic Authority (regardless if they were or not). In other words the link to the Apostles was not always maintained as a criteria for acceptance.

In the days of Christ there was in the literature of the Jew nation a group of Writings called "The Scriptures," now called the Old Testament, which the people commonly regarded as having come from God at Mount Sinai. They called it THE WORD OF GOD. Yeshua himself so recognized it. It was read publicly taught regularly in the synagogues. Acts 15:21, one of many examples, reveals this to us when it records for us

"For Moses (first 5 books of Bible) of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day."

Christian Churches, from the very first, accepted these Jewish scriptures as God's Word, and gave them, in their assemblies, same place they had had in the synagogues. It was at this time both Jew and Gentile believers had only one Bible; the Bible used by Yeshua's church!

THE MISTAKE OF THE GENTILE CHURCH - THE CREATION OF TWO BIBLES

As the supposed writings of the Apostles appeared having necessary instruction for both the Messianic Community as well as newly converted Gentile believers, they were added to the readings of Moses in the churches along with these other Jewish Scriptures of the Prophets and Writings, and came to be held in the same sacred regard as the Old Testament by each Gentile Church over time. This is when the tragic mistake occurred by the Gentiles by them equating these writings which supposedly came from the pen of the Apostles and Paul on par with the writings of Moses and the Prophets. Many will say to that statement that I am wrong in my perspective but they don't have all the facts necessary to understand the succeeding events as a mistake. What you need to know is that these later writings, the vast majority not from the pen of the Apostles but falsely reported to be such (pseudo-epigrapha), would later be held up with equal authority as did the writings of Moses and the Prophets. Please don't misunderstand my thoughts on this issue. I am not against the reading of the writings of the Apostles or Paul in the churches for Acts 15 declares such readings be done, however, to equate such later writings for sources other than the Apostles with the Torah, or even more, revere them above the writings of Moses and the Prophets as has been done in the creation of a "New" testament, is a grievous error. Dear brothers and sisters in Christ, that is what was done!

NEW TESTAMENT...BEGINNINGS OF THE CANON

There are hints, both in and outside the New Testament writings themselves that, while the Apostles were yet living, and under their own supervision, collections of their writings began to be made for the Churches, and intended to be read alongside the Old Testament which was at that time considered the ONLY Word of God. The reading of their writings was not understood by the speakers or hearers at that time to be the "Word of God" on par with their existing writings of Moses and the Prophets. The readings of such Apostolic writings to the Gentile Churches is quite understandable since the Gentile audience attending the synagogues had a very limited background in the Bible having from the most-part recently departed from Paganism. Eph. 2:2 addresses the problem quite well:

"Wherein in time past ye (Gentiles) walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience."

Let us also look to Eph. 2:12:

"That at that time ye were without Messiah, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world."

In other words the Gentiles were Biblically ignorant. So it was necessary to "tailor" the message of God's love and forgiveness and required obedience to His laws and commandments for all men just for the Gentiles. Again such a decision can be seen in the decision of the Acts 15 Council to write letters and deliver them to the Gentile churches instructing them in matters of faith and practice concerning adherence and obedience to the Laws of Noah for acceptance into the Yeshua Movement.

WHAT REALLY IS "SCRIPTURE?"

- Paul claimed for his Teaching the inspiration of God (I Corinthians 2:7-13; 14:37; 1 Thessalonians 2:13).
- So did the writer of the Book of Revelation (Revelation 1:2).
- Paul or later Pauline writers intended that his Epistles should be read in the Churches (Colossians 4:16; I Thessalonians 5:27; 11 Thessalonians 2:15).
- The Gentile writer of the First Peter wrote that "These Things" might remain in the Church after his departure" (2 Peter 1:15; 3:1-2).

Many look to I Timothy 5:18 where Paul quoted as "Scripture" Deut. 25:4 and particularly the phrase "The laborer is worthy of his reward." Many say that Paul was considering "the laborer is worthy of his reward" as Scripture as he spoke or wrote it. Such a comments reveals their lack of understanding of the teaching methods of the Jewish people in the first century. Anyone familiar with such methods of Jewish instruction would understand such a comment as "rehmez" whereby the speaker is referring backwards to what has already been said to affirm a principle or teaching. Understanding that the two clauses are separated with an "and," and adding to that the understanding that Paul, using a midrash on Scriptures such as Lev. 19:13 and Deut. 24:15 we actually see Paul stating a truthful principle in the last part of the verse, but to force the matter and say that Paul was calling what he was saying or writings Scripture does injustice to the actual fact and reveals our lack of understanding of the teaching methods of the Jews.

NOW FOR THE HARD PART...DID PETER REALLY CALL PAUL'S WRITINGS "SCRIPTURE"?

In depth study on my part, as well as others for over 15 years, have led us to the inescapable conclusion that the New Testament writings were never to be understood as Scripture on par with the Old Testament, the Law, the Prophets, or the Writings. I have taken a lot of heat for this from many who have failed to study deeply enough to see the truths to which I bow my knee. Let me exonerate myself and others from the slander of many because we recognize that the ONLY Word of God is the Torah, the Prophets, and the Writings….the Bible Yeshua used.

In many attacks upon myself by other Christians they inevitably get around to quoting Peter where he classes Paul's Epistles with "Other Scriptures" (2 Peter 3:15-16). Taken at face value as read in the English my opponents seem to have a good case…that Peter considered Paul's writings as Scripture.

Answer for yourself: Did the writer of Second Peter intend to say Paul's writings were Scripture? Lets go a little deeper than the English shall we?

2 Pet 3:16 16 As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction. (KJV)

Let us examine the word for "other" in the Greek: First from Thayer's Greek Lexicon:

3062 loipoy- remaining, the rest

- the rest of any number or class under consideration
- with a certain distinction and contrast, the rest, who are not of a specific class or number
- the rest of the things that remain

Notice the ideas of "contrast, distinction from, and not belonging to a specific class. The word carries the idea of separation and not inclusion. Since the word carries the idea of "separation" then the idea of identification of both being contrasted as the "same" is impossible. Thus the verse, instead of saying both Scripture and Pauline writings are "the same" it says just the opposite; they are not the same because one is not in the same "class of documents" as the other. Since there is no doubt that the Jewish Scriptures are "NOT Scripture" then the other must be by definition of the word. Simply said the Pauline writings were not understood in the first century to be on par with the Jewish Scriptures; in fact much in them was vehemently opposed by the Apostles and the Jerusalem Church.

If we are to be truthful to the word used in the New Testament writings of Peter we should now clearly see that he was referring to a group of writings in CONTRAST to Paul's writings. No where in the understanding of the word are we to force the precept that both writings [Jewish Scriptures & Pauline literature] are to be considered the "same." The contrast in the intent of the word is very important in this regard. The idea from the word used in the Greek is the contrast of Scripture to documents "NOT" of the same class..see the definition above!

Notice also the concept within the word to things that "remain." Inherent in Peter's idea is a contrast to a fixed set of documents which remain in his day and are identifiable. In referring to "the rest" of something it is apparent that the knowledge of them and their identity are known and the contents of them identifiable. Such cannot be said for the writings which comprise our New Testament today for at the time of Peter's comments about Paul's writings the four Gospels had not been written, nor had Hebrews, Revelation, and many other books which are in our Bibles today. What I am saying is that to interpret Peter to mean that Paul's writings are considered "other Scriptures" is a violation of the truth behind the words. The complete set of writings had to exist and be recognized in order to speak about the "rest" of them which completes the whole of them. Obviously such cannot be said about the documents comprising our New Testaments today as about half of the New Testament had not been written at this time, nor would be it be considered "Scripture" officially until early in the fourth century.

Let us now examine the word for "scripture" from 2 Peter 3:16 as well. Having demonstrated above that the only "set" of existing Scriptures at the time of Peter's comments to which he referred to the "rest of them" was the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings, let us continue.

The Greek word for "scripture" is as follows as taken from Thayer's Greek Lexicon:

1124 graphe-

- a writing, a written thing
- the Scripture, used to denote either the book itself, or its contents
- a certain portion or section of the Holy Scripture

Let us never forget that we read the Bible today from hindsight, a terrific advantage today, but also a great liability as I hope to show you. We must understand that it was not until the fourth century that we have an official New Testament Canon. Up until that time we have oral traditions, many varying from place to place which was circulated among the peoples. In times these oral traditions were written down, many varying to some degrees. These were not books by any means, but small parchments or vellum that contained such oral traditions put in writing to preserve them. It would be much later before we would have codexes or books whereby all the writings recovered could be chronicled in somewhat of an order as we are accustomed to day.

Having said that, please understand that when the writer of 2nd Peter referred to "scripture" he was not referring to a "book" as given in the definitions above, but rather the collection of parchments containing references to the oral traditions which had by that time been committed to writing.

At the time Peter spoke what is recorded in 2 Peter 3:16 the canon of the official canon of the New Testament was over 300 years away in the making. He had no idea at all of "other Scriptures" as we understand the concept today. His reference, as determined by the wording, as well as the absence of recognized "Scripture" other than the Law, the Prophets, and the Writing, reveal to us the only conclusion plausible considering the time and the facts…that he was referring to other "written things."

Let us re-read the verse understanding that the more correct understanding of the word "graphe" would be "written things."

2 Peter 3:16

As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other WRITINGS, unto their own destruction.

As you can now see such an interpretation is just as credible as saying "other Scripture." To force the translation to say "other Scripture" must necessitate the completed set of New Testament writings be in existence ("the rest") [which completes the whole]; they dear child of God the vast majority of them were not existence when Peter referred to Paul in 2 Pet. 3:16.

This may be hard for you to swallow, but in the context of 2 Peter 3:16 Peter could easily have been referring to and CONTRASTING Jewish Scriptures (Law, Prophets, Writings) with Paul's "other writings" which were hard to understand and had no intention of calling Paul's writing "Scripture" or hold any notion that Paul's writings were on the par with the Jewish Scriptures.

So, I hope you have seen for yourself that to force the conclusion that "other Scriptures" in English must refer to our New Testament is not only in error, but an impossibility owing to the lack of their existence at the time Peter spoke. Shalom

Answer for yourself: What is the tragic implication of this for the Christian to finally realize?

Simply that our Bibles should be what they always were in the days of Jesus....a collection of the Law, Prophets, and Writings ONLY and any other such "writings" are secondary to say the least and when these "secondary" writings contradict or conflict with the Law, Prophets, and Writings (as they often do) then they are to be discarded and neglected as spurious documents and frauds. This is a major problem for the New Testament and those who understand the context and wording of 2 Peter 3:16.

THE ROLE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT AND ITS AUTHORITY FOR BELIEVERS....YOU BE THE JUDGE #2

The problem is not a small one. I am referring to the authorship of the letters and gospels that are in our New Testaments. Current scholarship builds invincible arguments for the unknown authorship for most of the documents in the New Testament. Tradition, of course, says otherwise. Tradition says that the Apostles, wrote many Letters, having in mind immediate needs of the Churches. I wish that were so but any "knowledgeable and informed" student of the New Testament can discern from both internal and external evidences that Jewish authorship for most of the New Testament is not only improbable but impossible.

As to which Letters were to be preserved for future ages, to believe that God Himself watched over the selection of these letters and made His own choice is to accuse God of being a liar for He says "Learn not the way of the heathen" yet we inherited documents within the New Testament which contain beliefs and doctrines which came straight from heathenism, pagan religions, sun-worship, and not the religion of Yeshua. This is the work of Gentiles and anti-Semites!

I suppose today I am most agitated when I think back to my religious beliefs which were taken directly from the New Testament as we have received it to which later, upon much study, I found to be adulterations of Biblical truth instead of Biblical truth. But without serious and dedicated study I would never have known the truth concerning this New Testament, and neither would you, for we have been lulled asleep to believe in Gentile religious establishment which has changed little since the third century and which effectively began the de-judaization of the faith of Yeshua. Such a legacy has been inherited today as contemporary Christianity to which its adherents know little about the corruption of their faith way back in the third century by Constantine and others. The truth of the matter is that we are expected to believe that God worked through an anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic institution called the Gentile Christian Church to create His replacement for the Hebrew Bible which is today called the "New Testament."

The Church is supposed to be both guard and guarantor of the Scriptures. The Church today has failed to inherit the teachings of Yeshua in an unadulterated state, but they can be retrieved thought a diligent study of the Jewish first century church and the doctrines taught by the Apostles in their legacy of Yeshua. If the Gentile Church of the second, third and fourth centuries was corrupted (and if you know anything about Judaism and what a Jew like Jesus believed in the first century then you know this as fact), then so was the canon of Scripture of this same Gentile establishment, because the books they chose and authored stemmed directly from their faith and doctrinal beliefs at that time and again "their" beliefs can be shown to have originated with solar and astral worship. The two are inseparable. If we cannot trust the early Gentile Catholic Church (and we cannot), then we cannot trust the New Testament, which was written, delivered, altered, and preserved by the Gentile Catholic Church as such alterations mirrored the latest decisions by the Catholic Church Councils.

LETS LOOK AT THE RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM OF THOSE WHO CHOSE THE NEW TESTAMENT WRITINGS AND DEEMED THEM INSPIRED

Answer for yourself: If you cannot and do not accept the religious belief system as shown below, then why do you read uncritically the documents selected by such people (the New Testament) as if they are inspired and infallible if the religious beliefs and foundational doctrines of the Catholic Church are not?

Answer for yourself: If you find it difficult to believe the Holy Spirit led the early Gentile Catholic Church into "all truth" as evidenced by the following doctrines which Protestantism cannot accept, then how comfortable should we be in ascribing to the Holy Spirit the same accuracy and truth in selecting the documents for the New Testament which unfortunately ultimately replaced the Torah as the Bible for the church?

LIST OF HERESIES AND HUMAN TRADITIONS ADOPTED AND PERPETUATED BY THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE COURSE OF 1600 YEARS

"And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Yeshua in John 8:32

Notice:--These dates are in many cases approximate. Many of these heresies had been current in the Church years before, but only when they were officially adopted by a Church council and proclaimed by the pope as dogma of faith, did they become binding on Catholics.

ANY RELIGIOUS DOCTRINE TO BE TRUE MUST CONFORM THE WORD OF GOD…THE OLD TESTAMENT

"To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." (Isaiah 8:20)

Before you read these "beliefs" of the same people who gave us the New Testament… understand that this is the same movement that gave us a NEW BIBLE...which ended up replacing the Bible Yeshua used…the Old Testament as the ONLY authority for the believers in God.

Answer for yourself: As you read the following "religious beliefs" of the same people who gave us the New Testament ask yourself if you can we trust the Holy Spirit to have led them into all truth, and should we trust their collection of writings called the New Testament when they, in several places, contradict Moses and Yeshua? I cannot, and I offer no man apologies. Craig M. Lyons M.Div.

Just understand that when you read the NT, with all its additions and deletions over the early centuries of the Gentile Church, these were the doctrines behind the men gave us that book!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

HERESIES GIVEN TO US BY THE SAME PEOPLE WHO GAVE US OUR NEW TESTAMENTS....THINK ABOUT THAT!

Can we trust those who gave us such spurious doctrines as those below to have NOT erred likewise when writing and giving us their documents which we call the New Testament today?	Dates As you read the following ask yourself where the "leading of the Holy Spirit" is at and then ask yourself if such errors were made...how can we trust their canon...the New Testament?
OF ALL THE HUMAN TRADITIONS taught and practiced by the Roman Catholic Church, which are contrary to the Bible, the most ancient are the prayers for the dead and the sign of the Cross.	310

Veneration of angels and dead saints.	375
The Mass, as a daily celebration, adopted.	394
The worship of Mary, the mother of Yeshua, and the use of the term, "Mother of God", as applied to her, originated in the Council of Ephesus	431
Priests began to dress differently from the laity	500
The doctrine of Purgatory was first established by Gregory the Great	593
The Latin language, as the language of prayer and worship in churches, was also imposed by Pope Gregory I. 600 years after Yeshua. The Word of God forbids praying and teaching in an unknown tongue (I Cor. 14:9).	600
The Bible teaches that we pray to God alone. In the primitive church never were prayers directed to Mary, or to dead saints. This practice began in the Roman Church (Matt. 11:28; Luke 1:46; Acts 10:25-26; 14:14-18)	600
The Papacy is of pagan origin. The title of pope or universal bishop, was first given to the bishop of Rome by the wicked emperor Phocas. This he did to spite Bishop Ciriacus of Constantinople, who had justly excommunicated him for his having caused the assassination of his predecessor emperor Mauritis. Gregory 1, then bishop of Rome, refused the title, but his successor, Boniface III, first assumed title pope." Yeshua did not appoint Peter to the headship of the apostles and forbade any such notion. (Lk. 22:24-26; Eph. 1:22-23; Col. 1:18; I Cor. 3:11).	610
Note:-- Nor is there any mention in Scripture, nor in history, that Peter ever was in Rome, much less that he was the pope there for 25 years; Clement, 3rd bishop of Rome, remarks that there is no real 1st century evidence that Peter was ever in Rome."
The kissing of the Pope's feet	709

It had been a pagan custom to kiss the feet of emperors. (Read Acts 10:25-26; Rev. 19:10; 22:9).

The Temporal power of the Popes 750

When Pepin, the usurper of the throne of France, descended into Italy, called by Pope Stephen II, to war against the Italian Lombards, he defeated them and gave the city of Rome and surrounding territory to the pope. Yeshua expressly forbade such a thing, and He himself refused wordly kingship.

(Read Matt. 4:8-9; 20:25-26; John 18:38).

Worship of the cross, images and relics was authorized. This was by order of Dowager Empress Irene of Constantinople, who first caused to pluck the eyes of her own son, Constantine VI, and then called a church council at the request of Hadrian I, pope of Rome at that time. 788

Such practice is called simply IDOLATRY in the Bible, and is severely condemned. (Read Ex. 20:4; 3:17; Deut. 27:15; Psalm 115).

Holy Water, mixed with a pinch of salt and blessed by the priest, was authorized 850

The veneration of St. Joseph began 890

The baptism of bells was instituted by Pope John XIV 965

Canonization of dead saints, first by Pope John XV 995

Every believer and follower of Yeshua is called saint in the Bible. (Read Rom. 1:7; I Col. 1:2).

Fasting on Fridays and during Lent were imposed by popes said to be interested in the commerce of fish. (Bull, or permit to eat meat), some authorities say, began in the year 700. This is against the plain teaching of the Bible. (Read Matt. 15:10; I Cor. 10:25; I Tim. 4:1-3). 998

The Mass was developed gradually as a sacrifice; attendance made obligatory in the 11th century.

The celibacy of the priesthood was decreed by Pope Hildebrand, Boniface VII. Yeshua imposed no such rule, nor did any of the apostles. On the contrary, St. Peter was a married man, and St. Paul says that bishops were to have wife and children. (Read I Tim. 3:2,5, and 12; Matt. 8:14-15). 1079

The Rosary, or prayer beads was introduced by Peter the Hermit, in the year 1090. Copied from Hindus and Mohammedans. The counting of prayers is a pagan practice and is expressly condemned by Yeshua (Matt. 6:5-13). 1090

The Inquisition of heretics was instituted by the Council of Verona in the year 1184. Yeshua never taught the use of force to spread his religion. 1184

The sale of Indulgences, commonly regarded as a purchase of forgiveness and a permit to indulge in sin. Christianity, as taught in the Bible, condemns such a traffic and it was the protest against this traffic that brought on the Protestant Reformation in the 16th century. 1190

The dogma of Transubstantiation was decreed by Pope Innocent III, in the year 1215

By this doctrine the priest pretends to perform a daily miracle by changing a wafer into the body of Yeshua, and then he pretends to eat Him alive in the presence of his people during Mass. The Bible condemns such absurdities; for the Lord's Supper is simply a memorial of the death of Yeshua.

Confession of sin to the priest at least once a year was instituted by Pope Innocent III., in the Lateran Council. The Bible commands us to confess our sins direct to God. (Read Psa. 51:1-10; Luke 7:48; 15:21; I John 1:8-9). 1215

The adoration of the wafer (Host), was decreed by Pope Honorius. So the Roman Church worships a God 1220 made by human hands. This is plain idolatry and absolutely contrary to the spirit of the Gospel. (Read John 4:24).

The Bible is forbidden to laymen and placed in the index of forbidden books by the Council of Valencia. Yeshua commanded that the Scriptures should be read by all. (John 5:39; I Tim. 3:15-17). 1229

The Scapular was invented by Simon Stock, and English monk. It is a piece of brown cloth, with the picture of the Virgin and supposed to contain supernatural virtue to protect from all dangers those who wear it on naked skin. This is fetishism. 1287

The Roman Church forbade the cup to the laity, by instituting the communion of one kind in the Council of Constance. The Bible commands us to celebrate the Lord's Supper with unleavened bread and the fruit of the vine. (Read Matt. 26:27; I Cor. 11:26-29). 1414

The doctrine of Purgatory was proclaimed as a dogma of faith by Council of Florence. There is not one word in the Bible that would teach the purgatory of priests. 1439

The doctrine of 7 Sacraments affirmed. 1439

The Ave Maria, part of the last 1508

It was completed 50 years afterward and finally approved by Pope Sixtus V, at the end of the 16th century.

The Council of Trent, held in the year 1545, declared that Tradition is of equal authority with the Bible. By tradition is meant human teachings. The Pharisees believed the same way, and Yeshua bitterly condemned them, for by teaching human tradition, they nullified the commandments of God. (Read Mark 7:7-13; Col. 2:8; Rev. 22:18). 1545

The apocryphal books were added to the Bible also by the Council of Trent. These books were not recognized as canonical by the Jewish Church. (See Rev. 22:8-9). 1546

The Creed of Pope Pius IV was imposed as the official creed 1560 years after Yeshua and the apostles. True Christians retain the Jewish Holy Scriptures as their creed. Hence their creed is 1500 years older than the creed of Roman Catholics. (Read Gal. 1:8). 1560

The Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary was proclaimed by Pope Pius IX. The Bible states that all men, with the sole exception of Yeshua, are sinners. Mary herself had need of a Savior. (Read Rom. 3:23; 5:12; Psa. 51:5; Luke 1:30,46,47). 1834

In the year 1870 after Yeshua, Pope Pius IX proclaimed the dogma of Papal Infallibility. 1870

This is a blasphemy and the sign of the apostasy and of the anti-christ predicted by St. Paul. (Read II Thess. 2:2-12; Rev. 17:1-9; 13:5-8,18). Many Bible students see the number of the beast (Rev. 13:18), 666 in the Roman letters of the Pope's title: "VICARIVS FILII DEI." -- V-5, I-1; C-100, I-1; V-S, I-1; L-50, I-1; I-1; D-500, I-l -- Total, 666.

Pope Plus X, in the year 1907, condemned together with "Modernism", all the discoveries of modern science which are not approved by the Church. Pius IX had done the same thing in the Syllabus of 1864. 1907

In the year 1930 Pius XI, condemned the Public Schools 1930

In the year 1931 the same pope Pius XI, reaffirmed the doctrine that Mary is "the Mother of God." This doctrine was first invented by the Council of Ephesus in the year 431. This is a heresy contrary by Mary's own words. (Read Luke 1:46-49; John 2: l-5). 1931

In the year 1950 the last dogma was proclaimed by Pope Pins XII, the Assumption of the Virgin Mary. 1950

Let me say again: If we cannot trust the early Gentile Catholic Church (and we cannot), then we cannot trust the New Testament, which was written, delivered, and preserved by the Gentile Catholic Church as well

CONCLUSION

Answer for yourself: What will be the next "theological" invention? The Roman Church says it never changes; yet, it has done nothing else but invent new doctrines which are contrary to the Bible, and has practiced rites and ceremonies taken bodily from paganism. Some scholars have declared that 75% of the rites and ceremonies of the Roman Church are of pagan origin.

Note:-- Cardinal Newman, in his book, "The Development of the Christian Religion," admits that ... "Temples, incense, oil lamps, votive offerings, holy water, holidays and season of devotions, processions, blessing of fields, sacerdotal vestments, the tonsure (of priests and monks and nuns), images ... are all of pagan origin..." (Page 359).

HERESIES are those doctrines and practices which are contrary to the Bible. They are also called "human traditions" or "doctrines of men". Both Peter and Paul predicted and warned that in the later times "false teachers" would rise within the Church and bring in "damnable heresies" and "doctrines of devils". (Read II Peter 2:1-3, and I Tim. 3:2-5). Yeshua rebuked the Pharisees, for they transgressed the commandments of God by keeping their traditions. "in vain," He said, "they worship me by keeping for doctrines the commandments of men" (Matt. 15:3,9).

The real heretics therefore, are the Roman Catholics and the true orthodox are the Evangelical Christians.

BRETHREN! The Word of God commands us to get out of Babylon, saying: "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." (Rev. 18:4). All true Christians will remain faithful to the religion of Yeshua as taught in the Bible, and heed the warning of the Apostle Paul, who said: "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." (Gal. 1:8).

Answer for yourself: If you have difficulty in accepting these above heresies as truth, then why do you accept their other beliefs hidden within the New Testament that violate the Laws, the Prophets and the Writings?

Answer for yourself: If you have difficulty in accepting these above heresies as truth, then why do you accept their other beliefs cleverly contained in the New Testament which, without through knowledge of the Old Testament, will not be noticed as fraudulent in simple reading of the New Testament?

Don't look now my Protestant friends because much of what you practice in your church comes from these pagan backgrounds...and most of you are not aware because you have placed faith in a fraudulent document!

The Word of God commands us to get out of Idolatry and pagan expressions of religious faith. All true Christians will remain faithful to the religion of Yeshua as taught in the Bible.....the Jewish Scriptures, and which can still be detected within the New Testament with a little study.

THE ROLE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT AND ITS AUTHORITY FOR BELIEVERS...YOU BE THE JUDGE #3

THE EMERGENCE OF THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

Many think that the books of our New Testament was at first received and accepted by all. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

In Palestine the New Testament Books that first appeared were the Hebrew Gospel of Matthew, James and possibly Hebrews (there is somewhat doubt about this). In Asia Minor we have first appearing John, Galatians, Ephesians, Colossians 11 Timothy, Philemon, I & II Peter, I & II & III John, Jude, Revelation. In Greece we find I & II Corinthians, Philippians, I & II Thessalonians, and Luke. In Rome we find Titus and in Rome we find Mark, Acts, and Romans.

Palestine, Asia Minor, Greece and Rome were far apart. The Old Testament books had originated within the compass of one country; but the New Testament books in widely separated countries.

The earliest collections of New Testament writings were incomplete. It was not a world of like the world we live in today. Travel and communication were slow and dangerous. What is now a trip few hours would then have required months or years. Printing then was unknown, and the making of copies by hand was slow laborious work. Even more it was an age of persecution, when Christian writings had to be kept hid. And, there were no church councils or conferences, where Christians from distant parts could come together and compare notes on what writings they had, till the days of Constantine. So, naturally, the earliest collections of New Testament books would vary, in different regions; and the process of reaching unanimity as to what books properly belonged in New Testament was slow.

Beside the "canonical" New Testament books there were many others, both good and fraudulent, as noted in pages that follow: some so fine and valuable that were for a while, in some sections, regarded as Scripture; others, were unadulterated forgeries. The one criterion by which a book was judged before acceptance was whether it was of genuine Apostolic origin. Such investigation was not, in every case easy; especially less known books of a distant region.

QUOTING FROM NEW SOURCES TO JUSTIFY CREDIBILITY

We are privileged today to possess early writings of Gentile Christians whose lives overlapped the lives of the Apostles. These writings are few because of the perishable nature of the writing material, and because it was a period of persecution in which Christian writings were destroyed. But, though few, these "overlapped writings" bear their unimpeachable testimony to the existence in their day of a group of writings deemed "authoritative" by the Gentile Christians. It is these earliest "overlapped" writings which serve as the seedbed for the rejection of the Law and the Torah, and unfortunately, these writings would come to be regarded as new "Scripture." A Lawless faith (Torahless faith) is always easier to accept than one which presents the responsibilities of God to mankind. The Gentile Church, having slowly abandoned the Law, would gradually accept these new writings as "authoritative." This was to become their "new gospel;" and their writings began to abound in quotations from, or references to, these new replacement writings.

For example:

Clement of Rome, in his Epistle to the Corinthians (A.D. 95 quotes from, or refers to, what was to become Matthew, Luke, Romans, Corinthians, Hebrews. I Timothy, and I Peter.

Polycarp, in his Letter to the Philippians (about A.D. 110), quotes Philippians, and reproduces phrases from nine other of Paul's Epistles and I Peter. He says, "I have letters from you, and from Ignatius. I shall send yours to Syria, as you request; and I am sending letter of Ignatius to you, with others, and the present one of own." This indicates that, in Polycarp's day, Gentile Christians had already begun to gather copies of Christian writings from outside the Torah and consider them authoritative..

FORMATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

- Ignatius, in his Seven Letters, written about A.D. 110, during journey from Antioch to Rome for his martyrdom, quotes from what was later to become the Gospel of Matthew, I Peter, and I John. He cites nine of Paul's Epistles, and his letters bear the reference to the other three Gospels.
- Papias, (A.D. 70-155), a pupil of John, wrote "An Explanation of Lord's Discourses," in which he quotes from John, and records traditions about the origin of Matthew and Mark.
- The Didache, written between A.D. 80 and 120, makes 22 quotations from Matthew with references to Luke, John, Acts, Romans, Thessalonians, I Peter; and speaks of "The Gospel" as a written document.
- The Epistle of Barnabas, written between A.D. 90 and 120, quotes from Matthew, John, Acts, 2 Peter, and uses the expression, "It is written," a formula commonly applied only to Scripture.

Let us stop for a moment and recall what we have already learned: that calling Paul's or another's writings "Scripture" does not make authoritative such writings on par with the Law, the Prophets, or the Writings. So, just because the writer of the Epistle of Barnabas uses a formula ["it is written"] often found in Old Testament Scripture does not make his writings any more "Scripture" than if I used the same formula is this article.

- The Shepherd of Hermas, written about A.D. 100 or 140, the "Pilgrims Progress" of the ancient church, made use of James, with abundant echoes of other New Testament books.
- Tatian, about A.D. 160, made a "Harmony of the Four Gospels," called the "Diatessaron," is said by some as the first evidence that Four Gospels (only because he quoted from only the four out of many Gospels present at the time), and only those four, were generally becoming recognized among the churches. His document would go along way to slide opinion to accept these four only over all the others!
- Justin Martyr, born about the year that John died, in his "Apologies," written about A.D. 140, mentions Revelation, and shows knowledge of Acts and eight Epistles. He calls the Gospels the "Memoirs of the Apostles," and says that they were read in Christian assemblies alternately with the "Prophets." Strangely he never quotes one Gospel by the name of the author to whom it is recognized today; namely because at 150 A.D. the names of these "writings" were yet anonymous thus he can only call them "Memoirs of the Apostles."
- Basilides, a Gnostic heretic who taught in Alexandria in the reign of Hadrian (117-138), and who claimed to have knowledge of secret traditions handed down from the Apostles, in his written efforts to distort accepted Christian teachings, quotes from what would become Matthew, Luke, Romans, I Corinthians, Ephesians, and Colossians as accepted Christian Scriptures.

As you can see such quotations by so many would go a long way in creating a New Scripture!

- Marcion, another heretic (about A.D. 140), in the interest of his heresy, made the first canon of New Testament writings, consisting of Luke, Romans, I and II Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, I & II Thessalonians, and Philemon.
- Irenaeus (A.D. 130-200), a pupil of Polycarp, is the first to quote most of New Testament books (180 A.D.) as "Scripture," which, in his time, had come to be known as "The Gospel and the Apostles," as the Old Testament books were called "The Law and the Prophets". In reality it took almost 200 years for these New Testament documents to be "called" Scripture and recognized as such by a few. In time many will follow suit.
- Tertullian (A.D. 160-220), of Carthage, living while the original manuscripts of the Epistles were still in existence, speaks of the Christian Scriptures as the "New Testament" (which title first appears in the writing of an unknown author about A.D. 193). In Tertullian's existing writings there are 1800 quotations from New Testament books. In his work "Against Heretics" he says:

"If you are willing to exercise your curiosity profitably in business of your salvation, visit the Apostolic churches in which the very chairs of the Apostles still preside in their places; in which the very authentic Epistles are read, sounding forth the voice and representing the countenance of each of them. Is Achaia near you? You have Corinth. If you are not far from Macedonia, you have Philippi and Thessalonica. If you can go to Asia, you have Ephesus. If are near Italy, you have Rome."

- The Muratorian Fragment, made in Rome, about A.D. 170, rains a list of the Christian Scriptures. It omits Hebrews, I and II Peter, and James; but includes the Book of Wisdom and Apocalypse of Peter.
- The Old Syriac Version, made about the middle of the second century A.D. omits James, I & II Peter, I, II, & III John, Jude, and Revelation.
- The Old Latin Version, made about the middle of the second century A.D. omits Hebrews, James, and II Peter.
- Origen (185-254). of Alexandria, a Christian scholar of extensive travel and great learning, devoted his life to the study of Scripture. He wrote so extensively that at times he employed as many as twenty copyists. In his existing writings 2/3 of the New Testament can be found in quotations. He accepted the 27 books of the New Testament as we have them, though not sure of authorship of Hebrews, and expressed doubt as to James, II Peter, and II & III John.

SO WHAT BOOKS WERE TO BE CONSIDERED THE NEW TESTAMENT?

From the above citations, and that of Eusebius (on the page following), it will be seen that, for a while, there was great variation by many as to what books were regarded as canonical.

There are two answers to this perplexing problem since we believe the Holy Spirit has promised to guide us into all truth. The evidence is factual….the greatest minds of the early Gentile Christian movement were not in unity about which books were to be included in the Gentile Canon. It would seem to me that if God desired to have a New Testament with an authority equal to the Torah this should not have been for "with God all things are possible." Many say to me "God oversees His Word" and to this I wholeheartedly agree. But what is to be "His Word?"

There are others who try to get around the above obvious failure of the Holy Spirit for almost 400 years to come to unity upon the selection of books which were to be the foundation of this Gentile Christian movement. Many try to explain this obvious embarrassment by saying such disunity and agreement upon the selection of books for the New Testament Canon was due simply to the fact that account of slow means of communication over the vast expanse of the Roman Empire, and on account of three hundred years of incessant and unrelenting persecution, there was not one single chance for the churches to make a fair and open and reasonable effort to come to general unanimity as to what books were of genuine Apostolic Authority, till Constantine, at the beginning of the 4th Century, issued his Edict of Toleration.

Answer for yourself: Can God witness the same truth to two different people at the same time although they live in two different places?

There is your answer. Of course God can, but He didn't! This means that the selection of the canon by the Gentile Christian church was more dependent upon reasoning and rationalization based upon pre-formed theologies than any inspiration from God. This may be hard to swallow, but face the facts. The juxtaposition of books repeatedly in the canon and out of the canon, the inclusion of some to the exclusion of others, and the final decision as to which was to be included as made over hundreds and hundreds of years brings great difficulty to assigning any credibility for the selection of such books that comprise our New Testament today.

Now, please understand, I both preach and teach from these document, but not to the exclusion of the Torah, nor do I ascribe to them the authority I do to the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings, and neither should you. For me, and others at Bet Emet, the New Testament is considered as Midrash, as commentary upon the life and times of Jesus. When materials within the New Testament line up with the Old Testament we have a witness to truth, but when teachings and doctrines within the New Testament diverge and contradict the Torah, then they are lies included among truth and the unscrupulous custodians of these documents (the anti-Semitic and anti-Judaic Gentile Catholic Church of the earliest centuries) are to be exposed for what they are in God's sight....shameless beings who corrupted the Word of God by adding to and taking away from it! Such parts of the New Testament are to be rejected by the Christians today. The hard part is to discern what parts of the New Testament are fraudulent. Without capable and dedicated study on your part you will never know. But the good news for you is that there are in the Body of Christ today capable men and women, and ministries, devoted to recovering the truths about the real Yeshua and educating the Body of Christ to these truths in hopes that our obedience before God will be more pleasing. Such is our love for God and should be yours as well.

THE DOUBTFUL BOOKS

We must understand that such books were not "doubtful" in regions where they first appeared. The isolation of communities from others contributed to these books not becoming widely known for a while. The fact that the were slow in being generally received is a testimony to the carefulness of the churches against impostors.

FORMATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT...MORE

Eusebius (A.D. 264 340), bishop of Caesarea, Church Historian, live through, and was imprisoned during Diocletian's persecution of Christians, which was Rome's final effort to blot out the Christian name. One of its special objects was the destruction of all Christian Scriptures. For ten years Bibles were hunted by the agents of Rome and burned in public market places. To Christians, the question of just what books composed their Scriptures was no idle matter.

Eusebius lived into the reign of (Constantine, who accepted Christianity. Eusebius became Constantine's chief religious adviser. One of Constantine's first acts on ascending the throne was to order, for the churches of Constantinople, fifty Bibles, to be prepared, under the direction of Eusebius, by skillful copyists, on the finest of vellum and to be delivered by royal carriages from Caesarea to Constantinople. He wrote, in his order to Eusebius:

"I have thought it expedient to instruct your Prudence to order fifty copies of the Sacred Scriptures, the provision and use of which you know to be most needful for the instruction of the church, to be written on prepared parchment, in a legible manner, and in a commodious and portable form, by transcribers thoroughly practiced in their art. You have authority also, by virtue of this letter to use two of the public carriages for their conveyance; by which arrangement' the copies, when fairly written, will most easily be forwarded for my personal inspection. One of the deacons of your church may be entrusted with this service, who, on his arrival here shall experience my liberality. God preserve you, beloved brother".

SO WHAT WAS THE NEW TESTAMENT TO EUSEBIUS?

It my surprise you to know that by the later part of the fourth century the same books that now constitute the New Testament was also for Eusebius the same.

Eusebius, by extensive research, made himself informed as to what books had been generally accepted by the churches. In his Church History he speaks of four classes of books:

1. Those universally accepted.
2. The "disputed" books: James, II Peter, Jude, II & III John, which, though included in his own Bibles, were still doubted by some.
3. The "spurious" books: among which he mentions the "Acts of Paul," "Shepherd of Hermas," "Apocalypse of Peter," "Epistle of Barnabas" and the "Didache."
4. The "Forgeries of heretics": among which he grouped "Gospel of Peter," "Gospel of Thomas," "Gospel of Matthias," "Acts of Andrew," and "Acts of John."

The Council of Carthage (A.D. 397), gave its formal ratification to the 27 books of the New Testament as we know them, expressing what had already become the unanimous judgment of the churches and accepted for itself THE BOOK that was destined to be MAN'S MOST PRECIOUS HERITAGE.

MODERN BIBLICAL CRITICISM..WHAT DOES IT MEAN CORRECTLY?

The Bible, with its 27-book New Testament canon, as accepted by the Early Christian Fathers, and finally ratified by the Council of Carthage, became, without further questioning, the recognized of Christendom for a thousand years.

With the rise of the modern critical spirit came a renewed in investigation into the origin and authenticity of the Bible books, as with all ancient books.

"Criticism," as applied to the Bible, is a rather unfortunate term although with many irreverent wiseacres it has been exactly that, in-somuch that the word is quite commonly regarded as being the name of the modern intellectual effort to undermine the Divine Authority of the Bible. So far as the word means critical and fair examination of facts, or alleged facts, in an honest search for historical truth is natural, reasonable and legitimate, and enlarges our knowledge of the Scripture.

Historical Criticism has to do with the genuineness authenticity of the Bible books: that is, who wrote each book when, and whether the book is historical or otherwise.

In relation to the New Testament books, it is merely the re-opening of the question settled by, and to the satisfaction of first Generations of Christian fathers. Modern critics have made no more determined nor scholarly effort to ascertain the genuineness of the New Testament books than was made by the generations in which the books were first published. Indeed they were in far better position to determine the nature of those books than later critics. It is not easy to wreck a train long after it has gone by. Literary fort are soon detected. Whether a book is historical or fictional is recognized on publication. If I were to write a history of the American Revolutionary War, and sign George Washington's name to it, could I make anybody believe that Washington wrote it?

One of the unfortunate things about the critics who have discarded the traditional view of the origins of the Bible books is their presumption to themselves of a monopoly of "scholarship." To them their view is the "unanimous opinion of scholarship." Are they so narrow- minded as to think that only those who hold to their theories are true scholars? Viewpoint is not an indication of scholarship, but only of one's mindset and is not always dependent upon facts. The dear Old Book has worn out many anvils, long after the critics have been forgotten will go marching on loved and honored by unnumbered millions.

Textual Criticism is the comparison of various manuscripts to ascertain the exact original text from which they are copied. It has resulted in the Old Testament Masoretic Hebrew and New Testament Westcott and Hort Greek texts, which, in the main, are the exact original Bible words. Printing removed the danger of textual errors.

APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT BOOKS

These are legendary and spurious Gospels, Acts of the Apostles and Epistles, which began to appear in the 2nd Century. They were mostly forgeries, and were so recognized from the first. They are so full of nonsensical stories of Christ and the Apostles, that they have never been regarded as divine, nor bound in our Bible. Deliberate attempts to fill the gaps of the New Testament story of Yeshua in order to further heretical ideas by false claims abound within them.

There are known to have been about 50 of the spurious "Gospels" besides many "Acts" and "Epistles." The great mass of these for writings made it very important for the Early Church to distinguish between the false and the true.

It is said that Mohammed got his ideas of Christianity largely from these books. They are the origin of some of the dogmas of the Roman Catholic Church.

They are not to be confused with the writings of the "Apostolic fathers."

HERE IS A LIST OF SOME OF THE MOST WELL KNOWN

- Gospel of Nicodemus embodies the "Acts of Pilate," an alleged official report of the trial of Yeshua to Emperor Tiberius. It was produced in the 2 or 5th century and is purely imaginary.
- Protevangelium of James is a narrative from the birth of Mary to the slaughter of the innocents. It contains stories that had begun to circulate in the 2nd century through the 5th century.
- The Passing of Mary abounds in silly miracles, and culminates in the removal of "her spotless and precious body" to Paradise. It was written the 4th century, with the rise of Virgin worship.
- The Gospel according to the Hebrews is classified as an Apocryphal New Testament book, yet is one of the oldest surviving Gospels used by the original Jewish Church. It contains additions to the canonical Gospels with some alleged sayings of Yeshua and dates around A.D. 100.
- The Gospel of the Ebionites is compiled from the synoptic Gospels and dates from the early second through the fourth century. This Gospel has been rejected by Gentile Christianity today because it adheres to an earlier Christology that was later rejected by the Gentile Church Councils which took an opposite view of Christology.
- The Gospel of the Egyptians contains imaginary conversations between Yeshua and Salome. It is dated between A.D. 130 and 150 and was used by the Sabellians.
- The Gospel of Peter is dated around the middle of 2nd century and is based on the canonical Gospels and is written in the interest of Anti-Jewish and Docetic doctrines.
- The Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew is a 5th century forged translation of Matthew which is abounding with the childhood miracles of Yeshua.
- The Gospel of Thomas is a 2nd century document that records for us Yeshua's life from the 5th to the 12th year and makes him a miracle worker to satisfy boyish whims.

- The Nativity of Mary is a deliberate forgery of 6th century intended to further the worship of the Virgin Mary. Stories about daily visits of angels to Mary and with Papal growth has became immensely popular.
- The Arabic Gospel of the Childhood is a 7th century document containing stories of miracles during the sojourn in Egypt and is extremely fantastic.
- The Gospel of Joseph the Carpenter is a 4th century document that originated in Egypt and is devoted to the glorification of Joseph.
- The Apocalypse of Peter contains the purported visions of heaven and hell given to Peter. It was called "spurious" by Eusebius.
- The Acts of Paul from the middle of 2nd century is a romance inculcating continence. It is said to contains the supposed lost Epistle to the Corinthians.
- The Acts of Peter is written at the end of 2nd century and describes a love affair of Peter's daughter. Within it is conflict with Simon Magus (a synonym for Paul). It also contains the "Quo vadis" story.
- The Acts of John at the end of 2nd century is a story of a visit to Rome that is purely imaginary. It contains a revolting picture of sensuality.
- The Acts of Andrew contains the story of Andrew persuading Maximilla to refrain from intercourse with her husband, resulting in his martyrdom.
- The Acts of Thomas at the end of 2nd century is like the Acts of Andrew in that is a travel-romance, in interest of abstinence from sexual intercourse.
- The Letter of Peter to James at the end of 2nd century is a violent attack of Paul by the early Jewish Church (Ebionites) for his relaxation of the Torah in his mission to the Gentiles.
- The Epistle from Laodicea professes to be the one referred to in Colossians 4:16. A lot of Paul's phrases are strung together in this epistle.
- The Letters of Paul to Seneca, with Letters from Seneca to Paul is believed to be a 4th century forgery. The intent is either to commend Christianity to the followers of Seneca, or to commend Seneca to Christians.

The main characteristic of these writings is that most, but not all, are fiction representing itself as history, but for the most part they are utterly absurd that their falsity is self-evident. But that cannot be said for all. For example the Gospel of the Ebionites and the Gospel of the Hebrews are exceptions which others have grouped as Apocryphal Gospels, yet they contain historical and theological truths.

- The Abgarus Letters may have some basis of fact. Eusebius thought so. He relates that Abgarus, king of Edessa, sick, heard of Yeshua's power, and wrote a letter begging Yeshua to come and heal him to which Yeshua wrote an answer: "It is necessary that those things for which I was sent should be completed, after which I shall be received up to Him who sent me. When, therefore, I shall be received in heaven, I will send one of my disciples who shall heal you." Accordingly, Thaddeus is said to have been sent, and was shown the letters in the archives of Edessa. Possibly Yeshua may have sent such a message verbally, which they recorded.

WRITINGS OF THE APOSTOLIC FATHERS

These should not be confused with the false books, enumerated on the two preceding pages, in which the authors assumed names of Apostles to give credence to legendary tales.

The Apostolic Fathers (more exactly, the "Sub-Apostolic Fathers") were those whose lives overlapped the Apostolic generation. Their extant writings are few (how we wish there were more of them!) due to the perishable nature of their writing material, and to the persecutions of their day.

But they are extremely valuable, as they form the connecting link between the Apostles and later Church History. Some of them were so highly regarded that, in some localities, they were temporarily regarded as Scripture.

- The Epistle of Clement to the Corinthians in A.D. 95 is one such letter. Clement was a bishop of Rome (AD. 91-100) and was a companion of Paul and Peter. He must have been acquainted with John as well. He wrote this Epistle the year that John was banished to Patmos. It is said that he was condemned to the mines, and suffered martyrdom in the 3rd year of Trajan. He is thought, possibly, to have been the Clement mentioned in Philippians 4:3.

This Epistle was occasioned by a division in the Corinthian church in which some Elders were excluded by younger worldly men. It we written in the name of the Roman church, and is full of beautiful exhortations to humility, and dwells much on the resurrection. It was so highly esteemed that it was read publicly in many churches down to the 4th century. It was found, at the end of the New Testament in the Alexandrian manuscript of the Bible.

- The Epistle of Polycarp to the Philippians is dated about A.D. 110. Polycarp was the pupil of John, bishop of Smyrna, and he wrote a number of letters, but the only one is extant. It was in reply to a letter from the Philippians asking his advice. It reads very much like Paul's Epistles, which he commends to their careful study.
- The Epistles of Ignatius was written about A.D. 110. Ignatius was a pupil of John and bishop of Antioch. He suffered martyrdom in Rome A.D. 110. On his way from Antioch to Rome, passing through Asia Minor, he wrote Seven Epistles: To the Ephesians, Magnesians, Trallians, Philadelphians, Smyrnaeans, Romans and Polycarp. These Epistles of Ignatius abound in tender exhortations, and breathe a spirit of rejoicing at the prospect of his impending martyrdom. They emphasize the evil of heresy and division, and counsel submission to the elders of the church.
- The Epistle of Barnabas was written between A.D. 90 and 120. Some think it was the New Testament Barnabas, but others question it. The Epistle is a General Epistle, addressed to all Christians, containing a sort of outline interpretation of Scripture. It was found in the Sinaitic manuscript of the Bible, at the end of New Testament, which indicates the high regard in which it was held.
- The Papias' Fragments was written by Papias, a pupil of John and bishop Hierapolis. He was martyred about same time as Polycarp. He wrote "Explanation of the Lord's Discourses," which was extant down to the 13th century. But now only fragments remain in quotations in Irenaeus, Eusebius and others.
- The Didache, or Teaching of the Twelve was written between 80 and 120, probably about A.D. 100. It is not a genuine composition of the Apostles, but only a statement, by some unknown author, of what he understood those teachings to be. It resembles the Epistle of James. Early writers denied its canonicity, but held it in high regard. It abounds in quotations from New Testament books.
- The Shepherd of Hermas was written about A.D. 100 or 140. It is the earliest example of Christian Allegory, the "Pilgrim's Progress" of the primitive Church. The writer was intensely religious, and saw visions which he wrote in this book, emphasizing repentance, spiritual life, and the near Advent of the Lord. The book was read in many churches down to the time of Jerome. It is contained in the Sinaitic manuscript of the Bible, at the close of the New Testament. That the author was the Hermas of Romans 16:14 is only a guess.
- The Apology of Aristides was written by a philosopher of Athens. He wrote "Defense of Christianity," to Hadrian, A.D. 125, and to Antonius, A.D. 137, appealing for protection of Christians against persecution. He said, "Blessed is the race of Christians above all men, because of their true and noble creed, and their pure and benevolent lives." It is the earliest known literary tribute of a philosopher to Christianity. It was written from Athens, the home of philosophy.
- Justin Martyr (A.D. 100 167) was a philosopher, who, after trying Stoic, Peripatetic, Pythagorean, and Platonic philosophies, found satisfaction in Christianity. He wrote "Apologies," addressed to the Emperor Antoninus, in defense of Christianity. He also wrote a "Dialogue with Trypho," which was an argument with a Jew over the Messiahship of Yeshua. This is the first real good example of Gentile replacement religion.
- The II Epistle of Clement was written between A.D. 120 and 140. It is written in the form of a sermon. Again, we are uncertain if it was the same Clement.
- The Epistle of Diognetus is a vindication of Christianity, by an unknown author who claimed he was "a disciple of the Apostles."

Answer for yourself: Could God be sharing important things intended for us in writings such as these, but which were unfortunately rejected by the Gentile Catholic Church when they collected writings that promoted their own Gentile replacement theology of the time? Shalom.

HAVE YOU EVER NOTICED THAT "QUOTES" FROM THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES USED IN THE NEW TESTAMENT ARE NOT IN THE JEWISH SCRIPTURES AT ALL?

If you were like me most likely you grew up in a Christian Church where you were taught over and over that the Scriptures in the New Testament are infallible and inerrant. We were given Apostle Paul's attestation to this very fact in Second Timothy 3:16: "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Of course Paul was referring only to the Old Testament Jewish Scriptures with that verse since most of the New Testament had not been written yet, but who was to object if it was taken to refer to the New Testament. For after all, most "assume" that the Bible that they carry to church Sunday after Sunday could not be filled with "errors, misquotations, mistranslations, and purposeful misapplications of Old Testament passages in their New Testament"....do they?

Answer for yourself: How "righteous" is it when you purposely deceive others?

Answer for yourself: How valuable are documents reported to of importance for religious doctrine when these documents can be shown to be full of purposeful misquotations of the original sources (the Jewish Scriptures)?

Answer for yourself: How can we trust such misquotations for "reproof and correction" when themselves are diametrically opposed to the original teachings they are supposed to validate?

Answer for yourself: Do you realize that if you follow a fraudulent document full of misquotations and mistranslations for your religious belief system then in reality what you choose to "believe" and "do" are in reality 180 degrees opposite to both what God said and desired for you to both know and do?

Answer for yourself: Were you aware that many supposed "quotations" in the New Testament are not quotations at all, but rather Gentile creations that serve their anti-Semitic propaganda as espoused by Rome?

Let us look into the matter.

I challenge anyone to find where these supposed "quotations" exist in the Jewish Scriptures when taken in the same context and wording as used by the original writer. Let us remember that these "supposed quotations," are non-quotations. These "non-quotations" are read unfortunately as inspired Scripture which they are not. The Holy Spirit does not make such mistakes but men not inspired of God do and we have their record of such event in the New Testament. These false quotations served the purpose to make us belief doctrines which were foreign to the Jewish Scriptures which were given by God

WE ALL AGREE TO THIS...DON'T WE?

You must agree that since the New Testament bases its validity off the Old Testament; this means that the Jewish Scriptures are taken as truth by Christians and thus cannot be wrong. But that cannot be said for the New Testament passages if they contradict the original passages or misquote them. Again, this cannot be said for Christian Bibles which misquote and mistranslate the Hebrew of the Jewish Bibles in the Christian Bible's Old Testament. I always knew for some time now the problems inherent in the New Testament, but was utterly amazed to find how the KJV Bible was just as guilty of misrepresentation of the Jewish Old Testament in their "translations" of it in the Christian Bibles as well.

We cannot trust either the OT or the NT in our Christian Bibles unless we compare the NT with the Jewish Bible as well as compare the OT in the Christian Bible with the Jewish Old Testament in the Jewish Bible. Then and only then can we be assured we have the truth

Once you embark on this type of study you will be amazed at how many quotations by Paul are anything but true quotations. Thus, we need to check out Paul and his teachings very closely because often they are opposite to what Yeshua both said and taught.

EXAMINING THE EVIDENCE...JUST A FEW EXAMPLES...THEY ARE TOO NUMEROUS TO COVER IN ONE ARTICLE

1 Timothy 1:18

18. This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare;

Answer for yourself: Have you ever read in the Jewish Scriptures prophecies concerning Timothy?

There are no Old Testament prophecies pertaining to Timothy.

Ephesians 5:14

14 Wherefore he saith {it is said -- {RSV}, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.

Most Christians commentators refer to two Jewish Scriptures for reference for Paul's comment. We are told to believe that in the Jewish Scriptures, in Isa. 60:1 and 26:19 we have the reference to which Paul alludes in referring to the resurrection of Yeshua. Let us investigate these two passages and see if they refer to Yeshua's resurrection.

Isaiah 60:1

Arise, shine; for they light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee.

In this passage the Prophet Isaiah foresees a time when Israel will arise out of her darkness and shine with God's glory and not the resurrection of a person.. Then the Gentile will come to the light of Israel and her Torah. Thus the sons of the strangers described in this chapter will come to Jerusalem to worship the Lord.
The context of Isaiah is a national revival and has nothing to do with the resurrection of a body.

Isaiah 26:19

Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead.

The context of this verse is the general resurrection of all the dead as alluded to in Daniel 12:2 and not to a resurrection of a man prior to the consummate event of all eschatology. This is an event which is to transpire at the end of days and not 2000 years earlier in Yeshua's resurrection. Daniel refers to two resurrections, one of the righteous dead to everlasting life and another of the unrighteous to everlasting contempt. A traditional Christian dispensationalist will tell you that these two resurrections are separated by the one-thousand year reign of Christ. Again the meaning of the Jewish Scripture used from Isaiah by Paul has a context totally foreign to thy way Isaiah originally intended. Paul used the passage from Isaiah and gave it a totally different meaning. Such is a misquotation of the passage in which the original context of the author was distorted.

1 Corinthians 15:4

4 And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures: 5 And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve: 6 After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

Answer for yourself: Where in the Gospels does it say that Peter saw Yeshua before the other apostles?

No gospel says that Peter (Cephas) saw Yeshua before the 12 or saw Yeshua 1st after the resurrection.

Answer for yourself: Where in the Gospels does it say that 500 people saw Yeshua after he was raised from the death?

No gospel says 500 people saw Yeshua after the resurrection. But more troubling than that is that such a dramatic occurrence, which would have easily brought the religious establishment to their knees, is totally without corroboration outside of this single reference by Paul.

Answer for yourself: In 1 Corinthians 15:4 Paul says that Yeshua was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures.

Answer for yourself: Where in the Jewish Scriptures is the death of Yeshua predicted with his resurrection foretold for 3 days later?

It simply is not there. Paul is speaking as if the Jewish Scriptures prophesied of Yeshua's death and resurrection 3 days later and such a statement is not true.

Hebrews 10:5

It is debatable that Paul is the author of the book of Hebrews. But for the sake of argument let us say he is at the moment.

5 Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me: 6 In burnt offerings and [sacrifices] for sin thou hast had no pleasure.

The above passage is a quotation from Psalms 40:6..

Answer for yourself: Does the book of Hebrews, believed to be inspired and infallible by millions of believers today, quote accurately Psalm 40:6?

Notice the difference for yourself

As taken from the Hebrew text of Psalm 40:6 we find something rather startling that contradicts the inspired writings of Hebrews.

6. Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire; mine ears hast thou opened (in order to hear the Torah of God): burnt offering and sin offering hast thou not required.

Answer for yourself: How does "mine ears has thou opened" become "a body Thou has prepared for me?

Answer for yourself: Does Paul quote Psalm 40:6 correctly in Hebrews 10:5? No way.

Paul misapplies or misquotes (or someone later to his letters) Psalms 40:6. "A body hast thou prepared me" is not in Psalms. Paul omits "mine ears hast thou opened". Nowhere in the New Testament did Yeshua say these things either.

Romans 2:24

24 For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is written.

Again the context of the quote is totally foreign to the way Paul used the quote. Quoting from Isa. 52:5 we find that the name of God was blasphemed by the Gentiles who took captive the Jewish nation when all the while their God was to be their defender. God was mocked by the heathen because of the plight of the Jewish people What the heathen failed to understand is that such captivity was a punishment upon the Jewish people and not indicative of the impotence of God in protecting and saving His people.

In Romans we are led to believe that the name of God was blasphemed again by the Gentiles because the Jews don't keep the Law. Such is ludicrous, and Paul tells a lie because any casual attempt to study the first century will show the dedication of Pharisees, Sadducees, and Essenes to scrupulously keep the Law. That was one of Yeshua's problems with the religions establishment… they neglected the weightier matters of the Torah due to preoccupation of the nuances of the Oral Law. They strained at a gnat and swallowed a camel.

Matthew 12:5

5 Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless?

Nowhere does the Old Testament state that priests in the temple profaned the sabbath, and are blameless.

Matthew 23:35

35 That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar.

This may come as a shock to you but the name Barachias is not in the Old Testament In the Old Testament Zacharias is the son of Jehoida, not Barachias as it is shown in 2 Chron. 24:20-22.

Matthew 26:56

56 But, all this was done, that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. Then all the disciples forsook him, and fled.

This event, the forsaking of Yeshua at his crucifixion, is not in the Jewish Old Testament at all.

Mark 1:2

2 As it is written in the prophets {in Isaiah, the prophet -- RSV}, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

No such statement exists in Isaiah or the Old Testament.

Mark 9:13

13 But I say unto you, That Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.

There are no predictions in the Old Testament of things that were to happen to Elias.

Luke 24:46

46 And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day:

Nothing is written in the Old Testament about Yeshua as the Christ rising from the dead, especially on the 3rd day.

John 1:45

45 Philip findeth Nathaniel, and saith unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Yeshua of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

This will be hard for you to deal with but I have come to the conclusion that none of the Old Testament prophets nor Moses wrote about Yeshua "personally" but only about the Messiah. We as Christians have been conditioned over the years, due to hearing poor teaching by our leadership, to read into the text prior beliefs espoused by this or that denomination about Yeshua. We can read anything into the text if we violate the laws of interpretation. That is what I am trying to say and warn the Christian community. You can say "this" or "that" refers to Yeshua, but for the document called the Old Testament to hold credibility is has to stand up to the same criteria of interpretation that the New Testament is held to. That means before your apply a text to Yeshua as a "fulfillment" there has to be a prior "peshat" interpretation. There are four levels of Biblical interpretation for Jewish literature. First we have the "peshat" or the literal and plain ordinary meaning. If Yeshua did not in his life accomplish the same exact event, then any reference to fulfilling a previous prophecy is ludicrous. We must not take out of the original context of the writer events and try to apply them to Yeshua. If God is behind it He does not need our help to "fudge" to make it fit. Before you have any allegorical or methaphorical interpretation we must again have the literal and real event (peshat). If said event is missing literally from Yeshua's life or can be proven less than authentic, then all the allegorical allusion is worthless. Next if there is to be any mystical interpretation to the events in Yeshua's life as fulfillment of Scripture then again the literal-plain ordinary event must be demonstrable without twisting the facts to make it fit our pre-formed theologies about Yeshua. I know this is hard, but necessary if you want the truth. Again this is startling for most but if you have read these articles up to now just remember how we have exposed error after error taught as truth. I guess I should understand that of utmost importance for most is if Yeshua is Messiah. Time will tell. When Messiah comes and fulfills the prophecies of the Prophets and Moses we can ask him his name and if he has been here before. Due to the overwhelming forgeries within the New Testament and the lack of actual "peshat" fulfillment of the prophecies of Moses and the Prophets we must await the coming of Messiah to 100% be certain of his identity.

John 7:38

38 He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

Again this passage is not to be found anywhere in the Old Testament. It is not in Isa. 44:3, Isa 55:1, Ezek. 47:1, and Isa 58:11.

John 20:9

9 For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

There is no Old Testament statement that Yeshua must rise from the dead, or that Yeshua must rise again.

Acts 20:35

35 I have shewed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Yeshua, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.

To the best of recorded knowledge at present, Yeshua did not say "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Hebrews 11:35

35 Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection:

Nowhere in the Old Testament does it say that people suffered torture because they expected to rise again to a better life.

James 4:5

5 Do ye think that the scripture saith in vain, The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth to envy?

No such statement is recorded in the Old Testament; not Gen. 6:5, 11; 8:21; Prov 21:10 and Eccles 4:4)

In Jewish custom there is what they call a 'durash' where you deliberately misquote, or make up something in scripture in order to prove a point. But of course you can immediately see how problematic such an explanation would be.

A durash is a quotation from the Old Testament which is quoted out of context, misquoted, or doesn't exist. It is still used sometimes by orthodox Jews for teaching along with a parable. It is usually introduced by the phrase "Thus it was fulfilled that which was spoken by ... As it is written in the scriptures ... As the scriptures say ... etc.".

Matthew 27:8

Wherefore that field was called, The field of blood, unto this day. 9 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Israel did value; 10 And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.

(Jeremiah is misquoted)

Matthew 3:3

For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

This is a blatant misquote of Isa 40:3.

I COULD GO ON BUT YOU GET THE POINT

The bottom line dear child of God...we have trusted in a document for our salvation and eternal life which is repudiates and is an adulteration of the only true revelation which truly reveals the way...the Bible Yeshua used...the Holy Tanakh. May all those who truly love the LORD and His Word....buy one and read it and study it. It is a sad reality to know that as a Christian that when you die you have never read the true Word of God because of all the additions and deletions made with theological purpose to both the Christian's Old and New Testaments.

We have provided for your study a whole website dealing with the textual forgeries, alterations, purposeful misquotations, misapplications, and pure inventions of the Hebrew Scriptures as used in the New Testament. This is not an easy study for the Christian when he is forced to see the facts of the matter at they are not pretty. I can remember the years of tears and frustration at finding example after example of how the Bible Jesus used was altered for Gentile theological agendas due to their inherent sun worship. The facts await your study:

IS THE NEW TESTAMENT RESPONSIBLE FOR THE THE HOLOCAUST...AND WHY?

Within two decades of the death of Yeshua his followers had begun to attack the Jewish beliefs of their mentor. This phenomenon, by itself, would be worthy of historical inquiry, to determine how the early Christians came to regard the religion of their spiritual founder with such hostility. But the fact of Jew-hating in Christianity is of more than mere psychological or historical interest, for it formed the backdrop to centuries of persecution of Jews and ultimately led to the extermination of over 6 million of them in the Holocaust. One of the purposes of Bet Emet Ministry is to help others look at how the Christian faith formed perceptions of' Jews among its adherents and how the attitude of the Church towards them has led to two millennia of strife and agony.

In the wake of the Holocaust Christians and Jews began to search seriously for the factors and causes leading to it. It became apparent to all investigators that the Holocaust could only have occurred in an environment of enormous hatred of Jews and an equal indifference to their suffering by non- participants. For the world allowed this calamity to continue for six years without intervening, as two-thirds of European Jewry was annihilated. While the anti-Semitism of the Holocaust was greater in scope than any previous mass attacks on Jews, it was not different in motive from the Crusades, the Inquisition, or the Eastern European pogroms. Every operation had, as its cause, the hatred of Jews and as its purpose their murder and plunder. In addition to the genocidal scope of the Holocaust, it had one other significant difference from previous catastrophes. There was no physical escape for its victims through conversion as in the preceding anti-Semitic movements. This was anti-Semitism based on racist theory from which there was no escape.

WHAT IS RESPONSIBLE FOR SUCH A CLIMATE OF HATRED TOWARD THE JEWS?

One of the reasons Bet Emet Ministries is devoted to critical study of the New Testament is because it, along with the Gentile Christian Church which created it, is primarily responsible for the deaths of these 6 million Jews plus untoward others through church history. These repeated assaults on Jews are tied to a perception of them as an evil and vicious enemy. As Reverend Robert Everett has pointed out, masses of people have been conditioned to so identify Jews in the course of centuries of Church-inspired vilification of Judaism and its believers. The Church was a seed-bed of anti-Jewish thought for the general populaces In his book, Elder and Younger Brothers, A. Roy Eckardt, minister and professor of religion, asserted that the foundation of anti-Semitism, and the responsibility for the Holocaust lie ultimately in the New Testament. Eckardt further insisted in his book, Your People, My People, that Christian repentance must include a reexamination of basic theological attitudes to Jewry and the New Testament in order to deal effectively with the problem and its prevention. The Catholic theologian and scholar, Father Gregory Baum, wrote, "The Church made the Jewish people a symbol of unredeemed humanity; it painted a picture of Jews as a blind, stubborn, carnal and perverse people, an image that was fundamental in Hitler's choice of the Jews as the scapegoat" (Gregory Baum, Introduction to Faith and Fratricide, p. 7, by Rosemary Radford Ruether). In an editorial Franklin H. Litton wrote, "Without centuries of anti-Semitic Christian preaching, Hitler could never have mobilized passionate Jew-hates and immobilized dispassionate spectators. The image which the Church created could arouse instant contempt and hate of Jews (Franklin H. Littell, "Teaching the Holocaust and Its Lesson" (Editorial), Journal of Ecumenical Studies (21), p. 468, cited in A. Roy Eckardt, Jews and Christians, p. 67). This is what Jules Isaac called "the teaching of contempt" (Jules Isaac, The Teaching of Contempt, p. 34. Translated by Helen Weaver, shorter version of Jesus and Israel).

Jewish refusal to recognize Yeshua as the promised messiah (since misery still prevailed in the world and world peace and resurrection of all the dead did not occur during or after the ministry of Yeshua nor were the true Messianic prophecies of the Jewish Bible fulfilled) produced vehement Christian anger and the ardent desire to negate and abolish Judaism. (Gregory Baum, op. Cit., p. 20).

A fundamental reason for this hostility is Gentile Christianity's dependence on Judaism to validate its beliefs and establish its credibility. We basically resent those we depend on and need. Gentile Christianity needed Israel's antiquity and appropriated the latter's lineage to itself. Gentile Christianity based its canon on Hebrew Scriptures and its religion on the God of Israel. The new faith proceeded to adapt those Scriptures and concept of God to its own purposes. The Church claimed to be the natural heir of Judaism and denied any discontinuity with the parent. Christians became the New Israel. The New Covenant replaced the Old. When Jews answered that the Law given by God could not be repealed, annulled, or replaced, they denied Christianity the proof and authority it needed from Judaism. This denial aroused frustration which translated into antagonism and hostility.

For these and other reasons, Bet Emet Ministries studies in-depth the foundation and very essence of Christianity, the New Testament, and the social-historical elements which influenced its contents. We focus on the overall misinterpretations and misunderstandings in the Christian Scriptures (the Greek Scriptures). There are entire learned works dealing specifically with certain aspects or problems of the New Testament such as pre-Christian philosophies influencing the new religion, the beliefs and impact of the Pharisees during the time of Yeshua, the Sanhedrin's relationship to Yeshua's trial, historical events during and after Yeshua's life, Paul's role in the development of Christianity, and his attitude to the Torah. The articles in this series will be attempts to present in summary fashion pertinent subjects in summary rather than in detail, and footnoted with appropriate documentation.

Too often those who read our articles believe our stance and our position on matters to be just "our opinion." I assure you that when you read our articles you encounter a research paper and not a flippant off the cuff idea espoused by someone who has not done the necessary inquiry to arrive at the facts which determine truth.

In order to understand the tragic history and contemporary problems confronting today's Christian to which the vast majority are unaware, I will attempt in these articles to at first include a brief review of highlights in Jewish history prior to the advent of Christianity. It is hoped that an overall survey of conditions at the time of Yeshua's birth, along with a description of important movements at the dawn of Christianity as a new religion, will provide an adequate foundation to aid us later in further investigation.

SO HOW DID CHRISTIANITY GET SO FAR OFF TRACK?

Basically the New Testament is not a continuation of the Jewish Scriptures regardless of what you may have heard. Most are not aware of this because of their lack of knowledge of the Jewish Scriptures (Old Testament). We are told repeatedly that the New Testament is the Old Testament "fulfilled." Is it really? We accept this stance from our spiritual leaders without question.

You need to understand at the beginning that the authors of the Gospels and the Epistles quoted freely from Hebrew Scriptures, for that was their Bible too and the only one in existence. They used certain techniques, the purpose and effect of which were to discredit the Torah and its followers and to show the superiority of their doctrines over Jewish beliefs. This is not our opinion, but a factual conclusion when all the evidence is presented and evaluated with an open mind. I am sorry to say you cannot read just 4 pages or 9 pages and get it all. But I make a promise to you....if you will be diligent to read these articles in series....and study them...and think about what will be presented....even a blind man could see what I am saying once you have an adequate understanding of the dynamics and deceptions involved in the creation of the anti-Semitic New Testament which is responsible for the shedding of blood of over 6 million Jews.

HOW DID THE ROME AND THE WRITERS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT ACCOMPLISH THE GENOCIDE OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE?

Before we continue let me ask you to be truthful with yourself when answering these next questions for the answer you give will determine if you are capable of learning truth when your now-existing values are challenged.

Answer for yourself: Do you consider yourself an authority on the Jewish Scriptures (the Old Testament)?

Answer for yourself: Do you read and speak Greek and Hebrew and feel confident about your abilities to translate Greek and Hebrew into the English?

Answer for yourself: If you do not read or speak Greek or Hebrew, are you well equipped to use Greek or Hebrew study aids in your study of the Bible?

Answer for yourself: When reading the New Testament, are you aware when reading a text that what you are reading is a quote from the Hebrew Scriptures (Old Testament)?

Answer for yourself: When reading the New Testament when it quotes from the Old Testament, are you confident that the New Testament quote has been quoted accurately?

Answer for yourself: Are you so well versed with the Old Testament that you could spot an Old Testament passage misquoted in the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Are you so well versed with the Old Testament that you could recognize a New Testament passage as a combination of parts of two different passages in the Old Testament which have not only two different contexts but originally two different intended meanings?

Humbly speaking, this is the advantage that other ministries, as well as Bet Emet, bring to help you, the student, come to a more truthful understanding of your faith as God originally intended it. It takes years to develop these above talents, but without them you are literally led astray by the New Testament which was literally created by the Gentile church to serve as their authority to create a new religion that they hoped would replace Biblical Judaism. They have almost succeeded.

If you take what I am saying seriously, then you will come to understand upon reading our articles that a frequently used technique by the writers in the New Testament was to detach verses from their original context in the Hebrew Bible and to attribute an entirely different meaning to them in the New Testament that the original writer never intended.

Answer for yourself: What should be your reaction when you finally begin to see this for yourself?

Another practice was to mistranslate or misquote verses from the Hebrew in order to give them a different meaning which suited the writer and his theology which was different than the original writer's. One of the reasons for this was the use by New Testament writers of the Septuagint, a Greek translation of the Hebrew Bible which had numerous inaccuracies. In fact, other than the first 5 books of the Jewish Scripture (The Torah), no Jew was involved in the translation of the Hebrew into the Greek. Such translation, or should I say "purposeful mistranslation" was entirely a Gentile accomplishment! Thus the garbled verses lost all sense of their original meaning. They were then used to prove or substantiate the thesis of the Gospel or Epistle author in spite of the original intended meaning that was conveyed by the Prophet or Moses.

Answer for yourself: What should be your reaction when you finally begin to see this for yourself?

Sometimes distinct and unrelated passages in the Hebrew Bible were combined to make a continuous sentence which then naturally conveyed a different meaning from that of each of its parts within the original context.

Biblical scholars might protest here that Jews detached verses from their context also in the Midrash and Haggadic sections of the Talmud. However, neither of these bodies of literature are authoritative for Jews. Only the Tanakh (the Hebrew Bible comprising the Law, Prophets, and the Writings) and the Halakhic (or legal) part of the Talmud are authoritative in Judaism. The Gospels and Epistles, of course, cannot say that because they are definitely authoritative for Christianity and are part of the Christian canon. Furthermore, Jewish authorities did not allow the indiscriminate detachment of verses from their context even for homiletic and sermonic purposes. The exegesis had to agree with the Oral Tradition. This put a control and limit on taking verses out of context and misinterpreting them. Gentile Christianity has no such limitations imposed upon their sermonic preaching which easily can be seen today by just a casual listening to tele-evangelists.

Answer for yourself: What should be your reaction when you finally begin to see this for yourself?

Related to this use of quotations from the Tanakh was the employment of Old Testament symbols to fit the doctrines of the New Testament authors which were foreign to the doctrines first connected to the symbols originally.

Besides altering words and meanings, the evangelists, authors of the Gospels, and the apostles, writers of the Epistles or letters, also used Hebrew Biblical symbols in such a way as to contradict and undermine the original Jewish significance. Examples of Hebrew symbols which underwent considerable change in Christian literature were the "suffering servant" and the messiah which ended up in Christian literature with very un-Jewish meanings attached to them which the original writers never intended them to have.

Often passages in the Gospels and Acts were severed from their context and/or mistranslated or misquoted on purpose to serve the religious interests of the Gentile writers and redactors of the New Testament.

Aside from misconstruing verses from the Hebrew Bible, the New Testament authors made direct, hostile charges against Jews and disparaging statements against them. Although the Gospels tell about events which occurred prior to those reflected in the Epistles, most of the latter were written before all the Gospels and Acts were composed. The seven basic Epistles of Paul (I Thessalonians, 1 Corinthians, 2 Corinthians, Philippians, Galatians, Romans, and Philemon) were completed more than a decade before the first Gospel was written. It seems logical, therefore, to discuss those anti-Jewish passages and accusations in the letters of Paul and his contemporaries before examining comparable verses in the Gospels. Furthermore, at least one Gospel writer, Luke, was influenced by Paul and his ideas.

As we progress in this series of articles I will examine and expose those aspects of the Pauline Epistles and other letters which are an expression of the rivalry between the established religion of Judaism and the emerging faith of Gentile Christianity. The letters written by Paul and his allies and adversaries must be viewed in the light of this competition between the two religions and in terms of Paul's cultural roots and religious background. It is easier to understand Paul's statements repudiating the Torah when we appreciate "where Paul is coming from" and where he wanted to go.

Lastly we will deal with those anti-Jewish passages in the Gospels and Acts which reflect not only the animosity of the Gospel writers but the historical events and powerful political movements that influenced them. An example of this type of anti-Jewish accusations is the spurious charge that the Jews crucified Yeshua or were responsible for his death.

Much of the historical material presented in this series of articles comes from contemporaneous writings of Roman and Jewish historians such as Josephus, the writings of the Nazarenes and the early Christians, and Rabbinical tractates in the Mishna and Talmud. The Mishna is actually part of the Talmud. The Mishna is a commentary and codification of Jewish law. It was redacted around 200 C.E. Some material dates from the first century B.C.E. The Mishna and Gemara comprise the Talmud. The Gemara consists of commentary, discussion, interpretation, and elaboration of the Mishna. There are two Talmuds: Babylonian and Jerusalem; each contains a different Gemara. Both Talmuds were developed in great academies of Jewish learning over a period of centuries. The Jerusalem Talmud was completed around the year 400 C.E. while the Babylonian Talmud was completed by about 500 C.E.

Inasmuch as the New Testament covers a wide variety of topics, I have chosen to shorten my articles somewhat by discussing such topics individually and concisely. Hopefully this makes for greater ease in understanding the material involved. Overall those who read our articles voice disagreements because they lack the necessary foundations to make intelligent decisions about much of what they speak. This is understandable since most Christians are acquainted mainly with the New Testament and have such a limited knowledge and understanding of the Jewish Scriptures (Old Testament). I suppose that this should be expected. Still, it makes my job harder and I hope breaking these articles down to "bite-size" tid-bits will help more read and understand the information at hand which is necessary for comprehending the events discussed correctly.

My goal is to present enough information to restore an accurate interpretation of the Christian Scriptures as well as reveal which parts of them, as we have had them passed down to us, are nothing but fraudulent additions of an anti-Semitic Roman establishment intended to replace the religion of Yeshua with a religion about him.

In the articles which follow, after laying a foundation necessary to proceed, we then will compare New Testament text with Old Testament text, line upon line, precept upon precept and see if the New Testament writers did injustice to the Jewish Scriptures. You will be amazed like I was. No longer will you be able to read the New Testament and accept what it says without question. After reading the following articles, you will be able to recognize for yourself the corruption and creationism of the New Testament which does great harm to the true Jewish Scriptures. Just for your benefit let me summarize what we will see when we begin to compare text with text. We will find that the New Testament writers used certain literary techniques, the purpose and effect of which were to discredit the Torah and its followers and to show the superiority of their doctrines over Jewish beliefs. Those will include the following:

- They New Testament writers detached verses from their original context in the Hebrew Bible and attributed an entirely different meaning to them in the New Testament that the original writer never intended.
- The New Testament writers mistranslated verses from the Hebrew of the Jewish Scriptures in order to give them a different meaning which suited the writer and his theology which was different than the original writer's.
- The New Testament writers misquoted passages from the Jewish Scriptures in order to give them a different meaning which suited the writer and his theology which was different than the original writer's.
- The New Testament writers often combined distinct and unrelated passages in the Hebrew Bible to make a continuous sentence which then naturally conveyed a different meaning from that of each of its parts within the original context.
- The New Testament writers employed Old Testament symbols to fit the doctrines of the New Testament authors which were foreign to the doctrines first connected to the symbols originally.
- The New Testament writers used Hebrew Biblical symbols in such a way as to contradict and undermine the original Jewish significance.

- The New Testament writers often severed from their original meanings Jewish Scriptures from their original context and/or mistranslated or misquoted on purpose to serve the religious interests of the Gentile writers and redactors of the New Testament.
- Aside from misconstruing verses from the Hebrew Bible, the New Testament authors made direct, hostile charges against Jews and disparaging statements against them.

Answer for yourself: What kind of authority should such a document carry in your religious belief system when you finally see these things in forthcoming articles for yourself?

Answer for yourself: Do you realize that if you were in high-school English class, and you were called on to write a research paper, that if you misquoted your sources, combined quotes from your sources into a single quote and tried to pass it off as if was an original quote as did the authors of the New Testament, yet saying nothing about purposeful mistranslations, then your teacher would have given you a "F" on that paper?

But wait a minute; maybe not. It is possible she was not familiar with your sources and would not have ever noticed. She might have read your paper trusting you for the work you represented. She might have trusted your commitment to truth. She might have trusted the integrity she felt you had. Such is the case with Christianity for the most part and the non-Jews' unfamiliarity with the Jewish Scriptures.

All along you, who wrote the paper, would feel "safe," for after all, what are the chances she would look up your references and check you out?

Well, I and many others have checked the original sources and we have found that an "F" is a generous grade for the New Testament considering what we discovered. I cannot take all the credit for coming to these truths, because I was helped along the way by many men and women who prepared the way for me through their diligent study of the documents. To them I give credit. And to you I make my research available. May you be blessed by it. Repentance in our religious belief systems is the order for the day!

Let us begin our quest with the next article in this series.

ANTISEMITISM AND ITS PREVALENCE IN CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY

At its roots, anti-Semitism in Christian civilization springs from Christian theological anti-Judaism, the German professor told the audience. From the cruel taunts of children, to pogroms, the crusades, the Spanish Inquisition and the Holocaust, the Gospel accounts of Yeshua's arrest, trial, abuse, and crucifixion - still read in churches today - have served as a fountainhead of anti-Semitism.

- Basically anti-Semitism arose in the early Gentile Christian church as a reaction against Judaism over the concept of the messiah as well as the Law/Torah.
- Anti-Judaism developed theologically in Christianity as the left hand of Christology, the branch of theology dealing with the person and the deeds of Jesus as the "literal" and " historical" son of God....anti-Judaism was the negative side of the Christian claim that this New Testament Jesus was the promised Jewish messiah/Christ.
- Christianity saw itself as the fulfillment of Judaic messianism, but since the Jewish tradition rejected this claim, Christianity developed a polemic against the Jewish tradition to explain how Christianity could be the fulfillment of a Jewish religious tradition that Jews themselves had rejected.

It was Christian theology which developed the thesis of the eternal reprobate, the damned status of the Jew in history, and laid the foundation for the demonic view of the Jews which fanned the flames of popular hatred. This hatred became incorporated into the structure of Christian canon law and civil law formed under Christendom.

It is important for Christianity to deal fully with its role in the history of anti-Semitism. Christian churches have to break with the theology of triumphalism and work towards a theology of hope. The primary source for such hatred is the New Testament as the vast majority of it's religious and theological doctrines are anti-Judaic and this is amazing since the center of the book revolves around a Jewish Rabbi (THINK)!

To a "thinking believer" this should alert you to a concerted effort by the later emerging Gentile Roman Christian Church to institute a "replacement religion" in place of the "faith once given the Saints", whose religious tenants and precepts can be traced back through earlier nations to the beginning of recorded time.

HOW DID WE GET SO FAR OFF TRACK YET WE HAD A BIBLE?

In the Jewish and Christian communities, our Bibles play very important roles. In both communities we hold and believe that the Bibles we have today are based on revelation from God and thereby are "inspired" from God. In both the Jewish and Christian communities we find that they teach that their doctrines are based on "the" Bible. Let us investigate and see if the claim of infallibility and inspiration can truly be applied to the Bible we have today after we come to the facts of how the Bible has been handed down to us today.

This becomes somewhat more confusing as we recognize that there are two basic camps in the Christian community: Catholic and Protestant. It goes without saying that the Bibles of these two communities differ in the number of books that they contain. When we include the Jewish community in this equation we soon arrive at the grand total of "three" Bibles. This presents us with our first question: "Which Bible is 'the' Bible?" I am sure that if a Jew, a Catholic, and a Protestant was asked that question the expected response would be "MINE!"

The Bibles of the Jewish , Catholic, and Protestant communities contain certain books which fall into three basic categories:

- TANAKH-the Christian Old Testament.
- NEW TESTAMENT
- APOCRYPHA

Below I have given you a breakdown of the three basic Bibles:

- Jewish Bible-Tanakh
- Catholic Bible-Tanakh, New Testament, Apocrypha
- Protestant Bible-Tanakh, New Testament

Notice, that all three faiths (Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant) are all in agreement that the Tanakh (Christian Old Testament) is an inspired document, but that is where the agreement stops. Notice also that the Catholic and Protestant communities are in agreement that the New Testament is "inspired", but not the Jewish community. But only the Catholic community considers the Apocrypha in the same category as the Tanakh and the New Testament.

WHAT YOU SHOULD ASK YOURSELF?

- When did each of these Bibles comes into existence?
- Who decided which books would be included or excluded from each Bible?
- Why Were certain books added?
- Why were certain books excluded yet included in other Bibles?

Since each Bible is directly linked to a community, our first question must begin with the origin of each of the communities in question.

Answer for yourself: When did each of these communities originate?

The Jewish community originated with Abraham who lived in the time period of approximately 1700 B.C.E. (B.C.). The Catholic community began around 400 C.E. (A.D.). The Protestant community originated with Martin Luther who was born November 10, 1483 and died February 18, 1546 C.E. Let us also understand that the origin of the community is not synonymous with the origin of their Bible (canon).

The development of the canon proved to be a revolutionary step in the history of religion. This concept is distinctive and characteristically Jewish. Regardless of what you have seen in the way of bumper stickers of late, the Jew's "canon" caused other nations to call the people of Israel "the People of the Book." The Jewish concept of "canonization" was to be largely adopted by Christianity and later Islam.

Canon is the Greek word that originally meant "a straight rod." Later it was used to mean a "carpenter's measuring rod." Finally it became a figurative term for "a standard by which other things could be measured." As applied to Biblical canonization, it designated "the closed nature of a body of sacred literature which had been accepted as 'authoritative'." This is because it has come to be understood in our day that a "canon" is "divinely revealed" to the community, regardless of whether it was or it wasn't!

HOW DID WE DEVELOP A NEW TESTAMENT CANON?

Although the process of assigning authority to a select group of books and thus creating a "canon" originated with the Jewish nation, the word "canon" and the word "bible" originated within the Greek language. Most reputable scholars agree that there was no canon of the Hebrew Scriptures (Tanakh) until the end of the 1st century C.E. (A.D.). Prior to that time there were a number of pieces of Hebrew literature with varying degrees of authority. The authority of this material, as well as the material itself, depended on the particular sect or community within Judaism.

Tribal traditions, collections of community laws, cultic and ritual laws, songs and hymns, oracles from priestly circles, utterances of the prophets, sayings attributed to wise sages, and chronicles of court events were gathered together and preserved. Not all of the materials recorded were related to the religious practices of the community, although much of it did concern their religious life. As national life stabilized and the "RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM" of the community developed, literary material of this kind was used in the religious rituals and woven into historical narratives telling the story of the community of Yahweh's people. Gradually, and most unconsciously," there emerged out of this body of literature certain writings which the community recognized as speaking with unique authority for their religious life. As such it was given a special designation and treated with a reverence not accorded to other writings in use among them.

In Israel the community came to recognize these words as God speaking to them. Once the words became an approved collection, this "collection" developed into the basic authority for Israel's "RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM." The books that make up the Bible did not comprise the whole literary production of ancient Israel. The Scriptures make mention of the existence of an extensive literature which is now lost! Let us examine:

1. Numbers 21:14-The War of the Lords
2. Joshua 10:13 & II Samuel 1:18-Jashar
3. I Chron. 9:1 & 2 Chron 16:11; 20:34; 27:7; 32:32; 33:18-The Chronicles of the Kings of Israel and Judah.

In the process of determining which books would be included in the canon we have a record of the disputes between the rabbis as to the validity of certain writings. Customs and traditions were used as one of several guidelines for including or excluding questionable books. Other criteria included the content of the book and the position of the writer within Jewish history.

THE BIBLE YESHUA KNEW

The Bible as Yeshua knew it considered of some twelve to twenty scrolls of different sizes and did not include the New Testament which did not exist at that time. The writings we call the New Testament are grouped into the Gospels, Acts of the Apostles, Epistles, and the book of Revelation. One tradition indicates that about five years after the resurrection of Yeshua the true and real apostle Matthew wrote an original life story of Yeshua in the Hebrew language. The story was then copied into Greek and other languages. It appears that the writers of our modern Gospels used these copies and other information to write their Gospels.

Most of Paul's writings were in circulation prior to the writing of the four Gospels. Paul's letters began to exercise a powerful influence upon Christian life and though. Nevertheless, it was a long time before Paul's letters were publicly read in the church or considered EQUAL to the words of the Tanakh. Paul's letters were the first step in creating the New Testament canon! By the year 200 C.E. a great variety of canons were in use, some fairly well defined, others more informal. Each reflects "local beliefs and traditions."

LET'S LOOK AT THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT

Marcion, in 145 C.E., created a fixed canon which eliminated all of Yeshua's Bible (Tanakh) and most of the writings of the early Jewish believers with the exception of Paul and a part of Luke's Gospel. Several factions of Christianity (Messianic Judaism-the Yeshua Movement of the first century within Judaism) retained the Tanakh and most of today's New Testament canon but added as many as fourteen additional writings (called the Apocrypha). In northern Mesopotamia the early Messianic Community of Judaism (Christianity) included a Gospel of Thomas, since Thomas was the one who had brought the Gospel to that regions. Even after the canon officially closed in the late 4th century, new writings appeared that were considered "inspired" by those individual communities (notice there was no unity of opinion!). Early printed editions of Bibles in the Armenian church contained a book entitled, "Third Corinthians."

I am sure you can imagine the "erratic practices" that developed from one group to the next.

Answer for yourself: Where was to be the authority?

Answer for yourself: Had God already given it as the Jewish Scriptures and they overlooked it?

WHO IS RIGHT AND WHO IS WRONG?

Answer for yourself: Where was unity to be found with every community having their "own canon" and "authority" for their own beliefs actions, and often using "their canon" to correct other communities?

Such inconsistencies were perceived as a big danger by the leaders of the young Gentile Church. These inconsistencies between different communities prompted these leaders to define what was "sacred" or "inspired."

Answer for yourself: Who were these leaders and what were their credentials to decide what was "inspired" or "infallible" when they prayed to dead saints, baptized for the dead, prayer to Mary, and bought prayers for the dead to escape purgatory? Think for a minute about that.

Answer for yourself: How can we trust their other decisions knowing the terrible errors that they were immersed in? Finally, in the latter part of the 4th century the church's canon was closed. The last two books to be admitted were Hebrews and Revelation.

Once the canon was "closed" by the Gentile leaders of the Christian church (no longer a Jewish Messianic Movement within Judaism), the church was free to establish their doctrines and dogmas. Besides relying on the Scriptures, the Gentile leaders of the Christian community, particularly Irenaeus and Tertullian, did irreparable damage to "the faith" by relegating the Jewish Scriptures to "second place" in matters of doctrine and authority (the Gentile Church-the Roman Catholic Church was to be the primary authority). Tertullian developed a universal antidote for all heresy in his argument which cuts off heretics at the outset. He denied every right of appeal to the Holy Scriptures on the grounds that the Holy Scriptures were intrusted to the church of Christ, and only in her (Gentile Christian Church) and by her can they be rightly understood. This is totally blasphemous! For your information this violates Scripture for in Romans 9:3 the apostle Paul states: "Who are Israelites (notice he did not say Christians); to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the services of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen." Did you notice that Paul contradicts Tertullian by saying the Scriptures were given to Israel (and not the Roman Catholic Church) and from Israel would come the Scriptures teaching concerning covenants, law or commandments, services (worship), promises (again allusion to Scripture), and who has been established as the "authority" over all flesh by God....Israel!

REPLACEMENT THEOLOGY LIVES IN YOUR NEW TESTAMENT

Tertullian's "belief system" is an example of "replacement theology" which is so violently contrary to the Scripture of the Bible. The KJV version of the Bible says the exact opposite of what Tertullian and modern preachers preach today...God's authority was given in the Bible to Israel to teach and rightly interpret the Scriptures for the Gentiles! In this proclamation by Tertullian he establishes a "false" succession of Gentile authority and mistakenly gives it to the Gentile community in hopes to protect them from sects of heretics.

There is only one problem! The Jews were not the heretics, in fact, the Jews are the vehicle given to us, the Gentile church, by which we are to learn about the Jewish Scriptures (every book in the Jewish Bible was written by Jews and not one was written by a Gentile). Ironically, in supposedly protecting the Gentile church from error, he accomplished what he tried to prevent. We need only look to the over 2000 different Protestant denominations present today, with over 1500 different interpretations of the same Bible, and the lack of unity which abounds among them to discern that at least 1499 have not rightly divided the Word of Truth.

Answer for yourself: Why so much diversity and so little unity?

The reason; God gave the Jews as the interpreters of the Jewish Book called the Bible and not the Gentiles. For me to say that a Baptist's interpretation of the Bible is just as valid and correct as the Jew's interpretation of the Bible is no less ludicrous than saying that an Apache Indian is just as valid an interpreter of Eskimo tribal legends as the Eskimo himself. Think about that for a moment.

At the end of the 15th century when, through the actions of Martin Luther, the Protestant Reformation was born, this "choke-hold" of Roman Catholic authority had to be wrestled from Rome. The mechanism for achieving this was the Bible. Martin Luther simply removed the Catholic Church as the final authority and substituted his personal belief system and deleted the Apocrypha from the Catholic Bible. The effect of this was that he not only created a "new Bible," the Protestant Bible, but he provided a new standard for interpretation for the Bible.

Answer for yourself: First of all, don't you think it strange that a Catholic priest create a Protestant Bible?

The effect of Luther deleting sacred books from the Bible helped to give authority to the Gentile leaders of the newly emerging religious community and the people of God to interpret or misinterpret Scriptures for themselves as they pleased. Training and education in Scriptural analysis, both linguistical, historical, cultural, and political was not necessary according to Luther. The Holy Spirit will guide us into all truth. Really now! I know Christians that will tell me the same thing as Luther, that the Holy Spirit taught me...this...or that...yet they are 180 degrees opposite in their understanding on the same matter.

Answer for yourself: How can the Holy Spirit teach of the same doctrine yet arrive at diametrically opposite conclusions and not be schizophrenic?

HOW DID WE GET SO FAR FROM THE TRUTH?

History teaches us that five factors fueled the growth of the Protestant movement and paved the way for countless numbers of denominations, non-denominations, inter-denominations and cults in the 20th century:

- a broad-based public acceptance of an anti-Catholic movement
- a new belief system whose aim was to protest against the established system
- the translation of the Bible into the modern language of the people
- invention of the printing press giving the masses access to the Bible
- the acceptance of untrained leaders as authorities and authoritative interpreters of the Bible (remember the Apaches and the Eskimos?)

Answer for yourself: What has history recorded for us concerning the last four hundred and fifty years since Martin Luther began his protest?

Even before his death Luther was confronted by those who were protesting "his" belief system and within a few years the cycle was repeated over and over again.

HOW CAN WE NOT REPEAT THE SAME MISTAKES OF HISTORY?

Today, society, both ethical and religious, is overcome by sectarianism.

Answer for yourself: Is there a cure for this malady?

For those willing to pay the price the answer is "yes."

We must be willing to go back behind Protestantism, Catholicism, and Rabbinic Judaism, back to the time period in which the concept of canon began to first take hold. Be must begin with the "faith once given to the saints." Such a faith is the faith of Yeshua...Second Temple Judaism.

We must begin with our first feeble steps trying to understand what was common to all canons....the Hebrew Tanakh (see beginning of this paper). To do this we must examine the culture of the people who gave us the Tanakh. Since the majority of the words from the New Testament originate in the Tanakh, and since these New Testament writers were faithful members of the early Jewish community, we will also need to examine their words as understood from their own culture, within their own time period, and according to the original language they were spoken from...the Jewish language.

If our understanding of the Bible is different from the understanding we would have had in the first century...they we have the wrong understanding today. If the words of our Bible are interpreted in English, and they have different meanings when examined from the Jewish viewpoint, then we have the wrong meanings attached to these words today, regardless of what Webster says. Once we have this information we will be able to examine Judaic, Catholic, and Protestant belief systems and their interpretations of these Scriptures. With the wrong interpretation, with the wrong meanings attached to English words, and with little study on our parts to discern the truth in order to obey the Scriptures, can God be pleased with our mistaken disobedience?

Let us now turn to a intense study of the Canon of the New Testament and it's cumulative formation in 380 C.E.

NEW TESTAMENT TRANSMISSION...CAN WE BE ASSURED OF THE TRUTH?

Answer for yourself: After 2,000 years of transmission and translation, does the New Testament accurately convey the meaning of the original authors and the truth as known and accepted by the Jerusalem Council as found in Acts 15 and 16?

We have about 5,000 Greek manuscripts that contain at least a "portion" of the New Testament, but in many places, they do not agree exactly on wording. And most of the earliest copies are 100 to 200 years later than the "supposed" originals.

Answer for yourself: From a historical perspective, how accurately does the modern Bible reflect the content of the original manuscripts? How can we know? Is there a way? What can we do to come to the truth about this matter?

For most of its long history, the Bible was copied by hand. You may be wondering how easy was it for a mistake to enter into this process? Whenever something is copied by hand, frailties of human eyesight enter in, particularly if that document is old and some ink has faded. Copying is also long, tedious work. It would take a scribe several months to copy just one Gospel. In some secular Greek manuscripts, scribes left a note at the end that indicates the patient labor involved: "As the traveler rejoices to see the home country, so the scribe rejoices to see the end of a manuscript!"

The invention of eyeglasses around 1375 certainly helped reduce the number of mistakes. And the invention of printing with movable type in 1456 assured production of duplicate copies. But prior to that, for over a thousand years, everything was done by hand, and the more times an ancient text was copied, the more chance for errors to creep in.

That brings us to another question.

Answer for yourself: How reliable are the Greek and Hebrew manuscripts we have today? The earlier copies are generally closer to the wording of the originals. The translators of the 1611 King James Bible, for instance, used Greek and Hebrew manuscripts from the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. But the number of changes since the first century is anyone's guess. It has been estimated to be over one hundred thousand at the least!

Today Bible translators have access to Greek manuscripts from the third and fourth centuries and Hebrew manuscripts from the era of the first century and even earlier. In other words, today we have access to "better" manuscripts than that were used by the editors of the King James Bible in 1611. Let that sink in a minute!

We even have the Rylands Papyrus, just a torn page with a few verses from John 18, that we can date between C.E. 100 and 150. So today we have access to a text of the Old and New Testaments that is more basic, more fundamental, less open to charges of scribal error or change.

Since manuscripts rarely have dates on them, we must judge the date by the handwriting. Handwriting styles differ with the times. So we compare the handwriting of a manuscript with that of deeds and bills of sale and other documents that do include dates which archeologist have provided for us through their excavations. In addition, sometimes a scribal note in the margin or on the dedication page gives away the period in which the manuscript was copied.

Most of the earliest surviving New Testament manuscripts are 100 to 200 years later than the originals. By contrast, our copies of other ancient writings, like those of Virgil or Homer, are often many hundreds of years later than their originals. In some of those writings, we have only one copy! The New Testament, on the other hand, has many copies.

Of more importance is that of all the manuscripts discovered, some passages have been affected by scribal changes. For example, take Mark 9:29. Jesus is explaining how he was able to cast out a demon, and in the earliest manuscripts, he is quoted as saying, "This kind can come out only by prayer." In the Greek manuscripts the KJV translators used added two words that were never in the Greek manuscript. They added "and fasting" which are later tacked on. I wish I could say this is the extent of such deception but it is not. Thus the need for our websites in hopes of waring and teaching others about the problems surrounding their "inspired" texts which they trust for their faith and practice.

By studying manuscript history, we see that the words "and fasting" were inserted between 300 C.E. and 600 C.E. These were the years of the "desert" Catholic fathers and the birth of monasticism (Monks). The number of official fast days was increasing, and the regimens of fasting were becoming more strict. Probably a devout scribe, himself part of a fasting tradition, believed that Jesus must have meant to include "and fasting," so he included the two words.

Some Bibles list three endings for the Gospel of Mark. The earliest Greek, Syriac, Coptic, Armenian, and Latin manuscripts end the Gospel of Mark at 16:8: "The women said nothing to anyone, for they were afraid." That does not sound like an appropriate ending for a book of good news, so some early scribes, undertaking their own research, added what they thought would be appropriate endings. In other words much of our New Testament are "additions of current theology" held centuries after the fact. This is not "God's Word" to man; it is "religion's word to man". A few later manuscripts add just two or three verses to this abrupt ending, but most contain a longer ending, what we now number as verses 9 to 20. We can tell by examining the vocabulary that these endings were not written by a supposed Apostle named Mark. So translators often put them in brackets or as a long footnote.

Answer for yourself: Why not just keep them out of the Bible? Yet many translators consider verses 9 through 20 to be a legitimate part of the New Testament.

In the third and fourth centuries, when Gentile Catholic church fathers were deciding which books should be included in the New Testament, these verses were already in the copies of Mark that most of them were using. In other words, some in the early church considered verses 9 through 20 to be a credible account of the Resurrection. Though these verses were not written by Mark, many believe we have here a fifth evangelical witness to the resurrection of Jesus. I'll let you judge that for yourself.

The tragic result of these additions by monks is that well-meaning, God-fearing believers have believed many passages which have been added to their Bibles that should have never been there. If you will read these passages for yourself, you will see how multitudes have died, and many still die as they drink deadly poisons and handle rattlesnakes to demonstrate their faith for God.

By the year 600, the Gospels had been translated into only eight languages. By the time of the Reformation, there were Bibles or portions of it translated into only 33 languages--out of a total of about 6,000 languages! It is discouraging to see how slow the church was in providing translations of the Holy Scriptures.

Not until the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, with the expansion of the Protestant missionary movement, has the Bible been translated into more dialects. According to the American Bible Society, at the end of 1993, the entire Bible has been translated into 329 languages, and at least one book of it has been translated into 2,009 languages. That means, of course, that a good many languages still lack even one book of the Bible.

On the other hand, since 85 percent of the world speaks one of these 2,009 languages, the vast majority of people have access to at least one book. The Wycliffe Bible Translators and others have done wonderful work in reducing many languages to written form and then translating the Bible into them. In terms of the English Bible, it seems that the last few decades have been extraordinary years of translation. Between 1952, when the Revised Standard Version came out, and 1990, when the New RSV came out, there were 27 complete translations of the Bible in English published, plus another 25 New Testament translations--all within 38 years. That is unprecedented in the history of translation.

Part of this flurry of translation activity is related to manuscript discoveries; when we discover still more ancient biblical manuscripts or ancient secular manuscripts that shed light on ancient languages, people naturally want that information reflected in their Bibles. Sadly, when presented with facts that challenge a false-faith, too few repent of the errors of their beliefs and fail to accept the higher truths.

With this heightened translation in the last century, many different religious groups--Roman Catholics, moderate and conservative Protestants, and Jews--have each wanted their own translations. This is partly due to the economic factor: the Bible is a best-seller, so many publishing companies have been inclined to sponsor and publish new versions.

Answer for yourself: With so many Bible translations available, are English-speaking people more biblically literate than in the past? I am not sure. In the first 1,500 years of the church's history, literacy was not low, and there were not many copies of the Scriptures available to read by those who could. Of the 5,000 Greek manuscripts of the New Testament now available, only 59 have all 27 books. That means that few congregations, and far fewer individuals, had access to all of the New Testament, let alone the whole Bible.

Today we live in a culture of relatively high literacy, but we also have many, many newspapers, magazines, and books to read. In addition, radio, television, and the movies are a major distraction from reading. In some ways, then, people who can read probably are not as familiar with the Bible as those who could read in previous eras. Let this fact settle in for a moment!

THIS SHOULD BLOW YOU AWAY

Now before I part a most alarming fact that never ceases to alarm and stagger the typical Christian once he come to an understanding of what is actually being said. The following is quoted from "Text, NT," from the Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, 2nd edition, (Abingdon, 1962), p. 595-598:

"A study of 150 Greek MSS (manuscripts) of the Gospel of Luke has revealed more than 30,000 different readings...It is safe to say that there is not one sentence in the NT in which the MS (manuscript) tradition is wholly uniform...But there are many thousands which have a definite effect upon the meaning of the text...It is equally true that many of them do have theological significance and were introduced into the text intentionally...Many thousands of variants which are found in the MSS of the NT were put there deliberately. They are not merely the result of error or of careless handling of the text. Many were created for theological or dogmatic reasons. It is because the books of the NT are religious books, sacred books, canonical books, that they were changed to conform to what the copyist believed to be the true reading. His interest was not in the "original reading" but in the "true reading"- as perceived by the Roman goyim (Gentiles), Christian redactors, or course".

After reading this maybe you may be more serious about your study of the documents you rely upon for your faith and practice, especially in light of the fact that, more than likely, as a Christian you have inherited a falsified religious text that has not only terribly misrepresented Biblical Judaism and its "messiah" but the ancinet Spiritual Wisdom of the ancinets as well. If you believe that you are "grafted" into Israel and are a partaker of the root and fatness of the Olive Tree of Israel and desire not to be part of Constantine's replacement religion bent upon the conversion of every Jew to such a pernicious replacement relgion, then there is hope for you today to obtain the truth about your Christian birth faith. Only God knows the complete story of the additions and deletions contained in the New Testament and sadly 2.5 billion "believers" follow such a document unquestioningly. This is tragic and has serious implications for our Soul and its evolution that will only become evident after we pass from this Earth.

WERE THE CHURCH FATHERS COMPETENT TO DECIDE WHICH BOOKS & THE THEOLOGY THAT MAKES UP OUR NEW TESTAMENT?

What a silly question. You would think that the answer would be a resounding "Yes" to the above question; that is until you look and gather some knowledge concerning the truth about our esteemed "Church Fathers". There are some things that you, the Christian believer, need to know that might make you want to know what was "believed" about "the Christ" before we got Rome's "Second Edition" of what we call today the New Testament.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever stopped and considered the competency of the early Church Fathers to have been responsible for the selection of the books of the New Testament; especially in light of the fact we trust them totally today to have selected and preserved for us what we believer to be the Word of God in the New Testament; a book upon which we stake our eternal life? Have you ever studied out what they wrote or said in their writings that has bearing upon the books that they selected that ended up in the New Testament which are to be our supposed path, if believed, to lead us to Heaven? Were they competent for the task of deciding what books were to be contained in the canon of the New Testament and what books were to be excluded? But eve more, can we see the evidence of the Holy Spirit in action when we examine what these Church Fathers both said and did regarding these matters of selection let alone later "editing" of these said books? How confident should we be today in reading the New Testament; especially in light of the discoveries of modern Bible scholarship that teaches us that there existed hundreds of gospels before the famous 4 were later chosen by Irenaeus. Out of hundreds of early gospels concerning "the Christ" we only end up with 4 and I, like you, believed that this was God's design. Little did I know that such selection of only 4 gospels out of hundreds was based upon the capriciousness of but one man who based such selection upon the world having only 4 directions from which the wind blows let alone the cherubim having 4 faces. What?

You need to know right from the start that Irenaeus was also one of the very first Christians to argue that Jesus Christ was son of God, and a real historical figure. Irenaeus was especially insistent that there are exactly 4 Gospels, and used numerological arguments surrounding the number 4, such as the 4 winds, the 4 cherubim and 4 covenants, for support. Somebody forgot to tell him that there are "7", not "4" in the Bible. We are told by Irenaeus that only 4 gospels out of previous hundreds of gospels were to be chosen because the of throne of God has four powerful figures called cherubim which guard the throne. Sometimes it appears that each of the four has a different face, and sometimes it seems that all have four faces, but the faces are always those of a Lion, an Ox, a Man and an Eagle (Ezek. 1:10 & Rev 4:7). Oh, I see, now becomes clear that we only need 4 gospels; 4 late selections that discount completely all the other "earlier" gospels which never taught a "literal" or "historical" Christ.

Answer for yourself: What other criteria did Irenaeus use to select only 4 gospels for our New Testament?

Answer for yourself: What else do we not know about these gospels and our New Testament which might have a dramatic impact upon our lives and our current religious belief system?

Maybe you should read this for yourself:

Irenaeus writes in Adversus Haereses: The Gospels could not possibly be either more or less in number than they are. Since there are four zones of the world in which we live, and four principal winds, while the Church is spread over all the earth, and the pillar and foundation of the Church is the gospel, and the Spirit of life, it fittingly has four pillars, everywhere breathing out incorruption and revivifying men. From this it is clear that the Word, the artificer of all things, being manifested to men gave us the gospel, fourfold in form but held together by one Spirit. As David said, when asking for his coming, 'O sitter upon the cherubim, show yourself '. For the cherubim have four faces, and their faces are images of the activity of the Son of God. For the first living creature, it says, was like a lion, signifying his active and princely and royal character; the second was like an ox, showing his sacrificial and priestly order; the third had the face of a man, indicating very clearly his coming in human guise; and the fourth was like a flying eagle, making plain the giving of the Spirit who broods over the Church. Now the Gospels, in which Christ is enthroned, are like these. (3.11.8)

According to the lists Irenaeus, in Adversus Haereses, quotes 626 times from all 4 Gospels. First of all know that Adversus Haereses is Irenaeus work of 5 books written after 180 A.D. (some believe after 200 A.D. or even later) directed almost totally against the early Christian Gnostics. This idea of 626 quotes from the gospels might sound impressive had we not known that before this time, there were not in existence not one quote from a gospel "by name" existing in Christianity or referenced by any Christian writer. Irenaeus' Adversus Haereses is almost totally devoted to the conflict with the earlier Christian Gnostics. What we must be aware of is that prior references to the "sayings" of "the Christ" sporadically addressed in earlier Christian writings come totally from what is called the "Logia", the collected sayings of "the Christ" from antiquity that have been preserved in culture after culture and religion after religion down through the recorded history of mankind. The reference to these same "sayings" or "Logia" by Irenaeus now specific to 4 gospels by name only finds expression after 180 A.D.. This fact makes it rather difficult or next to impossible to believe that these 4 gospels by "name" (Matthew, Mark, Luke and John) had been written earlier as we are taught due to the great need for such quotes which go unmentioned by all the earliest of Christian writers in their debates not only with the earliest Christian Gnostics but the Jewish rabbis as well. Surely had these 4 gospels of which Irenaeus quotes 626 times after 180 A.D. had been in existence "early" there would have been some reference to them or some quote found somewhere early in some writing by the earliest supposed followers of the supposed "historical" and "literal" Christ. We find none. Only after 180 A.D. to such "quotes" surface in abundance. This should make the "thinking believer" at least consider that Irenaeus is responsible for the forgery of these later 4 gospels which bring a totally difference perspective and understanding of "the Christ" than was ever held by the totality of mankind since the beginning of time.

So we find that Irenaeus was especially insistent that there are exactly 4 Gospels. But get ready this same man who gives the world 4 gospels gives us a Jesus that never dies on a cross and who lived well into his fifties and into old age. "Impossible" you say. Well, no not really. The same man that gave us 4 gospels that contain the famous conflicting genealogies of a supposed historical and literal Jesus Christ also give us an "old age" and a senior citizen Jesus who evidently did not die and ascend to Heaven as these 4 gospels so purport.

Irenaeus who gave us not only these 4 gospels but all the extra "Pauline epistles" that comprise 2/3 of our the New Testament of which we are familiar after 180 A.D. goes on to say that Jesus lived well into his fifties. Amazing and astounding as it might appear you need to read this for yourself. Most remarkable in light of other supposed "heresies" attacked and refuted by Bishop Irenaeus, is one which had just gained currency in written form in the newly published "Gospels of Jesus Christ," in the form of the "tradition" that Jesus had been crucified to death early in the thirties of his life, after a preaching career of only about one year, according to three of the new Gospels, of about three years, according to the fourth. This is considered rankly false and fictitious, on the "tradition" of the real gospel and of all the Apostles, avows Bishop Irenaeus, like Bishop Papias earlier in the century; and Irenaeus boldly combated it as "heresy." It is not true, Irenaeus asserts, that Jesus Christ died so early in life and after so brief a career. "How is it possible," be demands, "that the Lord preached for one year only?"; and on the quoted authority of John the Apostle himself, of "the true Gospel," and of "all the elders," the saintly Bishop urges the falsity and "heresy" of the Four Gospels on this crucial point. Textually, and with quite fanciful reasonments, he says that Jesus did not die so soon:

"For he came to save all through means of Himself -- all, I say, who through Him are born again to God -- infants, and children, and boys, and youths, and old men. He therefore passed through every age, becoming an infant for infants, thus sanctifying infants; a child for children, thus sanctifying those who are of this age; a youth for youths, and thus sanctifying them for the Lord. So likewise He was an old man for old men, that He might be a perfect Master for all, not merely as respects the setting forth of the truth, but also as regards age, sanctifying at the same time the aged also, and becoming an example to them likewise. Then, at last, He came on to death itself, that He might be 'the first-born from the dead.' "They, however, that they may establish their false opinion regarding that which is written, 'to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord,' maintain that he preached for one year only, and then suffered in the twelfth month. [In speaking thus], they are forgetful to their own disadvantage, destroying His work and robbing Him of that age which is both more necessary and more honorable than any other; that more advanced age, I mean, during which also, as a teacher, He excelled all others. ... "Now, that the first stage of early life embraces thirty years, and that this extends onward to the fortieth year, every one will admit; but from the fortieth and fiftieth year a man begins to decline towards old age, which our Lord possessed while He still fulfilled the office of a Teacher, even as the Gospel and all the elders testify; those who were conversant in Asia with John, the disciple of the Lord, (affirming) that John conveyed to them that information. AND HE (JESUS) REMAINED AMONG THEM UP TO THE TIMES OF TRAJAN" (Trajan was a Roman Emperor who reigned between A.D. 98 and 117 A.D.).

What we find is that Irenaeus argued forcefully - from the apostolic tradition of John - that Jesus taught for many years more after his baptism than the twelve months attributed in the Gospels. He attacks any alternative view as a "heresy". He says (with my emphasis): "...but they mentioned a period near His real age, whether they had truly ascertained this out of the entry in the public register, or simply made a conjecture from what they observed that He was above forty years old, and that He certainly was not one of only thirty years of age. For it is altogether unreasonable to suppose that they were mistaken by twenty years, when they wished to prove Him younger than the times of Abraham. For what they saw, that they also expressed; and He whom they beheld was not a mere phantasm, but an actual being of flesh and blood. He did not then wont much of being fifty years old..."

Irenaeus goes on to say: "Some of them, moreover, saw not only John, but the other Apostles also, and heard the very same account from them, and bear testimony as to [the validity of] the statement. Whom then should we rather believe?" (Iren. Adv. Haer. Bk. II, ch. xxii, secs. 3, 4, 5; ANF. I, 891-2.) Wow.

So evidently that man who gave us these 4 gospels simply overlooked the fact that the "historical" and "literal" crucifixion, death, resurrection, and ascension of Jesus was simply not true. Here we get closer to the truth that so few have today due to the intense indoctrination of Rome over the last 1,800 years; the truth about the ancient Mystical and Metaphysical "crucifixion" and "incubation/incarnation" of "the Christ Divine Mind" into the totality of mankind; so often told in parable and myth intended to separate mankind apart through gnosis as well as those who have Spiritually evolved having "ears to hear". This is the "inner mystery" that lies behind the "outer mysteries" of "the Krst/Christ" found as far back as ancient Egypt which has the same "Jesus Story" that we do; only the name Horus is used instead of Jesus. That is why we often find "Jesus H. Christ"; "H" being the hidden reference to the "Horus Story" which is purely Metaphysical and never "literal" or "historical". The Catholics take communion with wafer disks inscribed with the initials IHS. It is supposed to stand for the first three letters in Jesus' name. The IHS is a symbolic monogram of Christ used by the Roman Catholic Church. This monogram consists of the Greek letters iota, eta, and sigma, the first three letters of the name Iesous (Greek for Jesus), the letters of which are also used to spell out the phrase "Iesous Hominum Salvator," "Jesus, savior of man." It relates to the story of Constantine, whose vision of the Chi-Rho was recorded by Church Father Eusebius. In the vision, Constantine was reported to have heard a voice proclaim, "In this symbol, thou shalt conquer." Therefore, the IHS has also stood for "In Hoc Signo," in this sign. However the ancient Babylonians used the same round wafer disks with the same initials that then stood for Isis, Horus, and Semerimus. "FYI", the Egyptian priests practiced "transubstantiation", claiming to be able to transfer the sun god Osiris into a circular wafer. In rituals prefiguring Catholic Mass, the faithful then ate the "body" of their god to nourish their Souls. The letters IHS on the sun-shaped wafers stood for Isis, Horus, Seb (later, Roman Catholics claimed they were the first three letters of Jesus' name in Greek).

Now let us get back on track regarding the competency of these early Church Fathers which gave us these 4 "literal" and "historical" gospels that we have today.

Answer for yourself: What are we to do with these 4 Gospels let alone the 3 that teach that Jesus died on the cross for the sins of mankind and thus procured atonement for those who believe in his death? What are we to think now that we read that Irenaeus did not believe that Jesus died on the cross yet lived to a ripe old age but yet at the same time supported the Gospels that taught that he did? What are we now to do with the teaching of the vicarious atonement attached to the death of Jesus in his mid-30's on the cross of Calvary as taught in these same Gospels when their strongest proponent believed that this same Jesus lived well into his fifties? Well, get ready for you, as they say, "ain't heard nothing yet" until you read the early Church Fathers, Fathers of the Church by the way that hated the early Christian Gnostics and their teaching of the internal Christ within the hearts of every child of God.

Well, as you can see there is a lot involved here that does not make sense to the rational mind; especially again when we find that the current New Testament that we have today is the gift of Irenaeus which I term the "Second Edition" of an earlier Gnostic New Testament minus many of the books and religious tenants held sacred by these "first" Chrestians/Christians. This bears our examination if you ask me.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever invested your time to personally inquire into these issues, or have you like most Christians received the New Testament of Irenaeus as handed down for millennia and accepted it and its "literal" and "historical" interpretation without question because of "church tradition" or because our parents were taught to do the same?

Most likely you haven't. Most Christians have implicitly been taught and indoctrinated to accept that the Holy Spirit led these men in the selection of the books in the Christian New Testament. Maybe you are beginning to doubt this somewhat based upon your study at Bet Emet coupled with your own prior studies; especially since reading these articles you have seen that most likely the followers of the Jewish Christ had little if anything to do with the writing of the 4 Gospels which carry their names.

It never ceases to amaze me how the Protestant, who refused to become a Catholic and disbelieves much of the Catholic dogma and doctrine, readily accepts the Catholic Bible owning to the fact that it was these same men who were given these "Catholic doctrines" supposedly by the Holy Spirit who put were responsible for putting together, adding to, and deleting from the earliest gospels and the first New Testament and in so doing presenting the world with what we have today in our Bibles. It just seem ridiculous does it not, that we will not accept much of Catholic dogma but yet their book?

WERE THE CHURCH FATHERS QUALIFIED FOR THE TASK? YOU MUST DECIDE...BUT KNOW THE FACTS FIRST

Well we lust learned about Irenaeus. Since the early Christian Fathers originated the theory that the books of the New Testament are inspired, the question arises, "Where they competent to do so?" The popular idea is that they were learned, profound, venerable men, worthy of the highest respect; and so vigorously has this been enforced, that one of the charges on which Servetus was burned to death by John Calvin was that he had spoken disrespectfully of the Fathers (R.Willis, M.D., Servetus and Calvin, London, 1877, p. 308). The true facts are quite the reverse of what you might think let alone have been taught. The early Christian Fathers were extremely ignorant and superstitious; and they were singularly incompetent to deal with the supernatural. The men who laid the foundation of the canon were Irenaeus (200 A.D.), Clement of Alexandria (210 A.D.), and Tertullian (220 A.D.)., and of them Prof. Davidson says:

"The three Fathers of whom we are speaking had neither the ability nor inclination to examine the genesis of documents surrounded with an apostolic halo. No analysis of their authenticity and genuineness was seriously attempted….The ends which they had in view, their polemic motives, their unclerical, inconsistent assertions, their want of sure data, detract from their testimony. Their decisions were much more the result of pious feeling, biased by the theological speculations of the time, than the conclusions of a sound judgment. The very arguments they use establish certain conclusions show weakness of perception" (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, 156 ff).

"The infancy of the canon was cradled in an uncritical age, and rocked with traditional ease. Conscientious care was not directed from the first to the well-authenticated testimony of eye-witnesses. Of the three Fathers who contributed most to its early growth, Irenaeus was credulous and blundering. Tertullian passionate and one-sided, and Clement of Alexandria, imbued with the treasure of Greek wisdom, was mainly occupied with ecclesiastical ethics….(Their) assertions show both ignorance and exaggeration" (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, 155).

LOOKING AT EXAMPLES OF THE ABOVE INCOMPETENCY OF THE EARLY CHURCH FATHERS

Some citations will illustrate for you the mental characteristics and competency of those who selected and chose for you a "new" Bible that replaced the true Hebrew Scriptures as well as the Gnostic New Testament.

St. Ignatius of Antioch (c. 50-117 C.E.) was an early Christian, who is said to have written a number of important letters defending the purity of the early Church. The Catholic Enclyclopedia stresses his importance to Church history: "It is scarcely possible to exaggerate the importance of the testimony which the Ignatian letters offer to the dogmatic character of Apostolic Christianity. The martyred Bishop of Antioch constitutes a most important link between the Apostles and the Fathers of the early Church. Receiving from the Apostles themselves, whose auditor he was, not only the substance of revelation, but also their own inspired interpretation of it; dwelling, as it were, at the very fountain-head of Gospel truth, his testimony must necessarily carry with it the greatest weight and demand the most serious consideration. Cardinal Newman did not exaggerate the matter when he said... that 'the whole system of Catholic doctrine may be discovered, at least in outline, not to say in parts filled up, in the course of his seven epistles.'" (St. Ignatius of Antioch, The Catholic Encyclopedia).

Further, Ignatius's writings are the first to speak of a physical Jesus Christ, or Mary, and of Pontius Pilate (Quentin David Jones, Ignatius, 2002). This sounds all well and good until you read what comes next.

However, the authenticity of the letters attributed to Ignatius has long been disputed. They have come down to us in various forms, some shorter and some - with much more detail about the "life" of Christ - longer. Further versions, written in Syraic, were also discovered in 1843. However, it has long been accepted by that only the shorter versions can possibly be reliable. English translations of Ignatius's works appear in The Ante-Nicene Fathers, and are introduced as follows:

"...although the shorter form of the Ignatian letters had been generally accepted in preference to the longer, there was still a pretty prevalent opinion among scholars, that even it could not be regarded as absolutely free from interpolations, or as of undoubted authenticity. Thus said Lardner, in his Credibility of the Gospel History (1743): "have carefully compared the two editions, and am very well satisfied, upon that comparison, that the larger are an interpolation of the smaller, and not the smaller an epitome or abridgment of the larger.... But whether the smaller themselves are the genuine writings of Ignatius, Bishop of Antioch, is a question that has been much disputed, and has employed the pens of the ablest critics. And whatever positiveness some may have shown on either side, I must own I have found it a very difficult question." (Introductory Note to the Epistle of Ignatius to the Ephesians in The Ante-Nicence Fathers).

Ignatius is particularly interesting to studies of early Christianity because he lived so soon after the time of Christ. In fact, if it is genuine, his Epistle to the Trallians would contain one of the earliest references to a historical Christ:

"Stop your ears, therefore, when any one speaks to you at variance with Jesus Christ, who was descended from David, and was also of Mary; who was truly born, and did eat and drink. He was truly persecuted under Pontius Pilate; He was truly crucified, and [truly] died, in the sight of beings in heaven, and on earth, and under the earth. He was also truly raised from the dead, His Father quickening Him, even as after the same manner His Father will so raise up us who believe in Him by Christ Jesus, apart from whom we do not possess the true life." (Chapter IX) (Epistle of Ignatius to the to the Trallians) [from earlychristianwritings.com].

What should concern us is the reliability of his letters. Walter Richard Cassels' nineteenth century Supernatural Religion rejected the authenticity of this reference, claiming that the Letters were forgeries from the end of the second century:

"Included in Cassels's lengthy analysis is a discussion of the letters of Bishop of Antioch Ignatius (c. 50-107), letters that some scholars have claimed infer the existence of the canonical gospels. However, these letters contain merely a "biography" consisting mainly of a rough outline of the gospel tale, with little detail. Basically, the Ignatian texts insist simply that Jesus was "born and died," was "truly crucified by Pontius Pilate," and was born of the Virgin Mary. Moreover, Cassels shows that these epistles were forged towards the end of the 2nd century, so they still would not serve as evidence of the existence of the gospels before that date." (W.R. Cassels, Supernatural Religion. An Inquiry into the Reality of Divine Revelation, volume 3, (London: Longmans, Green, and Co., revised edition 1879). Quoted from The "Historical" Jesus? by Acharya S.

This view is echoed in the 1902 Encyclopaedia Biblica, which describes the Letters as being by an "unknown writer" from the middle of the second century C.E. (Referenced in Christianism 18: [6/28/97: See: Encyclopaedia Biblica, 1902, 3488-3489 (van Manen), "Epistles of Ignatius". Comments include: "unknown writer"; "date near the middle of the second century"; etc.].

Now pay attention. As a final point, it is worth considering that a known successor of Ignatius, Theophilus of Antioch (c. 115-181 A.D.) never once mentions "Jesus Christ" in any of his writings which have come down to us - for all his discussions of the nature of God, the veracity of the Old Testament.

So we see without a doubt that at least some of the writings attributed to Ignatius are undoubtedly forgeries (Introductory Note to the Epistle of Ignatius to the Ephesians in The Ante-Nicence Fathers). Cassel's work from over a century ago argues forcefully that all are suspect [ca]. Given the lack of other contemporary evidence for the historical existence of Jesus, there is reason to doubt all of the works attributed to Ignatius (David Quentin Jones, The Foundations of Christianity, 2002). Until further information comes to light, it seems that we cannot be certain that this "early" reference to the existence of Jesus Christ is genuine.

You should be familiar with the fable of the phoenix, which was said to renew its life every five hundred years. The phoenix is supposedly a bird in Egyptian mythology that lived in the desert for 500 years and then consumed itself by fire, later to rise renewed from its ashes. Wherever it is found, the phoenix is associated with resurrection, immortality, triumph over adversity, and that which rises out of the ashes. Thus it became a favorite symbol on early Christian tombstones. In numerous ways, the phoenix was found to be a symbol of Christ. In most countries, it was believed that only one phoenix lived at a time. It was born from itself without following the natural laws of reproduction. During the Middle Ages, it was believed to rise from the dead after three days.

Clement of Rome (100 A.D.) thought it had an actual existence, and he asserted that it was typical of the resurrection (Ep. Ad Corinth, xxv. P. 123). Tertullian believed the same thing (De Resurrect., 13, vol. 2., p 236). Celsus, the noted anti-Christian writer, used this fact to illustrate the credulity and gullibility of the early Christians, and Origen defended the fable rather than accept the just criticism (Contra Celsum, iv. 98). By the time of Celsus, 175 A.D. to 180 A.D., the "miraculous" aspects of Christianity appear to have been firmly established. He poured scorn on the myths of Christianity, pointing out their obvious similarities with ancient pagan stories (Timothy Freke and Peter Gandy, The Jesus Mysteries) and (R. J. Hoffman, Celsus On The True Doctrine, Oxford University Press, 1987).

"Is your belief based on 'fact' that this Jesus told in advance that he would rise again after his death? That your story includes his predictions of triumphing over the grave? Well let it be so. Let's assume for the present that he foretold his resurrection. Are you ignorant of the multitudes who have invented similar tales to lead the simple minded hearers astray? It is said that Zamolix, Pythagoras' servant convinced the Scythians that he had risen from the dead, having hidden himself away in a cave for several years, and what about Pythagoras himself in Italy - or Phamsinitus in Egypt? Now then, who else: What about Orpheus among the Odrysians, Protesilaus in Thessaly, and above all Heracles and Theseus? But quite apart from all these risings from the dead, we must look carefully at the question of the resurrection of the body as a possibility given to mortals. Doubtless you will freely admit that these stories are legends, even as they appear to me; but you will go on to say that your resurrection story, this climax to your tragedy, is believable and noble." "Are these distinctive happenings unique to the Christians - and if so, how are they unique? Or are ours to be accounted myths and theirs believed? What reasons do the Christians give for the distinctiveness of their beliefs? In truth there is nothing at all unusual about what the Christians believe, except that they believe it to the exclusion of more comprehensive truths about God."

The standard Apologetic response to Celsus is to point out that none of the pagan god-men listed by Celsus were crucified, or that second century paganism in fact borrowed much of its teachings from Christianity. (James Patrick Holding, Apologies Or, The Dissolving of the Second Century). But this response by the early Christians is simply not true for man of the sungods and goddesses were "crucified". Also, Celsus would no doubt have been amused - since these arguments depend on the assumption that Christianity is "correct" and that every other belief system is a mythology! The fact is that studies in comparative mythology have shown overwhelming parallels between Christianity and paganism in the second century CE, with both "religions" probably borrowing from common sources (Parallels between the Christian Gospels and Pagan Mythology, Religious Tolerance.org.). There is a great deal of evidence that the concept of "Jesus Christ" as a historical figure does not seem to have been taken up by Christianity until around the time of Celsus (Quentin David Jones, The History of the Gospels). Notice if you will the date for Celsus and the date given earlier for the production of Irenaeus New Testament teaching a "literal" and "historical" Jesus along with the conflicting genealogies. It is the same time period that connect the emergence of this "literal" and "historical" interpretation of "the Krst/Christ" which before then was always understood Mystically and Metaphysically. The fragments of his writings which survive throw a remarkable light on the development of early Christianity, and the obvious parallels it had with older pagan mythologies.

Minucius Felix was an early "Christian Apologist" from the second or third century C.E.. His Latin writings survive to this day, and were translated into English in the nineteenth Century (Minucius Felix, The Catholic Encyclopedia). His most interesting work for our purposes is the "The Octavius of Minucius Felix", since it provides a lengthy depiction of Christian doctrine without any reference to Jesus Christ as a historical figure or to the Resurrection (Minucius Felix, The Octavius of Minucius Felix, c 210 CE). Let us not underestimate the huge significance and importance since it would add to the number of mid-first-century Christian writers who fail to mention Jesus Christ before Justin Martyr 150 A.D. In Chapter XXIII, he adds: "Therefore neither are gods made from dead people, since a god cannot die; nor of people that are born, since everything which is born dies. But that is divine which has neither rising nor setting. For why, if they were born, are they not born in the present day also?" (Minucius Felix, The Octavius of Minucius Felix, c 210 CE).

This lack of any reference to the supposed central tenants of Christianity is astounding. The Catholic Encyclopedia's explanation raises more questions than it answers: "The name of Christ does not appear; among the apologists of the second century Aristides, St. Justin, and Tertullian are the only ones who pronounced it" (Minucius Felix, The Catholic Encyclopedia). Arguably, Minucius Felix is a startling example of how unformed Christian teaching about Jesus Christ still was in the second century A.D.

The writer of the Epistle of Barnabas believed an ancient superstition that the hyena changed its sex every year, being alternately male and female (Ep. Barnabas, ch. x), that a hare had as many young as it was years old, that a weasel conceived with its mouth, that the reason why men should eat only animals with a cloven hoof was because the righteous people lived in this world, but had expectations in the next through reincarnation (Ep. Barnabas, ch. x). Justin Martyr (150 A.D.) believed in demons. He said that they were the offspring of angels who loved the daughters of men (Apol. ii, 5), that insane people (demoniacs) were possessed and tortured by the souls of the wicked who had died in their sins (Ibid., i. 18), and that this was a proof of the immortality of the soul.

Answer for yourself: Did you catch that? For Justin Martyr, one of the most important of the Greek philosopher-Apologists in the early church, whose writings represent the first positive encounter of Christian revelation with Greek philosophy and laid the basis for a theology which we have been taught today, believed that mental illness was proof of the immortality of the soul?

And we accept the religious doctrines and replacement religion set forth by this man without question Sunday after Sunday. It look like his judgment is off quite considerably to me. This should bring questions to your mind about following such a man as your Spiritual authority for what you believe today.

He even said angels eat manna (Dial., 57). Has he ever had lunch with them?

But we need to look closer at Justin Martyr. Justin Martyr (c. 100-165 CE) was a second century Christian of pagan origins. A number of splendid works (including several clear forgeries) are attributed to him, notably a defence of Christianity supposedly addressed to the emperor of Rome (St. Justin Martyr, The Catholic Encyclopedia). Of the major apologists up until c. 180 CE, Justin is the only one to have supposedly mentioned Jesus Christ as a historical figure (Earl Doherty, The Second Century Apologists, from The Jesus Puzzle: Was There No Historical Jesus?). The works attributed to Justin do not mention the works of Paul directly, and never "name" any of the four Gospels. This is rather strange given the current belief that these 4 gospels has been written by 70 A.D., some 80 years earlier (Is the Bible Devine? Roberts-Bradlaugh Debate, 1876). The reliability of Justin Martyr himself and all that he wrote is called into question by his assertion in Chapter 25 of his First Apology that the Romans had a record of the crucifixion of Jesus (Justin Martyr, The First Apology Of Justin).

Justin's apologies pointedly refer to the existence of Jesus Christ, the crucifixion and physical resurrection. In fact, he made a point of stressing how similar Christian teaching was to the ancient Greeks of five hundred years before (Justin Martyr, The First Apology Of Justin). Quite marvelously, they claimed that the Greek received their wisdom (somehow) from Moses: "And that you may learn that it was from our teachers - we mean the account given through the prophets - that Plato borrowed his statement that God..."

Even more spectacular is the claim that the similarities between Christianity and pagan mythology were due to the devil anticipating the birth of Christ, and planting these stories to confuse and confound mankind when Jesus finally did arrive (Justin Martyr, The First Apology Of Justin):

"...For having heard it proclaimed through the prophets that the Christ was to come, and that the ungodly among men were to be punished by fire, they put forward many to be called sons of Jupiter, under the impression that they would be able to produce in men the idea that the things which were said with regard to Christ were mere marvellous tales... And these things (the things about the Christ) were said both among the Greeks and among all nations where they [the demons] heard the prophets foretelling that Christ would specially be believed in..."

Answer for yourself: What can we learn from this?

In short, by recognizing the similarities between Christian myths and pagan ones, the Apology of Justin provides clear reason to doubt the existence of Jesus Christ as anything other than a legendary hero, in the vein of any number of other mythical god-men. What we find when we do other studies is that the "Jesus Story" in our 4 Gospels is a radical reinterpretation by Irenaeus and others who have lost or denied the gnosis of the indwelling Christ in humanity and in its place substituted what is make to look like a supposed "literal" and "historical" Christ; although clumsily done as perceived by all who take the time to do such studies. What might pass for truth in the darkness of the 2nd century to the common rarely if ever today escapes scrutiny in this age of modern scholarship and information. Doing such studies prove beyond any doubt the incompetence of these early Church Fathers to decide anything regarding Faith or Belief for humanity let alone those who desire to follow "the Christ".

Theophilus of Antioch (c. 117-181 CE) was one of the first of the second century Christian writers (Theophilus, Catholic Encyclopedia, 1902). However, at not time, including in his discussion of rituals or Christian belief does he ever mention Jesus Christ - who supposedly had died and been resurrected only a century before. Similarly, he makes no mention of the cross or crucifixion, the virgin birth or Paul. Although supposedly writing after Justin Martyr, Theophilus seems to describe a very different Christianity from what we received today. (Rick Rogers, Theophilus of Antioch, Lexington Books).

Athengoras of Athens (c. 177 CE) was one of the first of the second century Christian writers (Athengoras, Catholic Encyclopedia, 1902). None of his writings mention Jesus Christ. Athenagoras speaks of the Father, Son of God and Holy Spirit (X) - but his description of "the Son of God" is as Logos and not as a historical (or even contemporary) person. Jesus is not mentioned. Although Athengoras implies something approaching the eucharist (III), his description of the Logos of the "Son of God" is most striking:

"...He is the first product of the Father, not as having been brought into existence (for from the beginning, God, who is the eternal mind, had the Logos in Himself, being from eternity instinct with Logos; but in as much as He came forth to be the idea and energizing power of all material things, which lay like a nature without attributes, and an inactive earth... The prophetic Spirit also agrees with our statements. "The Lord," it says, "made me, the beginning of His ways to His works." The Holy Spirit Himself also, which operates in the prophets, we assert to be an effluence of God, flowing from Him, and returning back again like a beam of the sun. Who, then, would not be astonished to hear men who speak of God the Father, and of God the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, and who declare both their power in union and their distinction in order, called atheists? Nor is our teaching in what relates to the divine nature confined to these points; but we recognise also a multitude of angels and ministers, whom God the Maker and Framer of the world distributed and appointed to their several posts by His Logos, to occupy themselves about the elements, and the heavens, and the world, and the things in it, and the goodly ordering of them all."

More in keeping with the truth about "the Christ", gives us a description of a mystical and intangible being - not of a person. Athengoras makes no mention of Scripture - or of Jesus Christ, his lineage, life, crucifixion, death or resurrection. Again, rather surprising given the common belief that our 4 Gospels had been in existence in his day some 100 years or more.

Athengoras's second surviving work is On the Resurrection of the Dead. He writes at length about the issues of bodily dismemberment and decay (IV and V); the power of God (II and III), resurrection in a new body (VII); the primacy of man and God's creation (IX -XII, XIX-XXIV). However, once again he makes no mention of Jesus or of his crucifixion, resurrection or promise of eternal life. While the work could be considered a mere theological discussion on the power of God, it seems remarkable that only a century or so after Jesus probably dies, no mention is made of Jesus Christ.

So, if you noticed, we see that like his contemporary Theophilus, Athengoras describes a Christianity without a "personal, historical, or literal" Christ.

At the same time, he declared that the strong belief of Christians that angels have been distributed by the Logos throughout the universe, and that they were kept busy regulating the whole (Legatio pro Christ., x). Some of the angels loved the daughters of men, and fell, and thus were begotten giants, or demons (Ibid., xxiv). These last roamed about the world, performing the evil deeds peculiar to their natures (Ibid., xxv.).

Tertullian believed that the hyena changed its sex (De Pallio, 3), and that the stag renewed its youth by eating poisonous snakes (Ad Scap., 3), and that eclipses and comets were signs of God's anger and forerunners of national disasters (Ad Scap., 3), and that volcanoes were openings into hell (De Penitentia, 12), and that the volcanic condition was a punishment inflicted on the mountains to serve as a warning to the wicked (De Penitentia, 12), that demons sent diseases upon the bodies of men (Apol., 22), blighted apples and grain (Apol., 22), and produced accidents and untimely death (De Anima, 57). He said that a corpse in a cemetery once kindly moved to make room for another corpse to be placed beside it (Ibid., 51).

Answer for yourself: Did you catch the above? We have been talking about the "big shots" in the history of early Christianity which crafted much of the Christian theology we yet hear in our Churches today and it seems they were highly steeped in superstition more than truth. I don't know about you but how can you trust such a one with such judgment and beliefs for anything of a Spiritual nature? This sounds more like X-files than the Holy Spirit.

Clement of Alexandria (220 A.D.) said that hail storms, tempests, and plagues were caused by demons (Strom., vi. 3), that credulity was necessary to render faith easy (Strom., ii. 6), and that events in the life of Abraham were typical and prophetical of arithmetic and astronomy (Ibid., vi 11). He kindly allowed that Jews and Gentile would have the gospel preached to them in hell thus accepting another sun-myth (Strom., vi. 6). Clement's imagination was naturally lascivious. His chapter on the immodesty of Pagan women in the bath (Paedag., iii. 5) betrays his hatred for the upper classes and shows that if a bishop in the Church could use such language, the early Christians of Alexandria must have been from the very lowest grades of society. While this indignant at the supposed wickedness of the heathen, he wrote a book so unseemly (Strom., iii) that the English editors did not venture to translate it, and in it he quotes probably more from the Bible than in any of his other books.

Origen (254 A.D.) said that the sun, moon, and stars were living creatures, endowed with reason and free will, and occasionally inclined to sin (De Princip., i. 7). One should only wonder when the moon "sinned" and what great sin it was let alone, God forbid, Mars or Jupiter. He was not certain if the celestial orbs and their "souls" were created at the same time as their initial creation. The light emitted by them was not the reflection of the sun, but light from knowledge and wisdom as reflected from the Eternal light. He maintained the stars and planets had "free will" and that they were rational creatures because they moved in the sky (De Princip., i. 7).

The sun, moon, and stars, according to him, were "subject to vanity" (De Princip., i. 7), and they prayed to God through his only begotten Son (Contra Celsum, v. 11).

Answer for yourself: Did you catch that? Again, I don't know about you but how can you trust such a one with such judgment and beliefs for anything of a spiritual nature? This sounds more like X-files than the Holy Spirit.

Origin maintains that famine, the blighting of vines and fruit trees, and the destruction of beasts and men, were all the work of demons (Contra Celsum, viii. 31).

Lactantius (325 A.D.) believed that demons entered men and injured them through the viscera, producing diseases and mental distempters (Epitome of the Divine Institutes, 28), but that the sign of the cross (from sun worship) would drive them away (Divine Institutes, vi. 27). Well, that makes me feel better.

Cyril of Jerusalem (386 A.D.). quoted from Clement the story of the phoenix, and declared that God had created the bird expressly to enable men to believe in the resurrection (Catech., xviii. 8). He said it was a wonderful bird; and yet it was irrational-it did not sing psalms to God, and it knew nothing of His only begotten Son (Ibid., 244).

Answer for yourself: Did you catch that? Again, I don't know about you but how can you trust such a one with such judgment and beliefs for anything of a Spiritual nature? Of course the bird would not know of the Son of God had it existed in the first place; it was a bird in the first place!

St. Chrysostom (407 A.D.) believed the air was filled with angels (In Ascens., J.C.). Jerome (430 A.D.) believed just the opposite; that the air was filled with demons (Epis. To Ephes., iii.6).

Now we come to the real big theologian of all theologians, St. Augustine's (430 A.D.) New Testament was the same as ours today. Now we begin to see conformity of New Testament texts after the influence of St. Augustine. The influence of St. Augustine in establishing the Bible was greater probably than any other Father or than any council. People now attribute to God what was really the work of one man. But when we really study the man his judgment is not to be trusted in anything let alone the selection of the canon or the creation of Christian doctrine of which he is credited. Just read this and think.

The incredible and very ridiculous stories related by Christian Fathers and ecclesiastical historians, on whom we are obliged to rely for information on the most important of subjects, show us how untrustworthy these men were. We have, for instance, the story related by St. Augustine, who is styled "the greatest of the Latin Fathers," of his preaching the Gospel to people without heads. In his 33d Sermon he says: 'I was already Bishop of Hippo, when I went into Ethiopia with some servants of Christ there to preach the Gospel. In this country we saw many men and women without heads, who had two great eyes in their breasts; and in countless still more southly, we saw people who had but one eye in their foreheads'" (Taylor, Syntagma, p. 52).

Answer for yourself: Knowing that the dogma of original sin was given to us by Augustine who is preaching to people without heads and eyes in their breast and eyes in their foreheads along with the dogma of original sin that damns the whole of mankind then is it any wonder that such a terrible dogma was never taught in Judaism or many other major world religions in antiquity? How comfortable should we be accepting Augustine's theology of original sin that damns all babies and people to hell for just being born? Not very much if you ask me. Especially, since the Bible teaches us that man is created in the image of God and not devils. Now, more than likely, knowing this tid-bit of information about Augustine brings into great doubt his credibility and alerts us that he should not be trusted nor his contemporaries and their ideas about Jesus Christ as a supposed "literal" and "historical" person who saves us from original sin. Then how does his piece of knowledge impact what we have been taught the death of this New Testament Jesus and that is supposedly pays our sin debt racked up by original sin? It sure makes you want to study Christianity to get to the bottom of what lies behind the "Jesus Story"; a story that can be found today carved on the walls of Egyptian temples over 5,000 years

B.C.E.! Surely we have missed something accepting the Roman Christian message.

Answer for yourself: How can you trust such a man to determine for you what books are to be in your New Testament let alone the Bible? Did the Holy Spirit have an off day when St. Augustine preached to people with one-eye in each breast or when he preached to people without heads or who had only one eye in their foreheads, but yet led St. Augustine into all truth concerning the canon for us today? Is this man trustworthy and what about the vast other stuff he said, or does this information impugn every thing he ever said and wrote?

St. Augustine (430 A.D.) likewise believed in demons. They tried to deceive men by persuading them that they were gods (De Civit. Del., viii. 22). They were called demons from the Greek "daimones" on account of their knowledge. To the early Fathers exact learning was devilish. Reading this web-page would make you a candidate for being declared "possessed."

Answer for yourself: Can you imagine that after reading what you just read?

St. Augustine also believed that there was also a class of satyrs and fauns called "Incubi," to whose lascivious attacks and sexual rape women were constantly subject. Hollywood would have loved this and in fact has made several movies about this phenomena. As if that was not enough he also believed that demons termed by the Gauls "Dusii" perpetrated daily the same uncleanness. He maintained that there was so much trustworthy evidence that to deny it was an impertinence (Ibid., xv. 23). So real and so universal was the belief in these lewd spirits that, in 1894, Innocent VIII issued a Papal bull against these spirits. Incredible!

I THINK YOU GET THE POINT

The erroneous and grotesque beliefs of the Christian Fathers could be quoted until they filled a large volume, but these few will illustrate the intellectual condition of the ages which originated and transmitted the New Testament to us. It will be said that the Fathers were as good as their times. That can not be maintained. They were not even as good. In short, the sum of the charge against the Fathers is that they were not competent to tell what was evidence of a fact and what was not. They cited as evidence of a theory things which are not in the slightest degree such, and they would look directly into the face of evidence which established theories they did not endorse, and would still be unable to see that it was evidence. Now, if the Fathers were great scholars, like you have been led to believe, they would not have been so persistently in the wrong. They should have see the truth at least as easily as the others did; like the Jewish scholars and Rabbis for instance. What has become of the names and the memories of the men in those day who had the truth and stood up for the truth against such absurdity? Are they even yet called great? The Christian Church has been honoring the wrong persons.

Admitting, for the sake of argument, that these Christian Fathers were as great as their time, I deny that they or their age were competent to form a Bible for their age.

STUPID…BUT SPIRITUALLY INSIGHTFULL?…OH…COME ONE NOW!

But one apology has ever been made for these remarkable errors of the Fathers, and that is "spiritual insight." Christian defenders say that, while the Fathers were ignorant, stupid, limited in intelligence, and even superstitious, they were yet "gifted with great spiritual insight." This term signifies the possibility of perceiving something which does not exist and where it does not exist. It is synonymous with "unlimited credulity."

Not alone in nature, but also in literature, the Fathers were ignorant and unscholarly. Jerome and Origen were the only ones who could read Hebrew (Davidson, On The Canon, of the Bible, p. 170). Justin Martyr quotes from Jeremiah and calls it Isaiah (Apol. i. 54). Clement of Alexandria quotes as Scripture passages which are not in the Bible at all (Strom., ii 6). He quotes as Paul's, words which are not in Paul (Strom., vi. 5). In quoting from an opponent he would insert words not in the original (Strom., ii. 4), and he even does the same in quoting from the Bible (On Chastity, vii). Tertullian quotes as in Leviticus a passage not in that book (On Monogamy, vi.). He misquotes history (Strom., iv. 26). Tertullian cites as Isaiah a passage not in that book, but in Revelation (On Modesty, vi). Besides that he is frequently inaccurate in a great number of his quotations.

The Gospel writers, supposedly under the anointing of the Holy Spirit, committed the same blunders. The man who wrote the Gospel of Matthew attributes to Jeremiah (Matt. 27:9) a passage which is in Zechariah (Zech. 11:12-13). The writer of the Gospel of Mark attributes to Isaiah (Mark. 1:2) a passage which is in Malachi (Mal. 3:1). The early manuscripts insert the name of Isaiah as the authority but the later ones omitted it because it was such a clear error.

One curious illustration of this, and of how sacred books are formed, is seen in the excess of the Catholic over the Protestant Bible. The former has quite a number of books which are not in the latter; such as the two of Maccabees and the Song of the Three Children-which Protestants call the apocryphal Old Testament, but which Catholics consider as much the word of God as any other books. The ancient Jews did not consider these authoritative, and the Palestinian Jews did not include them in the sacred collection. The Greek Jews, however, thought more of them, and the Alexandrian Jews placed them in an appendix to the Greek canons as the end of their Bibles, the same as they used to be printed in our old Bibles. The early Christians of Africa could not read Hebrew; they had to use the Greek manuscripts, and as they saw the apocryphal books in the collection, they supposed they were a part of it. The result was that the early Bible-makers in the African church included the apocryphal books because they were not intelligent enough to leave them out (Davidson, On The Canon of the Bible, p. 83). St. Augustine included them because he found them there, and the Catholic Church retained them because St. Augustine did.

So, there you have a rather quick over-view on the competency of those who chose the books for the New Testament, added and subtracted books, added to them as well as took from them, edited them, and were responsible for the New Testament as we have it today. Honestly, these accounts do not foster confidence in the teachings expressed in our New Testament. The years of study invested by me has shown me the utter unreliability of the New Testament for one's faith and practice of such faith; let alone a plan of salvation for the world to come. It is my hope after your examination of our other web-sites where we detail the multiple errors, the purposeful misquotations, mistranslations, and verses lifted out of context from the Old Testament and show you how they where used completely in a different way in the New Testament along with supposed prophetic authority, that you are coming to see how the faith of Jesus was perverted by the early Gentile Church. This article is just another puzzle part for surely after reading this you should have many doubts about the competency of those who chose for you what was and was not God's Word, and those affiliated with the movements these men represented. Hopefully you are becoming more serious in your study into why we were given a New Testament in the first place; let alone be given a Bible that replaced the one Jesus read.

As you close you might be wondering what we missed in accepting without study and without question our current New Testament with is imposed "historical" and "literal" interpretation. Simply said, we missed the truth of our own True Being before God. Gnosticism's Christian form grew to prominence in the 2nd century A.D. Ultimately denounced as heretical by the early church, Gnosticism proposed a revealed knowledge of God ("gnosis" meaning "knowledge" in Greek), held as a secret tradition of the true followers of "the Krst/Christ". This is "the Christ" that Paul taught in his 7 authentic epistles; not the one which Rome will later forge and teach in his name. In The Gnostic Gospels, author Elaine Pagels suggests that Christianity could have developed quite differently if Gnostic texts had become part of the Christian canon. Oh, what a true statement. Without a doubt Gnosticism celebrates God as both Mother and Father, and depicts suggests the Resurrection is better understood symbolically as an awakeining of a person to his "True Being" as a divine creature sent far from his Father's house in need of experiences that further evolves his Soul and Being and in so doing speaks to self-knowledge as the route to union with God. Pagels argues masterfully argues in her book that Roman Christian orthodoxy and our current New Testament grew out of the political considerations of the day, serving to legitimize and consolidate early church leadership centered in the Bishop.

We truly live in a wonderful time since many ancient scriptures once hidden in vessels and buried in Egypt were unearthed in 1945 revealing information regarding a Christian sect called the Christian Gnostics that predated the rise of Roman orthodoxy by two or more centuries. Their writings indicate that they held views in striking contrast to the later developing "literal" and "historical" orthodox Christianity. In fact this discovery coupled with the reconstruction of Marcion's first New Testament totally destroyed by Rome teach us the value of self knowledge as the avenue to God. Let us not forget that the Kingdom of God lies "within" and not "without". These earliest Christian Gnostics did not adhere to the concept of a virgin birth, rejected the notion of the Trinity and of Jesus as anything other than the personification of humanity, considered the resurrection symbolic, the kingdom of heaven a state of mind, and viewed women as spiritual equals as indicated by the prominence given Mary Magedelene in the Gnostic Scriptures. Not surprisingly, the orthodox Christian church destroyed most of the Gnostic writings and in their place gave the world their own "interpretation" and "edition" of the Second New Testament which is one we currently possess in our Bibles. Alas, we have lost so much and our Spiritual evolution of our True Self has been set back at least two millennia to date. But you need not waste another moment in returning to your Father's House. Study, enlightenment, and self-knowledge and self-awareness of one's True Being and Spiritual Self is the "ticket" home. Today, like never before, we have the capacity to get back on the right track for the Spiritual evolution of our Soul. It is my prayer and hope that you take advantage of such opportunity for we are are called to evolve into the "fullness and stature" of Christ; something impossible unless we have the truth.

THE CRITICAL AND CHRONOLOGICAL STUDY INTO THE CANONIZATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT...CAN THIS BE THE FRUIT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT?

INTRODUCTION

Now we come to the formation of the Christian canon; to the process by which it evolved. Again I bring to your attention what very distinguished men, like Brooke Foss Westcott D.D., D.C.L., honorary fellow of Trinity and King's College, at Cambridge, had to say to help us today understand how one should approach the New Testament writings let alone determine what kind of authority we should attach to such documents, especially in light of the prior existence of the Torah and the Tanakh, the Scriptures used by Jesus. As you read this information balance what you learn with the prior held beliefs "from Roman Church tradition" as to the importance of such documents.

Beginning with the first two centuries of the Christian Church, we find that there was no New Testament as we now understand that term.

More than forty Gospels and a much greater number of Acts, Epistles, and Revelations were in use by the Church corporate. The writer of the Gospel according to Luke says, "Forasmuch as many have taken to hand to set forth in order a declaration of these things," etc., showing that when he wrote many Gospels were already in existence. From the mass writings then in circulation, the books in our New Testament were taken, and the other books out of use (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 183).

Origen says:

"And that not four Gospels, but very many were written, out of which these we have were chosen and delivered to the churches, we may perceive" (In Proem. Luc., hom. I, vol 2. P. 210).

The selection of books, and the formation of the list, was a very slow process, and it is "impossible to point to any period as marking the date at which our present canon was determined" (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 496).

"This result (the formation of the canon) was obtained gradually, spontaneously, silently. There is no evidence to show that any time the claims of the apostolic writings was to be placed on equal footing with the Old Testament, which formed the first Christian Bible,...this was deliberately discussed and admitted…Step by step the books which were stamped with apostolic authority were collected from the other works which contained the traditions of less authoritative teachers" (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 345).

Answer for yourself: Did you understand that those who first collected such writing admitted among themselves and have passed down their own thoughts that these collection of writings were not intended to replace the Old Testament in authority...let alone be considered another "Bible?" But yet it regrettably has happened! We have added to the Word of God whether we want to admit it or not! It seems ridiculous to me today that we consider documents as the "Word of God" then those who originally collected them did not!

What should immediately strike you is the fact that those who decided we need a "new book" were fully aware that such a collection was never to have the same authority for one's religious beliefs as did the existing Jewish Scripture...the Old Testament!

This is a very damaging quote from a most renown New Testament scholar that impugns the integrity and the authority of the whole of the New Testament.

RELIGIOUS IN-FIGHTING OF THE VARIOUS EARLY CHRISTIAN SECTS WHOSE VIEWS WERE TO BE "INSPIRED" AND WHOSE NOT?

When the Catholic Church began to be formed, about the year 170-180 A.D., the tendency was to use fewer books, and the ones accepted as authoritative began to be called "divine".

Answer for yourself: Do you know what is the meaning to the word "divine?" There is a big difference between deity and divine. According to Webster's Dictionary the word "divine" means:

1. Pertaining to God, or to a heathen deity or false g-d,

2. Partaking the nature of God; g-dlike; heavenly; sacred; holy; excellent in the highest degree; apparently above what is human; relating to divinity or theology.

You should have noticed the glaring absence of any mention that "divine" means originated with God or comes from God. Nowhere in such understanding is room for a concept of "infallible, inerrant, or even inspired." Thus being so, and upon serious study, and in-depth analysis, one can quickly see how these documents which appear "g-dly and sacred" are exposed in their true colors....conflicting documents relating to theologies of various sects and their conflicting and competing dogmas...each intended for mastery over each other. The early church Fathers knew this; it is we who have approached these documents with false suppositions about their value and authority for our lives.

You should understand that the early Fathers originated the theory that these books were divinely inspired, and in another place that the heretics did so. There is no contradiction here. Both the Fathers and the heretics were Christians! They simply belonged to different sects. In the contest for the mastery it so happened that the sects to which the Fathers belonged…the Petrine…gained the supremacy, and from them arose the present Christian Church. Had the other sects gained the victory, their Fathers would now be the orthodox authorities and the others would be the heretics. Now, it is true that in the so-called heretical sects originated the theory that the New Testament was divine and of equal authority with the Old, but that doctrine would not have been accepted by us had not the orthodox Fathers of that time adopted it into their sects. We are the descendants of the orthodox sects, and so far as we are concerned the early Fathers originated the theory. They did it to have authority for the new and unusual doctrines coming into use, just as the heretics were using the same theory to support their doctrines. The books were, in those days, mainly in the hands of the bishops (Davidson, On The Canon Of The Bible, p. 164). The laity had nothing to do with them. Not one in ten thousand of the laity could read. The recognition of the authority of the New Testament was brought entirely by ecclesiastical usage (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 185).

As you read the next sentence fully understand the impact of such a fact. Each Father included in the newly forming New Testament what books he liked and which promoted his positions, and excluded what he did not like. Sounds like God to me! The consequence were to be expected; there were as many Bibles in those days as there were Fathers engaged in making them. In their differences of opinion as to what constituted the canon, the Fathers made no attempt to compare the books by a critical investigation into the history of the records themselves (Ibid., p. 406). Dr. Westcott says the canon was "formed by instinct and not by argument" (Ibid., p. 386). Instinct is not a good thing to form a Bible by. The Fathers contended for centuries as to what should go into the list until they found they could not agree, and then the church held councils and voted on it, and the books which polled the most votes went into this "divine collection."

St. Augustine was a great advocate of this plan. He thought that the books which were received by all the churches should be in the Bible, and that in the case of books on which there was a difference of opinion, the majority voice of the churches should decide it (De. Doct. Christ., ii. 8). So in other words, according to St. Augustine, according to which fraction or sect that had majority power would come the determination which was "of God and what was not." This sounds right to me, how about you? In other words, what ever group had dominance and political, economic, and military power would flow the "divine oracles." I hope you have sense to understand the ludicrousness of such folly. Let me share another thing that was said by this distinguished man, St. Augustine. We have, for instance, the story related by St. Augustine, who is styled "the greatest of the Latin Fathers," of his preaching the Gospel to people without heads. In his 33d Sermon he says:

"I was already Bishop of Hippo, when I went into Ethiopia with some servants of Christ there to preach the Gospel. In his country we saw many men and women without heads, who had two great eyes in their breasts: and in countries still more southly, we saw people who had but one eye in their foreheads" (Rev. Robert Taylor, Syntagma, p. 52).

Now I ask you, is it wise to follow anything from such a man as this? Surely this should be enough for you to want to seriously begin a study into the men who decided what you believe today for your Eternal Life!

An exact parallel to this is found in the manner of making changes in the recent New Testament revision. On the first reading of a disputed text a majority vote authorized the amendment, but on the second and final reading a two-thirds vote of all those present was necessary (Revised New Testament, Preface, II. fifth rule of May, 25, 1879). But even this plan did not work satisfactorily in the church, for the councils whom you were taught to believe were led by the Holy Spirit in the selection of these books differed continually for centuries! Quite often such disagreements on Heavenly things ended in wholesale murder of bishops by bishops. It seems like God cannot make up His mind let alone infill those making such monumental decisions for all mankind with the fruit of the Spirit. One council as led by the Holy Spirit would adopt a list inserting books which another rejected, and rejecting books which another had inserted, and this continued over and over and over again until the church held one great council which adopted a summary final list which even contradicted itself. The ultimate capstone of such religious bickering and folly was summed-up by the the final ecclesiastical order that has poisoned all of Christianity even to this day:

"This is the Bible. Believe it or be damned."

Thus Christianity has become an exclusive religion that is ingrained by such a tenant which mandates belief in these conflicting and contradicting documents for one's Eternal life; such documents which can be shown to be paralleled to Gentile paganism no less. Why not find out what Jesus really believed about Eternal Life and what was really the Bible for him, and adopt his religious belief system as yours? I would think that as a Christian you would want to do that. Well, this is but the introduction to what I will show you as we begin a serious study into the formation of the New Testament and the role of the Holy Spirit within it...if He had one at all. You will have to be the judge, but you need to know the facts in order to make an intelligent decision on the matter.

THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT BY MARCION - A CRITICAL AND HISTORICAL STUDY OF THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT

Having grown up in Church all of my life, and having a fairly heavy exposure to Mainstream Christianity, and having familiarity with the Bible, possibly you like I noticed that Mainstream Christianity often de-emphasizes the Old Testament and puts a disproportionate amount of emphasis on Paul's epistles. I would hesitate to say that any part of the Scriptures can be overemphasized. However, if we give uncalled-for weight and emphasis on certain parts of the Bible (like the New Testament), and neglect what the rest of the Scriptures teaches about an issue (especially the Old Testament), we will probably develop an unbalanced view of that particular issue which will lead to a misunderstanding of the issue at hand. Thus our obedience and conduct will be incorrect and possibly sinful because we only looked at a small part of Yahweh's revelation in the Bible. What is most troubling is that often parts of the New Testament which contradict the teachings of Moses and the Prophets are emphasized over the Old Testament the only Bible Yeshua knew!

By volume, Paul's epistles make up approximately 5% of the Bible. Paul's writings are considered holy Scripture by Mainstream Christianity, but neither Paul nor the Holy Spirit expected us to give more weight and authority to these epistles than we do to the Old Testament or to the rest of the New Testament, for after all, in Acts 28:23 it is recorded that the Apostle Paul taught "Jesus" as being the Messiah from out of the Law of Moses and the Prophets in the Old Testament.

Answer for yourself: Do you not find it interesting that over 35 years since the cross of Christ we find the Apostle Paul teaching out of the Old Testament and not using his personal letters as Scripture?

By putting a disproportionate amount of emphasis on these letters (only 5 % of the whole Bible) that Paul sent to various churches, we fail to follow the example of Paul, who told the Ephesians, "I have not shunned to declare unto you ALL the counsel of God" (Ac.20:27). By neglecting certain parts of the Bible (95% of which lies outside the Pauline epistles), we ignore Paul's declaration that "all Scripture is inspired and is useful" (2 Tim.3:16). Dear believer when Paul uttered this often quoted saying that "all Scripture is inspired and is useful for doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction" the bulk of his writings had not even been written yet, and without a doubt, he was referring to the Bible used by Jesus which is the Old Testament which is tragically so overlooked in the churches that bear his name today. In fact the vast majority of churches that bear his name teach just the opposite of what Jesus taught in that they teach the Law (Torah=instruction) has passed away and has been replaced by "grace."

Christianity's strong emphasis on Paul's writings, and lack of emphasis on so much of the rest of the Bible, is puzzling, no only to me but to the many who study the Scriptures in detail. It is especially puzzling when we consider Peter's warning about Paul's writings: "His letters contain some things that are hard to understand, which ignorant and unstable people distort, as they do the other Scriptures, to their own destruction" (2 Pet.3:16).

Answer for yourself: Now don't you think it ironic and puzzling that Christianity today primarily focuses on that 5% of the Bible that even the Apostles who lived with Jesus and headed up his Church found unsettling, difficult to understand, and easily misunderstood?

Answer for yourself: Possibly have we, with all our good intentions, also been misled by what we hear today from those who themselves have misunderstood the often contradictory passages in our Bibles written by Paul? Let me give you one for instance:

LET US LOOK AT JUST ONE OF THE PAULINE CONTRADICTIONS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

Paul states in Romans 2:13 that: "For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified."

Then we see that Paul states in Romans 3:20 that: "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight."

There you have it. Paul states in Romans 2:13 we are justified by deeds of the Law then he contradicts himself in Romans 3:20 by saying that none will be justified by the deeds of the law.

Answer for yourself: Which are we to believe? Are you confused? Is Paul confused? What are we to believe?

Answer for yourself: Is faith without confirming obedience enough for eternal life?

If it was NOT easy for Paul's contemporaries to understand his epistles, we can be sure that it will be even HARDER FOR US to do so, with our limited knowledge of the times, situations and problems Paul was addressing when he wrote to these various churches. Yet some Christians, perhaps unknowingly, are more intent on following the easy-to-misunderstand teachings contained in Paul's letters than they are on following the plain teachings of the Messiah Jesus contained in the Gospels.

HOW DID 5% OF THE BIBLE (PAUL'S LETTERS) BECOME SO IMPORTANT TO THE EXCLUSION OF THE OLD TESTAMENT? MARCION GIVES US OUR FIRST NEW TESTAMENT

Answer for yourself: Who is responsible for putting together such conflicting writings and passing them off as an authority for faith and practice, let alone a replacement for the Old Testament?

Answer for yourself: How did this shift of focus come about?

Answer for yourself: What caused the Church to begin paying so much attention to Paul and so little attention to the Law and the Prophets and other parts of the Bible which to Jesus was his whole Bible?

To discover the answer to this question, we must go all the way back to the Second Century. After all the original Apostles had died, other people took on the responsibility of continuing the Church's work. The original Apostles were all Jews, who had been exposed to the teachings of the Law and the Prophets since their childhood. The leaders who replaced the Law and the Prophets with the Pauline epistles were mostly Gentiles from pagan backgrounds, who had comparatively little understanding of the Old Testament Scriptures (who previously were Gentiles in the flesh...being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world). We can read about these people in various documents from the Second Century.

One Church historian has this to say about these documents: "Many stories come in versions so distorted that it is hard to decide whether the principal characters were worthy successors to the apostles, or the devil's own agents. Perhaps their contemporaries were as uncertain as we are." (Smith, M. A. From Christ to Constantine, London: Intervarsity Press, 1971, p.14).

There is one character, however, which was undoubtedly one of the greatest adversaries to maintaining the faith once given to the saints.... the heretic Marcion. Marcion lived in the second half of the Second Century and it was he who was the first to collect and alter the writings in existent at that time from the followers of Yeshua. Marcion taught that the entire Old Testament should be rejected because it belonged to an evil, inferior God, and not to the God revealed by Jesus of Nazareth. With such an attitude it is easy to understand why his "First New Testament" was an aberration of truth which in reality was founded upon anti-Semitism.

Marcion was very anti-Jewish; therefore he also rejected any New Testament writings which appeared to speak favorably of "Jewish practices" (i.e., keeping the laws and commandments of the Old Testament, keeping the Festivals and Holy Days of the LORD, keeping the Sabbath, etc.). As one writer notes, "Marcion started the trend which has had many followers right up to the present -- if it doesn't suit the theory excise it as spurious or an interpolation." (Smith, M. A. From Christ to Constantine, London: Intervarsity Press, 1971, p.53).

THE MAKING OF THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT

By the time Marcion finished editing the existing writings from the Yeshua's followers, Marcion's "Bible", or should I say New Testament, consisted of nothing more than Luke's Gospel (minus the "Jewish" elements...including the infancy narratives) and ten of Paul's epistles (many of which were added to and altered by the Monks until the completion of the Canon). That is all that was there. What is important for you to realize is that Marcion's "skeleton" would be adopted, added to, and deletions made by Irenaeus in 180 C.E. Now we have the New Testament which will become the foundation for the Catholic Church in years to come.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the infancy narratives, especially Luke chapter 1-3 were not in there?

Answer for yourself: Were you also aware that Romans chapter 9, 10, and 11 were not in Marcion's First New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Do you realize that for one who was opposed to Law and partial to grace, and who would have loved to use for his polemic against the Jews such a passage as Romans 10:9-10 (9. That if you shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. 10. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.) could not because it was not written yet nor was it available to be included in his canon?

Answer for yourself: As a Christian don't you find that more than problematic considering it did not exist in 140 C.E. but was added by others before 180 C.E. when we now find it in the Romans collected by Irenaeus?

Paul, Marcion taught, was the only apostle who could be trusted. In reality I found it to be just the opposite after 15 years of in-depth Biblical research.

Marcion's anti-Jewish, pro-Paul churches spread throughout the Roman Empire and soon became a major threat to the Messianic faith. According to historians, Marcion's heresy continued to spread until it finally died out sometime around the Fifth Century.

Answer for yourself: We who claim to believe the Bible must ask ourselves an important question: Did Marcion's anti-Jewish, anti-Old Testament, pro-Paul heresy really die out?

Answer for yourself: Or did the Church simply succumb to it and accommodate it and incorporate it, in a subdued form, into Mainstream Christianity?

MARCION'S INFLUENCE TODAY IN CHRISTIANITY THROUGH HIS COLLECTION OF WRITINGS ...THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT

Answer for yourself: Of course our Bible, unlike Marcion's, includes the Law and the Prophets, but how much do we heed their instruction?

Answer for yourself: When was the last time your church preached out of the Old Testament?

Answer for yourself: How many classes in your church's educational program is devoted to the Old Testament?

Answer for yourself: When you read the Bible for yourself do you find that you read the New Testament more than the Old Testament?

When we examine the average Christian's attitude to the Law and the Prophets, it is obvious that the influence of Marcion is very much alive in the church today and actually determines what is being taught and what is not being taught.

Although the Church pays lip service to the inspiration and authority of all the Scriptures, the Church's de-emphasis of the Law, the Prophets, and anything "Jewish," and its heavy emphasis on Paul to the exclusion of other sections of the Bible, reveals that the Christian Church today is basically Marcionite in practice and that the influence of Marcion is alive in the churches of today. For those who doubt this assertion, let us examine some things that Marcion taught, and we will see that the influence of Marcion still has a very strong influence on the Church today.

MARCION'S THEOLOGY IS TO BE FOUND IN THE WRITINGS HE PUT TOGETHER AND ALTERED...THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT

Marcion's most influential writing was a work entitled Antithesis, described as "a highly competent work" which consisted of "contrasted statements arranged to prove the incompatibility of the law and the gospel." (Tertullian, Against Marcion, trans. and ed. Ernest Evans, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1972, p.xv). Please notice that other Gentile church fathers even were aware of Marcion's intent to contrast Law vs. Gospel, or more appropriately understood, contrast the Old Testament vs. the New Testament. Sadly this idea is prevalent in most churches today.

Unfortunately (or perhaps fortunately), there are no known copies of Antithesis in existence. What we know about Marcion's teachings comes mainly from the writings of those who opposed his heresy. The one to write the most about Marcion was Tertullian, a church leader who wrote a lengthy work called Against Marcion. Tertullian describes Antithesis as "a work strained into making such a division between the Law and the Gospel as thereby to make two separate gods, opposite to each other, one belonging to one instrument (or, as it is more usual to say, testament), one to the other, and thus lends its patronage to faith in another gospel, that according to Antithesis." (Tertullian, IV.1)

No real Christian today would admit to believing in two gods, of course. Yet many believers make such a division between Old Testament Law and New Testament grace; they view the Law as something opposed to grace (its not). Because of the influence of Marcion the Law is seen as something obsolete and of little use to a Christian today. Such a warped view of God's Law will carry over into our view of God Himself. If God's Old Testament Law is opposed to God's New Testament grace, we end up with either a schizophrenic God, or Marcion's two gods.

"Marcion sets up unequal gods," Tertullian writes, "the one a judge, fierce and warlike, the other mild and peaceable, solely kind and supremely good." (Tertullian, IV.1.6)

Answer for yourself: Is this not exactly what many Christians do?

They shun the "Old Testament God" because He is too stern and fierce. They focus instead upon the "New Testament God," who, in their minds, does not expect obedience to His laws. Listen to Tertullian's description of Marcion's God, and see if it is not a description of the god presented by the Church today: Marcion's god "displays neither hostility nor wrath." He "neither condemns nor disdains" and "does not punish." "A better god has been discovered," Tertullian sarcastically writes, "one who is neither offended nor angry nor inflicts punishment...he is merely kind. Of course he forbids you to sin -- but only in writing. It lies with you whether you consent to accord him obedience." (Tertullian, IV.1.26f).

"To what purpose does he lay down commands?" Tertullian asks. "This god is exceptionally dull-witted if he is not offended by the doing of that which he dislikes to see being done." (Tertullian, IV.1.26f).

We should ask ourselves the same question about the God we worship.

Answer for yourself: To what purpose does God lay down commands which He never expected to be obeyed by his people?

We are certainly not justified by keeping the Law without faith. We are justified by faith first.

Answer for yourself: But after we are justified, what are we to do with God's commandments? Are we to put them into practice, or are we to ignore or disobey them?

One thing that has helped the influence of Marcion to thrive so well in the Twentieth Century Church is the popularity of the Scofield Reference Bible. Even Christians who have never seen a Scofield Bible have probably been affected by it indirectly, through preachers and teachers who have been influenced by it. The Scofield Bible contains many excellent study notes and aids to understanding the Scriptures. Several of Scofield's notes, however, strongly suggest a Marcionite view of Law and Grace. A reader of Scofield's notes is left with the impression that Law and Grace are mutually exclusive and are opposite forces that continually oppose each other. Scofield's anti-law bias has fed and nurtured and sustained the tares of nomophobia (fear of the law) that Marcion sowed in the Church nineteen centuries ago. As the end of the age approaches, God is sending forth His messengers to uproot these tares, so His wheat can mature and bring forth the fruit of obedience to God's laws.

Sadly a spirit of lawlessness (rejection of Law with a replacement of grace only) has been hanging over the Church for most of its history. Some Christians have been influenced by it more than others, of course. It may be hard for you to understand this, but Paul saw this same insidious thing beginning in his lifetime. Second Thessalonians speaks about "the secret power of lawlessness" which was "already at work" when Paul wrote to the Thessalonians. Paul told the Thessalonians that before the Messiah returned, there would be a "falling away" (apostasy, 'departure from truth'). Notice this was written about "religious people." This departure from "the truth" would then open the door for something called "the man of lawlessness" to come forth. This "coming of the lawless one" would be accompanied by "all kinds of counterfeit miracles, signs and wonders" which would "deceive those who are perishing."

"They perish because they refused to love the truth and so be saved," Paul writes. "For this reason God sends them a powerful delusion so that they will believe the lie." In preparation for the coming of the Messiah, God is also sending a powerful revelation to graciously expose the ancient lie, so that those who love the truth can depart from error and be freed from the bewitching influence of the spirit of lawlessness.

In 1989, Ted Turner of CNN declared the Ten Commandments obsolete, and offered his own "Ten Voluntary Initiatives" as an alternative to God's outdated laws. No one should take Turner seriously, of course, but he did make one comment that deserves our attention. "Nobody around likes to be commanded," he said.

"Commandments are out." (Turner's Commandments," Peoria Journal Star, 27 Oct., 1989, section D, p.22).

Answer for yourself: Christians may scoff at Turner's idea of replacing God's laws with human ideas, yet is this not the very thing the Church has done with some of God's commandments?

We have replaced the 24-hour, seventh-day Sabbath with an hour or two of Sunday morning worship; we have replaced the Biblical holy days with holidays of pagan origin; we have replaced God's dietary guidelines with our own ideas about what we should eat, and we have replaced giving the tithe to places ONLY where God has placed his name to the general fund of churches who use the LORD'S moneys in any way they desire. For your information the tithe in the Bible is to go to ONLY three categories or receptacles: 1) the widows, orphans, sick, lame blind, etc., 2) you are to keep part of your tithe to celebrate the LORD'S Festivals, Sabbaths, and help the poor to observe them with you, and 3) to the Levite or the "teacher" (not the preacher..for once you are taught, then it is you in the pew who are to preach to the world) who teaches the truth of God's Word and not the by-laws of your particular denomination.

Answer for yourself: Do you not realize that if your church does not distribute the LORD'S tithe accurately then you are a party to "robbing God" and you have placed yourself and your family "under a curse?"

Having said that you can now better understand the following question.

Answer for yourself: After a person has been forgiven and justified by faith, where should he look for moral instruction?

Answer for yourself: Should he look to God's commandments to tell him how to live the Christian life, or should he ignore God's commandments and live according to man's suggestions, denominational guidelines, or other's religious recommendations which often contradict Scripture?

Even Scofield, in spite of all his anti-law bias and nomophobia, concedes that the Old Testament commandments "are used in the distinctively Christian Scriptures as an instruction in righteousness." (The Scofield Reference Bible, ed. C. I. Scofield, New York: Oxford University Press, 1917, p.l245).

In Against Marcion, Tertullian accuses Marcion and his followers of "forbidding what [God] commands and commanding what he forbids." (Tertullian, IV.1). The influence of Marcion continues to do this very same thing in the Church today. Mainstream Christianity has criticized believers for keeping the seventh-day Sabbath, for celebrating the Biblical holy days like Passover instead of Easter, for practicing the dietary laws (which is taught by James for all Gentile believers in Jesus in Acts 15 as he quotes from the Laws of Noah for believing Gentiles), for placing one's tithe in other places than the local church (the storehouse which was to receive "all the tithe" is a food barn...none of the tithe was every allowed by God to be used for church building payments or administration), and for refusing to shave their beards...all things that God has commanded. And, like Marcion, Mainstream Christianity often commands what God forbids: "Forget the Sabbath. Ignore the holy days and dietary laws, bring your tithe to the storehouse for the church is "the storehouse" (which it is not!). And shave that beard, so you'll look like a Christian!" Many Bible colleges and seminaries command their students to shave the beard, in spite of God's command in Lev.19:27.

Marcion, like many church leaders today, misused the words of Jesus and the words of Paul to support this nomophobic, anti-Jewish, pro-Paul gospel. Tertullian rightly points out that Jesus' verbal attacks upon the teachers of the Law were not aimed at the Law itself but man's perversion and misuse of God's Law. "He is not criticizing the burdens of the law," Tertullian writes. The burdens Jesus criticized were, according to Tertullian, "those which they piled on of their own, teaching for precepts the doctrines of men." (Ibid., IV.27). You only have to review the previous paragraph to reacquaint yourself with several examples where by religious men have substituted church programs, denominational structures, and the commandments of well-intentioned religious men for the commandments of God.

Tertullian shows the importance Jesus attached to keeping the commandments when he writes about the rich young ruler who approached Jesus: "So when he is asked by that certain man, 'Good Teacher, what shall I do to obtain possession of eternal life?', he inquired whether he knew --which means, was keeping -- the Creator's commandments. Come now, Marcion, and all you dear brethren who find yourself immersed in the offensiveness of that heretic, will you be bold enough to say "Did Christ here abolish those former commands...?" No way!

Tertullian opposes Marcion's misuse of Paul's writings by pointing out the "Jewishness" of Paul's faith, and then asking, "What had (Paul) still to do with Jewish custom, if he was the destroyer of Judaism?" (Ibid., V.5).

He also refers to Romans 7:7 to combat Marcion's hatred of the Law: "What shall we say then? That the law is sin? God forbid." Shame on you, Marcion. When Paul states "God forbid" the apostle expresses abhorrence of those who were complaining against the law...Yet he adds even more: "The law is holy, and its commandment is just, and good." (Ibid., V.14). As Tertullian points out later, ''you cannot make a promoter of the law into an opponent of it." (Ibid., V.17). This correct view by this Gentile teacher has, for the most part, being completely overlooked and replaced by a faith that rejects the Law that Jesus accepted.

Unfortunately, the organized Church, not only would ignore men like Tertullian and other, but they also ignored Paul's positive statements about the Law and Jesus' warning about the necessity of continuing to practice and teach the Old Testament commandments. (See Matt.5:17-19.)

MARCION'S CANON INFLUENCED THE THEOLOGY OF THOSE WHO WOULD WRITE ABOUT THE FAITH LATER

The Epistle of Barnabas, an influential letter written in the Second Century, indicates the general direction the Gentile Church was heading in its attitude to the Old Testament. "The main theme of Barnabas", writes one church historian, "is a spiritualization of the Mosaic law." The writer holds that the were "wrong to take the Old Testament literally." (Smith, M. A. From Christ to Constantine, Intervarsity Press, 1971, p.39). Everything in the Old Testament was allegorized to give it a Christian meaning, thus destroying the literal meaning which tells us what to do and what not to do. Even the commandments were taken figuratively, because, according to Barnabas, ''the law of Moses had never been meant to be taken literally." (Eerdman's Handbook To The History Of Christianity, ed. Tim Dowley, Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans, 1977, p.102). I find it rather difficult for a Jew who grew up loving the Torah to ever express such a diabolical view of the Law of God that all Jews grew up loving. To the Gentiles the dietary restrictions were said to represent not actual food, but various kinds of sinful habits. What well meaning Gentiles fail to understand is that in Rabbinic interpretation one always begins with the "Peshat" method of interpretation which is ALWAYS the plain, ordinary and simple meaning of the verse...which is always understood in a literal understanding. So to discount the first level of Scripture interpretation is quite surprising to those who know the methods of Hebraic Scriptural Hermeneutic.

Remembering that Marcion's New Testament existed before Justin, then it is not hard to understand that Justin Martyr's Dialogue With Trypho The Jew also shows early Christianity's negative attitude toward the Law. Trypho the Jew expresses bewilderment when he tells Justin, ''[You Christians] spurn the commands...and then try to convince us [Torah-observant Jews] that you know God, when you fail to do those things that every God-fearing person would do. If, therefore, you can give a satisfactory reply to these charges and can show us on what you place your hopes, even though you refuse to obey the Law, we will listen to you most willingly, and then we can go on and do in the same manner our other differences.'' (Justin Martyr, Dialogue With Trypho, ch.10. Ibid., ch.ll, 14. 20Ibid., ch.47).

Justin replies by saying that the Law is "abrogated," "voided,'" and tells Trypho, "You understand all in a carnal way.'' (Ibid., ch. 11, 14).

BUT NOT EVERYONE WAS DECEIVED BY MARCION'S FIRST NEW TESTAMENT AND HIS ANTI-JEWISH THEOLOGY

Not all followers of the Messiah were influenced by the nomophobic, anti-Old Testament, pro-Paul gospel of Marcion. There is historical evidence of several groups of believers who practiced the Law as an expression of their faith God along with their belief in Yeshua as the Messiah.

After Trypho asks Justin about the possibility of believing in Yeshua as the Messiah and continuing to observe the commandments, Justin writes his reply: "Yes, Trypho, I conceded, there are some Christians who...desire to observe as many of the Mosaic precepts as possible...precepts which we think were instituted because of your hardness of heart...while at the same time they place their hope in Christ..." (Ibid., ch. 47).

Answer for yourself: Dear Child of God….did you hear history speak to you through Justin and his anti-Semitism and anti-Judaic theology?

Well into the second century the Gentile Christians (believers in the God of Israel as well as believers in the Jewish Messiah) kept the Law and the testimony of Jesus (see Rev.12:17 & 14:12)! Justin, previously a pagan philosopher who was in times past a stranger to the covenant promises, alien to the commonwealth of Israel, without hope and without God and who grew up knowing no restrains to his flesh, obviously disagreed with these Law-keeping Messianic believers, but he does acknowledge their existence. Notice that the Messianic community had not discarded the Law but continued to teach all nations to observe those things commanded by Jesus! Some would obey and others, like Justin, would find excuses not to submit to the rule of God over their lives in many areas...today we call this "Salad Bar Christianity." The uninformed Christian usually "picks" and "chooses" what he will obey and what he will not submit to.

The best-known of these groups who believed in Yeshua and practiced the Torah were the Nazarenes and the Ebionites. There were other groups, more obscure and far less orthodox, such as the Elchasaites and the Pseudoclementines. (Austin, Bill R. Austin's Topical History of Christianity, Wheaton, IL: Tyndale House, 1983, p.72f).

Some doctrinal errors in some of these groups probably contributed to the decision of the Mainstream Gentile Church to adopt Marcion's anti-law, anti-Jewish attitude. One writer notes that "Jewish Christianity in various forms continued as a disturbing factor until almost the Fifth Century. (Ibid., p. 73).

It is interesting that this is the same time that Marcion's heresy supposedly "died out." Once Marcion's error (in a modified, subdued form) had been fully assimilated into the Mainstream Church, "Jewish Christianity" was no longer a "disturbing factor" because the Law-keeping Christians were greatly outnumbered by those who had adopted Marcion's attitude toward the Law. The number of those who upheld both the Torah and the Messiah (see Rev.12:17 & 14:12) was so insignificant by the Fifth Century that the Mainstream Church no longer considered them a threat. But let us never forget that in obedience to the Great Commission the Jewish disciples of Jesus went into all the world (to the Gentiles) and taught them to observe those things that Yeshua taught. This is the true Great Commission.

The Good news I share with you is that "the remnant" who observed the original faith of Jesus and adhered to the faith once given to the saints exists today! For many they could now be written off as a fringe group, and conveniently ignored. Though they were few in number compared to the now-Marcionized Mainstream Church, these groups who upheld both the Torah and the Messiah continued to exist until at least as late as the Tenth Century (1000 years). (Flusser, David Jewish Sources in Early Christianity, New York: Adama Books, 1987, p.88).

While Mainstream Christianity, influenced by Marcion, de-emphasized the Law and over-emphasized Paul, groups such as the Ebionites totally rejected Paul, viewing him as an apostate and enemy of the Law.

The solution is not to reject either Paul or the Law; the solution is to view Paul's writings in a way that will allow them to harmonize with what the rest of the Bible says about the Law.

Answer for yourself: How should a disciple of Yeshua view Paul's epistles?

WHAT WE MUST REMEMBER BEFORE READING MARCION'S NEW TESTAMENT...THE LEGACY OF WHAT WE CARRY TODAY IN OUR BIBLES

If you have been faithful to study our web site up to this point, then you realize that the canon of the New Testament was not recognized until 380 C.E. and the very first collection of such writing was by Marcion in 140 C.E. A lot of changes, additions and deletions occurred during this 240 year period. Much would be changed after that as well. Understand that Marcion's anti-Jewish theology was incorporated among the pages of documents which others would build upon later in the canonization of the New Testament. Of course changes, additions, and deletions were made over the years, especially in light of the successive Catholic Church Councils. This is hard fact. But what we must realize is that when we read these documents called the New Testament today that among the writing we have both passages reflecting what Yeshua both believed and practiced as well as what he opposed. Telling the difference is the hard part. But without such an awareness one is gullible to accept everything written in the New Testament without question. Such is not only unwise but foolish.

SO HOW AM I TO READ THE NEW TESTAMENT AND TELL TRUTH FROM ERROR?

To complete answer that question the whole of this web site is dedicated. But at least let us start with some basic principles for reading the New Testament accurately in search for truth. For those who desire to be faithful and to live "by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God," seven guidelines are listed below. The Bible student should keep these guidelines in mind when reading Paul's writings in order to arrive at a correct Biblical understanding.

PRINCIPLE 1: LOOK AT THE OVER-ALL BIBLICAL CONTEXT

Paul's epistles, like any other part of Scripture, must be viewed in the light of the entire Bible. This means that when we are dealing with the Law, we must not focus in on a few statements Paul made, and ignore everything else the Bible says about God's Law. As pointed out earlier, Paul's writings make up approximately 5% of the Bible. Paul's writings must be understood in a way that will make them compatible with what the other 95% of the Bible says. In other words, let the other 95% of the Bible interpret the 5% that Paul wrote.

It is important to remember that for many years, the Old Testament was the only Bible the Early Church had. The New Testament writings were gradually accepted into the canon of the Scriptures over four hundred years. It was not until about the middle of the Second Century that the term "the Scriptures" was ever used in referring to the New Testament. (Smith, p.63). Therefore, when New Testament writers mention "the Scriptures" or the commandments," they are referring to the Old Testament!

PRINCIPLE 2: HISTORICAL CONTEXT

The New Jerusalem Bible, in its Introduction to Paul, makes this statement: "It is important to remember that Paul's letters were not meant as theological treatises: most of them represent his response to a particular situation in a particular church....Paul's letters do not give any systematic and exhaustive exposition of his teaching; they presuppose the oral teaching which preceded them, and enlarge and comment only upon certain points of that. (The New Jerusalem Bible, ed. Henry Wansbrough, New York: Doubleday and Co., 1985, p.l852f).

Because Paul often wrote to correct particular problems in particular churches, we must have some knowledge of the situation Paul was addressing if we are to understand his writings. Sometimes the problem can be inferred from Paul's remarks, but often we are left with little or no knowledge of the situations Paul was dealing with. In reality, except for the epistle of Ephesians which was intended to be passed around among various churches, the vast majority of Paul's letters were "private mail" from one party to another. It is not out of question to even consider that we are "reading another's mail" which was never intended for us since we do not find ourselves with such unique problems that prompted the letters.

Answer for yourself: Surely we are not guilty of tampering with the mail are we?

Theologians often try to reconstruct the historical backgrounds of the epistles, and make educated guesses about the problems Paul was addressing. This can be a noble effort, if it is done in a sincere attempt to come to a clearer understanding of what Paul taught. Unfortunately, many people come to an understanding of Paul that contradicts what the rest of the Bible teaches, either by incorrectly reconstructing the historical background, or by ignoring it altogether.

PRINCIPLE 3: PETER'S WARNING

It is important to bear in mind Peter's warning that Paul's letters are not easy to understand: "His letters contain some things that are hard to understand, which ignorant and unstable people distort, as they do the other Scriptures, to their own destruction." Therefore, dear friends, since you already know this, be on your guard so that you may not be carried away by the error of lawless men and fall from your secure position (2 Pet. 3:16f).

Those with little or no knowledge of the Old Testament Scriptures are especially apt to misinterpret Paul's writings to their own ruin. Notice, it is not the Law-keeping disciples of Yeshua who distort Paul's epistles -- it is "lawless men" that Peter warns us about.

PRINCIPLE 4: YESHUA'S WARNING

Early in His ministry, Yeshua spoke this warning to his followers: "Do not think that I have come to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I have not come to abolish them but to fulfill them. I tell you the truth, until heaven and earth disappear, not the smallest letter, not the least stroke of a pen, will by any means disappear from the Law until everything is accomplished. Anyone who breaks one of the least of these commandments and teaches others to do the same will be called least in the kingdom of heaven, but whoever practices and teaches these commands will be called great in the kingdom of heaven" (Matt.5:17-l9).

Yeshua's warning seems plain and simple enough to understand, yet many Christians mistakenly believe that by fulfilling the Law, he thereby abolished it. This is exactly what he is warning us not to think! "I have come to fulfill the Law," he says, "but do not even think that by fulfilling it, I am thereby abolishing it."

Sometimes it is easier for people outside Mainstream Christianity to see the blindness of Christians in this area. The Jewish Encyclopedia quotes Jesus' warning of Matt.5:17, and then makes this bold statement: "The rejection of the Law by Christianity, therefore, was a departure from its Christ." (The Jewish Encyclopedia, ed. Isidore Singer New York and London: Funk and Wagnalls, 1903, Vol.V., p.52).

In an article with the catchy title, "Jesus Was Not a Christian," the writer points out that "Jesus certainly wouldn't have been recognized as a Christian throughout his entire life." He "scrupulously adhered to the law of Moses" and "enjoined his disciples to keep every detail of the Torah." (John Murray Smoot, Jesus Was Not a Christian," A Way in the Wilderness, ed. M. G. Einspruch, Baltimore: The Lederer Foundation, 1981, p.28).

A story in the New York Yiddish Forward tells of a reporter's encounter with an old Hasidic Jew in Paris years ago. This Jew had a fervent faith in Jesus as the Messiah. When the reporter asked him about the compatibility of Orthodox Judaism and belief in Jesus, the old man replied, "Who then should believe in him -- the gentiles?" The reporter describes the old man's remarks this way: "He said that only Jews can truly accept belief in Jesus as the Messiah and regard him as the last prophet, for gentiles can never accept such a lofty faith. It is next to impossible for them to walk in his ways, for first of all, Yeshua, as he called him, commanded to observe all the Jewish laws, the entire Torah, and gentiles do not even know this." (J. Feldman, "Yozel's Hasid," The Ox, the Ass, the Oyster, ed. Henry and Marie Einspruch, Baltimore: The Lederer Foundation, 1975, p.74.

Of course it is not impossible for Gentiles to accept and practice such a lofty faith.

Answer for yourself: The question is, will they do it? Or will they continue to cling to the lies of Marcion? How about you?

PRINCIPLE 5: PAUL'S POSITIVE STATEMENTS ABOUT THE LAW

Many Christians overlook or choose to ignore the positive things Paul said about the Law. He writes, for example, "the law is holy, and the commandment is holy, righteous and good" (Rom.7:12). Paul says, "For in my inner being I delight in God's law" and "I myself in my mind am a slave to God's law" (Rom.7:22,25).

He tells Timothy, "We know that the law is good if one uses it properly" (1 Tim.1:8). To the Corinthians he writes, "Keeping God's commandments is what counts" (1 Cor.7:19). Even when explaining the righteousness that comes by faith, Paul is careful to make sure his readers know that their faith does not give them an excuse to ignore God's Law: "Do we, then, nullify the law by this faith? Not at all! Rather, we uphold the law" (Rom.3;31).

PRINCIPLE 6: PAUL'S NEGATIVE STATEMENTS ABOUT THE LAW

Paul, in his negative statements about the Law, was not criticizing the Law itself, but man's misuse of the Law.

The Law was meant to be a moral guide for a people already justified by faith, but some people in Paul's day were depending on their Law-keeping as the means of their justification before God. What Paul criticized was not Law-keeping itself, but making Law-keeping the basis of one's justification before God.

Between the Babylonian Captivity and the time of the Messiah, Israel developed an erroneous understanding of the Law's purpose. The Jews who first returned from Babylon knew that their exile had been the result of the breaking of God's laws; therefore, they put a heavy emphasis on the Law when they returned to their homeland. Unfortunately, this new emphasis eventually developed a theology that caused some people to erroneously view Law-keeping, rather than faith, as the key to their justification. Paul's negative statements about the Law were simply his attempts to correct this erroneous use of the Law.

One writer puts it this way: "Paul, in his epistles, affirms the law, yet condemns the wrong emphasis men place upon it. In this sense he is turning believers back to the original intent of the law, it being a rule for godly living for those who are already redeemed. He rejects the later shift towards making it a means of salvation." (Michael Schiffman, A Pauline Understanding of the Place of the Law for New Covenant Believers," The Messianic Outreach, 7:3, Spring 1988, p.9).

Another author says basically the same thing when he writes, "Paul rejects the law as a method of salvation but upholds it as a standard for Christian conduct." (Bacchiocchi, Samuele The Sabbath in the New Testament, Berrien Springs, MI: University Printers, 1985, p.101).

If we ignore this fact, we will twist the writings of Paul to our own loss, as Marcion and other lawless men have done throughout the centuries.

PRINCIPLE 7: PAUL'S EXAMPLE

Actions speak louder than words, the well-known proverb says. If we truly want to understand Paul's attitude towards the Law, we must look at his actions as well as his words.

Even in Paul's own lifetime, false rumors were circulating that Paul taught people "to forsake Moses, telling them not to circumcise their children nor to walk according to the customs" (Acts 21:21). To dispel these false accusations, the elders of Jerusalem had Paul go with four men who had taken a vow (a Nazarite vow), telling Paul that in this way "all will know that there is nothing to the things which they have been told about you, but that you yourself also walk orderly, keeping the Law" (Acts 21:24).

To his Jewish accusers from Jerusalem, Paul said, "I have committed no offense either against the Law of the Jews or against the temple" (Acts 25:8). To the Jews in Rome, he repeated this same testimony: "Brethren, though I had done nothing against our people, or the customs of our fathers, yet I was delivered prisoner into the hands of the Romans" (Acts 28:17).

Paul's Law-Keeping included worshipping on the Sabbath (Acts 13:14; 14:1; 16:13;17:1f,10; 18:4,19), celebrating the Biblical holy days (Acts 20:6,16), and taking a Nazarite vow (Acts 18:18) in which he was to bring blood sacrifices and sin offerings after the cross of Yeshua no less (Num. 6). Paul did not do away with the Law as you have been told.

It is very clear that Paul continued to keep the Law after he met Yeshua whom he believed to be the Messiah. The only thing that changed was Paul's reason for keeping the Law. Before, he had kept it in an effort to be justified before God. After meeting Yeshua, he found the justification he had sought through his Law-keeping. Paul was justified through faith, and the Law was internalized, "written upon the heart," as Jeremiah prophesied it would be (31:31-34). Now he desired to obey God's commandments because of the inward impulse of his new nature. His obedience was no longer the result of an external compulsion to justify himself before God by Law-keeping. Thus, he was free to obey "in the way of the Spirit, and not in the old way of the written code" (Rom.7:6).

By keeping the Law, in the right way and for the right reasons, Paul left an example for all disciples to follow, Jew or non-Jew. Some people seem to think that only Jewish believers were expected to continue practicing Torah. The so-called "Great Commission" rules out this possibility. When Jesus instructed His Jewish disciples to go to "all nations [Gentiles]," he told them to teach the Gentile nations "to obey ever thing I have commanded you [My Jewish disciples]" (Matt.28:18ff). He commanded his Jewish disciples to obey the Torah (Matt.5:17-19 & 23:1-3), and they were to teach the Gentiles to do it.

The key to godly living is not to ignore the Law and elevate Paul, as Marcion did. Nor is the solution to overemphasize the Law and reject Paul, as the Ebionites and others did. The solution is to do what Paul said to do: "Follow my example, as I follow the example of Messiah" (1 Cor.11:1). If we truly follow Paul's example, as he followed the example of Messiah, we will begin to practice the Old Testament commandments that the Church has ignored or changed.

A. W. Tozer wrote, "Probably no other portion of the Scriptures can compare with the Pauline epistles when it comes to making artificial saints. (Gems From Tozer, England: Send the Light Trust, 1969, p.18). Let us avoid artificial sainthood by keeping in mind the above-mentioned seven guidelines for understanding Paul's epistles: 1) over-all Biblical context, 2) historical context, 3) Peter's warning, 4) Jesus' warning, 5) Paul's positive statements about the Law, 6) Paul's negative statements about the Law, 7) Paul's example.

As we let the naked truth of Holy Scripture renew our minds and change our thinking, the sunlight of God's Word will dispel the mist of the ghost of Marcion. We will find ourselves transformed as the fog lifts, and as we see the Law as God always meant it to be seen: as something positive, holy, and good, "if one uses it properly" (1 Tim.1:8).

Let those who wish to wholeheartedly follow the Messiah begin to learn the commandments, practice them, and teach them to others, for "whoever practices and teaches these commands will be called great in the kingdom of heaven" (Matt.5:l9). As we banish the legacy and influence of Marcion, the "spirit of lawlessness" from our theology, we will see the commandments not as a yoke of bondage, but as a moral guide by which we can joyfully live a life that is pleasing to the Heavenly Father. Then we will be able to rejoice in God's commandments as the psalmist did: "I will praise You with an upright heart as I learn your righteous laws...I rejoice in following Your statutes as one rejoices in great riches...I have chosen the way of truth; I have set my heart on Your laws. I hold fast to Your statutes, 0 Lord; do not let me be put to shame. I run in the path of Your commands, for You have set my heart free...I will always obey Your law, forever and ever. I will walk about in freedom, for I have sought out Your precepts...Great peace have they who love Your law, and nothing can make them stumble'' (Ps.119:7,14,30-32,44f,165).

THE INFLUENCE OF MARCION UPON THE FORMATION OF THE "FIRST" NEW TESTAMENT

THE FIRST COLLECTION OF NEW TESTAMENT BOOKS….MARCION

The first collection of New Testament books ever made was by Marcion, called "the heretic," about the year 145 A.D. (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 308). It consisted of one Gospel and ten of Paul's Epistles (Tertullian, Avd. Marc., v.), and they were not then considered the word of God.

"Faith is the divine authority or inspiration of current books had not yet arisen…[Marcion] did not consider Paul's Epistles inspired or of divine authority (Davidson, Intro. N. T., ii. 516-517).

You need to realize that this was seventy-five years after Paul was dead. The Epistles which Marcion accepted were Galatians, First and Second Corinthians, Romans, First and Second Thessalonians, Ephesians, Colossians, Phillipians, and Philemon (Davidson, Intro. N. T., ii. 516-517). He omitted First and Second Timothy, Titus, and Hebrews, which we have since called genuine and placed in the Bible. His Gospel has been the subject of much controversy, the orthodox people asserting that it was Luke's mutilated; and the unbelievers denying this, and asserting that it was the manuscript from which Luke's Gospel was subsequently made up. The facts are these: Marcion's Gospel had no name (Tert., Adv. Haer., iv. 2). Indeed, as St. Chrysostom observes, none of the apostles affixed their signatures to the Gospels now bearing their names (Hom. I. in Epis. Ad. Rom.). That was the work of the church long afterward, and we have simply the church's word that they are genuine. And thus we find that in Marcion's time, more than a century after Jesus was crucified, even if a Gospel by Luke were in existence, his name had not yet been attached to it.

Answer for yourself: If Marcion's Gospel was Luke's Gospel the question arises: "How does it happen that a heretic was in possession of a genuine Gospel before the church itself was?" That's a good one. The inference is plain. It was the Luke we would later have "re-worked" by the Catholic Church how would later add the first three chapter which were missing in Marcion's Gospel. That explains all the errors and mistakes in these three chapters.

Answer for yourself: Marcion was considered later by the Catholic Church (when they were in authority) a heretic. Can you see that such branding of people as "heretics" was little more than saying that they disagrees with you? This is important when you read early church history because many who had the truth, like the Ebionites, are branded by the Catholic Encyclopedia and early Catholic Fathers as "heretics." Understand this is nothing more than Gentiles disagreeing with Jews. The Jews automatically are deemed "heretics." These Jews, the Ebionites, just happened to be the first followers of Yeshua in the first century. Should such ones who knew him personally be called "heretics" by those who replaced the religion of Jesus with one of their own making?

Marcion's Gospel was identical, word for word, with about three-fourths of the present Gospel of Luke, and it was shorter than Luke. Now, you should know how annotations made on the margin of a manuscript find their way into the text in the process of coping, and this in time increase the length of a work, so that of two manuscripts of the same book, one shorter than the other, the shorter is generally the older. As I have said, Marcion's Gospel was the shorter. The charge has been made that Marcion purposefully mutilated Paul's Epistles and Luke's Gospel to suit his doctrinal needs. It originated with Irenaeus, and was repeated with great violence by Tertullian and Epiphanius, and has been reiterated by theologians ever since, until very recently orthodoxy itself began to admit that it is not true (Davidson, Intro. N.T., ii. 517). So far from Marcion being a "heretic," he included in his canonical list all that he considered to be genuine Christian books (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 311), and he gives indications of having been a much more careful scholar than his accusers. This is the irony of redactionist history by those who come to power and rewrite history to their own liking. The Epistle which we now call "to the Ephesians" Marcion called "to the Laodiceans" and prided himself on restoring its true name (Tert. Adv. Marc., x. 17). He omitted from his Gospel the parable of the prodigal son (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 312), and from the Epistle to the Romans chapters 9-11 as well as the last two chapters (Origen, Comm. In Rom., xvi. 25), either because they were not there in his time, or because he was satisfied they were interpolations. Either way they were to be rejected. That means, Paul did not write them, because Marcion being pro-Pauline, would have included them for his advantage against the Jews if they existed. That also means that favorite memorized passage by most Christians, Romans 9:10-11 was not in the earliest Romans and never written by Paul:

Rom 10:9-11

9 That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. 10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. 11 For the scripture saith, Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed. (KJV)

The passages were simply not in the original Romans in 150 A.D.!

Take a minute and let that sink in. This "easy believeism" and be saved passage was never in the original Romans written by Paul? So, who added it later? Are we believing doctrines that God never gave us or spoke? Does this bother you?

EXAMINING THE CHARGES AGAINST MARCION

Understand that Marcion has to be called a heretic today, or else we might seriously investigate his New Testament, or the omissions in it which we think today are given by God and which we live by instead of the Torah! THINK! One only needs to read Tertullian and see how he blasts Marcion. So again, the Catholics are right. Might makes right; it has for a long time. It will soon be time for the Catholic Church to fill in the blanks of Marcion's New Testament. Their anti-Semitic doctrines will become New Testament Scripture in less than fifty years from Marcion's New Testament. So understand, when you pick up an old history book or a current theology book, like I did in Seminary, and read that "so and so" is a "heretic," don't be surprised and understand that most likely they had the "truth" once. You need to read and study to see for yourself. Dear ones, "orthodoxy today" is "unorthodoxy in the first century;" and "unorthodoxy today" is quite often found to be the beliefs of Jesus and the original church. May God forgive us for changing and then neglecting His true Word; the Jewish Palestinian Masoretic Text...the Tanakh. Now before you say you have it in your Old Testament in your Christian Bible, you need to set down for this. It is a blatant and purposeful mistranslation full of hundreds of misquotations affecting doctrine which was done by Greek-Jews of Phythagorean/Buddhist persuasion in the second century B.C.E. More on that elsewhere in this web-site. You need to see the evidence for yourself. I have and provide it for you. It is time to get back to the Bible Jesus used!

Some of the illustrations of the charges against Marcion will indicate their worthlessness character. In Seminary we were enamored with the early Church Fathers. When their names came up you could hear the "oohs" from those who revered them, yet had never read them. At one time that was me included. Such is power of tradition! Well, a lot of time and little reading will enlighten the blind!

We trust these men's doctrines and their writings; all the while believing they knew what they were doing under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. Tertullian will do great damage to Marcion in his writings. He will almost single-handedly convict Marcion for all time of editing "out" much of the "supposed existing New Testament." Tertullian (220 A.D.) says Marcion eliminated from Luke's Gospel the sayings of Jesus that he came not to destroy the law and the prophets, but to fulfill (Adv. Marcion, iv. 7).

Answer for yourself: Did you see a problem with that?

That passage is not in Luke, but in Matthew (Matt. 5:17), yet Tertullian actually repeats this charge on three subsequent occasions (Adv. Marcion, iv. 2, iv.12, iv. 36). Maybe Tertullian should read the Gospels before he comments on them or corrects another about them. Tertullian goes on to say that Marcion must have expunged "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel," and "It is not meet to take the children's bread, and give it to the dogs" (Ibid., iv. 7). These also are not in Luke, but in Matthew (Matt. 15:24-26). The charge that he mutilated the canonical list, and those books which he accepted, will not stand.

There is another noteworthy thing to note: No writer before Marcion's time makes mention of the Gospel according to Luke, and no writer after him does so till Irenaeus, nearly fifty years later. These are the facts.

Many think these facts are sufficient to give ground for suspicion that some one after Marcion took Marcion's "unnamed Gospel" and forged Luke's name to it. Yep! You will have to decide for yourself.

MARCION AND HIS FIRST NEW TESTAMENT

Marcion is the first person known to us who published a fixed collection of what we would call New Testament books. Others may have done so before him; if so, we have no knowledge of them. He rejected the Old Testament totally, as having no relevance or authority for Christians; his collection of documents was therefore designed to be the first New Testament. It is amazing that before Marcion (over 140 years) we find no evidence of the "church" using or even having a need for any writings other than the Jewish Bible of Yeshua. Just consider this one fact for a minute.

Answer for yourself: What implications does this have for you as a believer who attends contemporary churches where the Old Testament is rarely used?

GETTING FAMILIAR WITH MARCION….WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

Marcion was born about 100 C.E. at Sinope, a seaport on the Black Sea coast of Asia Minor. His father was a leader in the synagogue of that city, and Marcion was brought up in the Apostolic Faith. Of all the apostles, the one who appealed to him most strongly was Paul, to whom he became passionately devoted, ultimately concluding that he was the ONLY apostle who preserved the teaching of Yeshua in its purity. This strikes me as almost unbelievable. Paul never met Yeshua or heard him preach or teach one lesson. Paul's only encounter with Yeshua was a vision; it is for that reason I find it hard to imagine that Marcion would discount the lives and testimonies of those who not only knew Yeshua personally, but lived and ministered along his side for three and one-half years. It is hard for any unbiased person to believe that Paul's understanding was greater than James for example; after all James was Yeshua's brother who lived with him over thirty years and was Yeshua's choice to lead the Messianic Congregation after his ascension (and not Paul).

Marcion embraced with great zeal the teachings of Paul, especially his gospel of justification by divine grace, apart from legal works. This view is an incorrect assessment as I have shown in previous newsletters regarding the role of the Law with grace. Marcion has been called "the only man in the early church who understood Paul," however it would be later said of him also that "even in his understanding he misunderstood him." Marcion's refusal to allow any element of law-keeping (obedience) be connected to Paul's understanding of the message of salvation (which is connected with faith) led Marcion to the tragic and incorrect conclusion that the Old Testament, its laws and statutes had been superseded by the gospel. There is only one problem: the Bible in the New Testament never says that (often you have to consult the original languages to see the hidden truths and more correct understandings concerning this issue). Due to inadequate renderings in the English we often arrive at conclusions which were never intended by the original writers. The gospel, Marcion believed, was an "entirely new teaching brought to earth by Messiah". Marcion believed that the law and the prophets made no sort of preparation for the Gospel, and if some passages in Paul's correspondence suggested that they did, then those passages were reasoned by Marcion to be a kind of "judaizing" (reverting back to Hebraic customs and understandings) against whom Marcion believed Paul to have preached against in Galatians and other letters. Marcion made one tragic mistake, he read the New Testament in Greek without reverting back to the Hebrew for comparisons in doctrines and teachings. Such a grave mistake is responsible today for over 1500 denominations that make a laughing stock of Eph 4:5 which holds up "one faith" as the ideal. That "one faith" once delivered to the saints was and still is "the faith" that embraces the Divine Truths within Judaism.

Sources teach us that Marcion appears to have remained in communion with the "proto-Catholic Church" of his day so long as he lived in Asia Minor. There is some reasons to think that he shared his radical thoughts with leading churchmen of the region, such as Polycarp of Smyrna (disciple of the Apostle John) and Papias of Hierapolis, but found them unresponsive.

Desiring a more positive response for his radical teachings, he ventured to talk with the churchman of Rome where he made a handsome donation of money to the church (he was a ship owner and was quite well off). His understanding of the gospel and its implications was so self-evidently right to his own way of thinking that he could not believe that it would fail to be equally self-evident to any other unprejudiced mind. But the Roman churchmen were disturbed by his doctrine that they not only rejected it but even returned the money he had presented to the church! That would be a miracle if done in today's churches!

Not only did Marcion regard Paul as the only faithful apostle of "the Christ"; he maintained that the original apostles had corrupted the teachings of "the Christ" Not only did he reject the Old Testament (the Jewish Bible); he distinguished the God of the Old Testament from the God of the New Testament. Now we have the appearance of two Gods. This distinction of two supposed deities with two different "messages", each with his independent existence speaks of the Gnostic influence on Marcion's thought. At the heart of this "dualism" is mankind's forever confusion over the role of "evil" that ultimately comes from the hand of the "One God". Surely, he reasoned, a perfect loving God could not be the author of evil and wanton destruction in the world. Simply, he failed to understand cosmology as understood by the ancient Spiritual Masters that preceded him. The God who created the material universe, the God of Israel, was (as Marcion held) different from the Father of whom this Jesus speaks. The Father of "the Chirst", as seen in the story of Jesus, was to Marcion the good and merciful God of whom none had ever heard of before until Jesus supposedly came to reveal him. Along the lines of Gnostic teachings, the God who made the material world was an inferior deity (inferior in status, morality and often the author of evil events) to the supreme God who was pure Spirit. He reasoned that surely things like disease could not the the actions of a loving God; there had to be another opposing force that was thwarting the actions of this perfect God. Such mistaken cosmology led to men looking at Marcion and his struggle to explain the role and existence of "evil" in the world as if he believed that there was a "good God" and an "evil God". The Gnostic depreciation of the material order and "matter" finds an echo in Marcion's refusal to believe that "the Christ", in the "Jesus Story", entered human life by being "born of a woman" (Ga. 4:4). The result of such teaching is that one will look forward to the day that he can escape from the evil body and become pure Spirit. This surely sounds familiar (Rom. 8:24). Paul advocates this dualism in a big way since being Gnostic to the core. Gnosticism is often defined as a "cult" of "secret knowledge". Many Gnostic groups shared with Christians a rejection of Laws of Moses; a belief that other beings as an emanation from the One God created the world; the shared belief of a divine mediator between God and man; and finally the belief that nothing "worldly" is of any importance. Only faith in or knowledge of this divine mediator (1 Tim 2:5) which lives within each child of God, would lead one to salvation and eternal life. Gnosticism envisaged the world as a series of emanations from the highest "One", that produced a series of emanations. The lowest emanation was an evil god (the demiurge) who created the material world as a prison for the divine sparks that dwell in human bodies. The Gnostics identified this evil creator with the God of the Old Testament since so often the God of Israel is depicted as being harsh and cruel. Marcion, like other Gnostics, saw the Adam/Eve story and the "Jesus Story" as attempts to liberate humanity from his dominion, by imparting divine secret wisdom to mankind from the god of love. Thus, again we see the two "opposing" forces that reside in the one God. Gnostics like Marcion and Gnostic Christians take an allegorical view of the Old Testament.

We are fortunate that at this time the church of Rome was yet enlightened and unprejudiced, but that would change later. Still the church of Rome found Marcion's teachings unacceptable. So Marcion, despairing of being able to convince the catholic church anywhere of the truth of his message, withdrew from the catholic fellowship and established a church of his own. The church survived for several generations which is surprising since its membership was maintained solely through conversion. It could not keep its membership up by incorporating the children of existing members, for celibacy was obligatory on all its membership. At the same time, Marcion was a faithful enough Paulinist to allow no discrimination against female members of his church in matters of privilege or function because he agreed with Paul that there was "neither male nor female" (Gal. 3:28).

Marcion provided his followers with an his rendition of the First New Testament. Marcion's new scriptures included no part of the Old Testament (Jewish Bible) and were written in Greek. Please keep in mind that he did not call his collection "The New Testament". It would be another 100 years or so before anyone would come up with that idea. Over 110 years from the supposed time for "Jesus" Christianity did not have a need for a "New Testament".

Answer for yourself: From what did the church teach during that 110 years since they did not have a New Testament?

THE EARLY CHURCH USED THE SAME BIBLE YESHUA USED; THE JEWISH BIBLE (OLD TESTAMENT ONLY)

A number of questions should come to your mind at this time:

Answer for yourself: Why didn't the "church" see a need for a New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Why didn't Yeshua tell his disciples to copy his words & produce a replacement Bible?

Answer for yourself: Why didn't Yeshua apostles record Yeshua's words or their own?

Answer for yourself: Why were the writings of the Jewish Bible used as the only Scripture?

Answer for yourself: Why was Marcion so anti-Semitic?

Marcion created "new scriptures" for his followers. He referred to them by the titles he gave to the two component parts: The Gospel and The Apostle. To his own Bible he would later add a series of "Antitheses," which set out the incompatibility of law and gospel, of the Creator-Judge of the Old Testament and the merciful Father of the New Testament (who had nothing to do with either creation or judgment).

Answer for yourself: Do you not find it startling that the teaching that the Old Testament was replaced by a New Testament began with a man who also saw two Gods?

Stop and consider what I just said for a minute (Selah). Because Marcion saw "two Gods" he had need for only the revelation of the "good God" or the New Testament which served as a "replacement testament" to replace the Old Testament of the "Creator-Judge" God of the Old Testament.

Answer for yourself: Now, let me ask you do you believe in two Gods? How about three? Get the point?

The first idea of replacing "law" with "grace" came from one who denied the cardinal teaching of the Bible: "Hear O Israel, the Lord is God, the Lord is ONE!" So when people tell you that they are "not under the Law" I wonder if they do not believe in Jehovah, the God of the Old Testament, who gave the Law in the first place.

The holy Scriptures to which the "Antitheses" served as an introduction inevitably included no part of the Old Testament; they consisted only of an edition of the Greek New Testament. Marcion did not call it a "New Testament", so far as we know, he may not have given any one title to the edition as a whole. He referred to it. as stated above, by the titles which he gave to its two component parts: Gospel and Apostle. Our main source for information about Marcion's Bible is Tertullian's treatise Against Marcion, written over a half century later (190 A.D.), when Marcion had been dead for some decades. Tertullian's response to Marcion is often hostile yet his factual data appears to be reliable.

Marcion's Gospel was an edition of the Gospel of Luke. The selection of Luke is in speculation even today, but more than likely owing to his affinity to Paul, he choose the Gospel of Luke because he was associated with Paul. Marcion nowhere mentioned Luke's name in connection with it; it was presented simply as the gospel of Christ. Its text was purged of those elements which were inconsistent with Marcion's understanding of the truth and which therefore, on his principles, must have been "added" by judaizing scribes. For example the birth of John the Baptist was omitted because it implied a connection between Yeshua and something that went before Him (remember to create a new religion one must have Yeshua not rely on anything in the past, but rather teach everything as if it were new and different). Yeshua brought nothing new with his ministry. He did not create a new religion. He did not do away with Judaism and give Christianity as its replacement. Marcion, as well as numerous others, tried valiantly to cover over the fact that Yeshua brought us nothing new and surely did not come to create a new religion to replace Judaism. If we are forced to see Yeshua quoting other teachers that were his forefathers then it is easy to see that he did not come to bring a new religion as we have incorrectly supposed.

In Marcion's gospel we find no reference the birth of Yeshua whom many feel was written later and added subsequent to original New Testament of Marcion. According to Marcion, Yeshua entered the world not by virgin birth but by a descent as supernatural as was his later ascension. Now pay attention. The material and doctrines that will be very important to the Roman Catholic Church as they will create a new religion later are not to be found among Marcion's Bible or his Gospel of Christ. This means that either the Roman Catholic Church added the accounts or Marcion deleted them from previously existing writings.

Answer for yourself: What were some of the passages not found in Marcion's Gospel which would later show up in the Roman Catholic version?

- The birth of John the Baptist
- The birth of Yeshua
- The immersion of Yeshua
- Yeshua's' genealogy of Luke 3:23-38
- The temptation narrative of Luke 4:1-13
- Yeshua preaching at Nazareth in Luke 4:16-30

Answer for yourself: It is possible that the text of Luke which Marcion used as the basis for his Gospel was not identical with the text that has come down to us? More than likely "yes".

It may have been an earlier edition, lacking the first two chapters. Some consider it a "Proto-Luke". But even if the text which lay before Marcion did lack the first two chapters, it began at the latest with Luke 3:1, "In the fifteenth year of Tiberius Caesar," and those are the words with which Marcion's Gospel began. But the material which follows immediately was unacceptable to him. The account of John the Baptist's ministry and his baptism of Yeshua implies some continuity between Yeshua and the old order. So does the genealogy of Luke 3:23-38, tracing Yeshua's ancestry back to Adam through David & Abraham. Thus it must be excluded! The temptation narrative (Luke 4:1-13) represents Yeshua quoting from Deuteronomy three times, as though it had authority in his eyes. This, for Marcion, was impossible. Surely Yeshua came to begin a new thing; a new Religion! Surely, as Marcion would have us believe, Yeshua did no longer consider Deuteronomy as a necessary Scripture. Marcion was wrong! Equally impossible for Marcion, was the idea that Yeshua, preaching in the synagogue at Nazareth (Luke 4:16-30), should have claimed that his ministry was the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy. So, having begin his edition of the Gospel with Luke 3:1, Marcion went straight on to Luke 4:31 and continued: "Yeshua came down to Capernaum" as though he came down there and then from heaven, fully grown.

In place of "Thy Kingdom come" in his version of the Lord's Prayer (Luke 11:2), Marcion's Gospel had the interesting variation: "Let thy Holy Spirit come on us and cleanse us." He may have found this in the copy of Luke which served as the basis for his edition, or it may have been his own addition. If he added it himself, it is interesting that it would have found its way into the textual tradition of "orthodox" Christians for it is cited by the church father Gregory of Nyssa and Maqximus of Turin, and is the reading on one or two Greek manuscripts of the gospels.

The "old is good" (Luke 5:39) is omitted because it might be taken to imply approval of the Old Testament order and the religion of Yeshua. Possibly Yeshua did not come to replace Judaism with Christianity! Marcion could not entertain such an idea. The reference to Yeshua's mother and brothers could not be retained in Luke 8:19 (For Marcion Yeshua could not belong to any human family). It had to go. There are other peculiarities of Marcion's Gospel which can be explained with equal ease. It is simple; Marcion believed Yeshua was come to bring a replacement faith to Israel and anything that would show otherwise must be stricken from the record! Most Protestant and Catholic churches of today have been so influenced by Marcion that they ascribe to his basic premises! Such a shame.

Marcion's "The Apostle" was an edition of ten letters of Paul. The three Pastoral Epistles (1 & 2 Timothy, Titus) were not included because he used his own Gospel for the basis of this "edition" and it did not contain them. The Chester Beatty codex (P46) of Paul's letters also does not include the same books. Also in Marcion "Apostle" the two letters to the Corinthians are combined as well as the letters to Thessalonica.

Now pay attention. The Marcionite order of Paul's letters is given below:

1. Galatians
2. Corinthians
3. Romans
4. Thessalonians
5. Laodiceans (Ephesians)
6. Colossians
7. Philippians
8. Philemon

Notice the order of these letters in the Roman Catholic Church's Bible:

1. Romans
2. Corinthians
3. Galatians
4. Ephesians
5. Philippians
6. Colossians
7. Thessalonians
8. 1 & 2 Timothy (not in Marcion's Bible)
9. Titus (not in Marcion's Bible)
10. Philemon.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the book of Romans was placed first in the canon of the Roman Catholic Church?

Answer for yourself: Why did those who collected Marcion's documents change the order of his "New Testament" and place the book of Romans first following the gospels?

ROME HAS TO ESTABLISH AUTHORITY FOR THE CHANGING OF THE FAITH OF YESHUA

The Roman Church had to justify the shift in authority from Jerusalem to Rome and what better way to show it than let the book of Romans appear "first" as the first and trend-setting epistle in the New Testament. Also they added books which were not in Marcion's First New Testament.

Answer for yourself: Why? Or, did Marcion omit these books?

Answer for yourself: Who would benefit the most from the adding of these other books at 180 C.E.?

At the beginning of his Apostle Marcion placed the letter to the Galatians in first position. This was to dramatize the differences & opposites between Paul and the Jerusalem apostles. To Marcion the letter (Galatians) mounted a direct attack on the Jerusalem apostles, for it was at their instance (and rightly so), or at least by their agents, that attempts were being made to win Paul's Gentile coverts in Galatia over to a judaistic form of Christianity. The remaining letters of Marcion's canon were arranged in descending order of length, the two letters of Corinthians being reckoned together as one composite letter and the two letter to the Thessalonians being treated in the same way.

Anything that appeared inconsistent with what he believed to be authentic Pauline teaching was regarded as corruption from an alien hand and was removed. The mention of Abraham as the prototype of all who are justified by faith (Gal. 3:6-9) could not be allowed to remain in his Canon because he could not allow to exist any connection between law and the gospel as in Gal. 3:15-25. Thus it most likely was removed from Romans chapter 4.

Now for the most startling information concerning Marcion. His edition of Romans lacked Romans 1:19-2:1; 3:21-4:25; and all of Romans 9-11 except Romans 10:1-4 and 11:33-36, not counting everything after Romans 14:23. The idea of establishing the law through faith (Rom. 3:31), the application of the story of Abraham in chapter 4, the grappling with the mystery of Israel's unbelief in chapters 9-11 (with their concentration of proof-texts from the Old Testament), were all incompatible with Paul's gospel as Marcion understood it. As for chapter 15, its opening section includes a general endorsement of the Christian value of the Old Testament scriptures (vv4) and a string of quotations designed to show that the Gentile mission was foreseen and validated by Old Testament writers (vv 8-12), while its closing paragraph (vv 25-33) bears witness to a concern on Paul's part for the church of Jerusalem which Marcion must found incredible, given his understanding of the relation between Paul and that church.

Now for a land mine! Notice conspicuously absent above in Marcion's First New Testament is Rom. 10:9-10 which states that "if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Yeshua, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness: and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation".

Answer for yourself: Why would not Marcion have included such a "Pauline Dogma" since he was pro-Pauline himself?

The answer is simple. The text in question was not given as inspired by the Holy Spirit to the Apostles and is not part of the original Gospel of Yeshua. It was written and added after Marcion and was not part of the Gospel or included in any Gospel writing as late as 140 years after Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: Did you hear what I said?

Answer for yourself: Don't you think it is about time you began to study to see what kind of religion you practice; the religion according to the teachings of Yeshua or according to the teachings of men?

SALVATION CONSISTS OF BOTH OBEDIENCE TO THE LAW (TORAH/COMMANDMENTS); NOT JUST GRACE ALONE

Because of Marcion and men like him we have two competing Gospels today. To Marcion the "God who created all things" had nothing to do with the gospel; he was a different being from the God and Father of our Yeshua. In this we see Marcion's rejection of all the Old Testament (the Bible Yeshua used). To what extent Marcion's text differed from the one he had inherited and used for the basis of his gospel is not easily discerned. It would appear to have been copied substantially as before containing deletions of Jewish influence and authority, with very little actual additions by Marcion himself. Suffice to say he "dejudiazed" the Scriptures and destroyed the Hebrew roots of the early faith. What is problematic, as said before, is the absence in Marcion's Canon of many texts recognized as "Pauline" by toady's scholars, but which would most assuredly would have been included by Marcion if they had existed in his day (Rom. 10: 9-10).

Answer for yourself: What does that say for our "quick altar prayers" by which we give false security to repentant sinners who "repeat after me" and who we never see again?

The failure to include many passages we accept today as "Bible" by our churches can only mean one thing: they did not exist 140 years after Yeshua! Thus, many additions to the "inspired and infallible" Word of God would be added by Roman Catholics who followed. Thus, they would counter Marcion with their "own Bible" to counteract his Bible. They would write their own authority (Catholic) into the Bible (rework Marcion's Bible) to replace the authority of Jerusalem with the authority of Rome. The authority of Jerusalem was written out of the New Testament and replaced with the authority of Rome. The Catholic Church replaced the Jewish Synagogue. The Pagan Holidays replaced the Lord's Holy Days. Sunday replaced the Sabbath. Tithing to an "organization" or a "building" replaced "righteous giving to the needy." The Temple tax to support the "organization" (Temple) was replaced by robbing the saints of God's provision to them as distributed in the "poor tithe". The Noachide Laws for Gentile acceptance into Israel was replaced with Church Dogma of Augustine and Constantine. Martin Luther would shortly follow. The Lord's Supper was replaced with "Sunday cups and crackers". The Passover was replaced with Easter (fornication festival). Need I go on, because it does not stop here!

IN SUMMARY

- Luke 1:1 thru 2:52 Does not contain the introduction or the story of Yeshua's birth.
- Luke 5:39 Does not contain the phrase "The old is better"...it was added later.
- Luke 8:19 Makes no reference to Yeshua's mother and brothers.
- Luke 11:2 Adds "Let thy Holy Spirit come on us & cleans us".
- Luke 19:9 Does not contain the phrase "because he is the son of Abraham.
- Rom. 1:19-2:1 Does not contain the reasons for and the results of Gentile guilt and sin.
- Rom. 3:21-4:25 Does not contain section on righteousness and acceptance by God of both Jew and Gentile based on faith and obedience.
- Rom. 9-11 All omitted except for 10:1-4 where we see an unbalanced picture of Christ ending all law and 11:33-36. We have a distorted view of Jew & Gentile in God's purpose.
- Everything after Rom. 14:23 is omitted.
- Omission of foundational faith text of Rom. 10:9-10.

Marcion's Bible is of great significance to every modern Christian, because the power and authority of the many different Christian religions and denominations (over 2000) have been created from the words of the New Testament and not from the Old Testament, which was originally the authority for the followers of Christ for over 200 years.

Answer for yourself: Now that you know this, do you ever wonder what was added in these Marcion and Catholic documents which comprise the New Testament which neither Yeshua or the earliest Jewish followers of Yeshua, those who knew him best, could not accept nor follow?

Continue your studies on this web site and you will find out… Shalom.

A BRIEF INTRODUCTION TO THE CANON AND ANCIENT VERSIONS OF SCRIPTURE

Most people today receive their first Bible as bound Holy Scriptures selected for them when coming affixed together under that title in a book they have purchased at the bookstore. We call this the Bible. Many Protestants are also aware of the fact that in choosing a Bible that they must avoid the shelf labelled "Roman Catholic Bibles," because these are designed to promote Catholic beliefs and they also contain some books that many do not even receive as Scripture; primarily the ones we refer to as belonging to the "Apocrypha."

Answer for yourself: Why do we reject these books?

Very few of us have even read them. In fact, many Christians have not read all of the books which they do consider to be Scripture. Here is the hard facts of the matter. It is evident that most of us receive certain books and reject others not because we have personally evaluated them and their contents in any way, but because we trust that someone else has evaluated them and decided rightly concerning this matter, so that all scripture and nothing but scripture is between the covers of our Bibles. This is so reassuring until you begin to study for yourself the selection of these books contained in our Bibles and those who made such decisions centuries ago. The real question then becomes huge in magnitude.

Answer for yourself: Who has made this decision regarding which books are to be included and excluded from our Bibles, and were they really competent to decide upon Sacred Scripture for all of us? How do we know they made the right decisions?

Answer for yourself: Could it just be possible that Christianity evolved and took historical form as the result of a corruption of high wisdom already extant, and not as a promulgation of new light and wisdom previously unknown? Could it just be, amazing as it might sound at first to many uneducated concerning these matters, that the books which are contained and altered in our Bibles today, were chosen by the few in order to foist upon the many the popular acceptance of nothing more than the corruption of a more exalted understanding and truer wisdom contained in many records and books which were unfortunately not included in our Bibles but revered highly by the many who in ancient times followed "the Christ" before the emergence of Roman Catholicism and their Bible in the 2nd through the 5th century?

When we go to the store we find Bibles which have been published by publishers, of course, such as Nelson and Zondervan, but most of the publishers are connected with Christian organizations which have commissioned these versions: Bible societies, church councils and associations, and so forth. These have arranged for certain books to be included or excluded, according to the traditions of their member churches and denominations. These traditions go back to the founding fathers of the denominations, and ultimately to the ancient Catholic Church.

Few if any Christians are aware that their New Testaments were in a constant state of flux until almost the 4th century. In the year 367 an influential bishop named Athanasius published a list of books to be read in the churches under his care, which included precisely those books we have in our Bibles (with the exception he admitted Baruch and omitted Esther in the Old Testament). Other such conflicting lists that disagreed with Athanasius had been published by others, as early as the year 170 C.E., although they did not all agree. Critical to such lists is the criteria used by these early Church Fathers in the decision of which of these early books should be called Scripture. Romanist apologists, though, insist that it was through the initiative and intervention of the Roman church that we have the Bible as we know it today. Their reasoning is that the church caused the New Testament books to be written, so the church is above the books of the New Testament (she being their originator). Roman Christianity insists that it was her that recognized the books of the New Testament, that makes her the sole possessor of those same books. At the most, she may be credited with insight and discernment, but not with the ownership (and sole right to interpret) the Scriptures. Scholars who have studied this matter closely have concluded that the lists of books in our New Testaments today are not the ones in the first New Testament of Marcion but are merely ratifications of the decisions of the majority of churches from earliest days.

The process of canonization was complex and lengthy. It was characterized by a compilation of books that Christians found inspiring in worship and teaching, relevant to the historical situations in which they lived, and consonant with the Old Testament.

Contrary to popular misconception, the New Testament canon was not summarily decided in large, bureaucratic Church council meetings, but rather developed very slowly over many centuries. This is not to say that formal councils and declarations were not involved, however. Some of these include the Council of Trent of 1546 for Roman Catholicism (by vote: 24 yea, 15 nay, 16 abstain), the Thirty-Nine Articles of 1563 for the Church of England, the Westminster Confession of Faith of 1647 for Calvinism, and the Synod of Jerusalem of 1672 for Greek Orthodoxy.

According to the Catholic Encyclopedia article on the Canon of the New Testament: "The idea of a complete and clear-cut canon of the New Testament existing from the beginning, that is from Apostolic times, has no foundation in history. The Canon of the New Testament, like that of the Old, is the result of a development, of a process at once stimulated by disputes with doubters, both within and without the Church, and retarded by certain obscurities and natural hesitations, and which did not reach its final term until the dogmatic definition of the Tridentine Council [Council of Trent]."

Answer for yourself: And when was the Council of Trent? 1546 C.E. (A.D.).

In the first three centuries of the Christian Church, Early Christianity, there seems to have been no New Testament canon that was universally recognized.

One of the earliest attempts at solidifying a canon was made by Marcion, c. 140 AD, who accepted from the ancient Wisdom those teachings and texts which later we find exist in what we call today the Gospel of Luke, originally what many believe originally was the Gospel of Marcion. Added to this Marcion, in giving us the First New Testament which was Gnostic and Metaphysical to its very core, included ten of Paul's letters, while rejecting the Old Testament entirely. Marcion and Paul were both "Gnostic Christians" and the first New Testament could well be described as a Gnostic New Testament. The great archeological find of Nag Hammadi has preserved many gospels comparable to the Gnostic Christian beliefs concerning "the Christ". Over time Marcion's canon came to be rejected by Irenaeus and after his official denouncement of this earlier Gnostic New Testament Marcion's canon was then likewise rejected and dismissed by a majority of Christians but not by all which can be seen by the study of the next 5 centuries and the conflicts between the earlier Gnostic Christianity and the later emerging "literal" and "historical" Roman Catholicism. Adolf Harnack in Origin of the New Testament (1914) argued that the orthodox Church at this time was largely an Old Testament Church (one that "follows the Testament of the Creator-God") without a New Testament canon and that it gradually formulated its New Testament canon in response to the challenge posed by Marcion and the earliest Metaphysical and Gnostic Christians.

The Muratorian fragment, dated at between 170 (based on an internal reference to Pope Pius I and arguments put forth by Bruce Metzger) and as late as the end of the 4th century (according to the Anchor Bible Dictionary), provides the earliest known New Testament canon attributed to non-Gnostic Christianity (Marcionism) and to mainstream Christianity. It is similar, but not identical, to the modern New Testament canon we have today. Notice that there is no agreement upon its date; it ranges from 170 C.E. to the 4th century where we find Roman Catholicism making significant strides in overtaking and persecuting Gnostic Christianity.

The oldest clear endorsement of Mark, Matthew, Luke, and John being the only legitimate gospels was written c. 180 C.E. We must look almost 200 years from the time of the supposed Jesus to find the first quote of Scripture by any Church Father attributed to a Gospel by name. It is almost unthinkable that if these 4 Gospels had been written early then there is nothing but silence and a vacuum in history and no quote from any of these supposedly 4 Gospels found before almost 180 A.D. The parallel between the emergence of the first quote from our current 4 Gospels and Irenaeus' response to the earlier Marcion Gnostic New Testament should give the reader definitely food for thought. Notice if you will the claim made by Bishop Irenaeus in his polemic Against the Heresies, for example III.XI.8: "It is not possible that the Gospels can be either more or fewer in number than they are (four). For, since there are four zones of the world in which we live, and four principal winds, while the Church is scattered throughout all the world, and the "pillar and ground" of the Church is the Gospel and the spirit of life; it is fitting that she should have four pillars, breathing out immortality on every side, and vivifying men afresh."

Lying behind such quotes is a power struggle in religion that few are aware. This comes to light when one becomes aware of the discovery of the earliest Gnostic writings of which similar writings were discovered in 1945 in Upper Egypt. Within these uncovered and recently discovered Gnostic writings we find many sayings known from the commonly known New Testament today, but unlike today, these sayings suggest other dimensions of meaning not in vogue today. Many other sayings from these same discoveries show passages that differ entirely from any known Christian today today. Also, many other passages in these Gnostic writings criticize common Christian beliefs such as the virgin birth and bodily resurrection as naive misunderstandings of deeper Spiritual Truths. We have the admission of Irenaeus that these earlier Christians, whom he described as "heretics", "boast that they possess more gospels than there really are" (Irenaeus, Against Heresies, 3.11.9). These Nag Hammadi texts, and others like them, which were circulated at the beginning of the Christian era, were denounces as heresy by Orthodox Christianity and Irenaeus in the middle of the second century. We have long known that many early followers of "the Christ" were condemned by other Christians as heretics, but nearly all we knew about them came from what their opponents wrote attacking them. By the time of Constantine's conversion, when Christianity officially became an approved religion in the fourth century, Christian bishops had prevailed. Possession of scriptures or books denounced as heretical was made a criminal offense. Copies of such books were burned and destroyed and only those buried from sight have lived to see the light of day in which we live today. What we must realize in all of this is that those who wrote and circulated these earliest of Scriptures which were "Gnostic" did not regard themselves as "heretics" but Christians and followers of "the Christ". Most of their writings used what we consider today to be Christian terminology, unmistakably related to a Jewish heritage. Many claim to offer traditions about Jesus that are "secret" and "hidden" from "the many" who constitute, in the second century, the "Catholic Church". These Christians are not called "Gnostics", from the Greek word "gnosis", which usually is translated as "knowledge". As the Gnostics used the term, we could translate it as "insight," for "gnosis" involves the intuitive process of knowing "oneself" in which we are told is the home of the Kingdom of Heaven. Yet to know oneself, at the deepest level, is simultaneously to know God; this is the secret of "gnosis" which Rome and men like Irenaeus decried.

It is from this primary power struggle, the Gnostic Christians against the non-Gnostic Christians (proto-Roman Christianity) will we find the foundational disagreement as to which Gospels and Epistles are to make up the final edition of the New Testament; even more once Roman Christianity won the deciding victory over the Gnostic Christians at the point of a sword amazingly they could not agree among themselves which books were inspired and belonged to their version of the New Testament. Let us look at this unbelievable confusion among Catholicism regarding the selection of which books were to be included and excluded from their later anti-Gnostic Bible, disputes that lasted for centuries that culminated in what we have today which we are taught to revere; our New Testament.

Now, let us examine in chronological order this amazing confusion connected to the decisions that were made as to which book are to be included in our New Testament. We will examine this in chronological order of the events and thought of the early Church Fathers concerning what book are to be considered "God breathed" and inspired and which were not. I ask the reader to ask yourself one question when this examination is finished: "How could this be the work of the Holy Spirit of God"? If there was ever a reason to dedicate one's life to the study of their Christian faith in order to find out the "truth" before the "train jumped the track" then the study of the canonization of the New Testament books must rank right at the top.

Now, these studies begin.

THE MURATORIAN CANON

Answer for yourself: After almost 2000 years of church history how can Christians be sure that they have the right Bible? Can we indeed be absolutely certain that we have exactly the right books in the Bible - no more and no less? As our standard of faith and practice can we confidently appeal to the canon of Scripture as a collection of authoritative writings to which nothing can be added and from which nothing can be taken away? What if archaeology uncovered an ancient epistle of Paul or another apostolic writer? Could such a hitherto lost document be added to the canon?

Answer for yourself: Can God speak authoritatively today, and if so should such revelation be regarded as on a par with Scripture - or perhaps even be added to Scripture? In other words, is the canon closed? Moreover, whence do we have the information about which books are canonical?

These are some of the urgent questions to which a thoughtful consideration of our topic will inevitably lead. They are not only issues of abiding theological interest, but can at times also be matters of apologetic importance and even of pressing pastoral concern. Here we touch upon the very basis of our Christian faith and life, and it is vital that these foundations be secure.

While we may dismiss such a question as hypothetical, there are similar questions which are only too painfully relevant in the life of the church today.

Some Christians are unnerved by the fact that nowhere does God itemize the sixty-six books that are to be included in the Bible. Many believers have at best a vague notion of how the church arrived at what we call the Canon of Scripture. Even after becoming more aware, some believers are uncomfortable with the process by which the New Testament Canon was determined. For many, it was what appears to be a haphazard process that took far too long. Let us begin our study with what for many is believed to be the first step in the canon of the New Testament; the Muratorian Canon.

The canon of Muratori is also called the Muratorian Fragment, after the name of the discoverer and first editor, L. A. Muratori (in the "Antiquitates italicae", III, Milan, 1740, 851 sq.), the oldest known canon or list of books of the New Testament (not counting of course Marcion's earlier Gnostic New Testament). The manuscript containing the canon originally belonged to Bobbio and is now in the Bibliotheca Ambrosiana at Milan (Cod. J 101 sup.). Written in the eighth century, it plainly shows the uncultured Latin of that time. The list of books included in the Muratorian Canon may date as far back as to 170 because it refers to the pontificate of Pope Pius I, which was from 140 to 155, as recent. This makes it the oldest known New Testament Canon connected to Roman Christianity today.

It is called a "fragment" because the first part of the manuscript is missing. It does, however, refer to Luke's Gospel as being in the third place, and John's in the forth place, so we can assume that the Gospels of Matthew and Mark came before. This of course dates it to after Ireneaus when he decided that only 4 Gospels were to be in the New Testament since there were "4 winds". In addition to listing the books that should be in the New Testament, the Muratorian Fragment specifies two books that should not be in the New Testament: an epistle to the Laodiceans, and another to the Alexandrians. By singling out these two books as non-canonical, it implies that some church were using them at least as late as 170 C.E. or later, and that these books did not meet with Rome's acceptance to the theology that they wished to endorse or teach. The "key" here is that Paul states that only he preaches "the" true Gospel; indicating the presence of a false gospel being preached at the same time. Today with the aid of modern scholarship and the discovery of the Gnostic Library in our generation we definately know more about these earliest Gnostic Christians than ever before and can without a doubt classify Paul as one of the earliest Gnostic Christians like Marcion. That being said no wonder this epistle was struck from the readings of the earliest churches once Rome gained the power to decided which books were to be read and not read and included in the New Testament as well as excluded; it was Rome who was preaching and spreading an anti-Gnostic gospel of a "canal, literal, historical Christ" which they had "limited to but one person" whom access was only available through the doors of the Roman Church.

The fragment is of the highest importance for the history of the Biblical canon as mentioned above as it portrays for us the religious milleau and climate of the day of these two varying "gospels" who were contending for surpremacy. It was written in Rome itself or in its environs about 200; A.D. and probably the original was in Greek, from which it was translated into Latin. This Latin text is preserved solely in the manuscript of the Ambrosiana. A few sentences of the Muratorian Canon are preserved in some other manuscripts, especially in codices of St. Paul's Epistles in Monte Cassino. The canon consists of no mere list of the Scriptures, but of a survey, which supplies at the same time historical and other information regarding each book. The beginning is missing; the preserved text begins with the last line concerning the second Gospel and the notices, preserved entire, concerning the third and fourth Gospels. Then there are mentioned: The Acts, St. Paul's Epistles (including those to Philemon, Titus and Timothy; the spurious ones to the Laodiceans and Alexandrians are rejected); furthermore, the Epistle of St. Jude and two Epistles of St. John; among the Scriptures which "in catholica habentur", are cited the "Sapientia ab amicis Salomonis in honorem ipsius scripta", as well as the Apocalypses of St. John and St. Peter, but with the remark that some will not allow the latter to be read in the church. Then mention is made of the Pastor of Hermas, which may be read anywhere but not in the divine service; and, finally, there are rejected false Scriptures, which were used by heretics. In consequence of the barbarous Latin there is no complete understanding of the correct meaning of some of the sentences.

As stated above, the date of this canon is entirely unknown, but orthodoxy places it at the time of Irenaeus (200 A.D.), again simply it recognized the Four Gospels, Acts, thirteen Epistles of Paul, First John, Second John, Jude, and Revelation. It mentions the Wisdom of Solomon which is no longer in the Bible, among the New Testament books; speak approvingly of the Shepherd of Hermas, and says that the Revelation of John and the Revelation of Peter were accepted by the writer, although many were unwilling at the Revelation of Peter should be read in the churches. It does not mention either First Peter, Second Peter, First John, or James (Westcott, On The Canon of the New Testament, p. 527), all of which are not in the Bible.

As to the author, many conjectures were made (Papias, Hegesippus, Caius of Rome, Hippolytus of Rome, Rhodon, Melito of Sardis were proposed); but no well founded hypothesis has been adduced up to the present. It speaks of the Epistle to the Laodiceans, calls the Epistle to the Hebrews the Epistle to the Alexandrians (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 225), and says both were forgeries, passing under the name of Paul-a fact of which modern theologians are discretely silent, when they cite, as they do with so much exultation, this manuscript as "early evidence of the canon." You can judge for yourself how desperately the church was is in need of support when, after a tremendous conflict, it is willing to accept as "early evidence" a manuscript whose date is at least one hundred an fifty to two hundred years after Jesus was crucified.

These facts are disconcerting if you ponder them. We are 170 years removed from the Great Commission issued by Jesus. We find that almost 200 years later we have not the finished book that one would think necessary for such a noble endeavor as the Great Commission. I used to preach that it is hard to imagine Jesus issuing this "Great Commission" to go into all the world and teach the nations but end such command with such a saying similar to: "but guys, I won't have your book ready for some 200 to 400 years". Such an idea a command without the necessary book or teachings is absolutely foolish. I challenge you to imagine for a moment Jesus commanding his Apostles to go into all the world with this "New Testament" message of salvation but ill equipped due to not having the manual yet ready.

Answer for yourself: What of those that perished without accepting the necessary messages of these books which we deem divine today? What of those that died without the knowldge of later formed "dogmas" so necessary for "eternal life" that would be formualed by later Roman Church Councils and later incorporated into the texts of our New Testaments as we have today?

I can just hear Jesus saying:

Matt 28:18-20

18 …"All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

19 Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

20 Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world"…but look guys…I don't have the new Bible ready yet…. the Father and I will not be able to agree on what to give you guys as the new manual for salvation for well over 350 years yet."

Answer for yourself: Have you ever stopped to think that Jesus was incompetent for his role if he expected his followers to go without the proper message or the necessary books?

Answer for yourself: How were these disciples and Apostles to teach the nations, better yet what were they to teach if they could not agree on what to teach with so many conflicting Gospels and Epistles circulating in the first centuries of the Gentile Church? Where in all of this religious conflicting theologies is the Unity of the Faith to be found?

Answer for yourself: Were the people deprived of these books "damned" to a fiery hell without hope automatically because they did not have the completed New Testament with all is necessary beliefs contingent upon one's salvation; a New Testament which had discarded the many other books and theologies that found their way to the cutting room floor with supposedly the "correct" one now securely within it?

Answer for yourself: Is this inability to decide upon what was "inspired" by the early church the work of the Holy Spirit, and if so, what does that do to our image and understanding of a perfect God who cannot make up His mind and speak to his people let alone take almost 400 years to do it?

Hopefully your reason and intellect is such that you can see the folly of such inability to decide which books God had determined necessary for the salvation of the world. What we have is a power struggle between the many different factions comprising the newly emerging Gentile Church; many of which supported the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and the ancient Sacred Scriptures and others who desired to reject them and create their own. Sadly for us the survival of the fittest prevails and this cost us dearly with a terrible loss of Divine Truth which goes unnoticed by most today. The investigation of the sequence of books being deemed "in" and "out" and "in" and "out" over and over again during the ensuing centuries does little to bolster the image of a God who leads a people let alone speaks to them.

13 Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come.

Well the Holy Spirit is evidently not guiding mankind very good for several centuries. If you take the above passage from the New Testament seriously then God is out of His mind because He is evidently speaking one thing to one group at one time and a completely different and contradicting thing to another group at another time; even at the same times. We call this phenomena schizophrenia today and prescribe mind-altering drugs to cure such conditions. Surely God does not need a pill.

A MUCH MORE SERIOUS QUESTION AWAITS YOUR CONTEMPLATION

Preserving the honor of God hopefully the Holy Spirit had little to due with this confusion in the canonization of the New Testament. What should trouble you is the inclusion into this "New Testament" of the various sects conflicting and competing theologies which today, not knowing the origin or the identity of them, one is relegated to reading the New Testament under the false notion that all is "inspired" and accepting such "beliefs" if they came from God. Let me give you a parallel. You go to the store and buy four puzzles consisting of a thousand pieces. You quickly go home and empty the pieces together into one jumble and then begin to fit and force them into a frame that was meant to only handle one puzzle. You read the instructions on the box and they inform you that these pieces are "inspired" so with utter confidence you begin to force the pieces together and make them fit even when they won't. Needless to say the picture come out distorted and is not true to the original. This is what has happened by the continual jockeying for authority by sect after sect over hundreds of years as they got "their views and ideas" recognized as the Word of God through successive Church Councils. These "ideas" became literally Holy Scripture! Your failure to understand the history of the Canonization of the New Testament and the selection of books by sect after sect has robbed you of the truth in understanding what validity and authority such a document might possess today.

At the very crux of this issue is the key question of "eternal life". The "power struggle" of which I often mentioned centers upon two very different understandings of "eternal life" and "obtaining it". The very books which were "in" or "out" of the earliest New Testament of Marcion differ completely in the goal of humanity. The current New Testament espoused traditional dogmas taught in Christianity regarding "eternal life" and obtaining it. Most know what they are. Unknown to Christians is that the books that were the earliest understanding of the Gnostic Christians taught a very different and Spiritually elevating message of "eternal life" and the goal of humanity. These earliest Christians and their "books" espoused that the goal of humanity is "Divinity"; becoming perfected human beings first, then joining the ranks of those who evolve into the "fullness" and "stature" of Christ. In short, all of human life is geared to the progressive sanctification of life whereby humanity becomes "gods" with the One God; we become like our Father in Heaven. This is the future of humanity; Godhead, the goal that lies ahead for every human. The promise of the future is in ourselves, hidden away in the deepest recesses of our nature, in the hidden Christ within, in the tiny seed which is our real Self, the growing-point out of which comes all that we shall be. This is the message we don't get today because we never are taught the hidden Gnostic and Hermetic teachings held in "secret" for those who live a life accordingly and in so doing earn these deeper teachings of the "higher mysteries". Instead we get a "Christ" separated from mankind and limited to but one supposed historical person; lost is the "Christ within" each child of God awaiting "resurrection from the deadness of matter" in us. These "books" that originally carried this message of man's True Self did not make Rome's Second Edition of the New Testament; perishing with Marcion and other Gnostic Christians during the first five centuries of the common era.

To stake your Eternal Life upon such a "power struggles" for supremacy by those fractions within the Gentile Church is not wise; especially in light of the knowledge you are now acquiring let alone a honest comparison of the teachings of the Jewish Bible vs. The New Testament. You might have never noticed by the New Testament contradicts the Eternal Word of God as found in the Jewish Tanakh in multiple places; that should not be! Dear one, this means that the "jots" and "titles" that Jesus said were forever were nullified many places in the New Testament. You lack of awareness does not negate such; only study on your part will reveal this to you.

Now, let us continue to look into what the Church Fathers had to say about this evolving New Testament. We next look at the early Church Fathers and their views upon the New Testament from the 3rd century.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE THIRD CENTURY CHURCH FATHERS CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT

Surprisingly, there is little in the way of either mainstream or evangelical literature widely available on the topic of the historical origins of the modern Bible. Divine inspiration may be claimed by many however had they ever personally studied this "evolution" of the Bible no one in their right mind could ever do such a thing once posessing the facts of just how we arrived at the New Testament which we have today; especially in light of the total rejection of the writings and teachings of the earliest Christian Church over the first two to three centuries before the rise of Roman Orthodoxy. However, the canon we know today is a collection of disparate manuscripts composed, edited, copied and translated by human hands over centuries. Errors of omission and commission could be and were made. Deciding what authors and books would be in or out of the holy scriptures was no simple matter. Traditional Christian scholarship of the last two millenia has started with the Bible and then interpreted history from a biblical foundation. Others who question and reject such presenations as if they were "divine truth" consign themselves to a different approach which turns this scheme of traditional Christian scholarship on its head. One must in such studies start with the historical setting, then interpret development of a Holy Bible within the imperatives of the early Christian culture. We look at the historical context in which the New Testament was created, then at the New Testament itself, then finally work our way back to the Old.

The first three centuries of the early evolving Christian church were marked – repeatedly – by dissension and disagreement between various groupings within the beginning Christian movement. Christians found time to disagree – often vehemently and even during times of intense Roman persecution.

Theological diversity in the early church is the main theme that constantly is connected with the canonization of the New Testament. Debates about the nature of Jesus as "the Christ" and the gospel message surfaced powerfully. More documents were written to express diverse theological opinions. Some writers rejected the Hebrew Scriptures; others rejected the humanness of Jesus; still others rejected his identity as God. As the church became more structured and institutional, its leaders sought to resolve the early diversity of opinions into an organized, official body of teaching, which became known as orthodoxy, or "right opinion." Other teachings were rejected as false, labeled "heresy," and vigorously attacked by orthodox leaders. The debates against heretical teachings led church leaders to hold councils of theologians to decide what beliefs were true, and which writings expressed those beliefs and could therefore be considered authoritative as Scripture. These councils decided the canon of Scripture and official church doctrine.

By the time of St. Augustine in the early fourth century, Rome had crumbled but Christianity emerged triumphant. This newly found imperial religion survived even as the empire itself collapsed. And with the closing of Christian ranks, a more uniform canon of the Holy Bible emerges.

Take note if you will in the following opinions of early Church Fathers the disagreements that appear continually concerning which "books" were considered "inspired" and deserving of inclusion into the New Testament and which were not; ask yourself what influences did the political, religious, and theological pressures from various waring factions among the earliest Christians sects, both geographically and "theologically", exert in the progressive selction and creation of the New Testament we have today. Lastly, ask yourself if God could have been involved in any of this and if He were, then what areas since the confusion and disgreement is continual throughout the centuries. I personally find it hard to see the "unity" of "the Faith" in any of this canonization knowing such things regarding how the emerging Roman Christian Church and its leaders determined both the "books" and the "theologies" which were to ultimately be included in the Bible I was given as a child. It does one well in light of this knowldge to begin his personal study into the origin of every Christian "dogma" taught in the New Testament to see if they have the same "meanings" to us today which they once carried when the ancients Spiritual Masters gave them to mankind in the beginning of time. If you do this then you see for yourseld the "radical reinterpretation" of most all Christian dogams expressed in the New Testament when compared with the ancient Spiritual Wisdom and Wisdom religions which express the Metaphysical understandings of the Universe, God, and man in it.

CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA (210 A.D.)

Clement of Alexandria who lived in the early third century placed in his deutero-canon, as having "inferior authority", Hebrews, Second John, Jude, which were considered by him not worthy of being placed in the Bible. He did however support for inclusion and the Revelation of Peter but not the Revelation of John (the Book of Revelation). He also included the Shepherd of Hermas, the First Epistle of Clement, the Second Epistle of Clement, and the Epistle of Barnabas in the Bible (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 139); all of which are not today in the Bible. He thus placed the Epistle to the Hebrews, Second John and Jude, as dubious authorities. The books he did support however, are not in the Bible and our New Testaments today. He recognized no distinct canon as of supreme authority (Ibid., 116), and he did not attach our idea of "uncanonical" as opposed to "canonical" to either of the Four Gospels or to any other books of the New Testament (Ibid., 139). Let us take time to see other information concerning Clement of Alexandria which helps explain his theological positions today in his writings and which explain his deviation from the "faith of the Jewish church."

TERTULLIAN (220 A.D.)

Tertullian included in his canon the Four Gospels, Acts, Epistles of Paul, First John, and Revelation (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 139). He placed in an appendix, as "not" authoritative, Hebrews, Jude, Second John, and First Peter (Ibid., p. 139), which are in the Bible now, and the Shepherd of Hermas, which is not; and he said nothing of James, Second Peter and Third John (Ibid., p. 139), which today are in the canon. If you take time to compared Tertullian views with the earlier Muratorian Canon please notice he is not in agreement with the Muratorian Canon established twenty years or more before his time as to which books should be considered in the Bible.

THE PESHITO...OR PESHITTA

The Peshitta is the "simple" (translation). This version has had such a complex literary history that its origin has long been a matter of debate. As far back as it can be traced, it has been a Christian version, since it contains the New Testament as well as the Old Testament, and the extant copies of it have come from Christian hands. Yet the Old Testament shows such a strong Jewish influence that many scholars hold that it was, at least in part, of Jewish origin, though some explain it as of Jewish-Christian origin. It may have been produced at Edessa, though Kahle states that it came from the region of Adiabene, lying east of the Tigris, where King Isates and his mother Helena became Jewish proselytes in the 1st cent. a.d. There are passages in the Old Testament that are little more than transliterations of western Aramaic Targums into the Syriac script. While the text agrees in the main with the Masoretic Hebrew, it seems to have been revised on the basis of the LXX. Originally this Syriac version lacked Chr, Ezr, Neh, and Est, as well as the Apocrypha, all of which were added at a later date. The most valuable Syriac manuscript is the Codex Ambrosianus from about the 6th cent., now in Milan. A manuscript of Gen, Ex, Num, and Deut, from the monastery of St. Mary Deipara in Egypt, bears a date corresponding to a.d. 464, and is thus the oldest copy of the Bible in any language bearing a definite date

According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, the Peshitta (Syriac: "simple," or "common") is the Syriac version of the Bible, the accepted Bible of Syrian Christian churches from the end of the 3rd century AD. The name Peshitta was first employed by Moses bar Kepha in the 9th century to suggest (as does the name of the Latin Vulgate) that the text was in common use. The name also may have been employed in contradistinction to the more complex Syro-Hexaplar version. Of the vernacular versions of the Bible, the Old Testament Peshitta is second only to the Greek Septuagint in antiquity, dating from probably the 1st and 2nd centuries AD. The earliest parts in Old Syriac are thought to have been translated from Hebrew or Aramaic texts by Jewish Christians at Edessa, although the Old Testament Peshitta was later revised according to Greek textual principles. The earliest extant versions of the New Testament Peshitta date to the 5th century AD and exclude The Second Letter of Peter, The Second Letter of John, the Third Letter of John, The Letter of Jude, and The Revelation to John, which were not canonical in the Syrian church.

Davidson, in his The Canon of the Bible, p. 139, also attests that the Peshito, the Bible of Ancient Syriac Christians, omitted Second Peter, Second John, Third John, Jude, and Revelation, all of which are in our Bible (Ibid., 146).

THE OLD LATIN VERSION

The Latin rendering of the Bible probably originated in North Africa as early as a.d. 150. It is even possible that the Christians of North Africa adopted a translation of the Old Testament from Latin-speaking Jews. Tertullian (c. a.d. 160 – c. 230) knew the Old Latin Bible at least in part, and Cyprian (c. 200–258), bishop of Carthage, quotes frequently from both Testaments of this Bible. Only fragments of the Old Latin of the Old Testament have survived. Several of the Apochryphal books were incorporated unrevised into the Vulgate. As for the the rest of The Bible, scholars have been able to piece together manuscript fragments covering a considerable portion of the Old Testament. These, together with quotations in the early Latin Fathers, are our sources for the reconstruction of the Old Latin text of the Old Testament. Scholars distinguish 2 types of text: the African and the European. The Old Latin of the Old Testament was made from the Greek LXX, and its chief value today is as an aid in recovering the text of the LXX as it was before Origen's revision of it.

What is important for us to notice is that the Old Latin version, the Bible of the early African Church, omitted the Epistle to the Hebrews, Second Peter, and James. The Epistle to the Hebrews was added subsequently as an anonymous book (Westcott, On The Canon of the New Testament, p. 254). Again we see no unity or agreement with those who came before and their "opinions" as to what was "God-breathed."

THE ABYSSINIAN CHURCH AND ITS CANON

The Abyssinian Church was a church that believed in "monophysitism." This was a Christian schismatic sect of the 5th and 6th centuries that maintained that Christ had only one (divine) nature, thereby opposing the orthodox doctrine that he was both divine and human. The Monophysites were mainly confined to the Eastern church and gained little strength in the West. At the directive of Pope Leo I, the Council of Chalcedon in 451 attempted to steer a middle course between the orthodox and Monophysite views. The resulting edict did not satisfy the Monophysites, and the controversy continued, the Monophysites being supported by the Copts and the Eutychian sect. The Eastern church, in an effort to suppress the heresy, in the first half of the 6th century excommunicated the Monophysites, who thereupon formally seceded from the parent church. The Monophysites split into two factions over controversies regarding the incorruptibility of Christ's body. After 560 a third faction, the Tritheists, arose; they interpreted the three persons of the Deity as three separate gods and hence were regarded by the other factions as heretics. In Egypt, Syria, and Mesopotamia the Monophysite congregations remained strong throughout the controversy. Although finally condemned in 680-81, at the sixth ecumenical council, Monophysitism continues in some churches to this day. The modern Abyssinian church, Armenian church , Coptic church , and Jacobite church are all Monophysitic bodies.

The Canon of the Abyssinian Church included at first, Enoch (of course since it taught an Angel-Messiah and not a human messiah), Fourth Esdras, the Ascension of Isaiah, the Jubilees, and Asseneth (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 206), books which are not now in the Bible and of several of which the world now never hears. The list was changed frequently, and many books were eliminated or inserted, but, generally speaking, it contained Judith, Tobit, First Maccabees, Second Maccabees, Wisdom of Jesus, Wisdom of Solomon, and even a book called the Apocalypse of Isaiah (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 206), none of which are in our Bible.

UPPER AND LOWER EGYPT...AND ITS CANONS

The Bibles of upper and lower Egypt are called "Coptic" as in the Coptic New Testaments. Of some 5 known Coptic versions, the most important are the Sahidic and the Bohairic.

(1) The Sahidic.

This version is the older version and was used in Southern (Upper) Egypt. It was formerly designated Thebaic, after the city of Thebes. Only fragments of this version are extant, but these fragments are of sufficient quantity to reconstruct the major part of the NT. The earliest manuscripts originate from the 4th cent. a.d..

(2) The Bohairic.

This version was current in Northern (Lower) Egypt and eventually replaced the other dialects. It is the Coptic used to this day in the church services, and the complete NT has been preserved in it. Both the Sahidic and Bohairic versions of the NT contain principally an Alexandrian (again we find the Alexandrian influence) type of text, similar to a text such as is found in the Codex Vaticanus.

The two canonical lists of upper and lower Egypt, called the Thebaic version, or version of Thebes, and the Memphitic version, or the version of Memphis, omitted Revelation (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 266).

ORIGEN

Origen (250 A.D.) included in his Old Testament list the Epistles of Jeremiah, First Maccabees, and Second Maccabees, which are not in our Bible, and he makes no mention of Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, which are in our Bible (Euseb., Eccl. History, vi. 25). The omission of these twelve books is very singular, and Rufinus' Latin version (400 A.D.) kindly inserts them. Even if they were omitted by mistake, the error shows how careless and indifferent the Fathers were in stating what books were in the Bible. Origin did not formulate a consecutive list of the New Testament books, but passages gathered here and there from his works indicate what his opinion was (Ibid., 261). He apparently divided the New Testament books into three classes, authentic, unauthentic, and uncertain. The first included the Four Gospels, Acts, fourteen Epistles of Paul, First Peter, First John, and the Revelation of John. The second included the Shepherd of Hermas, thought he was rather inclined to place it in a higher class, the Epistle of Barnabas, the Acts of Paul, the Gospel according to the Hebrews, the Gospel ;of the Egyptians, and the Preaching of Peter (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 146). The third class included the Epistles of James, Jude, Second Peter, Second John, and Third John (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 146), all of which are in the Bible today.

As you can see again over the next one hundred years there was little unity or agreement on "what" was the Word of God among the early Church. Now, let us continue as we look at the 4th century views of the early Church Fathers.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE FOURTH CENTURY CHURCH FATHERS CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT

EUSEBIUS...THE GREATEST LYING CHURCH FATHER EVER!

Nowhere is where the train really jumps the tracts "so to speak". We have seen major disagreements as to which books were considered "inspired" and worthy of being included as the "Word of God" over the 3rd century with the leaders of the Christian Church. In existence were enormous numbers of Gospels of a "Gnostic nature", all of which were rejected when the Church chose 4 that emerge with Irenaeus in 180 C.E. These were ultimately placed in the Canon. Those Gospels, like the epistles, were chosen because they supported the already formualted theology of the emerging Roman Church due to their anti-Gnostic bias. It is a hard fact of scholary investigation that these Gospels and episltes which were to be included in the emerging Canon of Christianity were altered and amended from time to time to suit the existing evolving theologies of Roman Christinaity. In the later manuscripts the compliers did not scruple to add whole passages in support of some favorite dogma. A very large proportion of the documentary evidences upon which Christianity apologists rely, rest entirely upon the authority of Eusebius. Yet this man unblushingly advocates lying and cheating for the benefit of religion. William Kingsland, in his Esoteric Basis of Christianity: Or Theosophy and Christain Doctrine, on page 134, reveals Eusebius' amazing boast which discredits him totally:

"I have repeated whatever may rebound to the glory, and suppressed al that could ten to the disgrace of our religion"* (Eusebius, PraeparationEvangelica, Bk. XII. Ch. 31)

Eusebius, the ecclesiastical historian (340 A.D.), divided the books of the New Testament into three classes, the "acknowledged," the "disputed," and the "heretical" (Euseb., Eccl. Hist., iii. 25). The "acknowledged" books included the Four Gospels , the Acts, thirteen Epistles of Paul (omitting Hebrews), First John, and First Peter. They were the books concerning which there was no controversy. The "disputed" books he divided into two subordinate classes; the "generally known and recognized by most," namely, James, Jude, Second Peter, Second John, and Third John., none of which are disputed now, so far as the laity ever hears; and the "spurious," including the Acts of Paul, the Shepherd of Hermas, the Revelation of Peter, the Epistle of Barnabas, the Teaching of the Apostles, and the Revelation of John, which last is in the Bible today, and the Gospel according to the Hebrews. The "heretical" books included the Gospel of Peter, the Gospel of Thomas, the Gospel of Matthew (not the one now in the Bible), the Acts of the Apostles by Andrew, and the Acts of the Apostles by John. The Epistle of James, which is in the Bible and which he here classes as generally recognized, in another place he calls "spurious" (Euseb., Eccl. Hist., ii. 25), and of Revelation he says that possibly it should be among the acknowledged books, but that some rejected it. The idea as to what composed the Bible was in the minds of the Fathers vague and indefinite. Such a strict and unalterable rule as we now have they did not possess. Eusebius was a bishop of the Eastern church, and the reader will observe as we progress that the church uniformly discarded Revelation.

CYRIL, BISHOP OF JERUSALEM

Cyril, the Bishop of Jerusalem (356 A.D.), is a member of the Eastern church, made a catalogue which included the books now in our New Testament except Revelation, and he adds, "But let all the rest be excluded. And all the books which are not read in the churches, neither do thou read by thyself" (Catech. Lect., iv. 35).

THE COUNCIL OF LAODICEA…[150 YEARS LATER…LOCAL BUT NOT GENERAL AUTHORITY]

More than three hundred and fifty years passed away, and it became apparent that the Fathers could not agree as to what books should be in the Bible, and Church councils began to deal with the matter. The first Christian assembly at which the canon was made the subject of a special ordinance was held at Laodicea in 365 A.D. Tertullian indeed mentions the fact that synods had acted upon the canonicity of books in his time (Dr. Pudic, 10), but their authority much have been local and not general. In other words, geography played a major role in determining which books were accepthed "here" and which books were accepted "over there". Jerome also says that the council of Nicea included Judith in a list which it adopted (Pref. In Judith, i. p. 1169, Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 171), but I can find no good evidence that the council of Nicea acted on the canon at all, although there is a very general impression that it did. The current tradition is that the books were placed under a table at Nicea, and that after prayer the canonical ones leaped out from under, and the others remained behind. It is said that this story is told by Pappus, a Lutheran divine (1549-1601) in his "Epitome Historiae Ecclesiasticae de Conversionibus Gentium," etc. It is, of course, fabulous, and probably originated from the fact that at the council of Chalcedon the Gospels were placed in the midst of the assembly (Westcott, Canon, 426).

The synod of Laodicea was not a general council of the church, but its list was afterwards adopted by the church, so that virtually that was the first general action on the contents of the Bible. It was a gathering of twenty-four to thirty-two (the number is variously stated) of the clergy of Lydia and Phrygia. Whatever the number, the so-called heretics had a majority of the votes present (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 173). Its decree was as follows:

"Psalms composed by private men must not be read in the church, nor uncanonical books, but only the canonical books of the New and Old Testament. Then follows the list as we have it today, except the omission of Revelation. This council is of importance because for the first time the tone of authority as to what much and must not be read is established.

ATHANASIUS

Athanasius, Bishop of Alexandria, (365 A.D.), was at enmity with Eusebius and the clergy of Laodicea (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 234), and when Laodicea declared that Revelation was not in the Bible, Athanasius immediately promulgated a list in which he declared that it was. In his canon he names, he says, the books in which alone were proclaimed the doctrines of godliness, and which no man must take from, and no man add to. Yet he omitted Esther, which the church as since added, and he also inserted Baruch and the Letter of Jeremiah, which the church has since taken away (Athanasius, Festal Epistle XXXIX, Liberty Of The Fathers, Oxford, 1954). He expressly declare that Esther was not a part of the Bible, and place it on a level with the Pastor Of Hermas, and a book called The Doctrine of the Apostles. He closed by saying: "Let there be no mention of apocryphal writings." He had become tired of the controversy.

AMPHILOCHIUS, BISHOP OF ICONIUM 365 A.D.

Amphilochius, Bishop of Iconium (365 A.D.), in his New Testament, accepts the Four Gospels, Acts, and fourteen Epistles of Paul, and adds, "But some maintain that the Epistle to the Hebrews is spurious; not speaking well, for the grace is genuine. To proceed: What remains? Of the Catholic Epistles some maintain that we ought to receive seven, and others three only, one of James, and one of Peter, and one of John…The Revelation of John again some reckon among (the scriptures); but still the majority say that it is spurious. This will be the most truthful canon of the inspired scriptures" (Lambi ad Seleucam). One cannot decide from the above what he considered "the most truthful canon," but it shows again how entirely unsettled was the question as to what was to be considered the New Testament and what was not, and that the question was purely a matter of individual opinion. His closing words show that in his time no list was universally accepted.

OPATATUS, OF MELA (370 A.D.)

Opatatus of Mela omitted Hebrews (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible,p. 193)

GREGORY OF NAZIANZUS (389 A.D.)

Gregory of Nazianzus (389 A.D.), gave as the New Testament the Four Gospels, the Acts, fourteen Epistles of Paul, and the seven Catholic Epistles, and he adds, "In these you have all the inspired books; if there be any book besides these, it is not among the genuine (scriptures)" (Carm., xii. 31). He belonged to the Eastern church, and he likewise rejected the book of Revelation.

By the "seven Catholic Epistles" is meant always James, First Peter, Second Peter, First John, Second John, Third John, and Jude. Why they are called Catholic Epistles no one knows (Kitto, Cyclo. Bio. Literature, "Epistles, Catholic,"). Any explanation of the name is an assumption.

ST. AUGUSTINE (390 A.D.)

St. Augustine's New Testament was the same as ours today. Now we begin to see conformity; but it took 400 years! The influence of St. Augustine in establishing the Bible was greater probably than any other Father or than any council. People now attribute to God what was really the work of one man. While councils decided upon the canon, and their decision became embodied sentiment of the entire church, the expression was really that of but one man, the leader in the council, and when doubts arose as to the authority of a book, scholarship was not involved to decide it, for the members possessed almost none. They simply asked: "What did the Early Fathers say of it?" Prof. Davidson says:

"In relation to the New Testament, the synods which drew up lists of the sacred books show the opinion of some leading Father like Augustine, along with what custom had sanctioned. In this department no member of the synod exercised his critical faculty; a number together would decide such questions summarily. Bishops proceeded in the track of tradition or authority" (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 172).

In 393 A.D. a council met in Hippo, in Africa, discussed the canon, and adopted St. Augustine's list. St. Augustine himself was present, and was the ruling spirit.

In 397 A.D. was held the third council of Carthage. St. Augustine was again present. It adopted a decree as follows:

"It was also determined that besides the canonical scriptures, nothing be read in the church under the title of Divine Scriptures. The Canonical scriptures are these:"

Then follow the names of the books of the Bible as we have them now, except some variations in the order.

DIDYMUS OF ALEXANDRIA (392 A.D.)

Didymus of Alexandria tells us that Second Peter in his time was accounted spurious and was not in the canon, yet it was publicly read (Westcott, Canon, 444). In the early days books were read in the churches which were known at the time to be spurious and which were not in the canon. In time most of these books were to find their way into the New Testament. Today Second Peter is not only read in the churches, but is accounted genuine and is in the Bible. And if any modern orthodox minister, believing as the ancients did, that it was spurious, desired to say so, he would not dare to, since it would "unsettle the faith of his congregation." For this he would be dismissed, and his livelihood would cease as a minister and the support of his family through the ministry would stop. It is thus that ecclesiasticism compels men to play the hypocrite, and teach as true that they believe to be false. The same is done today; many times ministers know more than they let one and for the sake of their "check" play the party-line. I encoutered this first hand during the years of my pastorate.

Let us continue our study as we examine the views of the 5th century early Church Fathers concerning the New Testament.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE FIFTH CENTURY CHURCH FATHERS CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT

ST. CHRYSOSTOM (407 A.D.)

St. Chrysostom (407 A.D.) did not use Second John, Third John, Second Peter, Jude, and Revelation (Westcott, Canon, p.438), all of which are in the Bible now. He included the Wisdom of Jesus (Westcott, Canon, p. 438), a book which is not now in the Bible.

THEODORE, OF MOPSUESTA

He rejected the Epistle of James, Second Peter, Second John, Third John, Jude, and Revelation (Westcott, Canon, p. 438), all of which are now in the Bible.

THEODORET, BISHOP OF CYRUS

He rejected Second John, Third John, Second Peter, Jude and Revelation (Ibid., note 2).

MANUSCRIPTS OF THE GREEK BIBLE

There are three great manuscripts of the Greek Bible extant, the Sinaitic, the Vatican, and the Alexandrine. They are the high courts of appeal in all cases of disputed texts, and their lists are, therefore, very important.

- The Sinaitic manuscript is one found by Tischendorf in a convent of St. Catherine, Mount Sinai, in 1859, and is probably the oldest of the New Testament codices in existence, dating back to the fourth century. It has the Four Gospels, the Fourteen Epistles of Paul, Acts, the Seven Catholic Epistles, Revelation, the Epistle of Barnabas, and a part of the Shepherd of Hermas (Westcott, Canon, p. 426), the last two of which are not in the Bible now.
- The Vatican manuscript, in the Vatican Library at Rome, belongs to the middle of the fourth century. ; It ends by mutilation at Hebrews 9:14. Up to that point it agrees substantially with the Alexandrine manuscript (Ibid., note 2). What other books it may have contained one cannot say.
- The Alexandrine manuscript, belongs to the fifth century, and written probably in Egypt, included in the New Testament the two Epistles of Clement (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p.10; Westcott, Canon, p. 544), none of which are in our Bibles at present.

CLERMONT CODEX

The Clermont Codex is a Latin manuscript now in the Imperial Library at Paris, and dating from the fifth to the eighth century, contains a list of the books read in the African Church in the third century (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 145). The New Testament omits Philippians, First Thessalonians, and Second Thessalonians, which are not in the Bible, and inserts the Shepherd of Hermas, the Acts of Paul, and the Revelation of Peter, which are not now in it (Westcott, Canon, 555). The Epistle which is now called "to the Hebrews" is there called the Epistle to Barnabas (Ibid., 557).

In 419 A.D. another council was held at Carthage., and St. Augustine's list was again ratified (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 199)

ON THE CHURCH'S COUNCILS...WHAT YOU WERE NEVER TOLD

The reader would err greatly did he suppose that in these assemblies one or two hundred gentlemen sat down to discuss quietly and dignifiedly the questions which had come before them for settlement. On the contrary, many of the bishops were ignorant ruffians, and were followed by crowds of vicious supporters who stood ready on the slighest excuse to maim and kill their opponents. The most shocking scenes that occur in the political conventions in the worst districts of our great cities and other nations are as nothing compared with what history tell us was common in these Christian councils. Dr. Phillip Schaff says:

"Together with abundant talents, attainments, and virtues, there were gathered also at the councils ignorance, intrigues, and partisan passions, which had already been excited on all sides by long controversies preceding and now met and arrayed themselves, as hostile armies, for open combat" (History of the Christian Church, by P Schaff, D.D., ii. 346).

Dear ones, this is who these supposed "Divine Revelations" were later canonized and today we are told the "Holy Spirit" decided for us what books were to be "authoritative" for faith and practice. It seems more likely "might made right!"

Dean Milman, the celebrated historian says:

"It might have been supposed that nowhere would Christianity appear in such commanding majesty as in a council, which should gather from all quarters of the world the most eminent prelates and the most distinguished clergy; that a lofty and serene piety would govern all their proceedings, and profound and dispassionate investigation exhaust every subject; that human passions and interest would stand rebuked before that awful assembly; that the sense of their own dignity as well as the desire of impressing their brethren with the solemnity and earnestness of their belief would at least exclude all intemperance of manner and language… History shows that melancholy reverse. Nowhere is Christianity less attractive, and if we look to the ordinary tone and character of the proceedings, less authoritative, than in the councils of the church. It is in general a fierce collision of two rival factions, neither of which will yield, each of which is solemnly pledged against conviction. Intrigue, injustice, violence, decisions on authority alone, and that the authority of a turbulent majority, decisions by wild acclamation rather then by sober inquiry, detract from the reverence, and impugn the judgments, at least of the later councils….rejoicing at the damnation imprecated against the humiliated adversary….the degeneracy is rapid from the council of Nicea to that of Ephesus, where each party came determined to use every means of haste, maneuver, court influence, bribery, to crush his adversary; where there was an encouragement of, if not an appeal to the violence of the populace, to anticipate the decrees of the council; where each had his own tumultuous foreign rabble to back his quarrel; and neither would scruple at any means to obtain the ratification of their anathemas through persecution by the evil government. (H.H. Milman, D.D., History of Latin Christianity, New York, 1871, p 226).

Gregory of Nazianzus, the Christian father, speaks of them as "assemblies of cranes and geese" (Schaff, History of the Christian Church, ii. 347). Utterly disgusted, he decline to have anything to do with them, saying:

"To tell the truth, I am inclined to shun every collection of bishops, because I have never yet seen that a synod came to a good end, or abated evils instead of increasing them. For in those assemblies (and I do not think I express myself too strongly here) indescribable contentiousness and ambition prevail….Therefore I have withdrawn myself, and have found rest to my soul only in solitude" (Ep. Ad. Procop., 55 old order, Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, ii. 347).

The third general council of the church, which was held at Ephesus in 431 A.D., was marked by "shameful intrigue, uncharitable lust of condemnation, and coarse violence of conduct" (Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, ii. 348). Both factions came with armed escorts, as if going to battle (Ibid., ii. 723-725), and were followed by great mobs of the ignorant rabble, slaves and seamen, the lower populace of Constantinople, peasants, and bathmen, and hordes of women, prepared for violence; the city was patrolled by troops (Ibid., i. 242), and Nestorius and John of Antioch had armed body guards to protect them from the violence of Cyril's party (Ibid., p. 242). The two bands fought in the streets and much blood was shed (Ibid., p. 242). At the reading of the imperial decree such a tumult arose that all the contending bishops were ordered under arrest (Ibid., i. 242).

An effort was made immediately after to hold a council in Constantinople, and such was the fear of a riot that it had to be adjourned to the suburban district across the Bosporus (Ibid., i. 242).

In August 449 A.D., there met in Ephesus a synod which occupies a notorious place in the scandals of church history, and which, from the fraud and violence by which everything was carried, and the odious character of its proceedings, has received the name of the "Robbers Council." Dioscorus presided with brutal violence (Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, ii. 738), protected by soldiers. The fear of personal injury was so great that Flavian and his friends, composing one faction, hardly dared to open their lips, while Theodoret was excluded entirely. A communication, presented from Eusebius, was received by the crown with cries of "Let Eusebius be burnt; let him be burned alive. As he has cut Christ in two, so let him be cut in two" (Ibid., p. 738). Three delegates from Rome were so terrified, that they did not venture to read an epistle which they bore from Leo (Ibid., p. 738 ff.). The subject of the canon was, of course, not the only one discussed by councils. In fact, in many councils it was not referred to. Dioscorus and his party wished Flavian and his friends to sign a confession of that that Christ had but one nature. Flavian refused to do so. At a given signal the doors were thrown open, a band of soldiers and an armed mob rushed in, and the terrified bishops of the Flavian party were compelled, by blows and at the point of the sword, to sign (Mosheim, Eccl. Hist., Bk. 2, Cent. 5, pt. 2, ch. v). Where before there had been two parties there was now not alone a majority, but almost unanimity (Milman, Hist. Latin. Christ., i. 288). The decree having been signed, Dioscorus was no longer able to control his anger, and he struck the vanquished Flavian (Ibid., i. 289). Thus encouraged, a crown of infuriated monks set upon the unfortunate bishop of Jerusalem, crying "Kill him! Kill him!" and they beat and kicked him, and inflicted such injuries that death ensued shortly after (Ibid., i. 289, Scaff, Hist. Christ. Church., ii. 739). Dean Milman remarks, significantly, that this was not the last council defiled by blood (Milman, Hist. Latin. Christ., i. 289).

Another council, called to meet in Nicea in 451 A.D., was so unruly that it had to be summoned to Chalcedon, across the straits from Constantinople, where the emperor could reach it with his troops and compel order (Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, ii. 742). It is known as the Council of Chalcedon. The proceeding were continually interrupted by yells and tumult (Ibid., ii. 743), and even the laymen were compelled to remind the bishops of their clerical dignity (Ibid., ii. 743). "At Chalcedon," says Dr. Philip Schaff, "the introduction of the renowned expositor and historian Theodoret provoked a scene which almost involuntarily reminds us of the modern brawls of Greek and Roman monks at the holy sepulchre under the restraining influence of the Turkish police. Theodoret's Egyptian opponents shouted with all their might: 'Away with him, this teacher of Nestorius.' His friends replied with equal violence: 'They forced us (at the Robber Council) by blows to subscribe, away the Manichaeans, the enemies of Flavian, the enemies of the faith. Away with the murderer Dioscorus. Who does not know his wicked deeds?' The Egyptian bishops cried again: 'Away with the Jew, the adversary of God, and call him not bishop.' To which the original bishops answered: 'Away with the rioters, away with the murderers! The orthodox man belongs to the council.'" The military had to interfere to quell the proceedings (Schaff, Hist. Christ. Church, ii. 348).

At the council held at Constantinople in 785 A.D., the soldiery burst into the chamber and dispersed the affrighted bishops because they did not approve of the bishop's enactments (Milman, ii. p. 345); and the second council of Nicea (787 A.D.) denounced this council of Constantinople as a synod of fools and madmen (Ibid., ii. 346).

There is one curious fact to which I can not refrain from calling attention. No Christian historian, whether Mosheim, Milman, Schaff, or any other, has ever perceived, apparently, the grotesque absurdity of an assembly attempting to decide by vote a fact in the past. Men vote on questions which have yet to be decided, and thus make them facts; as whether this man or that man shall be president, or this law or that shall be in force; but not on those which are already decided. The reader needs to understand that this is just a small representation of the character of the Church councils. If one is honest with oneself then it is almost impossible to read these proceedings and pretend that the Holy Spirit had anything to do the the results of such violent proceedings let alone believe the decisions made as to what was "inspired" have any credibility whatsoever!

JEROME

Jerome (420 A.D.) included in his New Testament Hebrews and Revelation on the authority of the ancient writers, and not of the existing custom (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 190 ff., showing that in his time these books were frequently rejected. That seems almost ridiculous in light of what you have learned by reading the above accounts. In another work he gave the Epistle of Barnabas at the end of a canonical list, and he expresses the doubts in existence to Philemon, Second Peter, Jude, Second John, and Third John (Davidson, p. 190 ff.), of which, today, no doubts are entertained. The First Epistle of Clement, which is not now in the Bible, was, he says, read in some churches ().

Jerome and St. Augustine were the men most influential in determining the canon of the New Testament (Davidson, Canon, p. 233). The Catholic Church has followed the latter, and Luther and the reformers followed the former. As to their qualifications for deciding the canon Prof. Davidson has said:

"Both were unfitted for critical examination of such a topic. Augustine was a gifted spiritual man, lacking learning and independence. Tradition dominated all his idea about the difficult or disputed books.....His judgment was weak, his sagacity moderate, and the absence of many-sidedness hindered a critical result. Jerome, again, was learned but timid, lacking the courage to face the question fairly or fundamentally and the independence necessary to its right investigation. Belonging as he did to both churches, he recommended the practice of one or the other. He, too, was chiefly influenced by tradition" (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 200).

APOSTOLIC CONSTITUTIONS

The Apostolic Constitutions are a collection of rules, mainly for the guidance of the clergy. They date from the firth century, and are not to be attributed to the Apostles, their names being another of the many similar endeavors to give authority to books by foreign great names to them. The canons in the Apostolic Constitutions (Apostolic Constitutions, II, 57) omit from the New Testament James, First Peter, Second Peter, First John, Second John, Third John, Jude and Revelation (Ibid., VIII, xlvii. 85). This is the more remarkable from the fact that the canon prescribes with great particularity and minuteness how services in church should be conducted, and what books be read! It also omits Revelation, and included the First Epistle of Clement, the Second Epistle of Clement (an acknowledged forgery), and the Clementine Constitutions (Ibid.). No one ever hears of these books being included in the New Testament now. It is a noteworthy fact that this and the preceding list, contradictory as they are, are both in the same book no less!

It would seem to me than "any thinking believer" and "truth-seeker" would have a hard time accepting the decisions of such men as shown about anything, but let us continue for we have yet much to share before we can draw any concrete conclusion. Next, we look at the 6th century.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE SIXTH CENTURY CHURCH FATHERS CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT

This will be a very quite century regarding the Canon of the New Testament.

COSMOS INDICOPLEUSTES (535 A.D.)

Cosmos Indicopleustes never mentions James, First Peter, Second Peter, First John, Second John, Third John, Jude, or Revelation (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 200).

JUNILIUS, AN AFRICAN BISHOP (550 A.D.)

Junilius divided the books of the Bible into three classifications: "Perfect, intermediate, and no authority." Ironically those he considered "perfect" contained the Wisdom of Jesus, which is not now in our Bibles. Those he considered "intermediates" contained the collection of James, Second Peter, Jude, Second John, and Third John, all of which we consider as authoritative as any. Within the classification of "no authority" he included the book of Revelation because it was doubted by man in the East (De. partibus divine legis, i. 2).

As you can see by now the canon of the New Testament was somewhat stable and fixed "theologically" and only few changes need be made from this time period onward. Yet there are a few. Let us continue as we look at what happened during the 7th through the 10th century.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE 7TH THRU THE 10TH CENTURY CHURCH FATHERS CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT

THE SIXTH COUNCIL OF CONSTANTINOPLE (629 A.D.)

By the year 629 A.D. so diverse and jumbled had become the views as to what was "God breathed" and "inspired" and "what should be in the New Testament and the Bible," and so great was the need of harmony and unity in these fractions sects which all had different documents to vouch for their authority or the authority of each "sect" against the other, that the sixth general council of Constantinople, otherwise know as the Quinisextine or Trullan council, with a desire apparently to please all parties, ratified the catalogues of Laodicea and Carthage, the Apostolic canons, and those of Athanasius, Gregory of Nazianzus, Amphilochius of Iconium, Cyril of Alexander, and every other one of which they had any knowledge, seemingly indifferent to the absurdity of indorsing the contradictions between them.

Answer for yourself: Cannot God decide what is or what is not to be included, and would he agree to multiple contradictions and call it "Divine"?

You need to understand that no two of these various "canons" were alike. It must be added that the Clementine Constitutions, though in the Apostolic catalogues, and recognized by the assembly as authoritative, were declared to be no longer canonical, on account of the interpolations which they had received (Westcott, Canon, p. 434).

One would think that after such a majestic gathering of the Church that all would be settled. No way! Men continued to disagree even after such a noble endeavor as the Sixth Council of Constantinople which "ratified and canonized everything even if it did conflict with itself."

Answer for yourself: Is this God's Word?

THE FOURTH COUNCIL OF TOLEDO (632 A.D.)

At the fourth council of Toledo Augustine's list was again ratified (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 237).

JOHANNES DAMASCENUS (750 A.D.)

Johannes Damascenus gives as the New Testament all the books now in it as well as the Apostolic Constitutions (De. Fide Orthodoxa, iv. 17).

NICEPHORUS (810 A.D.)

Nicephorus excluded from the New Testament Revelation, and placed it on a level with the Revelation of Peter, the Epistle of Barnabas, and the Gospel according to the Hebrews (Westcott, Canon, p. 552).

PHOTIUS, CECUMENIUS AND THEOPHYLACT

They all rejected Revelation (Ibid.).

ALFRIC, ABBOT OF CERNE (989 A.D.)

He said that the Four Gospels should be included along with the Seven Catholic Epistles, fifteen Epistles of Paul including Hebrews and the Epistle to the Laodiceans, the Acts, and Revelation (Westcott, Canon, p. 452). The Epistle to the Laodiceans here mentioned has a curious history. Paul says in his Epistles to the Colossians (chap. 4:16) that he had written a letter to the the Laodiceans, and an Epistle claiming to be that one was in circulation in the second century (Westcott, Canon, p. 552). The one now under discussion, which is a different book from that one, begins as all the genuine Epistles do, "Paul, an apostle not of men, nor by-men, but by Jesus Christ, to the brethren that be at Laodicea." etc. The earliest trace of it is at the beginning of the sixth century. Gregory the Great, at the close of that period, declare it was written by Paul. Haymo, Bishop of Halberstadt, (853 A.D.), did the same. So did John of Salisbury not long after. The opinion of Africa confirmed these, and the Epistle passed into the early translation of the New Testament. It is in the manuscript of the Vulgate Bible at La Cava. It is in the manuscript of the Latin New Testament which is still preserved at Fulda; in very many western manuscripts of the Bible, as in the great Gothic Bible of Toledo (8th century), in the Book of Armagh (807 A.D.), in the so-called Charlemagne's Bible of the British museum (9th century), in the great Bible of the king's library in the British museum, apparently designed for church use, and in many other magnificent Bibles. Fourteen editions of one or more German versions of it are said to have been printed before Luther's time; it is in the first Bohemian Bible (1488), and it is in the Albigensian Bible at Lyons, where it has its usual place after the Epistle to the Collosians (Westcott, Canon, p. 454).

From the sixth to the sixteenth century, a thousand years, this Epistle was in the Bible of a large share of the Christian people; and yet we now never hear of it, much less do we hear it called the "Word of God".

We are not through yet. The New Testament was about settled for good by now however there are yet a couple of things we need to look at. Let us continue this study as we focus upon events of the 16th century.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE 16TH CENTURY CHURCH FATHERS CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT

REFORMATION & THE COUNCIL OF TRENT

For thirteen hundred years the church had been endeavoring to harmonize on a Bible by permitting the bishops and ecclesiastics to settle the matter generally among themselves, and it had resulted only in violent clashing of opinion. An ominous revolt was breaking out in the North. Luther was pushing the claim of the right of private judgment to its utmost through his "priesthood of the believer" theology. And as the Bible was the key of the situation, the church, which had been growing more and more restrictive and had thus accumulated precedent for its proposed step, took the whole questions of the canon in hand, fixed it once for all, and forbade any individual to have anything further to do with it.

The council of Trent met Dec. 13, 1545, and on Feb. 12, 1546, where the question of the canon was brought forward. Luther had declared that the Bible alone was the source of authority. Luther declared that the universally accepted books of the Old and New Testament, without any of the apocryphal or disputed books, should alone constitute the Bible. The church, in opposition to Luther, wanted the apocrypha admitted. The questions were discussed in the council by about thirty ecclesiastics in four sessions. For the second time in the history of the book came a compromise. Four fractions were contending for the adoption of different views. All were agreed that tradition, hearsay, and rumor was of equal authority with written records.

The grotesque misnomer of calling such men "great," or "scholars," is quite apparent. On the subject concerning which there should have been division, there was unity; and on the one on which there should have been unity; there was division:

- One party desired two classes of books, St. Augustine had divided them, the canonical and the uncanonical;
- The second party desired three classes, the acknowledged books, the disputed books of the New Testament, and the apocryphal books of the Old Testament, in each case, of course, the uncanonical books to be thrown out;
- The third party desired the list simply to be named without anything being said as to the authority of the books, as had been done at the third council of Carthage; and
- The fourth party demanded that all the books, acknowledged, disputed, and apocryphal, should be classed together, and the whole called of divine authority.

As is generally the case in a religious council where "spiritual insight" is permitted to rule, stupidity gained the day. The first and second parties combined about March 8th, but notwithstanding this, on the 15th the third party secured a majority, and the following decree was adopted:

" The holy ecumenical and general council of Trent,...following the examples of the orthodox Fathers, receives and venerates all the books of the Old and New Testaments, ...and also traditions pertaining to faith and conduct,...with an equal feeling of devotion and reverence...The synod though proper, therefore, to annex to this decree a catalogue of the sacred books, lest any doubt might arise concerning those that were approved of. They are the following: [Then are given the names of the books exactly as they stand in the Catholic Bible today, and the decree proceeds.] Now, if any one reading these books in all their parts, as they are usually read in the Latin Vulgate edition, does not hold them for sacred and canonical [observe "canonical," not "inspired"] and, knowing the aforesaid traditions, does industriously condemn them, let him be anathema (cursed by God)" (Westcott, Canon, p. 472; Schaff's Creeds of Christendom, ii. p. 79).

Answer for yourself: Why is this adopted by the council of Trent curse so important?

This is where the doctrine originated that we must believe the New Testament or be damned. More than one thousand five hundred years after Jesus Christ was supposedly crucified, this superstition arose. And the Catholic Church does not yet insist on inspirations, for it hold to the authority of tradition, and gossip and inspiration do not always agree.

Answer for yourself: But who were the men that established this damnation theory of the Bible?

"This fatal decree, in which the council, harassed by the fear of lay critics and 'grammarians,' gave a new aspect to the whole question of the canon, was ratified by 53 prelates, among whom were not ...one scholar distinguished for historical learning, not one who was fitted by special study, for the examination of a subject in which the truth could alone be determined by the voice of antiquity" (Westcott, Canon, p. 474).

That was the character of the men who said that their work was the work of God. For, let us remember, the books in the Catholic Bible are not what God said should be there but what these men said should be. God had nothing to do with it! Furthermore, this was the first time in the history of the church that anything which had been before simply a matter of custom and opinion, was made a belief to be accepted on pain of eternal damnation (Westcott, Canon, p. 474), and it has been the unfortunate parent of a most numerous and hideous progeny. Having once a precedent for declaring endless punishment a penalty for non-belief in dogmas not taught in the Bible, a whole brood of superstitions followed and have been current to this day.

This practically settled the question of the canon in the Catholic Church (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 237). A few men, later, protested, and endeavored to revise the list (Westcott, Canon, p. 475), but the struggle was useless.

What I find amazing is that the absurdity of the Eastern Church, which had for one thousand three hundred years declared persistently that the book of Revelation was not written by John and was not entitled to a place in the Bible, wheeled squarely about, and in a council held in Jerusalem in 1672 A.D., adopted the decree of Trent (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 246). Today the Easter Church considers Revelation as much the word of God as any other book (Westcott, Canon, p. 487).

THE WORSHIP OF A BOOK...INSTEAD OF GOD

The Protestant Church today is a book-worshipper. It makes a fetich out of a book. The Catholics are not as strong worshippers of the Bible as their Protestant children. The say, "Take away the whole book if you like, and the church will still remain in all its power. The book is the creation of the church, not the church the creation of the book." The Protestants, finding themselves confronted with an infallible church, had to oppose it with an infallible book. And they made a book infallible, which before had not been considered so. And well they might for they were compelled to. It is commonly the case that the overthrow of one superstition is only accomplished by the establishment of another in its place. The Catholics had the prestige of antiquity, and of being considered the only true Church of God, and they threatened with eternal damnation every man who followed Luther. The masses of the people of the North, ignorant and superstitious, were naturally terrified by the awful threat, and the only wonder is that they ever challenged this religious juggernaut. To meet the challenge, Luther, Calvin, and others said that the Bible was "supernaturally inspired." The origin of the books having been forgotten (as most Christians today do not possess such knowledge as well), men, credulous and in trouble, came to think that because the books were written of God they were written by God. The reformers declared that the Bible and not the church (in particular the Catholic Church) was the sole source of authority. This succeeded, and the decrees of the Vatican were answered by such reasoning by the Protestants. The doctrine of the divine and infallible inspiration of the New Testament spread as did the military advances through Europe.

That this is so, and that the idea arose with men who were deluded, is illustrated by the following ridiculous decree, adopted by the Calvinistic council of Switzerland in 1675 A. D.:

"Almighty God not only provided that His word, which is the power of every one who believes, should be committed to writing through Moses, the Prophets, and Apostles, but also has watched over it with a fatherly care up to the present time, and guarded it lest it might be corrupted by the craft of Satan or any fraud of men...The Hebrew volume of the Old Testament, which we have received from tradition of the Jewish church, to which formerly the oracles of God were committed, and retain at the present day, both in its contents and in its vowels, the points themselves, or at least the force of the points, and both in its substance and its words is divinely inspired, so that, together with the volume of the New Testament, is the single and uncorrupted rule of our faith and life, by whose standard, as by a touchstone, all versions which exist, whether Eastern or Western, must be tried, and whenever they vary, be made conformable to it" (Neimeyer, Collection Confessionum, p. 730). Nothing could be further from the truth!

THE PROBLEM WITH SUCH A BELIEF IN DIVINE INSPIRATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

Three things indicate the grim ferocity of this dogma:

- It says the God has guarded the Bible from corruption; yet Griesbach collected one hundred and fifty thousand various readings in the New Testament manuscripts alone (B. A. Hinsdale, M.A., Genuineness and Authenticity of the Gospels, Cincinnati, 1872 ,p. 130), the greater part of which must, of course, be corruptions, since there can be but one correct reading for any passage.
- It says the vowels were inspired, whereas the ancient Hebrew Scripture and literature had no vowels.
- It says that the vowel-points were inspired; whereas they vowel-points in the Hebrew did not come into use until the seventh century after Jesus, and were not perfected until four centuries later. This last article is a relic of that ancient belief that the translators, the copyists, and all the men who had aught to do with the transmission of the Bible from century to century, were inspired.

THE BELGIAN CONFESSION (1561-1563 A.D.)

The Belgian Confession is just another curious illustration of the highly wrought mental condition of that time. It says: "We embrace the Holy Scripture in those two volumes of the Old and New Testament, which are called the canonical books, about which there is no controversy" (Neimeyer, Collection Confessionum, pp. 361-363, Art. 3-7).

Answer for yourself: What do they mean by saying "about which there is no controversy?"

Then follows a list of the books of the Bible as we receive them now, including also the books which, as you have seen, had been in controversy for 1500 years and were even then. And notwithstanding these facts the italicized words were subsequently changed to read "about which there never was any controversy" (Ibid.). What a lie!

The creed proceeds, "And we believe these things contained in them...because the Holy Spirit witnesses to our consciences that they emanated from God" (Ibid., pp. 361-363). We are told by theologians that we cannot trust our reason, that we must "experience the testimony of the spirit" to believe the doctrines of the church, and that this testimony can be relied upon. Yet here we find a people offering the "testimony of the spirit" to the truth of a thing which we now know to be false!!! The "testimony of the spirit" is a mental delusion. The Christian no doubt thinks he has it. He is honest in it to the best of his ability, but he is mistaken. There is no such thing. His imagination supplies the facts, just as it the case with a man suffering from delirium tremens, who thinks he sees various hideous creatures. Righteous enthusiasm, such as says that "every word in the blessed New Testament was inspired by God", is a mental and moral delirium tremens.

The Protestants, however, through convinced that the Bible was infallibly inspired, had their difficulties in determining what the Bible really was. And the fierceness with which they insisted on their views ended in the suppression of all historical criticism (Westcott, Canon, p. 465). Erasmus (1467-1536 A.D.), a classical scholar, although he remained a Roman Catholic throughout his lifetime, was critical of what he considered the excesses of the Roman Catholic Church. He said that Hebrews was not written by Paul, nor Second John and Third John by the Apostle, but by another John; nor Revelation by John (Westcott, Canon, p. 467). Let us not forget that Erasmus was the literary leader of the Reformation. While he was still a Catholic, an attack was made upon his views by the Sarbonne, the theological faculty of Paris; censure was placed on his doubts, and it was declare that, no matter if the genuineness of certain books had been disputed in ancient times, the fact that the church has since accepted them made it wrong for any Christian to dispute them (Westcott, Canon, p. 470).

BODENSTEIN, OF KARLSTADT (1520 A.D.)

Bodenstein, the reformer, and great friend but finally the persecuted enemy of Luther, divided the books of the Bible into three classes. In the first he placed the Four Gospels; in the second of "less authority" he placed the "acknowledged" Epistles of the New Testament (i.e., thirteen of Paul, First Peter, and First John); and in the third class, as of least authority, Hebrews, James, Second Peter, Second John, Third John, Jude, and Revelation. He omitted the book of Acts entirely.

LUTHER

Luther said that Hebrews was written by neither Paul nor an apostle but did not place it on equality with the epistles written by the apostles. He thought it was a compilation for pre-existing records, and while it had much in it that was good, it also had "wood, straw, or hay" in its composition.

The Epistle of James was, he said, an epistle of straw, with no character of the Gospel in it; it was not written by any apostle, and was not a true Bible book (Pref. Epis. Jacobi). The Epistle of Jude was, he declared, a reprint from Second Peter (compare the second chapter of Second Peter and the first part of the third chapter of the Epistle of Jude, and having done so one will see that they closely resemble each other) and therefore it did not, in his opinion, belong among the canonical books (Pred. Epis. Judae). Revelation he considered neither prophetic nor apostolic, and though that it was almost on a level with the fourth book of Esdras, which last he proposed to throw into the river Elbe (Davidson, The Canon of the Bible, p. 216). He modified this view twelve years later so far as to say that it was a dumb prophecy, and that there was no objection to any one believing it to have been written by the Apostle John, who desired to do so (Westcott, Canon, p. 479). As for himself he did not believe it. He placed Hebrews, James, Jude and Revelation in an appendix to his New Testament, as of inferior authority (Westcott, Canon, p. 477).

ZWINGLI (1531 A.D.)

Zwingli declared that he took no account of Revelation, for it was not a book of the Bible (Works, ed. Schuler II, i. 169). Colampadius (1531 A.D.) said that the Protestants of Switzerland did not compare James, Jude, Second Peter, Second John, Third John, and Revelation, with the other books of the Bible (Epis., i. 3, c., ed. 1548). Calvin, on the other hand, said that though Hebrews was not written by Paul, it was through a Satanic device that its authority had been questions (Pref. Heb.), and that Second Peter, though not written by Peter, was written by some disciple at his command (Pref. Epis. as Heb.). He passed over Second John, Third John, and Revelation, without any notice in his commentary.

Luther and his successors, it will be seen, made the same distinction between the New Testament books that had been made between those of the Old Testament, classifying them according to the "generally received" and the "controverted." It was the council of Trent which obliterated the distinction between the books of the Old Testament, and the Calvinists who obliterated it between the books of the New (Davidson, Canon, p. 217). The Lutherans also discarded subsequently Luther's views, and accepted all the books as of equal authority, and thus all over the Protestant world the books of the canon were placed on the same level.

So as you can see there is no unity among the 16th century Church Fathers concerning what is and what is not to be included in the New Testament nor what is Sacred Scriptures. Think with me. It has been one thousand six hundred years and there is no agreement as to what should be in or out of the New Testament; 1,600 years and still division. That should make you wonder just where in the world is the "unity of the Faith" of which we read. We are almost done with these studies so let us continue at we end this study looking at events of the 17th century; only 300 years ago mind you!

WESTMINSTER ASSEMBLY (1647 A.D.)

Finally, the Westminster assembly in 1647 adopted a list which has since been accepted by the Presbyterians of England, Ireland, and America, the Congregationalists of both countries, and, in short, by the Protestant evangelical and orthodox churches with which we come in contact in our daily life in the United States. It is in the famous Westminster Confession that we find the authority for the current books in our Christian Protestant Bibles, and is the same as the Catholic list except that it rejects the Old Testament apocrypha (Schaff, Creeds of Christendom, iii. 601). The latter was, however, for a long time printed in an appendix, and some who read this, especially elderly persons, can remember seeing the apocrypha in the old family Bibles. But in 1827 the British and Foreign Bible Society decided that it would no longer circulate those books (Lange, Comm., xv. 56ff., Am. ed., 1880), the American Bible Society followed its example (Schaff, Bible Dict., "Apocrypha"), and thus it was that our Bible received its finishing touch, as we have been accustomed to see it.

Now let us finish this study as we look at the inescapeable conclusion that these studies have drawn for us.

THE INESCAPABLE CONCLUSION CONCERNING THE NEW TESTAMENT

I have attempted to give you, the reader, a brief review of the subject at hand:

- We found without question that the greater number of books of the New Testament are anonymous.
- Of these books no one knows who wrote them, and no one knows when they were written. They are, in the case of the most important books, of those most relied on for doctrinal support, compilations from pre-existing records. But who wrote those records, and who made the compilations, are entirely unknown.
- We have seen repeatedly that when the books of the New Testament came into use they were not considered inspired or the word of God as we esteem them today.
- Many Gospels, Epistles, and Revelations, not now in use in Christianity, were read in the churches in the early centuries for edification.
- About the close of the second century or the beginning of the third century, when the Gentile Roman Catholic Church was forming, a source of authority for appeal in case of dispute over new doctrines was necessary, and the Fathers instituted the theory that certain books were "inspired" in hopes of bolstering their political, economic, and theological positions as one "sect" fought another "sect" for supremacy. But the books which they said were divine were not always the same books which we have now. They declared many books to be inspired which we do not think to be; and they ignored and rejected books which have since been invested with divine honors.
- The contentions of the sects made it impossible for the new church to unite on the Gospels, which had been first in use, and they were, therefore, discarded, and our present Four Gospels were substituted. To give them greater authority, the names of the Apostles who had been with Jesus were forged to them, literary forgery in those days not being considered a crime as today. The Fathers in asserting that the books were inspired, were guided not by critical ability nor by the Holy Spirit, but by ignorance and gross superstition. Instead of being great scholars, they were extremely superstitious, ignorant, and credulous, and in general very inferior intellectually.
- After much controversy, and even bloodshed, it became apparent that they could not agree as to what books should form the New Testament; and councils took the matter in hand, and for nearly twelve centuries they argued and discussed it. And finally, the Gentile Roman Catholic Church in the council of Trent, and the Greek Church in the council of Constantinople, decided once for all what the list should be for their adherents; and the Westminster Assembly gave the English-speaking Protestants their catalogue of current books as well.

There you have it. It is not pretty, but that is because the Holy Spirit was not behind it and had nothing to do with such confusion. The New Testament, as we have it today, is hardly more than three centuries old.

SO WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO NOW KNOWING THIS?

Well you can choose to do nothing, or you can do what I did when I ran across such information years ago; I began a serious study of the New Testament and the origins of the religious doctrines within it. Since most of our readership looks to Jesus as the greatest example of Godliness, then why don't we let "this mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus." I recommend that, but sadly, that mind is not always accurately portrayed in the New Testament. Now only do we have a problem of what books, or who wrote them, but the doctrines contained within them are often diametrically opposed to what Jesus and the earliest Jerusalem church believed let alone expected non-Jews to believe as part of "believing Israel."

This paragraph as I write it is one of the most important statements I have ever made. On the surface it seems so simple but I assure you that the dynamics involved in its contemplation are explosive. I ask that you give serious attention and thought to what I will say and share with you in these articles that follow in this web-site as we look at the problems and contradictions of religious doctrines in the New Testament when compared with the Jewish Scriptures read and believed by Jesus. What you read in the next days and weeks as delineated on this web-site, as well as http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com has the ability to change your life and deliver you from the most darkest and vilest idolatry of which most of your are not yet aware. In these articles I will disclose the substantial identity of Gentile Christianity as known and practiced today with the most popular and widespread "Pagan" religion of all time, Sun worship. Such religious doctrines, of which now you are not aware, are scattered throughout the New Testament and put into the mouth of Jesus and the Apostles, even Paul. You may be more familiar with such Sun worship by the term of Mithraism, or the Persian Zoroastrian religion. You might not be aware, and I find that the vast majority of Christians are not, but Mithraism was the closest and all but successful rival of Christianity in the Roman world, and which might indeed have been successful, but that, soon after Constantine prostituted the Empire to the Church,—"with the triumph of Christianity Mithraism came to a sudden end. The laws of Theodosius signed its death warrant." (Catholic Encyclopedia. x, 402.) That there may be no suspicion that the recital of these remarkable identities of Christian "revelation" on the pages of the New Testament line up identically with Pagan religious doctrines in many ways. If you look to Jesus for "Divine Revelation" or even to Christianity as a "Divine Revelation" then once you see this information then it is beyond any question that God had anything to do with giving the Christian much of what he believed today; let alone believes about Jesus.

You should ask yourself, especially in light now after having seen how this document touted as the Word of God, the New Testament, was gathered and put together, one simple question: WHAT IS REVELATION… AND IS CHRISTIANITY BUILT UPON DIVINE, UNIQUE, AND G-DLY REVELATION? "

"When Pagan myths already current and long known to everyone for hundreds and thousands of years can be later found to be foundational to many dogmas and doctrines held sacred in Christianity because they are held and believed to be unique revelations from God and as found on page after page of the New Testament, then Divine revelation and inspiration cannot be appealed to for the origin of the Christian Faith and its teaching and such incriminating evidence must bring serious doubt to such doctrines and dogmas within Christianity as stemming from God… sadly these once held "sacred" doctrines must now understood as pagan copies."

You have seen the history of the documents (New Testament) espousing such "Divine Revelation;" now it is time for you to begin such a study into these doctrines of the New Testament as compared with the beliefs of the Jewish Bible Jesus used.....to see the changes, the misquotations on purpose, the purposeful changing of the Jewish Scriptures in order to replace the religion of Jesus intended for all the world with one of Rome's making.

The Catholic Encyclopedia states: "The existence of revelation (as in the New Testament) is as reasonably established as any historical fact"! (C.E. xiii, 607.). I would think that the evidence I just submitted to you says otherwise without a doubt. It is time to wake up! These above statements are the most incredible lies ever uttered in the history of mankind. And I will quickly prove them so. Lets get back to truth, shall we. "Divine Revelation is thus of things not previously known and which the revelationless mind of man is incapable of acquiring or inventing by its own efforts." So exactly with "revelation": if some impostor or deluded person (e.g. Mohammed or Joseph Smith) claims that he has received a personal—and therefore necessarily private —"revelation" from some g-d, the only way whereby he can get a valid patent of authenticity and credibility for his "revelation," is to prove that its subject-matter has never before been known and in credulous circulation; the moment that from the search of the records—of other, or comparative religions,—it is shown that the same proposition has been previously known and current, in use and practice among some other priestcraft and its devotees—the thing is no revelation at all: the claim is a fraud!!!

PUTTING GENTILE CHRISTIANITY AND ITS DOCTRINES UNDER THE MICROSCOPE OF COMPARATIVE RELIGION

Let us see how this indisputable rule works when applied to Gentile Christianity. In doing so we will either prove beyond any doubt that the Christian Faith is Divine unique revelation to mankind and worthy of trust and faith for the world to come or else is but the reiteration of prior pagan beliefs and is not to be trusted for truth or preparation for the world to come. The answer to such inquiry will either prove Christianity uniquely Divine and God breathed as is attested for it; or expose it as anything but Divine but rather pagan whereby then you would be better served to return to the faith once given the Saints; Biblical Judaism where the Gentile believer, as a Godfearer, has a place both within Biblical Judaism and the Israel of God and not apart from it. Let us see what we can find, shall we?

You quest begins as you continue to read through this web-site as you examine the various studies presented:

IS THE NEW TESTAMENT INSPIRED, INFALLIBLE, AND INERRANT?

As Christians, individuals seeking to know and do the will of the Almighty, you are confronted with a significant question: is the New Testament really the Word of God? Are parts but not other parts? Which parts? How can we know the truth from fiction if fiction exists in it?

Your Christian leaders have assured you that the answer to the question "Is the New Testament the Word of God" with a strong affirmative "yes". Perhaps you have even had some emotional experiences which seem to validate your leaders' assurances. As you know, though, true faith is based neither upon trust in men (Ps, 146:3), nor even upon occurrences of the supernatural (Deut. 13). And so, the question remains, your eternal salvation contingent upon the answer.

Following is a short Biblical study, offered in an attempt to help you find the answer. We ask that you complete this study in a spirit of earnestness and prayer, asking God to reveal to you His truth in the quietness of your own heart. As you do so, remember that you are a member of a kingdom of priests and a holy nation (Ex.19:6), described in the Scriptures as the "apple of God's eye" (Zech.2:8) and participants in an "everlasting covenant" (Gen. 17:7). As such, rest assured that God will indeed heed your request as you sincerely seek to discover His truth.

- ITEM 1: Stephen's capsule summary of Jewish History, ostensibly written under the influence of the Holy Spirit (Acts 7:55, 6:10), and an early expression of that anti-Jewish tendency which would later come to characterize the Christian Scriptures (see, e.g., 1 Thes. 2:15, Jn. 8:39-47, Matt. 23:34- 35).

Acts 7:4--Stephen tells us that Abraham departed from Haran "after his father died." Had he studied the Book of Genesis (11:26,32; 12:4), he would have realized his error: Abraham departed from Haran at age 75, at a time when his father Terah was 145; since Terah lived for 205 years, he still had another 60 years of life remaining.

Acts 7:14--Stephen related that 75 of Joseph's relatives were called by him to come to Egypt. Moses saw it differently: see Deut. 10:22, Gen 46:27, Ex. 1:5 (And all the persons who came from the loins of Jacob were 70 in number").

Acts 7:16--Stephen informs us that Jacob was buried in Shechem, and that the tomb was purchased by Abraham from Emmor .

Genesis, again tells a different story. At the death of Sarah his wife, Abraham purchases the Cave of Machpelah, which is in Hebron, as a burial place. The cave is purchased from Ephron the Hittite, contrary to what Steven says in Acts. (Gen.23) It is here that Jacob is buried, as outlined in Genesis 50:13. It was Jacob who purchased a parcel of land in Shechem from Hamor, but it was purchased as a place to pitch his tent and as a place to erect an altar.

ITEM 2: Did Judas take the silver pieces from the priests and acquire a field with them (Acts 1:18), or did he return the silver pieces and then hang himself (Matt.27:5)?

- ITEM 3: Where in Jeremiah's prophecies does he speak of 30 pieces of silver, as Matthew claims (27:9)? Was not Matthew in fact confusing Jeremiah with Zechariah (see Zech. 11:12-13)?
- ITEM 4: Yeshua himself seems to have been confused by Zechariah. In Matt. 23:25, he informs us that Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, was murdered between the Temple and the altar. Our Scriptures, however, tell a different story: it was Zechariah, the son of Jehoida, who was slain by the altar (2 Chron. 24:20-21), this in the days of the Judean king Joash. There is no indication that the prophet Zechariah, son of Berechiah (Zech. 1:1), was similarly slain.
- ITEM 5: Was the Last Supper a Passover Seder (Matt. 26:17-20, Mk. 14:12,Lk.22:7) or--rather--the day of preparation for the Passover (Jn. 19:14)?
- ITEM 6: Was John the Baptist Elijah, as Yeshua claimed (Matt. 11:14)? if so, why did John himself deny it (Jn. 1:21)? Would "Elijah" have been so unsure of Yeshua's messianic identity (Lk. 7:19-20)? And where in our Scriptures is it written that Elijah would be mistreated, as Yeshua claimed (Mk. 9:13)? Don't our Scriptures indicate, to the contrary, that Elijah will be successful in his mission of restoring harmony among the people (Mal.4:5-6)?
- ITEM 7: Was Abiathar the High Priest when David ate the consecrated bread, as Yeshua claimed in justifying his followers' violation of the Sabbath (Mk. 2:25-26)? Why do our Scriptures say that the high priest at the time was Ahimelech (1 Sam. 21:1), the father of Abiathar (1 Sam. 22:20)?
- ITEM 8: Regarding Yeshua's step-father, was he Joseph son of Jacob son of Mattan son of Eliezer (Matt. 1:15-16) or Joseph son of Eli son of Mattat son of Levi (Lk. 3:23-24)? And how can both sets of genealogical tables validly include Shealtiel and Zerubabbel (Matt. 1:12, Lk. 3:27), given that both of these men are descendants of Jeconiah (1 Chron. 3:16-19), of whom God has said, "no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting on the throne of David or ruling any more in Judah" (Jer. 22-30)?
- ITEM 9: Given the new Testament statement that "if Christ has not been raised, your faith is worthless" (1 Cor. 15:17), see if you can possibly reconcile the conflicting accounts of Yeshua's post-resurrection appearances. To cite just one example, did Yeshua, upon arising and reveal himself (a) in Galilee to the eleven remaining disciples (Judas, of course, being absent)--Matt. 26:16, Mk 16:7,14; (b) in Jerusalem to the eleven--Lk.24:33,36; (c) in Jerusalem to the ten, Thomas being absent--Jn.20;10,19,24; or (d) to Peter and then to the twelve--1 Cor.15:5? (Paul's version, choice (d), obviously presents a problem: who were the twelve, since Judas was already dead (Matt. 27:5) and his successor had not yet been chosen (Acts 1:26)?

THE PROBLEMS WITH THE NEW TESTAMENT ONLY BEGIN HERE

If you have ever used your mind to think before now is the time to do it again. If you continue your study of the materials presented on this web site, then you will see beyond any question that more than these 9 items dot the pages of the New Testament as stark inaccuracies. Of more importance are the misquotations by the New Testament from the Hebrew Scriptures and the Hebrew Old Testament, the purposeful mistranslations by the New Testament from the Hebrew Scriptures, the hundreds of verses taken out of context in order to give prophetic credibility to Scriptural alterations and deceptions passed off as "truth" by the anti-Semitic writers and redactors of the New Testament. Basically what you will see is a "replacement religion" called Gentile Christianity which has destroyed and replaced the Biblical truths of Judaism and the faith of Jesus. Having completed your study of this website, as well as some of the other websites of Bet Emet ministry, I am confident that you, like myself, will be forced to begin a serious study of the faith of Yeshua…Biblical Judaism…the only faith every given to man by HaShem. Let me prepare you that such a study only opens the door of Divine Truth and you will see that all roads don't actually lead to Rome as most have heard. Instead, they lead to ancient Egypt and the truth about the Krst/Christ; a "Truth" that few Christians have ever heard in their life or ever will hear given the complacency and intellectual apathy of today's modern Christianity. Shalom.

DID YOU KNOW THAT THE NEW TESTAMENT IS FAR FROM INERRANT?

The documents contained in the Tanakh (Old Testament) are without noticeable variation in all the ancient manuscripts (and codices) we have. Compare to this the fact that in the so-called "New Testament" collection of writings it is not hard to find hundreds and hundreds of variations and mistakes. No two ancient New Testament documents are the same (and then most are only portions of the present Christian writings). The differences between the Jewish Bible and the Christian New Testament are not just the quality and intent of the (writers and) scribes, but the "theological" diversity is enormous! When I read how particular the Jewish sages and scribes were in the transmission of the Jewish texts I was astounded.

The writings of the Hebrew canon were seen as sacred early, and treated as such. Even though there were factions within the Yahwistic Faith, the scrolls were held above human agendas once the text was established. Men devoted their lives (the Masoretes, as example) to making sure that letter, and later, vowel-point, accent, and scribal notations were worthy of the sacred nature of the words. To say they were meticulous is an understatement.

Christianity/Paulinism has always been polemic and apologetic, and highly splintered. Each faction or even congregation has had an overt and covert agenda. The "Church" took over 500 years to decide what was "sacred", i.e., what writings it felt could totally repurpose (repurposing the Sacred Book of a people Roman and Byzantine Christians had attempted to destroy and victimize). Each Christian congregation, it seems, had a holy document to justify its religious preferences. Each document were local products. If copying occurred locally or elsewhere, conditions and quality of transmission were poor and undisciplined. Later errors and even opinions of the scribes became part of the Christian writings and found their way into the Greek text! This explains how a Jewish faith as described in a supposedly Jewish book, the New Testament, can be filled with doctrines no Jew believed as well as the volumes of anti-Semitism clothed in its passages. Unlike the Masorah notes of the Hebrew Bible written separated from the main text, Christian scribes often added their comments within their "sacred" texts.

Answer for yourself: Are inspiration and inerrancy schemes necessary devices to lock out questions concerning the questionable providence of Christianity and its writings?

Some churches were more powerful and influential with the Roman government, and the government stepped in to solidify the "Church". The rest is history of a gentile phenomenon unworthy of space. Allow me this sorted example, for comparison sake:

The "NT" is no where sacred as is the Jewish Old Testament. The books of the NT were written, collected, and canonized by men and committees, not magically "breathed" into scribes.

Answer for yourself: If no two individual ancient Greek manuscripts (from which later translations were made) of the more than 5400 containing portions of the NT are the same textually, then which one of these is the "inspired" text?

Even 1600 years later, the best Christian scholars cannot determine the original words of Yeshua. Yet Christians have warred against each other over the most ridiculous nuances of their eclectic assemblage of writings. The first to start the "New Testament" canon was a man named Marcion.

Answer for yourself: What was his agenda?

He collected the letters of Paul of Tarsus, understandably, to promote the belief that the god of the Jews was an evil, worldly, hateful deity with designs to rule the earth through laws. Iesous was the new god, subduing the Jewish god, and bringing in a spiritual age via a extremely lax holy spirit. (Sounds like dispensationalism!)

Answer for yourself: Are modern "critical" scholars the first to question the providence of the New Testament?

Not at all. The collecting and "canonization" of books included was a long process . As mentioned above, ancient "books" were not comparable to what we have today. Scrolls were long and heavy, codexes (which had sewn pages) were large and heavy, and both could only include a limited amount of information found in a few letters, gospels, or a prophet or two. This is why that you will find few ancient codexes containing all of what is today understood as a "New Testament." Until the printed book after the 1540s, and probably later than this, very few Christians ever saw a "New Testament."

WHY A CHRISTIAN CANON?

Answer for yourself: What is the Christian Canon of Scripture?

There is agreement among the churches that what they call the "Old Testament" (i.e., the Tanakh) is authoritative and to be used by Christians for questions of doctrine and faith. Catholics add apocryphal writings to their menu as deuterocanonicals. (The first King James bibles also included the Apocrypha.)

But the "church" does not agree on the NT canon or canonical writing of the Christian age. The Syrian Church does not include 2 Peter, 2 & 3 John, Jude, or Revelations. The Ethiopic Church includes books called Synodos, Clement, Book of the Covenant (with Testament of the Lord), and the Didascalia. Both churches are very ancient. And they have been using these writings canonically since the 300-400s CE. The Catholic Church itself did not close the canon until 1545 (Council of Trent), in reaction to Martin Luther.

Martin Luther could not accept all the books of the church canon as proper. He had a problem with James, Hebrews, Jude, and Revelations because they did not square with Paul of Tarsus in his mind. These he placed in an appendix to his translation of the Christian bible. And other reformers, the foundations of today's fundamentalist Protestantism, held the Christian canon under suspicion as they did all the other Catholic inventions. Most Protestant groups do not officially "close" their canon of scripture, and may still be adding to it (for example, the Book of Mormon by the Latter Day Saints).

Typical Christians (like typical members of any group) are ignorant of their history, and just stay in line. To make known any questions concerning the divine status of their church attacks their security in their way of life. Inerrancy and inspiration issues really have little to do with the text of the NT. The doctrines of Inerrancy and Inspiration are designed to place the historical development, culture, and conclusions of Christianity beyond the questions concerning its biblical legitimacy.

Answer for yourself: Is the NT worthless?

The NT writings and most ancient writings are hardly worthless. Something important happened concerning Yeshua ben Yosef and an actual movement started because of him. Even though historical Christianity is better called Paulinism, and is not a result of intimate understanding of Yahwism, there are clues of what Yeshua said and taught in several NT books. But using the correct criteria of biblical authority and interpretation allows one to be independent of this, and able to analyze uninspired, yet valuable contributions buried in the NT.

A HONEST LOOK INTO THE HISTORY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT...BY WHOM AND WHERE?

WHAT IS MY PURPOSE IN SHARING THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION?

In inviting the reader to share the inquiry, I wish to assure him that I have no theory to advocate. In opposing what I believe to be error, I desire simply to offer the evidence which is easily accessible to most, which seems not to have had its due prominence in theological discussion among the masses, and which, if properly appreciated, must result in great changes in religious beliefs.

THE MAIN SOURCES OF ANTIQUITY…..LISTENING AND LEARNING FROM THEM

The writings of the Christian Fathers, the Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius (the oldest Christian history now extant) and the modern works, On The Canon of the New Testament, by Brooke Foss Westcott, D.D., and The Canon of the Bible, by Prof. Samuel Davidson, D.D., are the main sources from which the information in these articles are chiefly drawn. But we are not limited by these as the sources are in reality almost endless if one chooses to look the the problem of the New Testament. The inexperienced person has little idea of the difficulty which the critical party finds in getting its facts before the public; nor of the systematic suppression used by the Christian media and clergy to prevent unpleasant truths concerning the Christian religion from coming out. There is not an orthodox Christian media source I know of that will publish the facts concerning the origin of the New Testament which are given in these articles. Men who know the Christian theology to be untrue, have to get their audience as best they can. Thus the importance of the Internet for our world today.

One would suppose that the Christian clergy would be familiar with the history of the New Testament and how it came to be compiled (the canonization of the New Testament), the truth is, it is one of the subjects least understood. For our purposes, by "canon" is meant the list of the books composing the New Testament. Among the early Christians it meant the list of the books appointed to be read in the churches, and later, it came to mean the list of books which were sources and test of doctrine.

ORIGIN OF THE BOOKS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT...BY WHOM AND WHEN?

The reader must bear in mind that most of the books in the New Testament are anonymous. Despite the names appearing at the beginning of your Gospels in the New Testament or over the epistles no one knows who wrote them, or at least most of them, and no one knows when they were written. As to their origin there have been conjectures, but the number of authors named is about equal to the number of commentators engaged in the guessing.

This might come as a shock to you but the books of the New Testament which have no known authors are Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, Acts, the Epistles to the Ephesians, Colossians, First Timothy, Second Timothy, Titus, Hebrews, the Epistle of James, Second Peter, Second John, Third John, Jude, and perhaps Revelation. The genuineness of Paul's Epistles to the Ephesians and Colossians is doubted by some scholars, thought the majority accept them as from Paul. But this leaves ten of Paul's Epistles and the First of Peter, the First of John, and it may be Revelation as the only genuine writings in the New Testament!

Prof. Davidson says that the Gospel of Matthew, as we have it now, could not have been written by Matthew (Intro. New Test., i. 484). In his book he goes on to explain why the present Gospel of Mark was not written by Mark, and that its author is unknown (Ibid., ii. 83-84). He also makes a strong case that Luke did not write the Gospel now bearing his name (Ibid., ii. 25). Of the Gospel of John he says:

"Its existence before 140 A.D. is incapable either of decisive or probable showing….The Johannine authorship has receded before the tide of modern criticism; and though this tide is arbitrary at times, it is here irresistible" (Canon, 127).

"No certain trace of existence of the Fourth Gospel can be found till after Justin Martyr, ie., till after the middle of the second century" (Intro. New Test., ii. 520).

Of course, if it were not written till 140 or 150 A.D., the Apostle John could not have been its author, for he was dead long before that.

Again, Prof. Davidson says:

"If it be asked whether all the New Testament writings proceeded from the authors whose names they bear, criticism can not reply in the affirmative" (Canon, 153).

"Textual criticism has been employed to discredit the true dates of the present Gospels (i.e., to make them earlier than they really were), and the most exaggerated descriptions have been given of the frequent transcriptions of the text and its great corruption in the second century (i.e., the believers say the evidence of the late dates are corruptions of the second century)…But the evidence in favor of the authors traditionally assigned to the Gospels and some of the Epistles, is still uncertain. A wide gap intervenes between eye-witnesses of the apostles or apostolic men that wrote the sacred books, and the earliest Fathers who assert such authorship. The traditional bridge between them is a precarious one" (Canon, 159).

The Epistles to Titus, and the First and Second Epistles to Timothy, commonly known as the "Pastoral Epistles," were not written by Paul (Davidson, Canon, 239, 252, 261; Intro. New Test., ii. 193-194). What is of major importance for the reader to understand is that prior to the year 170 A.D., nothing was heard of the Second Epistle of Peter (Westcott, Canon, 227), and it was not generally known till the close of the third century (Ibid., 242). Dr. Westcott says that its canonicity can not even now, on historical grounds, be pronounced certainly authentic, and the most he can say for it is that it is better supported than the Shepherd of Hermas or the Epistle of Barnabas (Westcott, Canon, 227), of which we now hear nothing.

There has never been a time when the book of Revelation was not discarded by many persons competent to judge. The churches to which it was addressed, those in Asia, are the very ones which rejected it! It was not in the Bibles of the Eastern Christians for more than one thousand five hundred years, and was incorporated into those Bibles less than three centuries ago. Dionysius said that many of the early Christians denounced it as being without sense or reason, and as the forgery of Cerinthus (Euseb., Eccl. Hist., vii. 25). Dionysius himself did not believe it was written by John the Apostle (Ibid.), he did not know who did write it, although it another place he intimates that Cerinthus did so, and forged John's name to it (Ibid., iii. 28). Papias suggested that it might have been written by John the presbyter (Ibid., iii. 39). Caius said it was written by Cerinthus (Ibid., iii. 28). So great was the hostility and contempt for it in the East, that there is reason to believe that the bishops would not allow it to be read in the churches (Westcott, Canon, 442, note 2). In the synod of Toledo, a Western church, in 671 A.D., a special decree had to be passed affirming its authority (Ibid., 447, note 4). And so late as the sixteenth century, Beza, the friend of Luther and Calvin, conjectured that it was written by Mark (Prov. Apocalypsis).

Even yet, the Pauline authority of the Epistle of Hebrews, and its right to a place in the New Testament, have been denied by orthodox theologians. The genuine letters have the superscription, "Paul, called to be an Apostle," etc. This Epistle has none. Originally, no one claimed it to have been written by Paul. Tertullian, (202 A.D.), the Christian Father, said it was written by Barnabas (De dic. 20). In the Clermont manuscript it is to this day called the Epistle of Barnabas (Westcott, Canon, 263). The Old Latin version does not contain it (Ibid., 254). It was added subsequently, and then as an anonymous production (Ibid.). The early Latin Fathers, with entire unanimity, ignore it, and exclude it from the Bible. According to Origin some said it was written by Clement of Rome, others by Luke. Origin himself said, "But who it was that really wrote this epistle, God only knows" (Euseb., Eccl. Hist., vi. 23). Philastrius, of Brescia (387 A.D.), rejected it, saying that in some churches it was not read, and that is authorship was variously attributed to Barnabas, Clement of Rome, Luke and Paul (Haer. lxxxix). Grotius, in the seventeenth century, said it was obviously not written by Paul, and he believed it was written by Luke (Pref. To Hebrews). He also believed that the original title of the Second Epistle of Peter was the "Epistle of Simeon," James' successor as Bishop of Jerusalem (Pref. To 2 Peter). He also believed that the present Epistle was not the original one, but was compiled from two others by Simeon, of which the second begins as the third chapter. Dr. Westcott says that the Epistle to the Hebrews can not be shown to have been written by Paul (Westcott, Canon, 356). Kitto's Cyclopedia of the Bible says that its Pauline authorship, and its canonicity are assumptions, neither of which is admitted on all hands to have conclusive evidence (Art. "Hebrews, Epistle to the"). And yet, in the face of facts like these, certain Christian teachers have told us that we must believe these books, or be damned eternally in a like of literal fire! That is what unbelievers are opposing. They are not trying to tear down public morality. They are protesting against the elevation of stupidity as intelligence!

HOW DID WE EVER LEARN THESE THINGS?...THROUGH HISTORICAL CRITICISM...

When the assertion is made that it has been proved that Matthew did not write the Gospel bearing his name, and that a particular book was not written by the person to whom it is usually attributed, the question is asked, "How does scholarship learn these things?" It is by what is known as the "historical method" of criticism. In case of a literary forgery, it is often easy to show that the work was not written by the person claimed as its author, while at the same time it would be utterly impossible to show who did write it. A few evidence that the Gospel of John was not written by the Apostle, will illustrate how the method is used.

1. The book does not claim to have been written by John. It is called the Gospel "according" to John.
2. It was not heard of till about the year 180 A.D., nearly a hundred years after John was dead. No one of the Christian writers previous to that date makes the slightest mention of it. The inference is that it was not yet in existence.

3. It came into use first among the heretics, who did not ascribe it to John. It was not until toward the close of the second century that the book was attributed to him and then by the Fathers of the church (Davidson, Intro. New Test., ii. 520).
4. The Gospel of John says that Bethsaida was in Galilee (John 12:21). There is no such town in that district, and there never was. Bethsaida was on the east side of the sea of Tiberius, whereas Galilee was on the west side. St. John was born at Bethsaida, and the probability is that he would know the geographical location of his own birth-place.
5. John was the son of Zebedee (Matt. 10:2), and a Jew. But the author of the Gospel speaks of the Jews in the second and third persons. He says the "feasts of the Jews" (John 5:1), "the Passover, a feast of the Jews" (John 6:4), "the manner of the purifying of the Jews" (John 2:6), the law of the Jews is called "your law" (John 7:19; 10:34), "their law" (John 15:25), and he calls the Jews the children of the devil (John 8:44).
6. The other Evangelists narrate certain miracles, and say that John was the only one of the four Gospel writers who was an eyewitness; yet John does not mention them. The raising of Jarius' daughter is an illustration. This was a most astounding feat, enough to have stunned the observer and fixed him with amazement for a lifetime; and one would suppose that every well-authenticated case would have been carefully preserved by those who saw it. Matthew and Mark and Luke all narrate it. Mark and Luke distinctly asset that of the four Evangelists John was the only one present; but the Gospel of John makes not the slightest reference to it. The transfiguration is another. It is the only event of the kind that has ever occurred, and therefore the men who witnessed it ought certainly to have said something of it. Matthew, Mark, and Luke, who were not present, describe it. Each asserts in the plainest terms that, of the four Gospel writers, John was the only one who saw it. Yet John does not even hint at it!

These are a few of the evidence that John did not write the Gospel now bearing his name, and they give an idea of how scholars determine the fact that a work is a forgery.

THE TESTIMONY OF ANTIQUITY...SILENCE SPEAKS LOUDER THAN WORDS SOMETIMES

The reader has heard so much from orthodox sources, of the "unanimous testimony of antiquity to the authenticity of the Gospels," that he will be interested in knowing what that testimony is.

The first Christian writer whose works have come to us is Paul, and his Epistles we have in the New Testament. He makes no mention of the Four Gospels, makes no quotations from them, and makes not the slightest reference to them. The First Epistle of Peter, the First of John, which are generally believed to be genuine, and the Revelation of John, whose authenticity is conceded by many unbelievers, do not mention the Gospels, and do not quote from them. Likewise we have the book of Acts, Second John, Third John, James, and Jude, but none of them mentions the Four Gospels, or quotes from them, or gives the slightest indication that its author ever heard of them.

The Apostolic Fathers are they who immediately succeeded the Apostles, and the first of them was Clement of Rome (97 A.D.). We have his Epistle to the Corinthians, but in them there is no mention of either Matthew, Mark, Luke, or John. After him comes Ignatius (115 A.D.), from whom we have four epistles, believed to be genuine. Neither of them makes the least mention of the Four Gospels. Polycarp (116 A.D.), has an epistle passing under his name. It in there is no mention of any of the Four Gospels. There is an epistle attributed to Barnabas, the companion of Paul, but probably written about 130 A.D. It makes no mention of either of the Four Gospels. And, finally, there is the book called "The Shepherd of Hermas," generally conceded to be the work of Hermas or Rome, about the year 150 A.D. It like all the other books and epistles here referred to, is devoted to doctrinal and ethical ends, but it makes no reference to either of the Four Gospels. This comprises the whole of the existing Christian literature from the death of Jesus to the middle of the second century, and not one writer mentions the Four Gospels, or makes the slightest reference to them. They make quotations from tradition and from other Gospels, but not from our four.

We come to Papias, the Church Father, who lived about 150 A.D. (Davidson, Canon, 123). He says:

"And John the presbyter also said this: 'Mark being the interpreter of Peter, whatever he recorded he wrote with great accuracy, but not, however, in the order in which it was spoken or done by our Lord, for he neither heard nor followed our Lord, but, as before said, he was in company with Peter, who gave him such instruction as was necessary, but not to give a history or our Lord's discourses; wherefore Mark has not erred in anything, by writing some things as he has recorded them; for he was carefully attentive to one thing, not to pass by anything that he heard, or to state anything falsely in these accounts'" (Euseb., Eccl. Hist. iii. 39).

The question is, Does Papias here refer to our Gospel according to Mark?

1. We do not know what Papias said. His works are lost, and this quotation has been preserved in Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History. We only know what Eusebius says he said.
2. Papias preferred tradition to written records (Euseb., Eccl. Hist., iii. 39). The testimony of such a man is not trustworthy. Eusebius says that he was a man of "very limited comprehension," and that the traditions of Jesus which he collected were "rather too fabulous" (Ibid.).
3. Papias does not say that he ever saw the work. He simply mentions a traditions handed down by John the presbyter. It was natural enough that years after Jesus' death his followers should inquire, "Have we no records of his life?" and that a report should start that some one had written such a work. Later one, persons hearing the report, but finding no book, and seeing the opportunity would write one to fill the vacancy. Just as Revelation prophesied an Everlasting Gospel (Rev. 14:6), and in the 13th century one appeared of that name. Somebody saw an unfulfilled prophesy and took it on himself to make it good.
4. Suppose Papias is referring to our Gospel of Mark; what testimony have we to the authenticity of Jesus' words as contained in it? Just this: Eusebius says that Papias said that John the presbyter said that Mark said that Peter said that Jesus said thus and so. That is the historical lineage of the authenticity of the Gospel of Mark. When the reader has that, he has it all. He knows as much of it as the best theologian does, and is just as competent to decide whether or not it is to be credited. Eusebius goes on to say:

"Such is the account of Papias concerning Mark. Of Matthew, he has stated as follows: 'Matthew composed his history in the Hebrew dialect, and every one translated it as he was able" (Euseb., Eccl. History, iii. 39).

Does Papias refer to our present Gospel according to Matthew?

1. He says that Matthew wrote his Gospel in Hebrew. Our Gospel is in Greek.
2. If this is Matthew's Gospel, who translated it? No one knows. The assertion of Christian apologists that the translation was by any specific persons is pure assumption. Jerome asserts that the translator was uncertain (De. Vir. III., 3).
3. There were formerly another Gospel passing under the name of Matthew, which was used by Christians (McClintock and Strong, Cyclop., Art. "Matthew, Gospel of," iv. 3). How are we to know that the church as the right one? Nobody can tell.

To make the matter short, scholars admit that our Gospel of Matthew and Mark were not referred to. Tischendorf grants it ("When Were Our Gospels Written:" by Constantine Tischendorf; Religious Tract Society's edition, authorized. London, 1869, p. 107), and Prof. Davidson fully concedes it:

"Papias speaks of Matthew and Mark; but it is most probable that he had documents which either formed the basis of our present Matthew and Mark, or were taken into them and written over" (Davidson, Canon of the Bible, p. 124).

"The canonical Gospels of Matthew and Mark can not be identified with the logia of Matthew, and the things said and done by Jesus which Mark wrote, mentioned by Papias. The writer himself does not identify them" (Into. N.T., ii. 520).

This brings us to a period nearly one hundred and twenty years after the death of Jesus, and we have no evidence of the existence of our Four Gospels.

We will continue our study as we pick up with Justin Martyr and what he contributes to our quest for an honest look into the history of the New Testament.

AN HONEST LOOK INTO THE HISTORY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT...SILENCE OF JUSTIN MARTYR

We finished the prior article by examining the astonishing lack of quotes of the New Testament in early Christian literature up until the middle second century (roughly 150 A.D.). This is absolutely amazing when you see the silence of early Church writers as to any reference to the existence of "any" of the Four Gospels which we today are told to believer were written early and by the Apostles of Jesus. Such is not the case upon examination of early Patristic Literature.

THE TESTIMONY OF JUSTIN MARTYR....OR THE LACK THERE OF...

Now we move to Justin Martyr about one hundred twenty years following the death of Jesus (roughly 150 A.D.). We again find no evidence of the existence of the Four Gospels. Justin Martyr flourished about 150 A.D. He is really the first writer who laid aside tradition, and appealed to records. In his works he frequently quotes from the Old Testament, and from what appears, at first sight, to be the New Testament, and the most strenuous exertions have been put forth by Christian apologists to show that he had our Four Gospels. But they utterly fail. Just makes three hundred and fourteen quotations from the Old Testament, and in one hundred ninety-seven of these-that is, in 2/3 of the cases, he names the book from which he is quoting. But in making his so-called New Testament quotations, he does not mention the name of any one of our Four Gospels.

Answer for yourself: Did you understand what I just shared with you? Justin made it a habit of quoting the Old Testament books by name when he quoted from them, but when quoting what one would believe to be "New Testament" quotes he NEVER mentions the name of the book from which the quotation comes. On the other hand, he states, distinctly and repeatedly, that the book from which he is quoting is the "Memoirs of the Apostles" (Apol. I. 66-67; Dial. C. Tryp. 100-104, 106), or the "Memoirs," "all things concerning Jesus Christ" (Apol., i. 33). He also quotes from the "Acts of Pilate" (Apol. I. 35, 48), giving the name of the book, and he refers to the "Memoirs or the Gospel of Peter" (Dial., 106).

Answer for yourself: Now, if he gives so often the names of the Old Testament books from which he quotes, and the names of what were to him the New Testament books which he used, why should he not give the names of the Four Gospels, if, as Christian apologists assert, he quotes from them?

The inference is plain. He was not quoting from our Four Gospels. He was using altogether different books. And yet, Christian theologians have asserted in the most positive manner that he distinctly recognizes all four of the evangelists! I give this as an illustration of the unfairness of orthodoxy and its statements.

To get around this sticky issue many Christian scholars, when advised of the above situation, retort that the "Memoirs of the Apostles" were in reality our Gospels under a different name. An evidence that this is not true, is that Justin makes nearly a hundred quotations from the "Memoirs," and in but two or three instances are they exactly the same as the parallel New Testament passages. In other words, his quotes don't agree with the New Testament passages in the vast majority of the cases. There is almost invariably some difference, either in sense or construction, showing that Justin's book was different from the Gospels which would come later. Moreover, he quotes from it things which are not even in the Gospels at all. He says that the "Memoirs" say that when Jesus went into the Jordan to be baptized a fire was kindles on the river (Dial., 88). There is no such thing in our Gospels. He says that the same devil which tempted Jesus on the Mount also tempted him as he was coming up out of the river (Dial., 108). Our Gospels say nothing to this effect.

You should find it very useful to keep these things in mind, for Justin Martyr's works are the great rallying point and battle-ground of orthodoxy. As he is the first polemical writer Christianity had the church has made every effort to show that he was acquainted with our Four Gospels. The efforts for those who study and read his works personally will show you that such endeavors by the church has been unsuccessful.

Answer for yourself: When was the first mention of the Gospels according to the names we not have for them?

The first writer who mentions either of the Evangelists by name as an author is Theophilus of Antioch in 180 A.D. He speaks of John's Gospel (Ad Adtol., ii. 22), but says nothing of the writer being an apostle. He simply calls the writer an "inspired man."

The first writer who mentions all four of our present Gospels by name was Irenaeus, who flourished in and about 200 A.D.

This is the whole of the "testimony of antiquity," to the beginning of the third century, as to the Four Gospels. The books are not heard of till 150 A.D., that is, till Jesus had been dead nearly a hundred and twenty years. No writer before 150 A.D. makes the slightest mention of them. Then comes the passages from Papias, which, as you now have seen, are rather the reflections of rumors rather than evidence for our Gospels. Justin Martyr does not mention the names of either of them. In quoting from other books, he mentions their names; and the inference is plain that he did not know of our Gospels in 150 A.D. Theophilus of Antioch, a 150 years after Jesus was dead, makes a slight mention of the Gospel of John. But not ill the year 200 A.D., nearly one hundred and seventy years after Jesus has died, do we hear of all Four Gospels.

THE EMERGENCE OF THE GOSPELS BEARING THE APOSTLE'S NAMES

One needs to understand that the earliest Church Fathers knew of no Gospels bearing the Apostle's names. It would be almost 170 years following the death of Jesus when the Latter Church Fathers would make reference to them. At the time of Irenaeus around 200 A.D. the Gospels are constantly quoted by the Christian Fathers, and when orthodoxy speaks of the "unanimous testimony of antiquity as to the authenticity of the Gospels," it usually states how many times the books were quoted by Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, Origen, Eusebius, and other later Fathers. The Gospels were indeed quoted by them, for they all lived this side of the year 200 A.D., when the books had commenced to circulate under their present names. But those later Fathers knew no more of the authorship of the books than we do, and in fact not as much, for they had not the critical ability that this age has. And they do not, when they quote the books, vouch for their authenticity. The Fathers simply give the names by which the books were known; and the earlier Fathers would have given the same names if the books had been known by those names earlier. As Dr. Westcott says:

"The main testimony of the Apostolic Fathers is therefore to the substance and not to the authenticity of the Gospels" (Canon, p. 52).

I sure you can not have but observed how few Christian writings of the first two centuries we have. Dr. Westcott calls it the "dark age of Christian literature" because so scant are its remains; and he practically concluded that the Four Gospels were not in existence up to the year 150 A.D. by saying:

"A few letters of consolation and warning, two or three apologies addressed to heathen, a controversy with a Jew, a vision, and a scanty gleaning of fragments of lost works, comprise all Christian literature up to the middle of the second century" (Canon, p. 11).

HOW DOES CHRISTIANITY DEAL WITH THIS PROBLEM OF SILENCE?

I have already made mention of the fact that the Christian writers previous to the years 150 A.D. quote from tradition or from Gospels other than our four, and that the most violent efforts are now made to have it appear that the quotations are form our present Gospels. For example, Ignatius, in his epistle to Polycarp, without intimating that he is quoting it from any book or that it is other than his own sentiment, says: "Be in all things wise as a serpent, but harmless as a dove," and modern apologist assert that this is from Matthew, "Be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves." Polycarp says: "Be merciful, and ye shall obtain mercy," and the claim is that this is the famous beatitude, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." There are a number of such passages as these, but they invariably differ more or less either in meaning or language from the New Testament parallels: and in no instance does the writer say that he obtained them from our Gospels! Even if passages were identical with those in the New Testament, they would not prove the existence of our Four Gospels, for there were many Gospels in circulation in the early ages of Christianity, which contained passages identical with those now in our four, and the quotations might have been made either from one of those or from tradition.

You will observe that when the different writers quote the words of Jesus or another person, they generally agree; but that in the narration of the story they differ. This shows that there may have been and probably was a manuscript in existence in those early days, containing the sayings of Jesus and others, and that this was made use of by later writers in composing their narratives. But the fact that the Apostolic Fathers use phrases or quotes sayings, with the prefatory explanation, "It is written," or "The Lord Jesus says," which agree more or less with the passages in our Gospels, does not prove the existence then of the Gospels. Dr Westcott admits this:

"No evangelical reference in the Apostolic Fathers can be referred certainly to a written period. It appears most probable, from the form of the quotations, that they were derived from oral tradition (Canon, 62).

IRENAEUS' REFERENCE TO THE GOSPEL OF MATTHEW IN 200 A.D: WAS IT REALLY TO THE GOSPEL OF THE HEBREWS?

Guess what? The Gospel of Matthew was not the Gospel of Matthew we have today!

While there is no trace of our Four Gospels previous to the year 150 A.D., and while we do not know who it was after that time that wrote or compiled them, or exactly when they did it, the testimony of the early Fathers as to one of them may throw some light on the subject. Long before our Gospel of Matthew was known, Papias spoke of the "Gospel According to the Hebrews," and said that it contained a history of a woman accused of many sins before the Lord (Euseb., Eccl. Hist., iii. 39). Coming down later in time we find that both Eusebius and Irenaeus agree in saying that the Ebionites used only one Gospel; but Eusebius said it was called the "Gospel According To The Hebrews" (Eccl. Hist., iii. 27), while Irenaeus said it was the "Gospel According to Matthew" (Adv. Her., i 26). Moreover, both Epiphanius (403 A.D.) and Jerome (420 A.D.) say that the "Gospel according to the Hebrews" and the "Gospel according to Matthew" were the same book under different names. As the "Gospel according to the Hebrews" was in existence and in use first, the deduction is quote plain that some one subsequently forged Matthew's name to it. So you should understand that when you read that the Ebionites used only one Gospel and one Gospel only, and read that it was called "The Gospel of Matthew" then it in reality does not mean the Gospel of Matthew that we are familiar today, but the "Gospel of the Hebrews."

THE NEW TESTAMENT....THE EARLY CONTROVERSIES SURROUNDING IT

While little is known of the history of the Jewish Canon, of the Christian, fortunately, considerable has been preserved, and the progress of its formation can be traced, step by step, down the centuries. Sadly few Christians know this history and few ever inquire into the development and canonization of the document they stake their Eternal Life upon. Growing up as a Christian, and after attending Southwestern Seminary in Ft.Worth, Texas, where I received an M.Div. I must admit to you I accepted pretty much what was told to me for the most part. Usually I was on two tracks at once; fulfilling my Seminary responsibilities as well as my Pastorate responsibilities. This left little time to study out things in-depth when questions begged answering. Usually I was consumed with preparing for tomorrow's classes and tests as well as the ministry in which I had an active part. It would be a couple years into full-time pastoring following Seminary before I could find the time to investigate the Canon of the New Testament for myself. Up to that time I like most Christians accepted "by faith" what I had been told. Upon researching the Canon in-depth I was startled to discover what was omitted in my Seminary training; and I understand today why it was omitted! Such facts as I will share with you was either not known, or the consequences of such knowledge being made public would impugn the integrity of the Christian Faith!

WHAT YOU HAVE FAILED TO SEE....THE TRUTH WITHIN THE NEW TESTAMENT

Most preaching involves homiletical sermons based on this passage or that passage. Seldom is one confronted with the "big picture;" such seldom is recognized unless conscientious in-depth study is undertaken for some time. Some people possess the ability to see the "forest" in spite of the "trees." In other words, some people, sadly the minority, can read a document like the New Testament and see things that are obvious which the vast majority of people overlook. This is not accomplished by intellect alone for the Holy Spirit certainly illuminated past revelation. Some see it; some do not. I find this the case almost all the time. Two people can look at the same passage or passages at the same time and one can see something the other cannot; even after excessive explanation the "blinded" one sometimes cannot see no matter what is done. Such is the revelation of God. Understand because one has not seen or does not know of a "truth" does not invalidate such truth; truth is truth no matter if it is recognized by one or by all. Truth is primary and must the goal of our study of the Word of God.

THE TWO CONFLICTING GOSPELS IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

In what follows I will share and hopefully show you that within the New Testament are two competing and conflicting "gospel." Understand that this fact is not of my creation just I say that this exists, but competent scholars dating back centuries have discussed this issue in detail. So this is not my "personal interpretation" for volumes of books have been written upon this. The problem is that your Church book store or corner Christian book store has not carried such informative literature.

After the death of Jesus, his followers increased in numbers for a quarter of a century before having any literature. Sects formed, and antagonisms arose. Then Paul wrote his Epistles to strengthen his adherents against the assault of other Christian fractions. This is nothing more than "in-house in-fighting." The most violent altercations occurred, each sect endeavoring to prevail over others. East side was determined to best the other.

Answer for yourself: What avenue was chosen to win the debate?

Epistles and gospels and revelations were manufactured and in almost all instances fictitious names of supposed writers would be later fixed upon them to give them greater credibility. The names of Apostles or other persons high in Christian piracy were not looked upon in those days as they are now. Writings were being falsified consistently by fraction after fraction; all trying to promote their particular point of view. Unity was out of the question.

Dionysius of Corinth (170 A.D.) complained that his writings were falsified, but consoled himself by saying that the same thing (falsification) was done with the "Scriptures of the Lord" (Euseb., Eccl. Hist., iv. 23).

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that? The Christian historian Eusebius records for us that the New Testament Scriptures "were falsified"? Which ones? Can you tell when you read the New Testament?

There is a way, but that is not our discussion at present.

Mosheim, the Christian historian, says:

"There were a number of commentaries filled with impositions and fables on our Savior's life and sentiments, composed soon after his ascent into heaven, by men who, without being bad, perhaps, were superstitious, simple, and piously deceitful. To these were afterwards added other writings, falsely ascribed to the most holy apostles by fraudulent individuals" (Euseb., Eccl. Hist., Book i, century I., pt. ii., ch. ii.).

He also says that the early Christians fell into the "pernicious error" of "deeming it not only lawful, but also commendable, to deceive and lie for the sake of truth and piety."

"This vice early spread among the Christians. Of this no one will doubt who calls to mind the numerous forgeries of books under the names of eminent men, the Sibylline verses, and I know not what besides, a large mass of which appeared in this age (the second century) and subsequently. I would not say that the orthodox Christians forged all the books of this character: on the contrary, it is probable that the greater part of them originated from the founders of the Gnostic sects. Yet that the Christians who were free from heterodox views were not wholly free from this fault is too clear to be denied" (Ibid., Book i., century II., pt. ii., ch. iii.,).

We should understand that "eye witnesses" to this forgery and falsification of New Testament documents, many in the first and even the second century, attest to such being done long before the canonization of the New Testament. We have first hand evidence that forgeries were being written promoting this and that fraction's views in the names of the Apostles, who in reality, had nothing to do with such writings. That means they did not believe such things quite often; neither did Jesus. Yet these are passed off in Apostolic names as if these teachings were accepted and espoused by Jesus and his Apostles. Sadly, many of these forgeries exist in the Canon of the New Testament today and you never knew it. That is one reason why there are conflicting "gospels" in the New Testament along with many doctrines which the historical Jesus and the Apostles never believed or taught. Non-orthodoxy becomes orthodoxy and you never knew it!

Answer for yourself: Is such falsification of documents in the Apostle's names along with other attested forgeries that ended up in the New Testament the work of the Holy Spirit? Can these teachings be trusted? Is there "truth" mixed up within them and how can one discern the difference? Do you even want to?

DOCTRINES, DOCTRINES, DOCTRINES EVERYWHERE WHAT IS THE TRUTH?

Besides the current Gospels bearing the Apostle's names in the New Testament at present, the following is a partial list of the books fabricated and in circulation in that age, in addition to the ones now in the New Testament. Many listed are presented in The Apocryphal New Testament (contains all the existing Gospels and Epistles of the early Christian Church), and many are no longer in existence but referenced in early Church documents. The Gospel of Paul, The Gospel of Peter, the First Epistle of Clement to the Corinthians, Ignatius' Epistle to the Romans, his Epistle to the Ephesians, his Epistle to the Ephesians, his Epistle to Polycarp, the Gospel according to the Egyptians, the Epistle of Polycarp to the Phillipians, the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, the Sibylline Oracles, the Gospel according to the Hebrews, the Gospel of Perfection, the Gospel of Philip, another Gospel of Matthew, the Gospel of Judas Iscariot, the Gospel of Basilides, the Gospel of Thaddaeus, the First Gospel of the Infancy of Jesus Christ, the Gospel of the Birth of Mary, the Gospel of Scythianus, the Gospel of Tatian, the Gospel of Life, the Gospel of Thomas, the Gospel of Andrew, the Gospel of Bartholomew, the Gospel of Eve, the Gospel of the Encratites, the false Gospels of Hesychius, the Gospel of Jude, the false Gospels published by Lucianus, the Gospel of Barnabas, the Acts of Peter, the Acts of Paul. the Acts of Peter and Andrew, the Acts of John, the Acts of Mary, the Acts of Andrew, the Acts of the Apostles made use of by the Ebionites, the Acts of the Apostles by Leucius, the Acts of the Apostles used by the Manichaeans, the Acts of Paul and Thecla, the Preaching of Paul, the Preaching of Peter, the Doctrine of Peter, the Acts of Philip, the Acts of Thomas, the Acts of Barnabas, the Judgment of Peter, an Epistle of Christ to Peter and Paul, and Epistle of Christ produced by the Manichaeans, the Epistle of Themison, the Epistles of Paul to Seneca, the Epistles of Seneca to Paul, the Revelation of Peter, the Revelation of Paul, the Revelation of Bartholomew, the Revelation of Cerinthus, the Revelation of Stephen, the Revelation of Thomas, the Revelation of Moses, the Revelation of Esdras, the Protevangelion or Gospel of James, Thomas' Gospel of the Infancy of Jesus Christ, the Acts of Pilate or the Gospel of Nicodemus, the Epistle of Barnabas, the Epistle to the Magnesians, the Epistle to the Trallians, the Epistle to the Smyrnaeans, the Epistle to the Philadelphians (forgeries under the name of Ignatius), the Epistle to the Laodiceans (a forgery under the name of Paul), the Pastor of Hermas, the Gospel of Cerinthus, the Gospel of Marcion, the Gospel of Truth, the Gospel of Apelles, the Second Epistle of Clement to the Corinthians, the Gospel of Longinus, and Epistle of Jesus Christ to Abgarus, King of Edessa, and an Epistle of Abgarus to Jesus Christ.

Understand that the above is not all of the books of that time. Of many we have not even the names. I have mentioned, for examples, but thirteen books of Acts, whereas Fabricius made a collection of thirty-six (McClintock and Strong, Acts of the Apostles, "spurious"). It was from such forgery and falsification as this, with its Gospel of Judas Iscariot, Gospel of Eve, and Epistles ascribed to Jesus, that our Four Gospels (which are themselves forgeries and but a part of the common stream) came. Most of the books of that age were written to uphold or oppose particular doctrines, as when our Gospel of John is said to have been written to refute the views of Cerinthus and the Nicolaitans (Irenaeus, Adv. Haer., iii. 11. 1). Paul had to warn the Thessalonians not to be troubled or misled by letters falsely purporting to be from him (2 Thess. 2:2), and cautioned them that every genuine letter would bear his signature. Those that do not carry his signature most likely are not his.

THE HIDDEN CONFLICT BENEATH THE PAGES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT...THE PETRINES VS. THE PAULINES VS. THE JOHANNINES

Answer for yourself: Did you know before now that the collection of writings called the New Testament contains conflicting views from three theological camps that existed in the first century; each of which denied the other? The sad fact is without this knowledge one reads the New Testament and tries to fit each "puzzle part" into the big picture so to speak. The result is a distortion of the picture and of truth as some of the "pieces" of theology simply don't fit into the truth about Jesus of Nazareth or his followers or what they both believed to be "truth." But without a prior and substantial knowledge of Second Temple Judaism one reads the New Testament as if everything in it belongs to the story of Jesus. Simply said Jesus and his Apostles could not believe much that is taught in the New Testament and would consider it blasphemous.

As stated before just because something might be "new" to you and that you have never heard it taught before in your church, or never read of such, does not invalidate it as "truth." Before one says "I don't agree" one needs to evaluate what is being said and give such a fair hearing. That means you have to read and study yourself to see beyond your comfortable experience. To do otherwise makes one an authority based only upon his experience, and I dare say our experiences are often quite lacking as a validator of truth. To admit that a man or woman has 1% percent of all knowledge is ambitious to say the least. Quite often in that 99% of knowledge unknown to such a one can be opportunities unlimited to learn truth he at present does not possess. Humility is a vital part of learning and helps balance the natural instinct to defend what we currently know. We may think we have the "truth" because we have emotions tied to beliefs, but these beliefs can and often be shown to be erroneous. We must have faith in "truth" not our experience. Emotional validation is a poor substitute for "truth."

Not to the point at hand. While there was a great number of sects dueling for authority in the first century among "believers", three principal ones command the attention of the student, the Pauline, the Petrines, and the Johannines, or the followers of Paul, of Peter, and of John; a division which is maintained, in a measure, to this day. The Eastern or Greek Church preferred John (Soxomen, Eccl. Hist., vii. 19), and the Western, Peter. The later divided at the time of the Reformation, and the Roman Catholic body maintained the authority of Peter as the only lawful head, while the Protestants now follow Paul. The doctrines which Protestant clerymen preach so much (predestination, foreordination, sanctification, and similar ones) are Paulisms, Jesus never having taught them. The contrast between Peter and Paul raged fiercely in the early days immediately following Jesus, and each was vigorously supported by factions. Paul was the apostle of uncircumcision, and of the Gentiles; Peter, of circumcision and of the Jews. Paul wished to "carry Christ" to the Gentiles and still allow them them to be Gentiles. Peter said if they become Christians they must also become Jews, be circumcised, and do as the Jews did in the ceremonial. In those days Paul was not recognized as a lawful teacher of Christianity, nor was he for more than a hundred years (Bronson C. Keeler, A Short History of the Bible, Kessinger Pub. Co, Montana, USA., p. 40). In those days, if Peter should come back to earth and advocate circumcision, baptism before every Sabbath and Festival, continuance of Temple sacrifice, and the strict observance of the Jewish ceremonial, he would not be permitted to preach in any Christian church, Catholic or Protestant. People do not realize how far from primitive Christianity and the real beliefs and teachings of Jesus and the Apostles they have gone.

Paul said, if any one, even an angel from heaven, preached any other gospel than he did, that person should be accursed (Gal. 1:8). You may not know this but Paul, in writing this verse, was writing against the Apostles and the Jerusalem Church! He claimed authority as an apostle equal to that of the apostles at Jerusalem. But they had been appointed by Yeshua in person, or, eleven of them had been, and they had elected a twelfth to fill the place of Judas (Acts 1:15-26). Peter superintending the process; while Paul had appointed himself; and for him to claim to be their equal was something to which they could not submit. That is why Paul defends his self-appointed Apostleship continually in his Epistles. Paul asked, "Am I not an apostle?" (I Cor. 9:1). And James and the other Apostles said he was not. Revelation (a Johannine and therefore an anti-Pauline work) says, referring to Paul, "And thou has tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and has found them liars" (Rev. 2:2). Paul claimed that he and his followers were still Jews, even if they did not practice circumcision (2 Cor. 11:22 ff.), but Peter and his friends denied it, and Revelation, again thrusting at Paul, says, "I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but the synagogue of Satan (Rev. 2:9); and "them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews and are not, but do lie" (Rev. 3:9).

Answer for yourself: Hard to believe? Well you need to study something other than the biased and forged New Testament if you want the truth about the Early Church.

Paul conceded that he had caught some of his followers by being crafty and using guile (2 Cor. 12:16):

2 Cor 12:16 16 But be it so, I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

The Strong's Number for guile is #1388 dolos- craft, deceit, guile

In an Epistle generally acknowledged of Pauline authorship we find his self-admission of being deceitful in teaching Christ.

Answer for yourself: In Paul spreading "his gospel" do you think the Holy Spirit approved of his "deceit"?

Paul though that if he had misrepresented as to his apostolic authority, since good had come of it, no harm had been done. I wonder if God believes the end justifies the means?

"For if the truth of God had more abounded through my lie unto His glory, why yet am I also judged a sinner?" (Rom. 3:7).

Paul's early spirit as a persecutor appears when he wishes that those anti-Paulines who troubles the Galatians were cut off (Gal. 5:12). He once met Peter in Antioch, and an open conflict occurred (Gal. 2:11-21). Contrary to redactions history in the New Testament Peter was right and Paul wrong! Paul was teaching against the Covenant stipulations for non-Jews and when the men from James appeared the Church disbanded and left Paul alone.

The Ebionites, one of the most powerful of the early sects, rejected Paul, and said he was an apostate from the law (Irenaeus, Adv. Haer., i. 26). The Clementine Homiles attach him bitterly under the name of Simon Magus. They reject his Epistles entirely. Justin Martyr rejected him, and scarcely made notice of his writings. Hegesippus would not use his Epistles, and said, substantially, that he had falsified Scripture (Davidson, Canon, 115). Whether you know it or not Paul consistently misquotes the Old Testament for his advantage. Those not well versed in the Jewish Scriptures seldom notice this since the Septuagint is a purposeful mistranslation of the Jewish Masoretic Text by the Greek-Jewish Phythagorean and Buddhists of Alexandria, Egypt, and the Septuagint served as the base for Paul's quotes. Rather strange that Paul would misquote the Jewish Scriptures that Jesus used as taken from the Hebrew don't you think? The Paulines, on the other hand, rejected the Epistles to the Hebrews, which Christians now attribute to Paul, and they also rejected Revelation (Ibid., 118).

The followers of Valentinus were Paulines (Clem. Al., Strom., viii. 17), as were those of Marcion; those of Basilides were Petrines (Ibid.,). The Cerinthians opposed St. John (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 273) as well as Peter and Paul (Epiph., Haer., xxviii. 2-4).; the Simonians opposed Peter (Westcott, On The Canon Of The New Testament, p. 273), the Ophites rejected St. John and St. Paul (Ibid., p. 282). They were snake worshippers (Webster's Unabridged Dict., "Ophite"), and claimed to have derived their doctrines from James the brother of Jesus (Hipp. Haer., v. 7). Another sect, the Donatists, held that there were no virtuous people in the Christian church except such as belonged to their sect, and required all who joined them to be re-baptized (Webster's Unabr. Dict., "Donatism"). Jerome was bitterly hostile to Origen's views, even accusing the latter, substantially, of heresy (Ency. Brit., "Rufinus"). Rufinus adopted Origen's theories, and Jerome, who had been Rufinus' dearest friend, loaded him with the most terrible reproaches, until the quarrel became the scandal of the Church in that time (Ency. Brit., "Rufinus").

It sounds strangely to hear persons in these days express a desire to "return to primitive Christianity, when all was peace and love." There never was such a time. Therefore, understanding the above, one must understand that within the New Testament are competing and conflicting sect's beliefs all rolled into one and the average Christian reads the "whole" of the New Testament as if this was given by God and tries to fit the conflicting pieces in one whole theological system. Thus many current beliefs held by Christians are simply wrong and unfortunately one's conduct is often determined by such false beliefs and forgeries and you never know unless you study. We have fallen that far from the faith of the early Jewish believers who knew Yeshua personally and what he truly taught.

THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT WHICH AT FIRST WERE NOT CONSIDERED INSPIRED

As in the case of the Old Testament, so in that of the New Testament, when the books composing it came into the world they were not considered inspired. They were looked upon the same way other books are. No one thought of calling them the word of God. The Old Testament was considered by the early Christians as inspired, and for two or three centuries after Jesus it was their only Bible (Westcott, Canon, 55). The first instance of the canonization of any of the New Testament books was about 170 A.D., when, in the Second Epistle of Peter (2 Peter 3:16), Paul's epistles are regarded by some as if Scripture, and that was simply a bothersome recognition of Paul after the long quarrel between the friends of himself and of Peter (Davidson, Canon, 134). For a century and a quarter after the death of Jesus the New Testament was not recognized to be as authoritative as the Old Testament (Westcott, Canon, 179; Davidson, Canon 122). And when Paul said, "The Holy Scriptures are able to make wise unto salvation through faith which is in Jesus Christ" (2 Tim. 3:15), he meant exclusively the Old Testament (Westcott, Canon, 55.) Previous to the year 170 A.D., wherever the early Christian Fathers used the phrase "Scripture" or "It is written," they always meant the Old Testament (Davidson, Canon, 119). The name "New Testament" was first given to the collection by Tertullian (Adv. Prax. 15), about the year 210 A.D., and the collection then laced many books which are in it now. The word canon, as signifying a list of authoritative Scriptures, was not used till Origen's time (Davidson, Canon, 4). The word "canonical" was used first in the decree of the Council of Laodicea (Ibid., 5), about 363 A.D. The word "Bible" was first applied to the books collectively by St. Chrysostom in the firth century (Westcott, Canon, 438). New Testament copyists felt at liberty to change the language to suit their own ideas by taking out texts and inserting new ones (Tischendorf, "When Were Our Gospels Written?" Religious Tract Society's authorized edition, London, 1869, p. 15). Prof. Davidson says:

"Papias (150 A.D.) knew nothing, so far as we can learn, of a New Testament Canon…He had no conception of canonical authority attaching to any part of the New Testament. His language implies the opposite, in that he prefers unwritten tradition to the Gospel he speaks of. He neither felt the want nor knew the existence of inspired Gospels" (Davidson, Canon, 123).

"It is clear that the earliest Church Fathers did not use the books of the New Testament as sacred documents, clothed with divine authority, but followed for the most part, at least till the middle of the second century, apostolic tradition orally transmitted" (Ibid., 136).

"One thing appears from the early corruption of the sacred records spoken of by Irenaeus, Origen, and others, that they were not regarded with the veneration necessarily attaching to infallible documents" (Ibid., 161).

"The conception of a Catholic canon was realized about the same time as that of a Catholic Church. One hundred and seventy years from the coming of Christ elapsed before the collection of the New Testament books assumed a form that carried with it the idea of holy and inspired" (Ibid., 136).

During the first half of the second century "the New Testament writing did not stand on the same level with the Old, and were not yet esteemed sacred and inspired like the Jewish Scriptures" (Ibid., 122).

"Justin Martyr's canon (150 A.D.), so far as divine authority and inspiration are concerned, was the Old Testament….In his time none of the Gospels had been canonized, not even the synoptics, if, indeed, he knew them all. Oral tradition was the chief fountain of Christian knowledge, as it had been for a century. In his opinion this tradition was embodied in writing, but the documents in which he looked for all that related to Christ were not the Gospels alone. He used others freely, not looking upon any as inspired" (Ibid., 129).

"It is certain that they (the early Christians) believed the Old Testament books to be a divine and infallible guide. But the New Testament was not so considered. The latter collection was not called Scripture, or put on a par with the Old Testament as sacred and inspired, till the time of Theophilus of Antioch (180 A.D.)" (Ibid. 5).

Now the conditions are reversed. People in this age of the world believe the New Testament is inspired, but they do not believe the Old Testament is.

"Two things stand out most clearly-the comparatively late idea of a canonical New Testament literature, and the absence of critical principles in determining it. The former was not entertained till the latter part of the second century. The conception of canonicity and inspiration attaching to the New Testament books did not exist till the time of Irenaeus" (Ibid. 163).

"Not until the latter half of the second century (180 A.D.) did the present Gospels assume a canonical position, superseding other works of a similar character and receiving a divine authority" (Davidson, Intro. N.T., ii 520).

"Along with this process (the union of Paulines, Petrines, and the other fractions, about the middle of the second century), and as an important element in it, the writings of the apostles and apostolic men were uncritically taken from tradition and elevated to the rank of divine documents. It was not the rise of new dissensions "within the church" which led to the formation of a Christian canon; rather the idea of a "Catholic Church" require a standard of appeal in apostolic writings, which were not invested with an authority that did not belong to them from the first" (Ibid., 168).

Tischendorf, the great orthodox scholar, in speaking of the period of canonization, says:

"It was at this time….that the Church…began to venerate and regard as sacred the writings which the apostles had left behind them" (When Were Our Gospels Written?" The Religious Tract Society's edition, London, 1869, p. 95).

The phrase "began to regard as sacred" indicates that before that time that regard had not existed. Canon Westcott says:

"It can not, however, be denied that the idea of the inspiration of the New Testament, in the sense in which it is maintained now, was the growth of time" (Westcott, Canon, 55).

One of the most curious intellectual phenomena presented to the student of religious history is that of men admitting that the idea of inspiration in a growth, and still not perceiving the absurdity of supposing that inspiration is a fact. And yet, thousands of Christian theologians present it.

We find, then, that, among the early disputing sects, it became necessary to have some authoritative court of appeal, and when the Catholic Church began to establish itself and to require such an authority, its officials, the Christian Fathers, asserted that these new books were inspired, and the word of God. But it was said simply to have authority for the new doctrines. The Fathers did not limit themselves to the books now in the New Testament, but selected such as agreed with their adopted views. The restrictions in the number of books were made later, and thus our present Bible was formed. But the Bible did not form the beliefs. The beliefs formed the Bible. Only such books were accepted in the New Testament as advocated the previously entertained dogmas. And the idea of inspiration passed over from the Old Testament to the New, by reason of associations, proximity, and similarity of use.

THE CONFLICT WITH JUDAISM AND HELLENISM IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

Christianity started as a sect of Judaism by the followers of Yeshua. The faith which emerged after his death was built sadly upon a mixture of two different religions: Judaism and Hellenism. The former provided the scripture and legitimacy for the new religion. The latter furnished new interpretations to that literature and its symbols. Even a cursory glance at the books of the New Testament reveals the copious use of quotations and references to the Tanakh (many of which are not correctly quoted on purpose). Subsequently, disparate meanings, which were ascribed to those Hebrew Scriptures, sanctioned the new tenets which helped create the new religion which shunned its mother…Biblical Judaism. These novel beliefs stemmed from Hellenism. As the famous Protestant theologian, Reinhold Niebuhr, put it,...

"The Christian faith is an amalgam of Hebraic and Hellenistic elements" (Reinhold Niebuhr,Pious and Secular America, p. 108).

Gentile Christianity inherited much of the philosophy, customs, and flavor of the pagan Hellenistic world. Hellenism itself absorbed religious beliefs from other nations. Mystery-cults and Gnosticism were pagan ideas imported into Hellenism where they were further developed and expanded. Many of these concepts in turn were accepted into Christianity as it spread to the Greek and Roman world.

"The concept of the incarnation of a divine being in human form appears in various pagan cults, Greek, Egyptian, and oriental, which were current in Paul's day in the Near East, and which environmental influences predisposed the Apostle to think in terms of incarnation in interpreting his new faith to pagan peoples" (S.G.F. Brandon, The Fall of Jerusalem, pp. 67-68).

CHRISTIANITY---A SYNTHESIS OF JUDAISM AND THE GENTILE'S PAGAN MYSTERY CULTS

The Gentile pagan's mystery cults were based on death and resurrection of a God and the object was to enable the initiate to take part in this death and resurrection and so attain eternal life. In a typical cult an animal was killed which represented the slain God. In some of the rites the animal's blood was poured over the initiate. In others, the flesh was eaten and the blood drunk by initiates into the cult (the beginning of the eucharist). The rite was practiced in the spring corresponding to Easter time (H. Maccoby, Revolution in Judea, pp. 87-88). The Bacchus rites involved eating raw meat as a way of sharing in the life of the God. This concept is not too remote from the Eucharist (Howard C. Kee, Understanding the New Testament, Fourth Edition, pp. 27-28). Some cults developed a belief in the advantages derived from a God's death which went beyond the immediate benefits of agricultural fertility. The death of the God brought spiritual redemption to all mankind. The evil forces of the people causing the God's demise were transformed, against the killers' will or knowledge, into the means of salvation. Thus the God's death became a sacrifice as a means of bringing good into the world.

CHRISTIANITY-A SYNTHESIS OF JUDAISM AND GNOSTICISM

Gnosticism was another Hellenistic movement whose ideas influenced Christianity thanks to Paul and Marcion (http://paulproblem.faithweb.com/) It is a system of belief combining ideas from Oriental mysticism and Greek philosophy. It stresses salvation through gnosis or intuitive knowledge in spiritual matters. Gnosticism has a dualistic view of life in that the world is seen as containing two opposing forces, good and evil. The Jewish God, Jehovah, was considered to be a demon or devil who created this evil world. The good was represented by a Savior, Soter in Greek. Soter was also called the "Son of God " and was one of a trinity of gods. He would redeem mankind by his suffering and release it from the evil Demiurge. Many of the Gnostic writings were anti-Jewish, reflecting the Jewish-Greek cultural rivalry. The dichotomy in Gnosticism was further seen in the conflict between body and soul and the contempt it expressed for sexuality in human nature (Maccoby, The Mythmaker: Paul And The Invention Of Christianity, p. 88-89).

CHRISTIANITY-A SYNTHESIS OF JUDAISM WITH GREEK MYTHOLOGY

Greek and Roman mythology included a pantheon of gods who regularly had relations with humans. The resulting offspring of a heavenly deity and a human female was considered a God. Zeus, the supreme deity of the Greeks, procreated with mortal women who were other men's wives. To give but one example: Apollo, God of light and truth, medicine and prophecy, was the offspring of a union of Zeus and the mortal Leto or Latona (Edith Hamilton, Mythology, p. 30).

Many of the ideas found in mystery-cults, Gnosticism, and Greco-Roman mythology contain elements which are found in Christian theology. For example, just as there is a dying and resurrection in the mystery cult, so Yeshua was transformed from a mortal into a deity after his "sacrificial" death on the cross. The God in the mystery religion was resurrected, as was Yeshua according to Christian theology. After he was resurrected, the pagan God was worshipped. Following Yeshua's resurrection, his apostles began to venerate him. Finally, the death of the heathen God in the mystery-cult brought spiritual benefit to his followers. Yeshua's death has been viewed as the source of salvation by and for his adherents.

Gnosticism postulates the doctrine of a good God and a bad God. Christianity reflects this dualism in its concept of the harsh Jewish God and the loving, kind divinity, Yeshua. The Gnostic Savior or the Soter, brought salvation to mankind as did Yeshua to his believers. Yeshua, like the Soter, was called the son of God and was one of a trinity. The redemption of mankind through the suffering of Yeshua is another doctrine paralleling the Gnostic belief that the Soter released humanity from evil through his suffering.

The mythological concept of a heavenly deity fathering the offspring of a human woman resembles the Christian credo of God as father of Yeshua and the mortal Mary as his mother.

The similarity between Hellenistic religious beliefs and Christian theology was expressed by Hugh Schonfield as follows:

"It was upon an image of God partaking strongly of the characteristics of ancient heathenism that the Christian faith was founded" (Hugh Schonfield, Those Incredible Christians, pp. 205-207). It is those features which irrevocably divorced Christianity from its parent religion and created a chasm between them.

WHAT ELSE COULD HAPPEN.....BUT CONFLICT BETWEEN JUDAISM AND GENTILE HELLENISM

The religious philosophies of the Hellenistic world were rejected by most Jews just as they had spurned other pagan religions in the ancient world; therefore they reject Christianity today because it is pagan to the core (but you have to study to see this)! This does not mean that over the centuries Jews were never attracted to the religious practices of other people. At the eve of Biblical prophecy was condemnation and rebuke of the nation for imitating its neighbors and their heathen customs. From antiquity assimilation has been a Hebrew or Jewish problem.

However, the vast majority of Jews repudiated such beliefs as human sacrifice, polytheism, and deification of a human into a God. These beliefs were as much a part of Hellenism as were the magnificent Greek art and sculpture. Jews had progressed beyond idolatry and paganism long before Hellenism became dominant. By the time the Judeans returned from Babylonian exile at the end of the sixth century B.C.E. (after 538), they had purged themselves of heathenism. Later books in the Hagiographa (Sacred Writings, the third part of the Tanakh), as well as apocryphal books, indicate that the idolatry which had so plagued the Israelites during the Prophetic period no longer posed a problem to their religious integrity. Even the Essenes whom Josephus characterized as worshipping the sun (http://bennoah1.freewebsites.com/) and (http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com/) apparently did this as a manifestation of God. This custom was not found at Qumran. No group or sect postulated a duality in its concept of God.

When Judaism and Hellenism squared off on the battlefields in Judea, Samaria, and Galilee in the Maccabean Wars, the battles were fought as much for religious freedom from the forced paganism of the Greeks as for political independence from them. The Jews won. They maintained their religion and held on to their national independence for a century until their confrontation with Rome.

Although Jews fought arduously for their religious and political freedom against Greek encroachments on it, they were open to some elements of Hellenistic culture and influenced by it. This was true of the Talmudic rabbis as well as the upper and middle classes. Gamliel, who is mentioned in the New Testament, headed an academy in which, according to his son, Simeon, as many young men studied Greek wisdom as studied Torah (Saul Lieberman, Greek in Jewish Palestine, pp. 1, 20). Greek words appear in the Jerusalem Talmud and the Midrash in Hebrew letters. Greek proverbs and stories are found in the rabbinic literature of the Talmud, Midrash, and Tosefta. The Tosefta is rabbinic literature written during the tannaitic period which was approximately the first two centuries of the common era. The Midrash is a method of interpreting the Hebrew Bible to elucidate legal points (halakha) or homiletics (aggada). This genre of rabbinic literature extended from the fourth to the thirteenth century, or even beyond. The rabbis even accepted Greek forms of behavior and adapted them to Judaism such as participation in athletics and interest in astrology (S. Liberman, op, cit., pp. 92-114).

Most of the Greek culture and language which penetrated into Jewish society in Judea, outside of the aristocracy, occurred after 70 C.E. The Hasmonean dynasty had absorbed Greek culture over a century earlier. The upper and middle classes were quicker to assimilate the Hellenistic idiom than were the lower classes.

Greeks resented Jews for not adopting the Greek religion along with other parts of Hellenistic culture. Perhaps the persistence of Jews in sticking to their beliefs and refusing to go along with the popularly accepted values, "the idols of the marketplace," contributed to their unpopularity. Strength of character combined with sincere attachment and stubborn commitment carry a heavy price.

There was intense rivalry between Jews and Greeks in the Roman Empire for cultural dominance. Jews had a higher proportion of literacy. They had an older culture and while Jewish art could not match that of the Greeks, their literature was in many ways superior. The Greeks controlled the cultural policies of the Empire and afforded no recognition to the Hebrew language and culture. They ignored it or distorted it.

In short, the Greeks considered their culture superior to that of the Jews--or of any other people. Traditional Greek anti-Semitism derived from a conviction of the superiority of their culture to that of the Jews with which they were unfamiliar. They were surprised and repelled by the stubborn persistence of Jews in adhering to the religion and ethical values of their faith. Other nations, upon contact with Hellenism, had succumbed to it, thus acknowledging its cultural superiority to theirs...but not the Jews...they had the truth!

The Jews, while impressed with Greek literature, art, and philosophy, did not find its social institutions and theological beliefs worthy of emulation. The Greeks ridiculed such Jewish religious practices as observing a day of rest each week (Sabbath), dietary restrictions, and circumcision, as well as ethical values to which Jews clung . Until the Maccabean Wars there was no anti-Jewish Greek writings or expression of hostility to the Jews. Nevertheless in later antiquity such manifestation of Hellenistic animosity to Jews did exist. The malice which many Greeks bore to the Jews was well illustrated in Apion's writing to which Josephus responded. Infanticide and widespread slavery within their own population were accepted practices in Greek society. They had been forbidden in Jewish law since it was given at Sinai about 1400 years earlier.

Jewish and Greek communities lived together with varying degrees of harmony and disharmony. In Sardis there seems to have been no evidence of conflict; in Antioch cultural rivalry was strong; in Alexandria there was a great deal of hostility between the two peoples. The Egyptian metropolis had large Jewish and Greek populations. There were periodic clashes between them. Unfortunately, the repeated outbreaks against the Jews in Alexandria speak more clearly of the Greek attitude toward the Jews than most books. The rioting lasted from 38 to 41 and Claudius described it as wars against the Jews. The violence broke out because the Jews requested citizenship in a city in which they had lived for centuries. So strong was Greek opposition to the granting of equality to Jews that they formed delegations to Rome to oppose it. In 38 C.E. Greeks led anti-Jewish riots which persisted for three years. Jews had lived in Alexandria for centuries where they were legal residents but not citizens. The riots were precipitated when Jews requested Roman citizenship which the Greek residents had. The Greeks sent an embassy to Emperor Claudius led by Apion to protest the granting of that citizenship. The Jewish embassy to the emperor was led by Philo of Alexandria, the great Jewish philosopher and Biblical commentator. Claudius mediated between the two conflicting parties. He assured the rights of the Jews to religious freedom and protection against Greek harassment but did not grant them citizenship (Josephus, Antiquities, 19:5).

The attacks on Jews in Alexandria were renewed in 66 at the time of the outbreak of the First Roman-Jewish War in Judea. The Greeks jumped on this opportunity to assault the Jews of their city knowing that their brethren were at war with Rome and thereby less likely to receive Roman legal protection. The Greeks brought to Christianity a residue of pagan anti-Semitism.

While the rivalry between Judaism and Hellenism was founded on deep cultural and religious differences, there were also other factors. Both nations, Judea and Greece, had enjoyed independence and both lost it to Rome. The Greeks submitted. The Jews fought. In Judea they engaged in two wars. The First Jewish Revolt lasted from 66 to 73; the Second Jewish War or Bar Kokhba Revolt continued from 132 to 135. Between 115 and 117 there was a Diaspora Revolt in which Jews of Cyprus and North Africa rose against Rome. The Greeks resented the Jews for their courage in standing up to the might of Rome while they had yielded. Jewish bravery was a painful reminder of their own subservience and a blow to their pride.

The Roman government treated the Jews relatively well even after their wars of rebellion. They reviled the Jews for rebelling against them, but they did not represent them as the incarnation of evil. Religious privileges and civil rights of Jews were protected by Rome against Gentile infringements and continued unaffected by the revolt of 66- 73 (Oxford Classical Dictionary, p. 564). Despite three bitterly fought Roman-Jewish wars, the Romans did not abandon the policy of protecting the rights of the Jewish communities. The Romans treated the Jews in their empire with respect until Christianity became the state religion. Prior to that time the Roman emperors had resisted efforts by church authorities to dissolve the status of Judaism as a protected religion. The official policies of Rome gave Jews religious freedom to observe their Sabbath free of civic duties, to send donations to the Temple at Jerusalem, and to settle disputes within their community by themselves. Although for the most part, they were not granted citizenship and were taxed as non-citizens, Jews were accepted in all levels of society including aristocratic, intellectual, and ruling circles. anti-Semitic voices, such as Juvenal, Cicero, Tacitus, and Seneca, were not the only ones heard. Among the elite there were defenders and admirers of Jews. Longinius, Dio, and Pliny were among sympathetic Roman writers (J. Gager, The Origins of Anti-Semitism, p. 75,80).

In 312 C.E. Constantine became emperor of the Roman Empire. In the following year he granted flavored status to Christianity. By 380 Christianity became the official stale religion and an endless night of despair and anguish descended on Jews.

"There was a dramatic reversal in the imperial policy towards the Jews. Christian emperors succumbed to ecclesiastical pressure by translating theological anti-Judaism into imperial legislation"
(J. Gager, The Origins of Anti-Semitism p. 97).

It was this clerical pressure to which the Roman emperor acceded in 429 when he disbanded the Sanhedrin. And we as non-Jewish believers are the inheritors of such in the Gentile Christian Church today. It is no wonder that Christianity, as it is practiced today, bears little resemblance to the faith and religion of Yeshua. Shalom.

SO YOU THOUGHT YOU WERE A FOLLOWER OF YESHUA.....YOU MIGHT NEED TO RECONSIDER

Disclaimer: It is important for the reader to understand that in this website, in comparing first century Judaism and their Messiah with later Christianity and their presentation of the Jewish Messiah along with the unveiling of the historical truths concerning the non-Jewish "believer" in the first century, I will use a "literal-historical" approach to the "Jesus Story". If you have studied our other websites then you know that "the Christ" can be interpreted from 3 different perspectives down through recorded history: "mystical", "mythological", and "literal-historical". Only after one has spent a considerable time in dedicated and scholarly studies in such areas as Biblical Judaism, the Jewish Messiah and true Messianic prophecy as taken from the Hebrew Scriptures and not the later forged texts of Rome, manuscript evidences, the history and origin of the Roman New Testament, the Gnostic Paul vs the Roman Paul, the Essenes and their "literal godman", Gnosticism, Egyptian religion and the ancient "Jesus Story", Comparative religion, and Astrotheology can he understand and be certain which two of the above three methods of interpretation of "the Christ" are accurate and factual. Again for purposes of comparing Judaism vs Christianity and the implications that this holds for the non-Jew and "Godfearer" we adopt in this website and for all studies in this website a supposed "literal-historical" interpretation of "the Christ" as well as the Jesus of the New Testament. Only in so doing can we adequately contrast the truths of Judaism vs Christianity theology and by so doing follow the train of these Divine Truths back down the corridors of history to the earlier Divine revelations given to mankind by the Creator which were intended for both "Gentiles" and "Jews" as well. I will let you be the judge of the results of such studies and leave to the reader to draw the necessary conclusions as we attempt to compare Jewish and Christian theological perspectives all the while dealing with the New Testament Jesus in a "literal-historical" manner in order for such an accurate comparison to be done effectively. I will leave the conclusion you draw concerning the Jesus of the New Testament up to you and your personal study of the materials available to us today. Craig Lyons M.Div.

Let me begin with a quote from the New Testament…from an epistle written to non-Jews like most of our readers.

2 Cor. 13:5

Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your ownselves……

I think that this is a very good idea to prove to ourselves that what we believe is true; in fact I have practiced self-examination of such religious beliefs in light of the facts regarding the "real historical Jesus" for over a decade. Because of such self-examination in light of my discoveries as I combed through 2000 years of Biblical history, culture, as well as in-depth analysis of Biblical language, I have been forced to change much of my religious belief system along the way. It is my desire that this article challenge you to scrutinize your religious beliefs as I have been challenged over the years. May God witness truth to your soul.

Answer for yourself: Was Jesus a Christian and would he ascribe today to the vast majority of doctrines taught in his name in churches which go by his name as well?

Well let us investigate. But first we need to set the stage for what is coming next. Try and be as honest with yourself as possible in answering these next questions.

TO WHICH RELIGION WOULD A PERSON BE A MEMBER IF HE DID THE FOLLOWING?

- Was circumcised on the eighth day.
- Kept Sabbath from Friday sundown to Saturday sundown.
- Attended a synagogue regularly.
- Kept the Biblical Festivals such as Passover, Hag Ha Matzah (Unleavened Bread), Shavuot (Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah, Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), Sukkoth (Tabernacles) and Hanukkah.
- Was a citizen and friend of Israel and believed Israel is the example for all non-Jewish people in the world
- His Bible contained the Torah, the Prophets and the Writings ONLY!
- Quoted passages as authoritative from the Mishnah (the Oral Law).
- Taught that Deuteronomy 6:4 was the most important commandment.
- Wore a tallith and phylacteries in religious services
- Did not eat unclean foods
- Taught the eternalness of God's Covenants and His Laws
- Taught that faith without works is no faith at all
- Taught that salvation is more concerned with events in the here and now than what occurs beyond the grave

I suppose that most of you came up with the same answer…..you don't have to be a scholar to recognize that one that practiced such a faith does not practice Christianity.....he holds to the teachings of Judaism.

NOW, LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT ANOTHER PERSON. SEE IF YOU CAN IDENTIFY THE RELIGION OF THIS PERSON

- Keeps the Sabbath on Sunday which is the legacy of Sun worship today.
- Attends a church which most likely rejects most things Jewish.
- Keeps Easter and Christmas which were pagan festivals made to look religious to those who don't know the difference.
- Carries a Bible containing an Old Testament and a New Testament which ironically contradicts the Old.
- Stresses a person's beliefs over his actions.
- Teaches that people had to be "saved" by acknowledging a creed or an established set of beliefs in order to go to heaven.
- Teaches that they are not under the law and that the Law has passed away and they are under grace.
- Teaches that the church had replaced Israel as God's people and sees itself as the fulfillment of prophecies given to Israel.
- Teaches that you can eat anything…even Biblically unclean foods
- Attaches no special significance to circumcision

I bet you got the right answer again – a Christian.

GOING DEEPER THAN YOU POSSIBLY HAVE EVEN GONE BEFORE

Now let's take this discussion one more step by answering this question.

Answer for yourself: If a Jew wanted to become a member of a Christian religion could he continue practicing Judaism in the church?

The answer is so simple. You would only have to ask your Pastor that one question to get the answer. Probably in the 99.9% of the cases the answer would be - NO!

TURN ABOUT IS FAIR PLAY

Answer for yourself: If a Christian wanted to become a convert to Judaism could he continue practicing Christianity and the items listed above? Again the answer is rather obvious.

Now, the percentage moves upwards, probably in 100% of the cases the answer would be - NO!

It is very apparent that not only are Judaism and Christianity different religions, they are exclusive in many ways. This reveals an amazing fact which can be seen by asking one very simple question –

WHICH RELIGION DID JESUS BELONG TO...CHRISTIANITY OR JUDAISM?

- Was circumcised on the eighth day.
- Kept Sabbath from Friday sundown to Saturday sundown.
- Attended a synagogue regularly.
- Kept the Biblical Festivals such as Passover, Hag Ha Matzah (Unleavened Bread), Shavuot (Pentecost), Rosh HaShannah, Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), Sukkoth (Tabernacles) and Hanukkah.
- Was a citizen and friend of Israel and believed Israel is the example for all non-Jewish people in the world
- His Bible contained the Torah, the Prophets and the Writings ONLY!
- Quoted passages as authoritative from the Mishnah (the Oral Law).
- Taught that Deuteronomy 6:4 was the most important commandment.
- Wore a tallith and phylacteries in religious services
- Did not eat unclean foods
- Taught the eternalness of God's Covenants and His Laws
- Taught that faith without works is no faith at all
- Taught that salvation is more concerned with events in the here and now than what occurs beyond the grave

Now for the easy part. The answer to the above question is a matter of historical record which is easily attested to by the New Testament itself-- Jesus was a Jew, not a Christian and he was certainly not both. It is clear that Jesus was a practicing Jew who lived a very observant Jewish life-style.

In fact we cannot find any instance whatsoever where Jesus ever: Kept the Sabbath on Sunday, attended or affiliated with any group which rejected things Jewish, kept the pagan festival of Ishtar/Easter or the sun god's birthday (Saturnalia…December 25th….Christmas) which were pagan festivals made to look religious to us today, ever taught anything that contradicted the Old Testament as does much in the New Testament, ever stressed a person's beliefs over his actions, ever taught that people had to be "saved" by acknowledging a creed or an established set of beliefs in order to go to heaven, ever taught that people are not under the law or that the Law had passed away and they were under grace alone, ever taught that the church had replaced Israel as God's people, and ever taught that you can eat anything…even Biblically unclean foods.

JESUS NEVER RENOUNCED JUDAISM OR QUIT BEING A JEW

An amazing discovery for any Christian is the fact that there is simply no evidence that Jesus ever renounced Judaism and quit being a Jew. Also, his teachings do not indicate that he ever wanted any Jew to renounce their Judaism and join a new religion. If this revelation every breaks into your conscious mind then you will have to confront Gentile Christianity for what it has actually become despite Jesus's wishes or example set for us.

Answer for yourself: How then, did Jesus get credited with the distinct label that he was the person responsible for creating a new religion?

Answer for yourself: How did Jesus get credit for creating another religion which opposed the religion and way of life he continued to live…even up to his death?

Let us try to answer questions raised by such an assumption:

LOOKING THROUGH THE EYES OF A JEWISH RABBI NAMED JESUS

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi prohibit circumcision or downplay its significance?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi change the Sabbath to another day…let alone to the day set aside for sun worship by the pagans?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi create a replacement for the synagogue?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi substitute a pagan feast which was clearly idolatrous, Ishtar (Easter), for Passover?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi want his followers to celebrate the birth of a Roman god (Saturnalia -- December 25)?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach his students to not keep the biblical commandments or that they no longer applied when God already said they were forever?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach Gentiles to hate Jews?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi add books to the Torah in spite of the warning in Deuteronomy forbidding the changing or adding to the Word of God?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi replace Deuteronomy 6:4 as the most important commandment?

Answer for yourself: Would a rabbi teach Gentiles that it is permissible to eat unclean food when Noah, himself a non-Jew separated animals based on the principle of clean/unclean long before there were any Jews?

The answer to all the above questions is that a rabbi wouldn't, and that includes a rabbi named Jesus!

TOUGH - THOUGHT PROVOKING QUESTIONS YOU NEED TO ANSWER FOR YOURSELF

Answer for yourself: If Jesus didn't create a new anti-Jewish religion, who did?

Answer for yourself: Who is responsible and what were their motives in replacing the faith of Jesus with a faith about Jesus?

Answer for yourself: Was it the men who acquired leadership after Jesus' departure and the death of the Apostles who did such a thing ?

Answer for yourself: Were those responsible for changing the faith of Jesus actually Jews or Non-Jews and were their motives in changing Jewish doctrines consistent with anti-Semitism?

Answer for yourself: Did they continue teaching Jesus's message and his gospel or did they change Jesus's message in places, and are you, at the present not yet aware of it at your present level of knowledge?

THE BOOK OF ACTS PAINTS US A PICTURE WE WOULD DO WELL TO EXAMINE CLOSELY

The book of Acts provides us with some very valuable information too long overlooked by most Christians. Acts 21:17-25 records Paul's return to Jerusalem and his meeting with the leaders of the "church." Keep in mind that these were the men who had been personally taught by and lived with Jesus. Their words provide us with some very enlightening information. The translation given below is based on a cultural and historical methodology. Your translation most probably reflects the doctrines of the Roman church and therefore may differ.

"You see, brother (referring to the Apostle Paul), how many thousands of Jews have become faithful (observant). All of them are zealous for the Torah (Law). They have been informed that you have taught the Jews of the Diaspora to not keep the Torah, that they should not circumcise their children or live according to the Jewish religion.... Take these men and do the following... so that everybody will know that there is no truth in these reports about your teachings, but that you yourself are living an observant life-style and keeping the Torah."

REMEMBERING THAT THIS IS A PICTURE OF JESUS' CHURCH

A quick summary provides us with some very significant information. Understanding that this passage reflects events which occurred long after Jesus's death then I ask you to be truthful to the text as well as yourself in asking yourself this: Is your church producing the same results?

- Jews who believe in Jesus are becoming more faithful (observant to the Law) because of the message taught by Jesus's followers.
- The message of Jesus's church caused adherents to become zealous for the Torah (Law).
- The members of Jesus's church kept the Laws of Moses (the Torah).
- The members of Jesus's church circumcised their children.
- The members of Jesus's church lived according to the traditions of the elders of Judaism (the Jewish religion).

Notice that Paul did as he was requested - Paul example, at least while he was in Jerusalem under the watchful eyes of the Apostles, wasn't teaching the Jews to abandon their religion. On the contrary, Paul's behavior and example was one as "under the law" and as one who lived an observant Jewish life-style.

Answer for yourself: How then could he have been the author of a doctrine that advocated rejecting the law as is ascribed to him by most Christians today?

Answer for yourself: Not meaning to over-stress this point, but are you really getting the importance of this message as taught by Jesus's church in Palestine?

IS YOUR CHURCH PREACHING THE SAME GOSPEL AND MESSAGE AS YESHUA'S CHURCH?

Again looking at Acts 21 for our information……let us examine what we are taught by this New Testament picture:

- The message of the apostles caused Jews to repent and become observant Jews who practiced Judaism faithfully.
- The apostles were causing Jews to become eager for the Torah and to pursue it with fervor. It is clear that they were not teaching them that "they were under grace and no longer under the law" or that "the law has passed away after Jesus's death" as we have been told today. This one point is in complete opposition to most fundamental teaching of every modern Christian doctrine.
- The Jewish members of the early church continued to circumcise their children. In other words, they continued to see themselves as participant's in the Abrahamic Covenant, just as every practicing Jew does today. Their children were Jews, not members of some new mystical religion that replaced Judaism.
- The Jewish members of the early church continued to practice Judaism. They did not switch to a new religion.

HOW ARE WE TO INTERPRET PAUL'S ACTIONS?

When we look at Paul's actions, after being ordered by James to take several men with him to the Temple, thereby paying for their animal sacrifices in order to prove that he was an observant Jew by bringing blood sacrifices and sin offerings necessary in finishing his Nazarite vow, we are faced with two possibilities: (A) Paul intentionally deceived the apostles and the Jews in Jerusalem; or, (B) Paul's image and/or the teachings attributed Paul may have been altered by the Roman Church a hundred or more years later.

Answer for yourself: Did Paul intentionally deceive the apostles by faking his true beliefs when bringing sacrifices in the Temple after Jesus's death?

Answer for yourself: If Paul did deceive them, could you put much confidence in his teachings at other places in the New Testament? Remember he already has said that he can become anything to anyone to prove his argument and accomplish his goals.

Answer for yourself: On the other hand, if Paul's words were changed by the Roman Church could we base our foundational beliefs on forged documents?

Christianity, almost universally, requires a Jew to convert to Christianity before he can become a member of the church or be saved. This conversion process forces the Jew to renounce his or her Judaism and terminate or redefine many Biblical and Jewish practices.

Having read this article so far, please think deeply while answering these next questions:

Answer for yourself: Would your church require a Jew to renounce or stop practicing Judaism if he or she wanted to become a member?

Answer for yourself: How many circumcisions have you attended for the children of Jewish members of your church?

Answer for yourself: How many of your church's members are Jewish and are zealous for the Torah and are pursuing it with fervor?

Answer for yourself: Does your church conduct at least one Torah study per week?

Answer for yourself: How many of your church's Jewish members are observant Jews?

Answer for yourself: When was the last time you attended a Passover Seder, or a Rosh HaShannah or Yom Kippur service at your church?

Answer for yourself: Do you have a rabbi or a minister well educated in the Hebraic Roots of Christianity leading your church?

Your answers to the above questions are probably -- Yes, None, None, No, None, Never and Minister.

I want you take some time to think about the next question before you answer it.

Answer for yourself: What would your church require a rabbi to do if he applied for membership?

Answer for yourself: Would they allow him to continue to be a rabbi, practice Judaism, teach the Torah, wear his prayer shawl, observe all the Jewish festivals and teach the members that they were under the Law?

Answer for yourself: What if that rabbi was Jesus?

Are you beginning to see the truth?

Without a great deal of effort it becomes glaringly apparent that neither Rabbi Jesus, the apostles nor the Paul of Acts 21, would be allowed to join a Christian Church the likes of which we see today. On the other hand, it is also clear that Rabbi Jesus would not participate in any religion that not only opposes, but is actively dedicated to destroying his Father's religion!

Gentile Christianity has for centuries felt it was given a mandate from God to "save the world." This is the goal and stated mission of Christianity.

THE SILENT SLAUGHTER OF TRUTH

Answer for yourself: How is this mission to "save the world" to be accomplished?

Just ask the Southern Baptist Convention who just last year vowed to win every Jew to Jesus by the year 2000. To put it very simply, the goal is to convert every Jew (non-Christian) to Christianity. The Jewish convert must renounce his Judaism (or any non-Christian religion he may hold), agree to accept the doctrines of Gentile Christianity and oppose any religion that opposes Gentile Christianity.

Instead of a physical holy war (Jihad), Gentile Christianity has engaged in a doctrinal holy war. As I stated above, Christianity is an exclusive religion. Christians are not allowed to simultaneously practice Islam, Buddhism, Judaism or any other religion. Therefore, if Christianity was to attain its goal of "getting every person on the face of the earth to believe in Jesus," including all the Jews, Judaism would be totally destroyed and cease to exist. If this were ever to happen, and I pray it does not, then Christianity would have the dubious honor which Hitler in vain tried to achieve; namely the eradication of not only the Jewish people from the face of this planet, but the total destruction of the true faith of Jesus…Biblical Judaism.

This would accomplish something that the crusaders, the inquisition, Hitler and a number of others have failed to accomplish.

Answer for yourself: How do you think a Jewish Jesus would react to the idea that such a mission was being carried out in his name?

This really gets weird when you think about it! Christians base their proof for their ultimate salvation on a Jewish rabbi named Jesus (Jesus), who was an observant Jew who faithfully practiced Judaism. On the one hand, his religion would most probably not allow him to practice modern Christianity. On the other hand, modern Christianity would not allow him to practice its religion without first renouncing his religion -- Judaism!

This should present a very important challenge to every Christian:

If a Jewish Jesus could not, and would not, practice a religion dedicated to destroying his religion, how can anyone who bases their salvation on Rabbi Jesus participate in and perpetuate it?

Answer for yourself: Would Rabbi Jesus agree with the church's salvation message which is based on such a system? Are you getting the drift of this discussion?

Answer for yourself: How did the religion that Rabbi Jesus and his followers practice evolve into what it is today? To begin to unravel this problem lets ask how a religion whose foundational position focused on teaching its members "to keep the Law" became a religion whose main message was that "members are no longer under the Law."

Early Christian writers taught that the Law had been fulfilled with the coming of Jesus. Fulfilled, as they defined it, meant that it had been canceled and therefore was of no importance to Christians. However, to Rabbi Jesus, "fulfilled" meant (1) to keep the Law; and (2) to correctly interpret the teachings of the Bible. There is absolutely nothing said by Rabbi Jesus that would support modern Christianity's doctrine of grace.

Next, the Roman Christian leaders focused on the story of God's unconditional and unending support. However, they claimed that this was something new and was created when God made a new covenant of grace. Again, this was unknown to Rabbi Jesus and his apostles. Early Gentile Christian leaders and theologians continued to develop their new doctrines from the mid-second century on through the seventh century. As they refined their arguments they became much more antagonistic toward Judaism.

This Gentile anti-Judaic movement spanned almost all of Christianity -- from the Roman African communities represented by Tertullian (160-220 C.E.), to the Iranian monk Aphrahat (300-350 C.E.) of the eastern Syriac Christian tradition, and to Bishop John Chrysostom (349-400 C.E.) in Antioch.

Studies have clearly shown the extent to which leaders of the early church attacked Judaism for its position on the law, calling Jews "slavish adherents to the letter of the law." They claimed that Judaism was allowed to continue to exist primarily as an example of degradation.

Answer for yourself: What do you think that rabbi Jesus would have thought about that position?

Origin, the third-century leader of the Christian community in Caesarea, summed up the difference between Judaism's and Roman Christianity's approaches to Scripture:

"It seems necessary also to explain how certain people by failing to read or understand Scripture correctly have given themselves up to a great many errors, since the way one ought to approach the understanding of divine letters is unknown to a great many people. And so, the Jews, through the hardness of their heart and because they wish to seem wise in themselves, have not believed in our Lord and Savior....

Now the reason that those we have just mentioned [Jews and heretical Christians] have a false understanding of these matters is quite simply that they understand Scripture not according to the spiritual meaning but according to the sound of the letter....

[But] a person ought to describe threefold in his soul the meaning of divine letters, that is, so that the simple may be edified by, so to speak, the body of the Scriptures; for that is what we call the ordinary and narrative meaning. But if any have begun to make some progress and can contemplate something more fully, they should be edified by the soul of Scripture. And those who are perfect... should be edified by that spiritual Law (Rom. 7:14) which has a shadow of the good things to come (Heb. 10:1), edified by the spirit of Scripture. Thus, just as a human being is said to be made up of body, soul, and spirit, so also is sacred Scripture, which has been granted by God's gracious dispensation for man's salvation."

This new scheme for reading Scripture, and the charge that Jews miss all but the literal meaning, made for powerful arguments. Origin's dichotomy between "letter" and "spirit," or in other words, between reading biblical materials either at their face value for norms of behavior and as a more generalized stance toward the world, set the stage throughout history for Christians to increase the fervor of the charge of legalism. Legalism became synonymous with Jewish, and therefore was viewed in a negative light. However, the word "legalism" simply means someone that "lives in accordance with or adheres to a legal system."

Answer for yourself: What would you call someone who "did not adhere to or live in accordance with a legal system"-- a Christian? The products of this anti-Jewish tradition still shapes the thoughts of over 1.6 billion Christians regarding Judaic law.

I am challenging every Christian to make a decision to return to the religion, teachings and life-style expounded by Rabbi Jesus. Don't misunderstand what I am saying; I am not advocating adopting and accepting the current "theology or faith" about Jesus; rather, return to the real faith of Jesus and the place within it for the Gentile Godfearer. As I stated above, according to the book of Acts, your conversion experience to the faith of the Apostolic church of Jesus as seen in Acts 21 should have made you zealous for the Torah and brought you back to an observant Biblical life-style as defined by the commandments of God.

Answer for yourself: Has it?

Becoming a member of Rabbi Jesus's movement should have caused you to become a serious student of the Torah. You should be teaching the Torah to others, especially the flood of Gentiles who are coming to you to be taught.

Answer for yourself: Has it?

Answer for yourself: Is there any other way for you to be a "light to the Gentiles?"

If you are a Gentile, you will also need to take a very close look at Acts 15. Gentiles who were coming to the movement originated by Rabbi Jesus were given very special instructions. First they were to place themselves under specific laws. For all practical purposes those laws were the Ten Commandments. Of special importance was their keeping the Jewish Sabbath and studying the Torah at the synagogue with the Jews.

Keeping the Jewish Sabbath is something that you can do immediately, however; many of you may find it difficult to locate a synagogue where you will be allowed to study the Torah. For very good reasons, after thousands of years of persecutions, the Jewish community is very cautious. I believe that as Christian Jews return to the synagogue, because of the teachings of Rabbi Jesus, the doors will be opened wider to Gentiles desiring to know the God of Rabbi Jesus.

Two things must be kept in mind as both Jews and Gentile Christians choose to return to the teachings of rabbi Jesus. First, almost two thousand years of conflict between Judaism and Christianity has left many scars. Both religions have developed reactionary doctrines and theologies. A reactionary doctrine created as a reaction to the another religion's actions or doctrines.

An example would be the Jewish position concerning kneeling for prayer. Because Christians knelt for prayer, the Jews took the position that they should no longer kneel but stand for prayers. Judaism altered its form of worship because of this practice of Christianity. There have been many reactionary doctrines created both between and within both religions. This is an area of research that deserves much attention. I would challenge my readers to consider such a research project.

It must be kept in mind that the Judaism of Jesus is not exactly the same as the Judaism of today. Also, the movement attributed to Jesus is not the same as modern Christianity. Obviously, many things have taken place since the time of Jesus which resulted in the separation and numerous differences between the two religions.

It is of the utmost importance for both Christians and Jews to understand these changes. You must know when the changes were made, identify the people who were responsible for making the changes, and discover why they made them. You must come to an understanding which changes were motivated by inspiration, which were produced by the hunger for power and wealth and which were the results of human frailties such as anger, rejection, fear and hatred.

As you embark on this journey you will quickly come to realize that you have stumbled upon the greatest cover-ups in history.

As you become more acquainted with the truth upon your study you will realize two very important things:

- Leaders, especially scholars, have always been aware of this information and have deliberately chosen to ignore it.
- This information has been virtually within the grasp of every American. In many cases it is as close as an encyclopedia or attainable today through the Internet.

Today, there are over 2.5 billion Christians on the face of the earth – the vast majority who believe in their heart they are true followers of Jesus, but as I have shown you, are practicing a different religion from which Jesus practiced. If they all returned to the teachings and life-style taught in Acts, we would see a moral and ethical revolution that would literally rock the foundations of the world and no longer would America, touted to be the most Christian nation in the world, be recognized as the world's most violent and law-breaking nation of the world. That should make you wonder what it would be like if Christians really followed the faith of Jesus and if your church would really allow you to be like Jesus.

HOW WELL DO YOU UNDERSTAND THE BIBLE THAT YOU USE FOR FAITH AND PRACTICE? #1

TYNDALE-"ON READING THE BANNED BIBLE":

Tyndale's comfort to persecuted Bible readers is left for our examination today: "Let it not make thee despair, neither yet discourage thee, O reader, that it is forbidden thee in pain of life and goods, or that it is made breaking of the king's peace, or treason unto his highness, to read the Word of thy soul's health;...for if God be on our side, what matter maketh it who be against us, be they bishops, cardinals, popes..." It is hard to believe that for the majority of the time since the apostolic community, the people of God were deprived of their right to own, read, and study the Bible, yet today, with the proliferation of Bibles and ease of access to Bibles in our day and time, that Biblical illiteracy is at an all time high...possibly greater than ever before in the history of mankind.

TYNDALE'S ANSWER TO THE CHURCH'S FIVE OBJECTIONS TO YOU OWNING AND READING THE BIBLE:

- They tell you that Scripture ought not to be in the mother tongue, but that is only because they fear the light, and desire to lead you blindfold and in captivity...
- They say that Scripture needs a pure and quiet mind, and that laymen are too cumbered with worldly business to understand it. This weapon strikes themselves: for who is so tangled with worldly matters as the prelates?
- They say that laymen would interpret it each after his own way. Why then do the curates not teach the people the right way? The Scripture would be a basis for such teaching and a test of it. At present their lives and their teaching are so contrary that the people do not believe them, even when they preach truth...
- They say our tongue is too rude. It is not so. Greek and Hebrew go more easily into English than into Latin. Has not God made the English tongue as well as others? They suffer you to read in English of Robin Hood, Bevis of Hampton, Hercules, Troilus, and a thousand ribald or filthy tales. It is only the Scripture that is forbidden. It is therefore clearer than the sun that this forbiddal is not "for love of your souls, which they care for as the fox doth for the geese."
- They say we need doctors to interpret Scripture [because] it is so hard... There are errors even in Origen and Augustine; how can we test them save by the Scripture?... We do not wish to abolish teaching and to make every man his own master, but if the curates will not teach the gospel, the layman must have the Scripture, and read it for himself, taking God for his teacher.

There has been from the beginning of "religion" the attempts of the Priestcraft to keep it's follower "ignorant" of religion and rely upon "superstition" and the "mystical" instead of facts. The same can be said for Christianity and Roman Catholicism during the Dark Ages. Protestantism is little better. As long as the parishioners are "Biblically illiterate and ignorant" then they will be led around by the whims and ambitions of clergy masqueraded as "God's will." It is long past time that you take responsibility for studying out what you "believe" and what you have been taught to accept "by faith" in order to determine if you are a "true follower" of Yeshua and a part of "the faith once given to the saints." What you find will not only scare you if you become dedicated to serious study but bring repentance in your life which will assure you of a stronger relationship with God and a true assurance that you have now a "faith in truth" and not a "faith in lies."

LET US LOOK AT THE BIBLE:

The word Bible is derived from the Greek "biblia", meaning "books," and refers to the sacred writings of Judaism and Christianity. The Bible consists of two parts. The first part, called the Old Testament by Christians, consists of the sacred writings of the Jewish people and was written originally in Hebrew, except for some portions in Aramaic. The second part, called the New Testament, was composed in Hebrew and Greek and records the story of Jesus and the beginnings of Christianity. Today, Bible scholars have verified that much of the Gospels had originally been written originally in Hebrew only to later be translated into Greek for Greek-speaking audiences. Translated in whole or in part into more than 1,500 languages, the Bible is the most widely distributed book in the world. Its influence on history and culture, including literature and the other arts, is incalculable.

DO I HAVE THE BIBLE JESUS USED?...IF YOU ARE A CHRISTIAN YOU DON'T!

This may come as a shock to you, because you already think that you have the bible that Jesus desires you to have, but you do not carry the Bible or the collection of Books that not only Jesus used for his authority, but his disciples and followers as well. You will probably want to disagree with the previous statement, but the facts speak for themselves. We don't have Yeshua's Bible! You are not reading the same scriptures in your churches that were read in the churches and synagogues of the first century. I always thought that Christianity used the same Bible as Jesus until I began to study for myself. I had a rude awakening. It is time for you to awake also!

Answer for yourself: Which Bible should be used as the ultimate authority for modern Christianity...the Jewish Bible, the Catholic Bible, or the Protestant Bible?

DID YOU KNOW THAT DIFFERENT BIBLES MEAN DIFFERENT BELIEF SYSTEMS?

As both a pastor and Bible scholar, I believe that the Religious Belief System of every Christian should be as close as possible to the Religious Belief System of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: What do you think?

Answer for yourself: Wouldn't it be absolutely insane for a Christian to have a Religious Belief System that was not only in opposition to, but also an insult to many things that Jesus believed and taught? Well it has happened and you, the average Christian, and most likely you are even aware that it has!

"Not me" you say, well read on!

I ask you as a Christian to face reality as it is laid open to you in these articles, and make whatever changes are necessary in your belief system as well as your life. God would have you do so. Let's us examine the issues together. Let us begin with Yeshua's Bible.

WHAT BIBLE DID JESUS USE?

The first step in assuring ourselves that we have the same Religious Belief System of Jesus is to agree as to the same Bible Jesus used for the authority for his beliefs. The Bible of the Jew in the first century A.D. consisted of 12-20 scrolls of varying lengths. None of the scrolls contained the writings which are now called the Catholic New Testament or the Protestant New Testament! Most of the writings found in the Catholic New Testament (from which we get the Protestant New Testament) would not be written for another twenty to sixty years! That means that the Great Commission was started without a New Testament! Why? Because for Jesus, as well as his disciples and Apostles, nothing had the authority to compare with the Old Testament Scriptures that had been given at Mt. Sinai. Nothing was comparable with the Torah (God's Teachings and Instructions). According to Biblical scholars, it would be until another 10 years or so following the crucifixion of Jesus before the apostle Matthew would write down the life story of Jesus in Hebrew (called the Logia-which is lost to us today). This was the first record of an attempt to record the words of Jesus.

Answer for yourself: Let me ask you, why did the apostolic community decide to wait so long (written records were complied well up until 70 A.D., or even long after that as some scholars suggest) to record the words of Jesus?

Answer for yourself: Even more important, why were Yeshua's words, or more importantly, the words of his followers not recorded for almost a generation or so, unless they were not considered on the same level of authority as the "Scriptures" that they already possessed; namely, the Old Testament?"

It would not be until 380 A.D. before we would have an "accepted" Canon (Catholic) for the New Testament.

Answer for yourself: Can you possibly imagine that Yeshua would say "Go ye into all the world..but shucks... I won't have the manual ready for you for 400 years? What did they "teach" then in this Great Commission for up to 400 years before the creation and official canonization of the New Testament which can be shown to contain many "doctrines" and "teachings" that contradict many major tenants of Biblical faith which Yeshua both believed and taught?

Answer for yourself: Do you realize, that the Great Commission had been obeyed for over 380 years before we had "another authority" that would eventually replace the "authority" that Jesus relied upon; namely, the Hebraic Old Testament Scriptures that were composed of the Law, Prophets, and Writings?

It might surprise you but it would be almost another twenty years or so after the cross of Jesus before Paul would write his first epistle! That means he began to write about 50-55 A.D. which is around twenty to twenty-five years after the death of Jesus.

WHAT DID THE NEW FLEDGLING MESSIANIC COMMUNITY USE FOR THEIR BIBLES BEFORE THE CREATION OF THE CATHOLIC CANON OF 380 A.D.?

Answer for yourself: What Bible did the Apostles carry with them, as well as others, as they went into all the world to preach the Gospel? They had no New Testament.

After Paul's epistles were in circulation for about ten to twenty years the authors of Luke and Mark decided to write their Gospels. This would be around 70 C.E., just prior to the time that the Second Temple was destroyed by the Romans. Again, this might surprise you, but it would be another 70 years before anyone would decide that a collection of writings from the Messianic Community should be gathered together as a rival authority for the Old Testament (140 C.E.)! Marcion, the heretic, would combine (most probably) the Gospel of Luke with some of Paul's writings which would become the first of many replacements for Yeshua's Bible.

We now have a new canon in the making and it will become "the authority" that would eventually replace "the authority" of Yeshua's Bible for the Messianic Community. We will develop a new canon to replace the canon of Yeshua

WHAT IS THE PURPOSE OF A CANON (BIBLE)?

It is a documented fact that a religion cannot exist without a revelation. The Bible is a book that contains "revelations" which are authoritative for a religious community. There are many religious communities, thus there are many Bibles. It is through these revelations that a religious community develops its understanding of God and God's requirements for mankind.

Man is limited in his knowledge of God, and it is by the vehicle of revelation that man received knowledge of God that is outside of his natural ability to know or discern. The major obstacle confronting man in his search for God is that the reality of God is beyond discernment through man's senses. Man's knowledge is limited to the information that he receives from his sensory organs: hear, taste, touch, feel, see. But when we talk of the supernatural realm and not the natural realm, then everything changes. Man does not have the capability to penetrate into God's dimension at will. What we know of God is because God desired to reveal it to man. We must wait for God to break into our dimension and show Himself first. Since it is God, and not man, who determines when and where and how contact is to be made with His creation, then our knowledge about God is limited to the information that God chooses to reveal about Himself. After God makes contact with the natural realm and imparts His message, the resultant message is called a "revelation." The accumulation of "revelations" over time becomes the cornerstone of what a community or group of people come to understand about God. Such a group of revelations is called the community's "canon" or "Bible". It is my personal opinion that today we receive no new revelations from God; only illumination from the Holy Spirit concerning past revelations.

It is easy to see that the canon or Bible of such a community becomes the most important document they possess and is cherished as the ultimate authority for the communities' religious beliefs. Given enough time teachings and interpretations concerning the communities' "received revelations" will accumulate around one's canon. It is from these interpretations and teachings that the community will gradually build and produce its "Religious Belief System." This simple process is best explained as follows:

- God gives man a revelation.
- Men record the revelation and canonize the revelation and it become their "Bible".
- The canon becomes the authority for the Religious Belief System of the community.
- The Religious Belief System becomes the "Standard" of measurement for all other religious data, information & practice of the religion of the community.
- The canon becomes the authority to judge & correct all other canons & all other religious beliefs (regardless of whether it is right or wrong).

WHO DECIDES WHAT IS CONSIDERED TO BE ACCEPTED OR

REJECTED IN SELECTION OF A CANON (OUR BIBLES)?

This newly formed Religious Belief System (as seen in our canons and Bibles) quickly becomes the standard which will be used exclusively to test and evaluate all other religious beliefs. If statements agree with the "Standard" they are considered correct and true. If they conflict or disagree with the "Standard" they are considered incorrect and false.

There is only one major problem: Who determines the "Standard?"

Unfortunately since the death and resurrection of Jesus the Catholic Church has for the most part determined the "Standard" to be used in evaluating revelation, both past and present. Little consideration has given to Jesus, his faith, his religion, and his teachings as the "Standard." Few seem to realize that he is the "Standard" and his Religious Belief System (his teachings and his interpretations which happen to be Jewish) make for the correct canon and Bible, both yesterday, today, and forever!

You can easily see that such a "Standard" becomes a potential source of enormous power for those who control it (organized religions). Such "Standards" have been used by priests, preachers, ministers, translators, evangelists, rabbis, etc., to control and manipulate people to do their (the organization's) bidding and not God's.

WHY NOT MAKE OUR OWN CANON-EVERYBODY ELSE DID!

Often such "Standards" are challenged in one or more of the following methods:

- Reinterpretation of the words in the Canon into other meanings which change the revelation.
- Often words are added or deleted from the Canon. This changes the whole meaning.
- Often one will come up with a "new revelation" to correct a prior revelation.
- The physical destruction of the competitive canon.
- Often we see a combination of the above four.

History will give the details concerning how the above four methods of challenging and eventually replacing the canon (the previous authoritative Religious Belief System of the Jewish Church). It would be this Jewish Messianic Belief System which served as the foundation for the new move of God at Pentecost (Festival of Shavuot) as God began to bring all men together in one body through His Messiah. TRAGICALLY, this Jewish Religious Belief System for both Jew and Gentile would, in the span of three hundred years, be completely replaced with a totally Gentile, Hellenized (Greek influenced) replacement faith which would serve as the new Religious Belief System which would serve as the replacement foundation for the Church of Yeshua and does so even up until today.

LET US BE REAL FOR A MINUTE:

One major question I challenge you to answer: "how did a movement within Second Temple Judaism, that began as a Jewish revival, anticipating the coming of it's long-awaited Jewish Messiah, evolve into the majority of the churches we see today that carries the Messiah's name, yet opposes most of what the historical Messiah taught and modeled? How did this Jewish renewal movement within Sinai faith of the first century become as we see it today: a anti-Semetic, anti-Judaic, Law-replacing, Festival-ceasing, Sabbath-changing, money-hungry movement that denies with impunity its responsibility to practice the tithe correctly, thus robbing God repeatedly week after week in Yeshua's name by neglecting and teaching incorrectly concerning one's responsibilities to the widows, orphans, strangers, the sick, lame and blind? How has the Christian church, which is grafted into "Israel," become a wild olive branch that has detached itself from the root and fatness of the olive tree, and has, for the most part, replaced the "faith of Jesus" by a "faith about" Jesus" which has tragically bent upon destroying Judaism and abolishing totally the practice of the religion of Judaism? The answers can be found in researching the Canon of Scripture. Let us continue.

A QUICK LOOK AT LUTHER AND HOW HE USED THESE PRINCIPLES TO FURTHER RE-CREATE A REPLACEMENT RELIGION:

As stated previously, as God revealed Himself to men, it became necessary to write down these revelations which later became canonized into an authoritative documents for a community of people. The Bible is a book that contains a number of different recorded revelations about God. Religious leaders, both in Judaism and Christianity rely upon their "Canon" as proof for their authority. Over time challenges have been brought against different groups in authority through different methods:

- Production of new revelations.
- Changing of the words of an existing revelation.
- Reinterpretation of existing words and revelations.
- Physical destruction of existing revelations.
- A combination of one or more of the above factors.

By the time of John the Apostle's death (at the turn of the first century), the leadership of the Messianic church within Judaism (originally a Jewish congregation birthed at Hag Shavuot or the Festival of Pentecost) had shifted from Jews to Gentiles who were ignorant of the Jewish language, history, culture and mind set. The reason for this change was primarily related to the destruction of the Temple in 70 A.D. and the dispersion of the Jewish people into all the world. The first challenge to this new Messianic Community was through the changing of existing revelations with reinterpretation of the words within that revelation. The written authority that was originally used by these Gentile church leaders was the Septuagint, a Greek translation of the Hebrew Bible, not the Hebrew Bible itself. Remember, we have a translation, not the original manuscripts. As Gentiles read the Greek Bible numerous questions arose since they had not the background or tradition in this Jewish faith necessary to properly interpret what they were reading. With questions came answers, some correct and many incorrect as supplied by Gentiles, and not Jews, as they challenged the authority of the Jerusalem church as well as the Jewish Bible, from which their Green Scriptures had come. Let me say that in translation from Hebrew to Greek, it would be wonderful if every Hebrew word has an "EXACT EQUIVALENT" in the Greek language, but that is not the case. As a result, a variety of interpretations arose that only further aggravated tensions between Jewish interpretation and Gentile-Greek interpretations. Conflicting positions escalated between the two camps as the Gentile Church drew further away from its Jewish roots..

With the advent of Marcion and his Bible (the first New Testament), new revelations were offered by Marcion to replace the "old Jewish revelations". Marcion decided to throw away the Old Testament which was Yeshua's Bible. Can you believe it? Marcion is credited with producing the first "New Testament" and forced the Roman Church leaders to create their own "New Testament" to counteract that of Marcion and wrestle this "NEW AUTHORITY" away from Marcion and transplant it into their own theological camp. These "proto-Catholics" simply built on the foundation of Marcion's Bible to create their own authority to sanction their efforts of spreading their own kind of interpretations of the religion of Yeshua, regardless if it was right or wrong.

Marcion produced his new canon in 140 A.D. which is almost 100 years after Yeshua. This was 80 years after Paul and 40-50 years after John the Apostle's death. Marcion was forced to create a "New Bible," thereby replacing the authority of the "Old" Testament to allow emerging Gentile church leaders to justify their position as God's "new" appointed leaders as they felt that they had "replaced" Israel in God's economy.

I can understand the these early Gentile feelings, since Israel had been dispersed into captivity, and the physical nation no longer survived, but what of today when Israel has been re-established by Yahweh in 1948? How can the Christian Church claim, in the face of the momentous events of the last generation, that they are still the "replacement" for Israel, and God is no longer working through Israel?

The tragic error of Marcion and these first century Gentiles is that they failed to realize that God's covenant with Israel and the Jewish people is forever! The Gentile Church's agenda, in the wake of the exile and dispersion of the Jews in the first century, was to switch the authority of the "Mother Church" from Jerusalem to Athens-Rome. To do this, they needed an "authority" which gave them the "right" to proceed with the transfer of power. Marcion had already provided his "new revelation," so why not them as well? They found such authority in a new "Canon."

With the Roman response to Marcion which included writings very similar to those found in the New Testament of today, came also the prerogative to include or exclude certain books as each community decided. The debate over which books should be included or excluded in the Roman Catholic Canon extended from 150 to 380 A.D. Although the Catholic Canon was closed in 380 A.D. the debate over many books continued for almost one thousand years, in fact, the debate over inclusion or rejection of the Book of Revelation continued until well into the 10th century!

It would be 55 more years before Emperor Constantine (a self-professed God, himself an idolator) would wrestle the control of Christianity from the grip of the local independent church leaders. They became totally subject to the Emperor's decisions in the matters of religion after the Council of Nicea in 325 A.D. Relying upon "personal revelation" from either the God of Israel or the sun god, Constantine blended Mithraism (pagan worship) with Judaism and further the Gentile expression of the religion of Yeshua. Thus, he further laid the foundations that perpetuated Christianity for what it has become today. As recorded earlier, one of the ways of challenging existing religious authority is through a "new revelation". It was through such "new revelation" that Constantine:

- Created a new powerful group to rule the Church.
- Used public taxes to fund this group.
- Gave this group judicial powers.
- Divided the new group into smaller units which he could easily control.
- Changed the Passover to Easter (Ish-tar; "a pagan holy day for fertility and fornication rites".
- Changed the Sabbath (both the Jewish & the early church's day of worship) to Sunday (sun worshipper's day for worship)
- Prohibited the Church from having anything to do with Jewish ways or customs.
- Prohibited Jews from making proselytes (converts).

Constantine failed to remember the same thing that plagues the churches of today: Yeshua (Yeshua), Paul, Peter, Jacob (James), John, etc. were all Jews. They all kept the Passover and worshipped on the Jewish Sabbath. It would have been a sin for Yeshua to participate in an Ish-tar fertility rite or worship at a sun-rise service on the day of the Sun god. Yeshua and his Apostles were Jews who never renounced their Judaism, neither gave up their Jewish observances or told other Jews to renounce their Judaism in order to become members of a "new Christian Church." We must not forget that these are the same teaching that were shared with Gentiles who came to faith in Yeshua in obedience of the Great Commission up until the fourth century. Unfortunately this Roman Emperor authority model became the model followed by the Roman Catholic church. Eventually the Roman Empire along with its Emperor who would become the head of the church would disappear but only to be replaced again with one man who controlled the church, the Pope. The Roman model of authority prevailed against every major attack until the arrival of Martin Luther and a new model of authority; subjectivism.

The decision of Martin Luther to reform the Roman Catholic Church was never intended to end in the further creation of a new religion. He liked being a Catholic priest, practiced and taught Catholic doctrines, and actively participated in the Catholic Church. He accepted the Catholic doctrine of salvation and never suggested that there was another way of salvation. Luther chose to continue his reform activities against the purchasing of indulgences (prayers for the dead), trying to guarantee that more money would be left in his parish, and soon found himself excommunicated for his efforts. For a Catholic this is serious because being kicked out of the Roman Church meant he was no longer "saved" as "salvation is only in the church." For Luther to regain his salvation he had to successfully challenge the authority of the Church. He had to overcome:

- The absolute power of the Pope.
- Salvation based upon membership in the Catholic Church only.
- The Catholic priesthood's power to forgive sins.
- The Catholic priesthood's power to interpret the Bible.
- The doctrine of Apostolic succession.

Acknowledging that challenges to existing religious authority is always linked to "new" revelations, Luther challenged the Roman Church with his "new" revelation. The following is a summary of Luther's "new revelation."

- The authority of the Bible replaces the authority of the Pope.
- Salvation is based upon only the faith of the believer.

READ MATTHEW 19:16-21 & JAMES 2:14-26…IT DOES NOT SAY THAT

- 3. He developed the doctrine of the priesthood of the believer to replace the priesthood of the Roman Church. Each believer could go directly to God for the forgiveness of sins.
- 4. Each believers could interpret the Bible for himself (it did not matter if you were trained to educated at all).

THIS EXPLAINS WHY WE HAVE OVER 2000 DIFFERENT PROTESTANT DENOMINATIONS ALONE...WITH 2000 DIFFERENT YESHUAS. WHO HAS THE FAITH ONCE GIVEN TO THE SAINTS? WHERE IS THE ONE FAITH OF EPHESIANS 4:5?

- 5. Apostolic succession (authority handed down from Yeshua to Apostles to the papacy) was replaced with the authority of the indwelling Holy Spirit in each believer. Because of the presence of the Holy Spirit in each believer, they could interpret the Bible for himself and the Holy Spirit would guarantee that the would never make an error. (what a joke)!

JESUS TEACHES US THAT THE PHARISEES SET IN MOSES SEAT (GOD'S SEAT OF AUTHORITY). PAUL TEACHES US THAT WE MUST STUDY TO SHOW OURSELVES APPROVED UNTO GOD, A WORKMAN THAT NEEDETH NOT TO BE ASHAMED, RIGHTLY DIVIDING THE WORD OF TRUTH (1 TIM. 2:15).

LUTHER'S TEACHINGS BROUGHT DEVASTATING EFFECTS TO

THE CHURCH:

Multitudes quickly became self-appointed authorities themselves, with little preparation and without accountability to the Bible Yeshua used. It mattered little to them if their Bible was correctly interpreted: linguistically, historically, culturally, and politically. Thus, multitudes continued to "wrongly divide the Word of Truth."

THE RESULTS...SOME GOOD...MOST BAD

- Now everyone was his own ultimate authority.
- Faith alone was a requirement for salvation.
- The individual could go directly to God for forgiveness.
- Each could adequately interpret the Bible without any prior knowledge necessary for proper interpretation.
- The authority you needed to all of the above was resident in the Holy Spirit.

Thus, the foundation for great Biblical error and disobedience to God was perpetuated in the Protestant Reformation as individuals protested against the Roman Catholic Church and began to break away with themselves self-appointed authorities, basically ignorant of the Bible, except that they had a faith in God.. Next came an immediate exodus from the Catholic Church to Luther's Church. But, it was not very long before Luther's disciples began to use their new found "individual freedoms and personal authority to challenge Luther. Before long there were two Protestant Churches, then 3,5,50,100, and we have 1500 today!

Answer for yourself: What happened to the faith and religion of Yeshua that provided for widows, orphans, obeyed the Sabbath, kept the Festivals, and taught Gentiles to do likewise for four centuries? By now, you can see how replacement "revelations" have taken the place of the faith of Yeshua, and these "replacement revelations" were canonized and became the Bibles we carry today. Let us return to the study of the Canon.

HOW WELL DO YOU UNDERSTAND THE BIBLE THAT YOU USE FOR FAITH AND PRACTICE? #3

DID JESUS COME TO ABOLISH THE LAW AND GIVE US A NEW BIBLE?

As we look at Yeshua's canon (Bible), we must examine its foundation first through the study of history, culture, & language. Yeshua did not intend to create a new religion. Yet we have one. In fact, we have thousands of different sects all claiming "authority" by his name.

Let us examine undeniable facts that will go a long way in proving this point:

- Yeshua was Jewish from the day he was born until his last day upon the earth.
- Yeshua was a Jewish Rabbi (teacher).
- Yeshua's canon was the Jewish canon (Tanakh: Law-Prophets-Writings plus the Oral Law).
- Yeshua never renounced his Judaism or joined or created another religion. To have done so would have been the greatest of sins.
- Yeshua was not a Christian.
- Yeshua adhered to the Festivals of the Lord.
- Yeshua adhered to the Biblical Sabbath (Saturday).
- Yeshua's Apostles were Jews and never renounced their Judaism.
- Yeshua's Apostles required Gentiles to adhere to many Jewish laws (the laws of Noah-Acts 15).
- The canon of the Apostles was the same canon that Yeshua used.
- The Apostles did not see the need to make any changes in the Jewish canon after Yeshua's death.

CANONS, CANONS EVERYWHERE, WHICH ONE IS CORRECT?

Today we have three canons or Bibles that are in existence: Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant. Each Bible consists of a group of books, which have been selected as authoritative by "the powers that be". The books that are found in Bibles, whether Jewish, Catholic, or Protestant), all fall into 3 basic categories:

- Jewish books canonized by those with Jewish authority.
- Jewish books canonized by those with Catholic authority.
- Jewish books canonized by those with Protestant authority.

From this you can quickly see that there are three levels of authority to be recognized today: Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant.

Answer for yourself: Which does God stand behind? Does He condone all three?

Answer for yourself: If God intended three authorities, how do we account for the differences, conflicts, and contradictions that exist when compared against themselves?

Answer for yourself: Which is correct and which is in error? Is God schizophrenic?

Answer for yourself: If God is the same yesterday, today, and tomorrow; then why can't He make up His mind and have all three authorities agree?

THE FIRST CANON-GOD'S GRACIOUS GIFT TO MANKIND-THE LEGACY OF SINAI LIVES:

The Jewish canon has existed for over 1900 years. This is the Bible Yeshua used! It is called the "Tanakh" and consists of three major groups which consist of 39 books.

The canon, or officially accepted list of books in the Hebrew Bible, consists of 24 books according to Jewish reckoning and is divided into three parts: the Law, the Prophets, and the Writings. The Law (Torah), often called the Pentateuch, comprises five books, GENESIS through DEUTERONOMY. The Prophets (Nevi'im) are divided into three parts: the earlier prophets (Joshua, JUDGES, 1 and 2 SAMUEL, and 1 and 2 KINGS); the later prophets (ISAIAH, Jeremiah, and EZEKIEL); and twelve books called the Minor Prophets because of their brevity. The 11 Writings (Ketuvim) include three poetic books (PSALMS, PROVERBS, and Job); the five scrolls (SONG OF SOLOMON, RUTH, LAMENTATIONS, Ecclesiastes, and ESTHER); an apocalyptic work, DANIEL; and EZRA-NEHEMIAH and 1 and 2 CHRONICLES.

Christian Bibles arrange the books differently. The Law, or Pentateuch, comes first, then all the historical books. These are followed by the poetical, or wisdom, books and finally the prophetic books. Thus Ruth, Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther appear in the second group and Daniel and Lamentations in the fourth.

The Jews never ceased writing religious books. Several books composed in Hebrew or Greek after 300 BC are part of the SEPTUAGINT (LXX), or Old Greek versions, and were regarded as Scripture by many Christians. Roman Catholics and the Orthodox include these books, called APOCRYPHA or Deuterocanonical books, in the Bible. Protestants omit them or print them as an appendix to the Bible.

THE JEWISH CANON-THE BIBLE JESUS USED:

Torah: (Law):

Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy.

Nevi'im (Prophets):

Joshua, Judges, I & II Samuel, I & II Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zachariah, and Malachi.

Ketuvim (Writings):

Psalms, Job, Proverbs, Ruth, Song of Solomon, Ecclesiastes, Lamentations, Esther, Daniel, Nehemiah, and I & II Chronicles.

It is important to note that the Jewish Religious Belief System gives different levels of authority to each of these three divisions. The Torah is the most authoritative, followed by the Nevi'im (Prophets) which are followed by the Ketuvim (Writings). Whenever there are two possible courses of action for a particular situation and one is found in the Torah and the other in one of the lesser two divisions, the one in the Torah is considered as the most authoritative. The Torah is the focus of the Tanakh (The Jewish Bible).

COMPETITION OVER CANONS BEGIN-MARCION'S BIBLE- 140 C.E.:

Marcion is the first person known to us who published a fixed collection of what we would call New Testament books. Others may have done so before him; if so, we have no knowledge of them. As stated before, he rejected the Old Testament totally, as having no relevance or authority for Christians; his collection was therefore designed to be the "first Bible". I wonder what Yeshua thought of Marcion's endeavors since Marcion threw out the Bible Yeshua (Yeshua) used.

It is amazing that before Marcion we find no evidence of the "church" using or even having a need for any writings other than the Jewish Bible of Yeshua! Think about that for a minute. Before Marcion, no apostle or disciple of Yeshua even considered making a new canon!

The Messianic community did not have a need for a new canon for over 110 years.

Answer for yourself: How did they manage? How is it that Yeshua would send them into all the world and command them to teach mankind to observe those things he commanded without a "New Canon" to teach from?

CANON WARS BEGIN:

To counteract the authority of Marcion and his canon the proto-Catholic Church (in its infancy) responded with a canon of their own to validate their own Religious Belief System and refute Marcion's Religious Belief System.

The Catholic Canon consisted of two major divisions which contain 75 books instead of the original 39 of Yeshua's Bible. Notice very carefully that those who were in charge of creating the Catholic canon chose to alter the Bible of Yeshua:

- 1) They destroyed the primary authority of the Torah by lumping all the books of Yeshua's Bible into one group which was given the title of "Old Testament", thus signifying that God was giving something to replace the "status quo" with something "new".
- 2) They rearranged the order of the books of Yeshua's Bible.
- 3) They added nine new books to the books of Yeshua's Bible: Tobit, Judith, I & II Maccabees, The Book of Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, Susanna, & Bel and the Dragon.
- 4) As stated before they renamed Yeshua's Bible "The Old Testament".
- 5) They created an entirely new division of canonical books which they called "The New Testament"; conveniently replacing the Bible Yeshua used with the Bible the Popes used.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR CHANGING THE AUTHORITY AND RELIGIOUS BELIEF SYSTEM OF JESUS? WHO CHANGED HIS CANON? HOW DARE THEM ADD TO OR TAKE AWAY FROM THE WORD OF GOD---THE TANAKH?

Ask yourself these questions:

Answer for yourself: Who gave them (the Roman Catholic Church) the right to decide what books should be added to Yeshua's Bible?

Answer for yourself: Who benefited from making such changes to Yeshua's Bible..Israel or Rome, the Jew or the Gentile?

Answer for yourself: Who decided which books were to be added or deleted?

Answer for yourself: What was the criteria used to evaluate adding or subtracting books from the Bible Yeshua used?

Answer for yourself: What was the religious Belief System of those who added or subtracted books from the Yeshua's Bible?

Answer for yourself: Was their Religious Belief System the same as Yeshua's?

If it was, then what was the need for a new Bible when Paul would say in 2 Tim 3:14-15: "But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them....and that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures" (WHAT SCRIPTURES?....THE Old Testament...the Bible Yeshua used), which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in christ jesus

Answer for yourself: Why was there a need for new books anyway? After all, the Great Commission was fulfilled and the whole world heard the "Word" when using only Yeshua's Bible (The Old Testament).

Answer for yourself: Could Yeshua's disciples adequately preach "salvation" to the world using Yeshua's Bible? Well, they did!

Answer for yourself: Why was it necessary to rename Yeshua's Bible the "Old" Bible? Why call the additional books the "New" Bible?

Answer for yourself: What was the rationale behind forming a new canon?

Answer for yourself: Ask yourself why there was a need for Marcion or the Roman Catholic Church to create a new canon if salvation was being taken to the Gentile nations in fulfillment of the Great Commission by using the Bible of Yeshua: Law, Prophets, Writings?

LET US NOT FORGET: Remember a canon gives a group authority for their revelations and sanctions whatever they wish to do. How else could you "replace" something with something else unless you had the "new" authority to do so?

WHERE DID THEY GET THE AUTHORITY TO CHANGE THE REVELATION AND THE BIBLE?

Answer for yourself: And what gave them the authority? You guessed it, a NEW REVELATION. It would be this "new revelation", based upon the "old" revelation, that would be added to, deleted, changed, & reinterpreted into the replacement canon of the Catholic Church which would give them power and authority to replace the religion of Yeshua with the religion of Jeroboam (Gentile religions which oppose God). It is this religion of Jeroboam which has come down to us today as a mixture of Gentile Paganism and Judaism. Literally it is contemporary "calf-worship" and we worship what we know not most often (John 4-the Samaritan woman at the well was half Gentile and half Jew, with a faith that was mixed between Gentile paganism and Judaism).

TELL IT LIKE IT IS:

Yeshua most assuredly taught that the Jewish Bible was his Bible and that the words of that Bible should not be changed (Matt. 5:17). Read it for yourself!

From the time of Yeshua's crucifixion, around 33 C.E. (A.D.), through the lifetime of the last Apostle (John in 96 C.E.), Yeshua's followers and disciples continued to use the Jewish Bible as their canon. This continued for another 44 years until approximately until 140 C.E. when Marcion set about to set in motion the stirrings for replacing the religion of Yeshua with the religion of Gentiles. Marcion desired to undo the work of Paul by divorcing the emerging Gentile Church (proto-Roman Catholic Church) from second Temple Judaism (the religion of Yeshua).

Think for a moment, it was the Roman Catholic Church that should be built upon the teachings of Yeshua the Jew (church is to be built upon the foundation of the Apostles and prophets-not Popes and Cardinals), not replacing Yeshua's foundations of Moses and Judaism with Gentile paganism that mixes in false religious teachings. Marcion's attempt to replace Yeshua's religion was the first known attempt of the proto-Roman Catholic Church as a fully Gentile institution to create a canon to replace the Jewish Bible & the Jewish Church.

This new canon of Marcion, as stated above, eliminated all of Yeshua's Bible! Marcion's canon included only Paul's epistles and selected portions of Luke's Gospel. Marcion was in the middle of a grown anti-Jewish movement which was sweeping through the Roman Empire in the second century. It would be this aberration which the Roman Catholic Church would build their "replacement Canon" upon.

Although the Gentile Roman Catholic Church rejected Marcion's canon, they quickly adopted his idea. Soon they decided to draft their own canon (Bible) to help support and give authority to their further diverging theological persuasions and further cause the separation of their Gentile organization from its Jewish Roots and the religion of Yeshua. If they were to stand apart and claim validity as a replacement faith and avoid the persecutions coming upon their Jewish brothers by Rome, then they had to show they had the authority to do so, and what could be better authority for such a "revelation" but a new canon. Around 180 C.E., forty years after Marcion and 150 years after Yeshua we see the emergence of a new canon for the Gentile Roman Catholic Church. Gentile replacement religion was off and running!

IS IT IN OR IS IT OUT?

Thus began an ongoing struggle that would last over 1000 years over which books should be included in the new Catholic Canon. There were at least 19 additional writings that the Roman Catholic leadership refused to include. Thomas was one of the original 12 Apostles whose Gospel of Thomas was accepted as Canon at first, only to later be rejected by others. A book entitled Third Corinthians appeared in an early Armenian canon. By the year 200 C.E. numerous new canons were in use. Some were fairly well defined, while others were much more informal. What we find upon examination is that each canon which was accepted in different regions reflected local beliefs and traditions unique to that region. Different canons reflected different beliefs in other areas. Thus we find great diversity. What does this have to say for inspiration in the gathering of a universal canon as given by God in the New Testament? Simply, inspiration in gathering the canon was non-existent!

EVERY MAN DID WHAT WAS RIGHT IN HIS OWN EYES &

CLAIMED AUTHORITY FOR IT:

The many variations in canons produced very erratic religious practices and inconsistencies. The Roman Catholic leaders felt they had better quickly take action concerning such diversity if they were every to have uniformity. They quickly went to work to decide and identify which writings were "sacred or inspired." This confusion and chaos continued in Christianity for over 300 years. Finally, the official canon of the Roman Catholic Church was agreed upon in 380 C.E., over 240 years after Marcion and 350 years after Yeshua.

Stop & think about this for a moment. It was 350 years after the death of Yeshua before the need arose for a new revelation to replace the revelation given to men by God at Sinai and confirmed by His prophets! Wow! Even after the Catholic Canon was officially closed, new writings continued to appear. The last two books to be admitted to the Catholic Canon were Hebrews and Revelation. The debate over inclusion of Revelation lasted over 600 years.

Answer for yourself: What was the Holy Spirit's role in the selection, addition, deletions, and re-additions of these books to the accepted canon?

Conveniently, the newly created Catholic Canon provided the authority to the Catholic Church to propagate their anti-Yeshua & anti-Jewish doctrines and dogmas. The power of the Roman government gave the Roman Church the power to deal with those who opposed them. At last the embarrassment could stop; there was a single Catholic Canon and it would remain the sole authority for the next 700 years. Important questions should be asked:

Answer for yourself: Where was God's leadership during all these years?

Answer for yourself: Why didn't God protect the canonization of His Word in the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Where was the inspiration of the Holy Spirit in selecting books, deleting books, and re-including books hundreds of years later? Why the conflicts? Doesn't God know what He wants to do?

Answer for yourself: What about the people who lived and died during these times? Are they "saved" even though they did not have an "official" New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Were believers deprived of the Word of God by organized religion during those years because some books were not accepted until after they died?

Answer for yourself: Were believers not only deprived of important revelations from God by self-appointed Gentiles since certain books were excluded and not included to the church's canon during their lifetimes.

Answer for yourself: Were believers given the word of men instead of the word of God and lead astray in their worship of God as they followed a canon given to them by Roman Catholic Theology which believed in purgatory, infant baptism for salvation, the mediatorship of the Virgin Mary, Papal infallibility, prayers to the dead, etc.?

Answer for yourself: What happened to the religion God gave the Gentile through Yeshua if we no longer use his Bible?

Answer for yourself: How close to the "faith once given to the saints" is your religious beliefs or the religious beliefs of your church?

Answer for yourself: Whose Religious Belief System do we have today in our churches? A Jewish or Gentile belief system? Which do you honestly believe Yeshua would follow today? Then why don't you?

IN A NUTSHELL:

The anti-Jewish Roman Catholic Church had achieved its goal; it established itself as "The Absolute Authority" over a Jewish movement whose origins, canon, and beliefs were Hebraic. Idolatrous Gentiles now interpreted for all men a "Jewish Religious Belief System". The long awaited and prophesied Jewish Messianic Movement had now become a Gentile replacement faith based on a mixture of truth and lies (see John 4 for a mixture religion and notice the response toward it by Yeshua). The Jewish Messianic Movement of Yeshua was totally recreated into a new Catholic Religious Belief System that was, and still is, in direct opposition to the original Jewish Belief System of Yeshua.

Just because you are a Protestant or non-denominational believer you have no right to feel comfortable and insulated from such a tragedy, because we are nothing more than quasi-Catholics ourselves. Unknowingly, you have adopted the Roman Catholic replacement Bible as well as their modified Religious Belief System which is a false religious system in our day. How did we get here? There is nothing new under the sun. Let's reiterate:

- 1) The Roman Catholic Church "reinterpreted" the words of the canon/Jewish Bible of Yeshua, twisting meanings to give validity to their errors.
- 2) They added words to and removed words from the canon/Jewish Bible of Yeshua, thus altering, changing, and removing Biblical doctrines at will if they were opposed to them, or desired they say something different.
- 3) They rearranged the books of the canon/Jewish Bible of Yeshua, to give the false idea that God was replacing Judaism and the religion of Yeshua with a new Gentile faith.
- 4) They declared that their "new revelation" nullified Yeshua's canon/Jewish Bible, thus doing away with the Old Testament as an authority.
- 5) They added their "new revelation" to Yeshua's canon/Jewish Bible.

SUMMARY-HISTORY OF THE CANONIZATION OF THE BIBLE:

The canon of the Bible was the product of historic discernment on the part of various religious groups of which traditional writings were to be considered "inspired" by God as special revelation to man.

The Jewish Bible (Tanach): The Jewish Bible reached its current form in the 2nd Century BC but was not canonically closed until after the destruction of the Temple when the rabbinic groups meeting at Jamnia tried to piece together what was left of Judaism once the priests (Sadducees) were wiped out and the Temple irrevocably destroyed. They reconsidered the canonical status of several books including Esther, Song of Songs, 1&2 Chronicles, Ecclesiates. They also explored the canonicity of Sirach and Wisdom of Solomon.

They ultimately used the following criteria for canonicity of Jewish books:

The book had to be:

- 1) written originally in Hebrew
- 2) written within the confines of Eretz Israel
- 3) the book must not contradict the Torah
- 4) the book must have been written before the time of Artaxerxes because afterwards the Pharisees believed there was "no clear succession of prophets." Conveniently, these criteria eliminated the Teacher of Righteousness (from Qumran), John the Baptist, and Yeshua as true prophets and rejected all the books of the NT.

The Christian Bible: Gentile Christians formed their own scriptures gradually over the first 4 centuries. By the 2nd Century, the Greek Translation of the Jewish OT (The Septuagint: LXX) with varying lists of Christian texts was the common Christian Bible. Contrary to earlier scholarship, it has been shown by A.C. Sundberg at Harvard that the Christian OT in the 2nd Century was not taken over from Alexandrian Judaism but was formed by the Christians themselves probably on reflection on the teachings of Christ on the Sermon on the Mount/Plain. The Christian OT was larger than the Jewish Bible because the Christians discerned for themselves the inspiration of what have been called the Deuterocanonical Books. It is erroneous to claim that St Athanasius determined the NT Canon, for he was just one scholar among many who had an opinion. Actually, the local Council of Hippo in 393 AD represents the consensus of the Church on the Canon. This Canon was the long one later accepted at the Council of Trent in 1546 for the Catholic Church and include all the Books of scripture, not just the NT. The decision here was referred to the "Transmarine Church" (Rome) for final confirmation. The decision at Hippo was endorsed by the subsequent 3rd and 4th Councils of Carthage and the Council of Rome. This Canon became the standard until the Reformation.

The protestant reformers rejected the traditional Christian Catholic Canon and eliminated the Deutero-canonical books because:

- The Deutero. contained a large amount of wisdom material which seemed to emphasize "works righteousness" and allowed for such practices as prayers for the dead and the intercession of the saints
- The NT does not frankly quote the Deutero. as scripture even though allusions to the material are legion (esp. Sermon on Mt/Pl)
- There were no known Hebrew originals of the Deutero. at that time and so these books were not considered to be authentic OT in accordance with the humanist movement's "back to the sources" policy

ORIGIN OF THE BIBLE & WHY WE DON'T HAVE THE ORIGINAL CANON OF JESUS TODAY:

For a full description of where the Bible came from, I would recommend a book called Where We Got The Bible by Henry Graham.

The facts of the matter are that by the time of Christ, the Jews outside Israel were using the LXX, the Greek version of the Scriptures, that included the seven books that were removed by Luther and the reformers.

Answer for yourself: The question that needs to be asked, is "When does the canon of the Old Testament end?" How would the Jews know?

Answer for yourself: If the Old Testament canon ends with the coming of Christ, then who has authority in the New Testament times to determine what the scriptures are?

Answer for yourself: Why do you assume that a New Testament "exists" that can be considered to be the "inspired word of God" as was the writings of Moses?

As we look at history, the facts of history, we see that the New Testament was determined at the Gentile Roman Catholic Church's councils of Hippo and Carthage during the 4th and 5th centuries as detailed above. It was these Gentile Catholic Church Councils who determined which of the books written during the Apostolic times were "inspired by God or not". These councils gave us the New Testament and confirmed the canon of the Old Testament, which has been reaffirmed through all the Catholic Councils and definitively again at the Council of Trent to refute the reformers.

Answer for yourself: Now for a big question. If you cannot accept nor condone the religious doctrines as taught by Roman Catholicism then are you aware that you accept their book...the New Testament? Have you ever really looked a the doctrines as taught by the Catholic Church and thought that these same people who were definitely "off" theologically were the same ones to give you your New Testament Scriptures...did the Holy Spirit give them this "book" but failed to straighten them out on their "religious" beliefs or have their religious beliefs crept into the pages of the New Testament and you not know it?

THE $64,000 QUESTION:

Answer for yourself: The real question is: Who had authority delegated to them from Yeshua; the Rabbis, the Gentile Catholic Church or the Protestant Reformers? No where in the New Testament do we find authority delegated to Gentiles to decide the course for the faith. Let us never forget that Yeshua instructs us, even before he corrects some of the Pharisees, yet not all, that it is...

"THE PHARISEES THAT SET IN MOSES' SEAT." (Matt. 23:2...The Scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat: ALL therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, observe and do;...).

Notice, he did not say that the Catholic Church or the Protestant reformers, or Greek proselytes sit in Moses' seat! The reason why the authority had to reside with Israel and the Jews is demonstrated in many Scriptures, even in the New Testament. Take for example, Rom. 9:3:

"Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the Law, and the service (worship) of God, and the promises (covenants), whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Messiah came, WHO IS OVER ALL, .."

THINK....written after the cross!

It is very evident from this one Scripture alone, that Paul considered Israel as the one God chose to entrust His revelation with; not only that, but it would be Israel who would be OVER ALL other peoples as a "light" to direct their way to God. Since it was to Israel that the Law and covenants were given, who best able to teach and interpret such but a Jew, and not a Gentile. Let us not forget, in fact we are admonished to "remember" in Eph. 2:11-12 that ...

as Gentiles that we all were "in times past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time we were without Messiah, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world."

Now, let us be objective about this next question:

Answer for yourself: Does the above Biblical definition of a Gentile sound like it is someone Yeshua would put in charge of rightly dividing God's Word that had been handed down, protected, and cherished since the Garden, even Sinai?

Answer for yourself: How could such strangers to covenants, laws, and the religion of Israel be entrusted with making such important decisions without prior preparation? It is easy to see that such Gentiles lacked the "tools" of knowledge and understanding to rightly divide the Word of Truth; thus in Acts 15:21 we find James' admonition that Gentiles coming to the faith of Israel attend the Synagogue on Sabbaths where they will be instructed in "Moses," thereby learning those necessary things needed to properly life a life pleasing to God as well as coming to the knowledge of God which is necessary to correctly understand and interpret the Bible that existed in their day (a Hebrew Bible). Remember, they were pagans and Greeks without such backgrounds, ill equipped to render an authoritative decision about anything connected with Israel.

Now, another big question must be answered:

Answer for yourself: If such Gentiles were ill-equipped to become authorities of Israel's religion since they were so deficient in the traditions, customs, beliefs, covenants, laws, and manners concerning Israel's faith, they how you discount this and allow Gentiles to take over the faith of Yeshua following 70 A.D. when the Temple was destroyed and all Jewish authorities exiled from Israel?

Answer for yourself: What possible qualifications could they have possess that would allow them to "take-over" for the Rabbis who set in Moses's seat, after all, it had only been since 50 A.D. (only twenty years) that Gentiles had been given the faith of Yeshua? Let us understand, at the most, the training and competence of Gentile religious leaders in Israel could not be more than 20 years. This is unthinkable when compared to Biblical truths that had been handed down as well as lived four for thousands of years by the Jews!

Therefore, in the mouth of two witnesses (Yeshua and Paul) we confirm that the Jews were given the spiritual authority for all mankind, and not the Gentile! Yeshua said and meant: "Salvation is of the Jews."

This questions now become easier to answer. The Protestant Reformers did NOT have authority from Yeshua, neither did the Gentile Catholic Church to change, alter, replace, add to, or take away from the revelation of God "entrusted to holy men of old." Upon much study you will find, as I did, that nothing they did is consistent with divinely inspired inspiration that was given to Israel. The Gentile Catholic Church Councils could not agree over even what books were to be in the Bible; their doctrines have changed, and they did not even claim authority or inspiration from God to know what the true Bible was.

HOW THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH GUARANTEES THEIR AUTHORITY:

The Catholic Church ERRONEOUSLY BELIEVES that they were given authority by Yeshua in Matt. 16:16-20, when Yeshua supposedly established his Church upon the rock of Peter. This "office," as determined by the Catholic Church, is currently (erroneously I might add) believed to have given Peter the "headship" of the Church. The last time I looked at the Bible, the Messiah is head of the church, and not Peter. The Catholic Church's big mistake is when they considered Peter to be the first Pope, when all that Yeshua is doing, if anything, is reaffirming to the Jew-Peter that Yeshua's church and called out people will be built upon himself; the Messiah of God; the rock of God's revelation to mankind. What they fail to overlook, is that it was James, the Lord's brother, who was put in charge of the first Messianic Church in Jerusalem, and not Peter. If anyone was the "first Pope," it would be James and not Peter. The Church was founded by Yeshua, not by Constantine or the Roman Catholic Church, and anyone who believes this error simply does not know history. Constantine merely legalized Christianity in the Roman Empire.

WHY DON'T YOU ATTEND MASS IF YOU ACCEPT THEIR BIBLE?

Now the question you must ask yourself if you do not trust the authority of the Gentile Roman Catholic Church to determine for you the course of your spiritual life:

Answer for yourself:

- "Why do you yet accept their Bible as Holy Scripture and reject the Bible of Yeshua as the sole authority of Scripture?
- Why do you trust a New Testament that is knowingly altered and changed by scholars and others who wish to inquire?
- You should ask yourself what other Scriptures possibly exit that are NOT in your Holy Bible that were considered inspired by the early church but removed by the Roman Catholic Church centuries ago?
- What part of Yeshua's Bible is no longer in your Bible today?
- Do you have the only "inspired" scriptures given to man by God?
- If you want to trust the authority of Luther (who never intended to break from the Catholic church), then where do you find corroboration for Luther's authority as opposed the Roman Catholic Church or the Rabbis for that matter?

- Why did Yeshua wait 1500 years for Luther to begin his church the right way?
- Did the Apostles go out and do the Great Commission incorrectly?
- Why did Yeshua wait almost 400 years to provide his servants with a "New" testament and previously send them "into all the world" without the "official manual" for salvation?
- How does Luther know which books are scripture and which are not, especially when he is 1500 years separated from the time of Yeshua and the Apostles, and does not have the original manuscripts, or even any manuscripts of some of the writings of that time?
- What are we to make of Luther's dubious religious doctrine like saying that the book of James is the "book of the Devil?"

Let us not forget that Yeshua appointed James the head of his church in this world. Surely Yeshua would not have appointed a "devil" to head and oversee his church!

Answer for yourself: Should we trust such men as the early Greek Gentile Church Fathers and Luther to determine for us what we are to believe in our churches today when a little study will reveal that they violated repeatedly the commandments in the Bible and the religion of Yeshua?

Sadly, some of the writings that the early Jewish and Jewish-Gentile church considered inspired and relied upon as their "authorities" were not deemed inspired by these Greek philosophical-religious scholars and were not preserved. Many of the books deemed "inspired" by the original Jewish church are today lost and not in the Bibles we carry.

Answer for yourself: Why not?

WHY OMISSIONS IN THE CANON:

I have one question that is playing greatly on my mind and it deals with those books that were written and not included in our Bibles.

Answer for yourself: Why were these books not chosen, and what criteria was used that caused their elimination from our Bibles today? Concerning those books which were chosen, why were they?

Answer for yourself: Who got to decide which books were chosen?

You are probably aware that the Catholic and Jewish Bibles have books that are not in the Christian Bible.

Answer for yourself: Which ones are they and why are these books excluded from the Christian Bible? To answer these questions, we must examine the Bible as well as the canonization process even more in depth than before. Let us first get an over-view of the development of our Bibles.

THE CANON WE NEVER GOT:

There are many books various early Christian churches considered as canonical, or as possible additions to the Testaments. In some churches a few of these DID make it into their Scriptures. Some of these may be known to you by other names, but these are the most generally used English translations of the titles. These are not the Apocrypha, but known as the Pseudepigrapha or other names. The word Pseudepigrapha, meaning "books with false titles," refers to books similar in type to those of the Bible whose authors gave them the names of persons of a much earlier period in order to enhance their authority. Among the best known are 3 and 4 Esdras and the Prayer of Manasseh.

The term "Pseudepigrapha" is applied to many Jewish and Jewish-Christian books written in the period 200 B.C. to 200 A.D. These Jewish books include Jubilees, Enoch, Psalms of Solomon, Assumption (or Testament) of Moses, Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, the Sibylline Oracles, and the Apocalypse of Baruch. Fragments of the Damascus Document have been found among the DEAD SEA SCROLLS.

Other Pseudepigrapha exist in Greek, Slavonic, and other languages, many of them revisions of Jewish books. These include the Apocalypse of Peter, the Shepherd of Hermas, and the Ascension of Isaiah. The Gospel of Thomas and the Protoevangelium of James contain many legends about Yeshua and Mary and show the influence of GNOSTICISM, as does the Apocalypse of Adam. The Gospel of Nicodemus is composed of the Acts of Pilate and the Harrowing of Hell. The Pseudepigrapha are important for the light they throw on Judaism and early Christianity. The Epistle of Jude, for example, reflects a knowledge of Enoch and the Assumption of Moses, and it found its way into our Bibles, but not without a struggle.

Many of these books are lost to us today and we only know of their names, however, many have been preserved and can be studied today as well. Remember, many were considered "Scripture" by the early believers in Yeshua (Yeshua).

HOW COME NO ONE TOLD ME ABOUT THESE BOOKS?

Because of their Jewishness, many, if not all in some circles, are considered as heretic by most Christian churches, but then so too are some of the most "popular" New Testament texts, by other Christian churches, like the Revelation of St John which only got included in the first place as a kind of horse trade between Eastern and Western divisions of the early Christian Catholics of various flavors at Nicene and Carthage. The point is that some Jewish-Christian church or another, before Rome took over, considered each of these as Scripture one time or another. The most Fundamentalist of Protestants love to condemn so much else of the Roman Catholic Church, yet they meekly Roman Catholic authority on what is, and what is not Canonical Scripture. Why?

It was Jerome, who putting the Catholic Latin Vulgate together, arbitrarily threw texts he didn't like into the Apocrypha, yet still keeping them in the Bible. They remained in the genuine "King James" Bibles until the American Bible Society chopped them out in the early 19th century (along with significant editing of the text--yet this is the one usually referred to as the "genuine" King James Version!). The Puritans and their kin had Special Editions of their Bibles created without these books in them, even before the 1611.

The information being presented to you should make you wonder what ELSE they didn't tell you in Sunday School and Bible Study!

WHAT WAS CONSIDERED INSPIRED THEN?

Let us examine many of the books that were considered "inspired" by those of the churches of the first several centuries.

Answer for yourself: You should ask yourself a question as you look over these books..."have I read any of these books before, and if not, why not since they were considered "canon" by the earliest believers?"

More to follow.

THE OLD TESTAMENT-MAJOR THEMES & CHARACTERISTICS OF THE HEBREW CANON:

The Hebrew Bible, written over a period of more than 500 years, consists of many types of literature and reflects varying points of view. It is essentially religious, but, unlike most ancient religious books, the Old Testament is characterized by a strong sense of history; even laws and exhortations are woven into the narratives.

The themes are the uniqueness and glory of GOD (Yahweh), the COVENANTS He made with Israel, the Law, God's control of history and Israel's special destiny, God's revelation through the PROPHETS, the nature of humanity, corporate and individual sin and its remedy, and the true worship of God.

The Hebrews believed that their religion was founded on covenants that God offered them and that they had accepted. Yahweh had agreed to make them his specially chosen people and to protect them, but only if they obeyed his Law. Covenants were made originally made with ADAM and NOAH (both Gentiles), which embraced all humankind, and with ABRAHAM (a Gentile) and his descendants; but the most important covenant was revealed to MOSES. Later, after the division of the JEWS into two kingdoms--JUDAH (south) and ISRAEL (north)--the people of Judah believed that a special covenant had also been made with King DAVID and his royal descendants.

Yahweh was different from all other deities. Israel was forbidden to worship any other god, and the Mosaic religion implied that no other existed, although this was not specifically emphasized until the time of the exile during the Babylonian Captivity (587-37 BC). Other gods personified natural forces or tribes and nations, but Yahweh was supreme over everything. Because he controlled history, he could use Assyria or Babylonia to punish a rebellious Israel. Plentiful crops depended on his will alone and NOT on the magical rites by which the Baals of Canaan were worshiped. The concept of the Book of LEVITICUS was that the Hebrews were to be a holy people, separated from all defilement.

Many laws in the Pentateuch, or TORAH, the first five books of Jesus' Bible, were not different from those of surrounding nations. However, some unique commandments were given, without specific rewards and punishments; most important were the TEN COMMANDMENTS, which have a high ethical content. The TORAH (Law) was a complete religious and civil law for the whole nation. It prescribed sacrifices and festivals similar to those of other nations, but the emphasis was on morality. Yahweh was a God of justice. All sin and injustice was an offense against him; and repentance could bring forgiveness.

In the Book of JOSHUA, Yahweh is a God of war who commands the slaughter of the Canaanites, but the Hebrew religion gradually outgrew such a concept, as can be seen in the books of JEREMIAH and JONAH. The prophets saw history as an interaction between the living God and his people, and its outcome depended on their obedience. Israel was destined to be a light to the nations, but it always had a special place in God's purpose and love, and the Hebrews always struggled with the two concepts of God's impartial justice and his love toward Israel. Late in the biblical period, writers of APOCALYPTIC LITERATURE, unlike the earlier prophets, despaired of the normal forces of history and believed that God would put an end to the present age, bringing in a miraculous reign of righteousness.

These themes were not systematized into a theology but can be discerned from the literature as a whole, which expresses the hopes, fears, laments, thanksgivings, and even the doubts of the Hebrews. Thus the Book of JOB criticizes the popular, facile doctrine of reward and punishment, and the Book of ECCLESIASTES often approaches skepticism.

DIVISION OF THE OLD TESTAMENT- CHRISTIAN BIBLE:

Pentateuch: Genesis recounts the creation of the universe and the first human beings, the traditions of the DELUGE, and the stories of the patriarchs down to the sojourn of the Hebrews in Egypt and the deaths of JACOB and JOSEPH. EXODUS tells how Moses led the people from Egypt and received the covenant and Law on Mount Sinai. Leviticus is largely a legal code; NUMBERS continues the story of migration toward the Promised Land. Deuteronomy partly repeats the narrative, recording other laws, and concludes with the death of Moses. It teaches a strict doctrine of corporate reward and punishment.

The Pentateuch is based on four principal sources. The oldest, J, was perhaps written in Judah, the southern kingdom, about 950 BC. Between 900 and 750, another version from Israel, the northern kingdom, was woven in; this is called EPHRAIM (E). In the 7th century BC, Deuteronomy, or most of it (D), was compiled. About 550 BC, during the exile, the final edition of the Torah added a priestly source (P), some parts of which are very old.

Historical Books: Joshua tells of a thorough conquest of Canaan, but Judges contains traditions of the Hebrew tribes in the period before the monarchy that reveal the conquest as partial. The books of Samuel are about the founding of the monarchy under SAUL and David and contain a magnificent early source for the life of David, probably written about 961-22 BC. All the above books have been extensively edited by writers who shared the theology of the D source.

Ezra and Nehemiah were composed after the exile, when these two leaders restored Judaism in Palestine, and Nehemiah's own memoirs make up much of the latter book. The two Books of Chronicles cover Hebrew history from Ezra's priestly point of view but contain some valuable earlier traditions. Ruth is the story of a foreign woman who became loyal to Israel and was the ancestor of David. Esther is a tale of a Jewish queen of Persia who saved her people from persecution.

Poetical, or Wisdom, Books. Job contains some of the finest poetry in the Bible. Its themes are the problems of suffering and of man's standing before God. The Psalms were essentially composed for temple worship, although some may be pieces of individual devotion. Many are ascribed to David, but some come from an earlier period. Proverbs comprises several collections of ancient wisdom. Parts of Ecclesiastes are skeptical, but other sections express conventional wisdom. The Song of Solomon is a collection of love poems.

The Prophets: The great prophets of the 8th century BC were AMOS, HOSEA, Isaiah, and MICAH. They proclaimed God's holiness and his judgment on the idol worship and moral abuses of the Hebrew kingdoms, and called the people back to loyalty to the covenant. Jeremiah, the greatest prophet of the 7th century BC, was unique in recording his inner spiritual struggles and in promising a new covenant. Like Isaiah, he opposed military alliances with foreign nations and resistance to the Babylonian invasion. ZEPHANIAH and perhaps HABAKKUK belong to the same century. NAHUM gloats over the destruction (612 BC) of Nineveh. The most significant prophets during the period of Babylonian exile were the Ezekiel and the unknown authors of chapters 40-55 and 56-66 of Isaiah, who encouraged the return of the Jews to the Holy Land and promised a glorious national life. Lamentations reflects the miseries of the exile.

The remaining prophets followed the exile. OBADIAH is strongly nationalistic; JONAH expresses God's concern for Gentiles as well as Jews. HAGGAI and ZECHARIAH 1-8 reflect the rebuilding of a small temple in Jerusalem. JOEL, Zachariah 9-14, and MALACHI combine the themes of judgment and restoration and have apocalyptic elements. Daniel is an apocalypse from the Maccabean period (c.164 BC) and promises God's help to the Jews in time of persecution.

VARIETY IN OLD TESTAMENT-CHRISTIAN BIBLES:

Having already looked at the division of the Hebrew Bible (Old Testament), let us look at different Christian Versions of the Old Testament. You may find this strange, but Christians and Jews still disagree over the content of the Old Testament. The Protestant Old Testament is supposed to be identical to the Hebrew Bible, but it is NOT!; though the books are arranged and divided differently. In other websites I have devoted much space to the comparison of the Jewish Masoretic Text and the corruption of it's translation by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, in 200 B.C.E. Of interest to the Christian is that these "purposeful corruptions of the Jewish texts" was done by the Essenes of Egypt in the 3rd century B.C. in order to validate their "unique theology" and give them a "Divine Book" whereby they now had, because of this Divine Book, a Divine authority for their religious beliefs over their adversaries and opponents. The Jews of Palestine never accepted this Greek translation because of its many inherent errors and this Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures incorporated pagan astral, cosmic, and sun-god beliefs among the Jewish Texts. Tragically this became the Scriptures for the Greek speaking world and ultimately became the Christian's Old Testament. To further complicate the matter every quote in the New Testament comes from these corrupted Greek texts.

Answer for yourself: What does that mean for the Christian today?

Simply this; many, many religious beliefs and doctrines as taught in the Christian's Old Testament and it's corresponding quotes in the New Testament find their origin in pagan sun-worship and therefore many of the "beliefs" attached to Jesus are pagan and Jesus is made to have more in common with Osiris, Bacchus, Attis, Dionysus, etc., that with the Jewish Messiah of the Jewish Scriptures. Few know this until they study the corruption of the Jewish Bible. If you want to see this in detail you need to study: http://bennoah1.freewebsites.com and http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com.

Roman Catholics since 1546 (the Council of Trent) have officially included the "deutero-canonical" or "apocryphal" books. These books were included in early editions of the King James Bible, but Protestants have not considered them authoritative because they are not found in the Hebrew Bible.

HOW WELL DO YOU UNDERSTAND THE BIBLE THAT YOU USE FOR FAITH AND PRACTICE? #6

THE NEW TESTAMENT:

Major Themes and Characteristics

Covenant and law are central in the Old Testament, and JESUS CHRIST is central in the New Testament. The dominant theme is the interpretation of Yeshua's nature as CHRIST or MESSIAH (the anointed one), Son of man, Son of God, Lord (master, one in authority), and Prophet. This was a complete reinterpretation of the Jewish hope for an anointed king descended from David. Perhaps before Yeshua's death, his disciples had already acclaimed him as Messiah, but they became convinced of this from experiences that proved to them he was again alive. Thus the RESURRECTION is the second major theme. The Messiah now came to mean, not a conquering, successful king (Messiah ben David; the long-awaited for Messiah that would reverse the fortunes of Israel, once again making them the "head" and not the "tail"), but a crucified Lord (Messiah ben Joseph-a Suffering Servant) whose unique relationship to God could be suggested only partially by the titles applied to him.

Now I say now bears explaining. There is a big difference between the Jewish followers and Gentile followers of Jesus; a very big difference between the Jerusalem church and the churches of Paul, the gospel of James, Peter, and John and the gospel of Paul. Over time with the emerging Gentile Pauline churches we see a complete change in "religious beliefs" as compared with the most intimate Jewish followers of Jesus. Again we must go to the texts for our differences; there is a major difference between what the Jewish Masoretic texts teach concerning "the" Messiah and what the Greek texts teach concerning "the" Messiah.

Understand that following the destruction of the Temple and the scattering of the Jews that over the next 4-5 centuries the Jewish church would be persecuted out of existence. We are left with a Gentile Church of ever gaining strength; especially when "Christianity" became the religion of the state of Rome. Therefore, the non-Jewish "believers," and I say "believers" very loosely, in explaining and defending their faith, these Gentile disciples of Jesus found passages in the Greek Translation of the Old Testament that they believed were prophecies of his birth, death, resurrection, and nature (for example, Psalm 110:1, Isaiah 53; Daniel 7:13-14). As I have tried to show most of these are pure fabrications from the purposeful misquotations of the Jewish Bible which occurred long before the birth of Jesus. These were never prophecies about Jesus but re-modifications of the texts by the Essenes where they changed the concepts of the human Jewish Messiah more in the fashion of their cosmic sun-godman redeemer which comes straight out of astral, solar, sun-worship. These same non-Jewish and Gentile believers also preserved Yeshua's sayings and the stories of his life, which they interpreted in light of their faith.

Jesus had proclaimed the gospel ("good news") of the coming reign, or kingdom, of God and carried on a ministry of teaching, forgiveness, and healing. Although much of his teaching agreed with that of other Jews, his more radical and prophetic sayings made enemies. The high priest (Sadducee) and his associates feared Jesus (Pharisee) as a threat to the established order, and the Roman governor Pontius Pilate was persuaded to have Jesus crucified.

Other new experiences of ecstasy and prophecy were interpreted as gifts of the Holy Spirit when many of them were little more than emotionalism because the Holy Spirit will not "anoint" lies and error or contraction of the true Jewish Scriptures. Indeed, most books of the New Testament ponder the relation of the old and the new. Christians, and Jesus himself, believed in the same God as other Jews and recognized the authority of the Old Testament. Yet Jesus, as his accounts in the New Testament how, had supposedly made radical statements that undermined the separateness of Judaism and led logically to the admission of Gentiles into the community. Thus, there emerged a Church embracing Jews and non-Jews that was interpreted as based on a RENEWED COVENANT inaugurated by Jesus. Paul, the greatest apostle of the Gentile mission, defended his policies by teaching that the basis for acceptance by God is faith in Jesus Christ; yet Paul, who did not wish to break with the Jewish identity and community would end up doing the very same thing in his creation of a new religion build around "his gospel" and "his unique" understanding of Jesus which Israel and Judaism could not accept.

The New Testament contains a strong apocalyptic element owing to the Essene influence, whom upon study, can be shown to be the "first Christians" as set off from the Ebionites who were the first true followers of Yeshua. Yeshua's parables and sayings regarding the coming reign of God are enigmatic, and it is not certain that he expected the early end of the world; but many original Christians believed they were living in the last age. Nevertheless, much of the moral teaching of the New Testament is aimed at everyday life in this world, and Christian behavior is a constant theme. But understand that the audience to whom these New Testament writings were directed were heathen and were in desperate need of morality and ethics. The New Testament reflects other concerns of community life, including public worship and church organization, but equal emphasis is placed on individual prayer and and communion with God.

THE CANON:

The process by which the canon of the New Testament was formed began in the 2d century, probably with a collection of ten letters of Paul. Toward the end of that century, Irenaeus argued for the unique authority of the portion of the Canon called the Gospels (NOTICE THE FIRST CALL (by Gentiles) TO RECOGNIZE THE INSPIRATION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT WRITING CAME IN THE LATE SECOND CENTURY)!

Acceptance of the other books came gradually and Gentile church councils after Gentile church councils debated the issues endlessly. The church in Egypt used more than the present 27 books, and the Syriac-speaking churches fewer. The question of an official canon became urgent during the 4th century. It was mainly through the influence of Athanasius, bishop of Alexandria, and because Jerome included the 27 books in his Latin version of the Bible called the Vulgate, that the present canon came to be accepted.

Answer for yourself: Why did it take almost 400 years for the New Testament writings to be deemed "Scripture"?

Answer for yourself: Why didn't the Apostolic church under James decide that Paul's writings were to be Scripture, let alone the writing of men like Jude, Peter, and Titus?

Answer for yourself: Why didn't Paul (Acts 28) reason with the Jews in Rome from his own personal scriptures (Galatians, Romans, I Corinthians, etc.) instead of resorting to the Law and Prophets as recorded for us? The answer is obvious, Paul did not consider his writings on par, either authoritatively or having the same level of inspiration as those of the Old Testament, or else he would have used them.

Paul did not ever consider his writings to have replaced the Bible Jesus used as seen from the example at the end of his life when he was teaching other Gentiles and Jews in Rome concerning Yeshua it is recorded for us that he did not choose "his own writings" but rather chose to teach from the Law and the Prophets for Paul knew something that the Gentile Christian Church has never learned or forgotten.....nothing will ever replace or take the authority of the Jewish Scriptures. Let us look as this example and learn from it.

Acts 28:23 23 And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging; to whom he (Paul) expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening. (KJV)

DIVISIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT:

The New Testament consists of FOUR GOSPELS,, the ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, and collections of EPISTLES.

The Gospels. Originally gospel meant "good news" (Greek evangelion). The term was later applied to books embodying this message. These are not biographies but proclamations of the good news in story form. Although all dates for New Testament books are debated, prevailing opinion dates MARK AD 68-72, LUKE and MATTHEW c.85, and JOHN 95-100. The first three, called synoptic because they can be compared side by side, have a complicated literary relationship with each other. Probably Matthew and Luke used Mark and a lost document called Q (German Quelle, "source"), consisting mainly of Yeshua's sayings. The parables--short illustrative stories told by Yeshua, usually reflecting daily life--are prominent in the synoptics. The Gospel of John differs from the others in structure and reflects the theological development of the first century, but it contains traditions independent of the synoptics.

The Acts. The Acts of the Apostles was evidently written by Luke as a sequel to his Gospel. It recounts the traditions of the earliest churches in Palestine and gives the details of Paul's missionary journeys as he continues to take and teach the religion of Yeshua to Gentiles throughout the world. Sadly, the unlearned often come to see that Paul was to start a new religion for the Gentile, but upon Hebrew and Greek studies, you will that nothing was further from the truth. Paul continued to take the Festivals, Holy Days, and Sabbaths of Yahweh to the Gentiles in his message of the Gospel.

The Epistles. Two kinds of Epistles are attributed to St. Paul in the New Testament. Nine of them (ten, if EPHESIANS is included) are letters addressed by Paul to specific churches (not for general circulation or correction) and deal mainly with problems of faith, morals, and community life in specific congregations. These letters disclose Paul's interpretation of Pharisaical Judaism as he draws from it the practical expressions of belief an conduct for Gentiles who are turn to faith in Yeshua and his God. Today we look backward and call his preaching a form of "Christianity," but in reality, his teachings embraced little of what we practice today as we have fallen from the mark in obedience when compared with the standard. NOTICE ALSO, ALMOST ALL OF PAUL'S LETTERS ARE INTENDED FOR CORRECTION AND REBUKE OF GENTILES, ALWAYS CALLING FOR THEIR REPENTANCE, EITHER IN THOUGHT, BELIEF, OR ACTION. Paul's preaching was to lead the heathen to the God of Israel, to the faith of Israel, and to the religion of Israel and not a new religion but yet that is what had been done after Paul.

The remainder are not actual letters; rather they are writings in letter form, intended for the whole church or large parts of it. Thus, the pastoral Epistles--1 and 2 TIMOTHY and TITUS--written in Paul's name, contain directions for church leaders and warn against errors in doctrine and behavior. HEBREWS is a carefully constructed sermon by an unknown author and interprets Christ as high priest and urges fidelity in time of persecution.

The general, or catholic, Epistles are so called because they are directed to the church as a whole. The Epistle of JAMES emphasizes the importance of good deeds against an empty type of belief that involves no right action. The first Epistle of PETER proclaims joy in the face of persecution and is addressed particularly to congregations with newly baptized members. The Epistles of JOHN resemble the fourth Gospel. St. John teaches the intimate relationship between love of the brotherhood and the true doctrine about Christ; he also attacks division within the church.

Revelation. The Book of Revelation was written to encourage Messianic Believers (called the "Way," "Nasoreans," or "Nazarenes" in the first century and not "Christians," for only the adversaries of this movement called the Messianic Believers "Christians" (a term of contempt) at this time). It would be these believers who would be persecuted under Domitian (AD 81-96), and let me remind you,this was to happen in their day and time, NOT IN OURS! Others, especially today with the advent of Dispensationalism, feel that it portrays the future through many symbols, and the prophet expects God's judgment on the Roman Empire, a 1,000-year reign of Christ, and a new heaven and a new Earth. I do not wish to get into this at this time in this letter, however, if you study you will find that the word "thousand" in Revelation 20 (thousand years) is PLURAL...meaning "thousands of years." This is another example of poor translation.

Answer for yourself: Now knowing this, what does that do to DISPENSATIONAL THEOLOGY and their endless parade of last-days charts and anti-Christ teachings?

DIFFERENT VERSIONS OF THE BIBLE:

Several Aramaic targums (free translations or paraphrases) of the Old Testament exist; some of them may be older than the Christian Era. The Greek Septuagint, whose canon was not strictly defined, was gradually produced during the last three centuries BC. An Old Latin version of both Testaments was revised by Jerome, producing the Vulgate. Ancient versions exist in Syriac, Coptic, Armenian, and other languages.

During the Middle Ages, parts of the Bible were put into Anglo-Saxon and Middle English. The first English versions of the entire Bible were made (1380-93) by John WYCLIFFE and his associates who used the Latin text. The REFORMATION gave further impulse to translations into modern languages, notably that of Martin LUTHER in German and William TYNDALE in English. Among later versions are the following: Miles COVERDALE's Bible (1535), Matthew's Bible (1537), the Great Bible (1539), Geneva Bible (1560), Rheims-Douai Bible (1582, 1609), King James, or Authorized, Version (1611), English Revised Version (1881-85), American Standard Version (1946-57), New English Bible (1961-70), Jerusalem Bible (1966), New American Bible (1970), Today's English Version (1966-76), and the Revised Standard Version (1946-1971).

HOW WELL DO YOU UNDERSTAND THE BIBLE THAT YOU USE FOR FAITH AND PRACTICE? #7

THE FIRST NEW TESTAMENT:

The key players in the history of the Bible haven't necessarily been popular--or orthodox.

MARCION-A BRIEF SKETCH: (c.85-c.160)

The reason Christians have 27 books in their New Testament, some scholars say, is partly because early church leaders didn't like the 12 that Marcion had compiled. They didn't care much for Marcion, either. Let us look at historical references that remain for us today.

Famous bishop Polycarp (John the Apostle's student) called Marcion "the firstborn of Satan" because of his rejection of the Old Testament as the Bible given to mankind by God and for trying to replace the Hebrew Old Testament my canonizing his own revelation and calling it a "New Testament." Justin Martyr said this wealthy shipbuilder "taught men to deny that God is the maker of all things." Tertullian said he was "more savage than the beasts of that barbarous region" where he grew up, in what is now northern Turkey. The lowest blow, which many scholars discount, came from Hippolytus when he said Marcion was excommunicated by his father for seducing a virgin. Then again, the sect Marcion later established would baptize only believers who vowed to remain celibate.

Now pay close attention. Marcion insisted on this because he said there were two Gods: the harsh, Creator God of the Old Testament and the loving God revealed through Yeshua. Did you notice the dualism? We have again encountered the Persian concept of cosmic dualism...good God versus Bad God. This perversion exists to day in the prolific errors perpetrated in Charismatic churches concerning the spiritual warfare message (see my paper on Angels and their role in spiritual warfare). Procreation, Marcion explained, was the idea of the Creator God, and Marcion wanted nothing to do with him. We see in this the total repudiation of the first positive commandment of the Torah (be fruitful and multiply). Again, his anti-Judaism and anti-Semitism is showing.

To further distance themselves from this God, Marcionites fasted and shunned worldly goods. A fifth-century writer told of meeting a 90-year-old Marcionite who washed every morning in his own spit so he could avoid using the water provided by the Creator.

Some scholars estimate that by the time Marcion died, when his church was at its peak of popularity, more than half of Christianity was under the sway of Marcionite teaching. That means over half of Christianity is anti-Semitic, anti-Judaic, and practicing a perversion of spiritual warfare! Look at Christianity today, and see for yourself the fruit of this sinister man and his teachings. We have a faith that denies the faith of its founder and has spent almost 1700 years trying to wipe out every Jew from the face of the plant; if not in progroms, crusades, and gas ovens, even more devilish, by conversion to Paganized Christianity where a Jew would be forced to deny Moses, Israel, the real Yeshua, the Law, Sinai, and adopt a paganized Messiah! Thank God no more has converted to this deception than history records.

The first "New Testament" was the one Marcion compiled after he was excommunicated by his own father in 144 A.D., at the age of about 60. Marcion's Bible rejected the entire Old Testament (THIS WAS JESUS' BIBLE) along with its heroes and prophets. Marcion believed that everyone in the Old Testament had been deceived by the Creator Himself. He also rejected all New Testament references that suggested the Creator and the loving God were the same. In the end, his Bible included only the Gospel of Luke and some letters of Paul. Two hundred years later, the sect was nearly extinct. But it had prodded the church to begin defining what Christians should believe and what books should be called the Word of God, since the Old Testament had to be rejected!

Having given a overview, now I will give you an in depth analysis of the tragedy of the FIRST NEW TESTAMENT from Marcion.

MARCION AND HIS BIBLE: THE FIRST BIBLE-FAR FROM INSPIRED AND INERRANT:

Marcion is the first person known to us who published a fixed collection of what we would call New Testament books. Others may have done so before him; if so, we have no knowledge of them. He rejected the Old Testament totally, as having no relevance or authority for Christians; his collection was therefore designed to be the first Bible. I wonder what Yeshua thought of his endeavors since Marcion threw out the Bible Yeshua (Yeshua) used. It is amazing that before Marcion (over 140 years) we find no evidence of the "church" using or even having a need for any writings other than the Jewish Bible of Yeshua. Just consider this one fact for a minute. What implications does this have for you as a believer who attends contemporary churches where the Old Testament is rarely used?

Marcion was born about 100 C.E. at Sinope, a seaport on the Black Sea coast of Asia Minor. His father was a leader in the synagogue of that city, and Marcion was brought up in the Apostolic Faith. Of all the apostles, the one who appealed to him most strongly was Paul, to whom he became passionately devoted, ultimately concluding that he was the ONLY apostle who preserved the teaching of Yeshua in its purity. This strikes me as almost unbelievable. Paul never met Yeshua or heard him preach or teach one lesson. Paul's only encounter with Yeshua was a vision; it is for that reason I find it hard to imagine that Marcion would discount the lives and testimonies of those who not only knew Yeshua personally, but lived and ministered along his side for three and one-half years. It is hard for any unbiased person to believe that Paul's understanding was greater than James for example; after all James was Yeshua's brother who lived with him over thirty years and was Yeshua's choice to lead the Messianic Congregation after his ascension (and not Paul).

Marcion embraced with great zeal the teachings of Paul, especially his gospel of justification by divine grace, apart from legal works. This view is an incorrect assessment as I have shown in previous newsletters regarding the role of the Law with grace. Marcion has been called "the only man in the early church who understood Paul," however it would be later said of him also that "even in his understanding he misunderstood him." Marcion's refusal to allow any element of law-keeping (obedience) be connected to Paul's understanding of the message of salvation (which is connected with faith) led Marcion to the tragic and incorrect conclusion that the Old Testament, its laws and statutes had been superseded by the gospel. There is only one problem: the Bible in the New Testament never says that (often you have to consult the original languages to see the hidden truths and more correct understandings concerning this issue). Due to inadequate renderings in the English we often arrive at conclusions which were never intended by the original writers. The gospel, Marcion believed, was an "entirely new teaching brought to earth by Messiah". Marcion believed that the law and the prophets made no sort of preparation for the Gospel, and if some passages in Paul's correspondence suggested that they did, then those passages were reasoned by Marcion to be a kind of "judaizing" (reverting back to Hebraic customs and understandings) against whom Marcion believed Paul to have preached against in Galatians and other letters. Marcion made one tragic mistake, he read the New Testament in Greek without reverting back to the Hebrew for comparisons in doctrines and teachings. Such a grave mistake is responsible today for over 1500 denominations that make a laughing stock of Eph 4:5 which holds up "one faith" as the ideal. That one faith once delivered to the saints was and still is Messianic Judaism with Yeshua as its Messiah.

Sources teach us that Marcion appears to have remained in communion with the "proto-Catholic Church" of his day so long as he lived in Asia Minor. There is some reasons to think that he shared his radical thoughts with leading churchmen of the region, such as Polycarp of Smyrna (disciple of the Apostle John) and Papias of Hierapolis, but found them unresponsive.

Desiring a more positive response for his radical teachings, he ventured to talk with the churchman of Rome where he made a handsome donation of money to the church (he was a ship owner and was quite well off). His understanding of the gospel and its implications was so self-evidently right to his own way of thinking that he could not believe that it would fail to be equally self-evident to any other unprejudiced mind. But the Roman churchmen were disturbed by his doctrine that they not only rejected it but even returned the money he had presented to the church! That would be a miracle if done in today's churches!

Not only did Marcion regard Paul as the only faithful apostle of Christ (Messiah); he maintained that the original apostles had corrupted their Master's teaching with an admixture of legalism. Not only did he reject the Old Testament (the Jewish Bible Yeshua used); he distinguished the God of the Old Testament from the God of the New Testament. Now we have two Gods. This distinction of two deities, each with his independent existence speaks of the Gnostic influence on Marcion's thought. The God who created the material universe, the God of Israel, was (as Marcion held) different from the Father of whom Yeshua (Yeshua) spoke. The Father of Yeshua was the good and merciful God of whom none had ever heard of before until Yeshua came to reveal him. Along the lines of Gnostic teachings, the God who made the material world was an inferior deity (inferior in status and morality) to the supreme God who was pure spirit. Now we have a "good God" and an "evil God". The Gnostic depreciation of the material order finds an echo in Marcion's refusal to believe that Yeshua entered human life by being "born of a woman" (Ga. 4:4). The result of such teaching is that one will look forward to the day that he can escape from the evil body and become pure spirit. Does this sound familiar (Rom. 8:24). Paul bought into this dualism in a big way.

We are fortunate that at this time the church of Rome was yet enlightened and unprejudiced, but that would change later. Still the church of Rome found Marcion's teachings unacceptable. So Marcion, despairing of being able to convince the catholic church anywhere of the truth of his message, withdrew from the catholic fellowship and established a church of his own. The church survived for several generations which is surprising since its membership was maintained solely through conversion. It could not keep its membership up by incorporating the children of existing members, for celibacy was obligatory on all its membership. At the same time, Marcion was a faithful enough Paulinist to allow no discrimination against female members of his church in matters of privilege or function because he agreed with Paul that there was "neither male nor female" (Gal. 3:28).

Marcion provided his followers with an edition of the holy Scriptures. Marcion's new scriptures included no part of the Old Testament (Jewish Bible) and were written in Greek. Please keep in mind that he did not call his collection "The New Testament". It would be another 100 years or so before anyone would come up with that idea. Yeshua had been gone over 110 years before Marcion decided to create his new scriptures. Just think about it! Christianity did not have a need for a "New Testament". From what did the church teach during that 110 years since they did not have a New Testament? They used the same Bible that Yeshua used; the Jewish Bible (Old Testament).

A NUMBER OF QUESTIONS SHOULD COME TO YOU MIND AT THIS TIME

- Why didn't the "church" see a need for a New Testament?
- Why didn't Yeshua tell his disciples to copy his words & produce a replacement Bible?

- Why didn't Yeshua apostles record Yeshua's words or their own?
- Why were the writings of the Jewish Bible used as the only Scripture?
- Why was Marcion so anti-Semitic?

Marcion created "new scriptures" for his followers. He referred to them by the titles he gave to the two component parts: The Gospel and The Apostle. To his own Bible he would later add a series of "Antitheses," which set out the incompatibility of law and gospel, of the Creator-Judge of the Old Testament and the merciful Father of the New Testament (who had nothing to do with either creation or judgment).

Answer for yourself: Do you not find it startling that the teaching that the Old Testament was replaced by a New Testament began with a man who also saw two Gods?

Stop and consider what I just said for a minute (Selah). Because Marcion saw "two Gods" he had need for only the revelation of the "good God" or the New Testament which served as a "replacement testament" to replace the Old Testament of the "Creator-Judge" God of the Old Testament.

Answer for yourself: Now, let me ask you do you believe in two Gods? How about three? Get the point. The first idea of replacing "law" with "grace" came from one who denied the cardinal teaching of the Bible: "Hear O Israel, the Lord is God, the Lord is ONE!" So when people tell you that they are "not under the Law" I wonder if they do not believe in Jehovah, the God of the Old Testament, who gave the Law in the first place, let alone who would later send His Messiah in the New Testament.

The holy Scriptures to which the "Antitheses" served as an introduction inevitably included no part of the Old Testament; they consisted only of an edition of the Greek New Testament. Marcion did not call it a "New Testament", so far as we know, he may not have given any one title to the edition as a whole. He referred to it. as stated above, by the titles which he gave to its two component parts: Gospel and Apostle. Our main source for information about Marcion's Bible is Tertullian's treatise Against Marcion, written over a half century later (190 A.D.), when Marcion had been dead for some decades. Tertullian's response to Marcion is often hostile yet his factual data appears to be reliable.

Marcion's Gospel was an edition of the Gospel of Luke. The selection of Luke is in speculation even today, but more than likely owing to his affinity to Paul, he choose the Gospel of Luke because he was associated with Paul. Marcion nowhere mentioned Luke's name in connection with it; it was presented simply as the gospel of Christ. Its text was purged of those elements which were inconsistent with Marcion's understanding of the truth and which therefore, on his principles, must have been "added" by judaizing scribes. For example the birth of John the Baptist was omitted because it implied a connection between Yeshua and something that went before Him (remember to create a new religion one must have Yeshua not rely on anything in the past, but rather teach everything as if it were new and different). Yeshua brought nothing new with his ministry. He did not create a new religion. He did not do away with Judaism and give Christianity as its replacement. Marcion, as well as numerous others, tried valiantly to cover over the fact that Yeshua brought us nothing new, only fulfilled what was necessary. If we are forced to see Yeshua quoting other teachers that were his forefathers then it is easy to see that he did not come to bring a new religion as we have incorrectly supposed.

In Marcion's gospel we find no reference the birth of Yeshua whom many feel was written later and added subsequent to original New Testament of Marcion. According to Marcion, Yeshua entered the world not by virgin birth but by a descent as supernatural as was his later ascension. Now pay attention. The material and doctrines that will be very important to the Roman Catholic Church as they will create a new religion later are not to be found among Marcion's Bible or his Gospel of Christ. This means that either the Roman Catholic Church added the accounts or Marcion deleted them from previously existing writings. The problem with the "deletions" is that many of them would have benefited Marcion and his theological positions and that being so it is very hard to understand why Marcion would omit such passages...such as Rom. 9:10-11.....these are "key" passages that Marcion would have used in his debate with the Jews if such passages would have existed. Not only "passages" were omitted but whole chapters like Gal. 3 were not present in 150 with Marcion's first New Testament and the collection of Paul's writings.

Answer for yourself: What were some of the passages not found in Marcion's Gospel which would later show up in the Roman Catholic version?

- The birth of John the Baptist
- The birth of Yeshua
- The immersion of Yeshua
- Yeshua's genealogy of Luke 3:23-38
- The temptation narrative of Luke 4:1-13
- Yeshua preaching at Nazareth in Luke 4:16-30

Answer for yourself: It is possible that the text of Luke which Marcion used as the basis for his Gospel was not identical with the text that has come down to us? More than likely "yes". It may have been an earlier edition, lacking the first two chapters. Some consider it a "Proto-Luke". But even if the text which lay before Marcion did lack the first two chapters, it began at the latest with Luke 3:1, "In the fifteenth year of Tiberius Caesar," and those are the words with which Marcion's Gospel began. But the material which follows immediately was unacceptable to him. The account of John the Baptist's ministry and his baptism of Yeshua implies some continuity between Yeshua and the old order. So does the genealogy of Luke 3:23-38, tracing Yeshua's ancestry back to Adam through David & Abraham. Thus it must be excluded! The temptation narrative (Luke 4:1-13) represents Yeshua quoting from Deuteronomy three times, as though it had authority in his eyes. This, for Marcion, was impossible. Surely Yeshua came to begin a new thing; a new Religion! Surely, as Marcion would have us believe, Yeshua did no longer consider Deuteronomy as a necessary Scripture. Marcion was wrong! Equally impossible for Marcion, was the idea that Yeshua, preaching in the synagogue at Nazareth (Luke 4:16-30), should have claimed that his ministry was the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy. So, having begin his edition of the Gospel with Luke 3:1, Marcion went straight on to Luke 4:31 and continued: "Yeshua came down to Capernaum" as though he came down there and then from heaven, fully grown.

In place of "Thy Kingdom come" in his version of the Lord's Prayer (Luke 11:2), Marcion's Gospel had the interesting variation: "Let thy Holy Spirit come on us and cleanse us." He may have found this in the copy of Luke which served as the basis for his edition, or it may have been his own addition. If he added it himself, it is interesting that it would have found its way into the textual tradition of "orthodox" Christians for it is cited by the church father Gregory of Nyssa and Maqximus of Turin, and is the reading on one or two Greek manuscripts of the gospels.

The "old is good" (Luke 5:39) is omitted because it might be taken to imply approval of the Old Testament order and the religion of Yeshua. Possibly Yeshua did not come to replace Judaism with Christianity! Marcion could not entertain such an idea. The reference to Yeshua's mother and brothers could not be retained in Luke 8:19 (For Marcion Yeshua could not belong to any human family). It had to go. There are other peculiarities of Marcion's Gospel which can be explained with equal ease. It is simple; Marcion believed Yeshua was come to bring a replacement faith to Israel and anything that would show otherwise must be stricken from the record! Most Protestant and Catholic churches of today have been so influenced by Marcion that they ascribe to his basic premises! Such a shame.

Marcion's "The Apostle" was an edition of ten letters of Paul. The three Pastoral Epistles (1 & 2 Timothy, Titus) were not included because he used his own Gospel for the basis of this "edition" and it did not contain them. The Chester Beatty codex (P46) of Paul's letters also does not include the same books. Also in Marcion "Apostle" the two letters to the Corinthians are combined as well as the letters to Thessalonica.

MARCION HAD A PARTICULAR ORDER FOR THE ARRANGEMENT OF THE BOOKS IN HIS FIRST NEW TESTAMENT

Now pay attention. The Marcionite order of Paul's letters is given below:

1. Galatians
2. Corinthians
3. Romans
4. Thessalonians
5. Laodiceans (Ephesians)
6. Colossians
7. Philippians
8. Philemon

Notice the order of these letters in the Roman Catholic Church's Bible:

1. Romans
2. Corinthians
3. Galatians
4. Ephesians
5. Philippians
6. Colossians
7. Thessalonians
8. 1 & 2 Timothy (not in Marcion's Bible)
9. Titus (not in Marcion's Bible)
10. Philemon.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the book of Romans was placed first in the canon of the Roman Catholic Church? I wonder why? The Roman Church had to justify the shift in authority from Jerusalem to Rome and what better way to show it than let the book of Romans appear "first" as the first and trend-setting epistle in the New Testament. Also they added books. Again, I wonder why? Or, did Marcion omit these books? Who would benefit the most?

At the beginning of his Apostle Marcion placed the letter to the Galatians in first position. This was to dramatize the differences & opposites between Paul and the Jerusalem apostles. To Marcion the letter (Galatians) mounted a direct attack on the Jerusalem apostles, for it was at their instance (and rightly so), or at least by their agents, that attempts were being made to win Paul's Gentile coverts in Galatia over to a judaistic form of Christianity. Marcion considered this heresy. God did not! The remaining letters of Marcion's canon were arranged in descending order of length, the two letters of Corinthians being reckoned together as one composite letter and the two letter to the Thessalonians being treated in the same way.

Anything that appeared inconsistent with what he believed to be authentic Pauline teaching was regarded as corruption from an alien hand and was removed. The mention of Abraham as the prototype of all who are justified by faith (Gal. 3:6-9) could not be allowed to remain in his Canon because he could not all to exist any connection between law and the gospel as in Gal. 3:15-25. Thus it most likely was removed from Romans chapter 4.

Now for the most startling information concerning Marcion. His edition of Romans lacked Romans 1:19-2:1; 3:21-4:25; and all of Romans 9-11 except Romans 10:1-4 and 11:33-36, not counting everything after Romans 14:23. The idea of establishing the law through faith (Rom. 3:31), the application of the story of Abraham in chapter 4, the grappling with the mystery of Israel's unbelief in chapters 9-11 (with their concentration of proof-texts from the Old Testament), were all incompatible with Paul's gospel as Marcion understood it. As for chapter 15, its opening section includes a general endorsement of the Christian value of the Old Testament scriptures (vv4) and a string of quotations designed to show that the Gentile mission was foreseen and validated by Old Testament writers (vv 8-12), while its closing paragraph (vv 25-33) bears witness to a concern on Paul's part for the church of Jerusalem which Marcion must found incredible, given his understanding of the relation between Paul and that church.

I find it utterly amazing when I stop to realize that infamous passages concerning the Jews being "blinded" theologically was not written and added to the New Testament until after 150 A.D. and even then it was written by Gentiles no less:

Rom 11:7 7 What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded (KJV)

Rom 11:25 25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in. (KJV)

Answer for yourself: What other "key" passage that is the foundation for Gentile Christianity was not in the New Testament until after 150 A.D. and which can be shown to have been written by non-Jews and ascribed to Pauline authorship?

You better sit down for this for it is a land mine!

Rom 10:9-10 9 That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. 10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. (KJV)

Notice conspicuously absent is Rom. 10:9-10 which states that "if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Yeshua, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness: and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation".

Answer for yourself: Why would not Marcion have included such a "Pauline Dogma" since he was pro-Pauline himself? The answer is simple. The text in question was not given as inspired by the Holy Spirit to the Apostles and is not part of the original Gospel of Yeshua. It was written and added after Marcion and was not part of the Gospel or included in any Gospel writing as late as 140 years after Yeshua.

Answer for yourself: Did you hear what I said?

Answer for yourself: Don't you think it is about time you began to study to see what kind of religion you practice; the religion according to the teachings of Yeshua or according to the teachings of men? Salvation consists of both obedience to law (commandments) and grace; not just grace alone.

TWO DIFFERENT MESSAGES AND TWO DIFFERENT "GOSPELS" IN THE NEW TESTAMENT TODAY

Because of Marcion and men like him we have two competing Gospels today. To Marcion the "God who created all things" had nothing to do with the gospel; he was a different being from the God and Father of our Lord Yeshua Christ. In this we see Marcion's rejection of all the Old Testament (the Bible Yeshua used). To what extent Marcion's text differed from the one he had inherited and used for the basis of his gospel is not easily discerned. It would appear to have been copied substantially as before containing deletions of Jewish influence and authority, with very little actual additions by Marcion himself. Suffice to say he "dejudiazed" the Scriptures and destroyed the Hebrew roots of the early faith. What is problematic, as said before, is the absence in Marcion's Canon of many texts recognized as "Pauline" by toady's scholars, but which would most assuredly would have been included by Marcion if they had existed in his day (Rom. 10: 9-10). What does that say for our "quick altar prayers" by which we give false security to repentant sinners who "repeat after me" and who we never see again! The failure to include many passages we accept today as "Bible" by our churches can only mean one thing: they did not exist 140 years after Yeshua! Thus, many additions to the "inspired and infallible" Word of God would be done by Catholics who followed. Thus, they would counter Marcion with their "own Bible" to counteract his Bible. They would write their own authority (Catholic) into the Bible (rework Marcion's Bible) to replace the authority of Jerusalem with the authority of Rome. The authority of Jerusalem was written out of the New Testament and replaced with the authority of Rome. The Catholic Church replaced the Jewish Synagogue. The Pagan Holidays replaced the Lord's Holy Days. Sunday replaced the Sabbath. Tithing to an "organization" or a "building" replaced "righteous giving to the needy." The Temple tax to support the "organization" (Temple) was replaced by robbing the saints of God's provision to them as distributed in the "poor tithe". The Noachide Laws for Gentile acceptance into Israel was replaced with Church Dogma of Augustine and Constantine. Martin Luther would shortly follow. The Lord's Supper was replaced with "Sunday cups and crakcers". The Passover was replaced with Easter (fornication festival). Need I go on, because it does not stop here!

In Summary:

- Luke 1:1-2:52 Does not contain the introduction or the story of Yeshua's birth.
- Luke 5:39 Does not contain the phrase "The old is better".
- Luke 8:19 Makes no reference to Yeshua's mother and brothers.
- Luke 11:2 Adds "Let thy Holy Spirit come on us & cleans us".
- Luke 19:9 Does not contain the phrase "because he is the son of Abraham.
- Rom. 1:19-2:1 Does not contain the reasons for and the results of Gentile guilt and sin.
- Rom. 3:21-4:25 Does not contain section on righteousness and acceptance by God of both Jew and Gentile based on faith and obedience.
- Rom. 9-11 All omitted except for 10:1-4 where we see an unbalanced picture of Christ ending all law and 11:33-36. We have a distorted view of Jew & Gentile in God's purpose.
- Everything after Rom. 14:23 is omitted.
- Omission of foundational faith text of Rom. 10:9-10.

Marcion's Bible is of great significance to every modern Christian, because the power and authority of the many different Christian religions have been created from the words of the New Testament and not from the Old Testament, which was the authority for the followers of Christ for the first 200 years of the common era before the rise of Roman Orthodoxy.

WHAT YOUR CHURCH & PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT...INTRODUCTION

In order to understand the falsity of much contained in the New Testament to which this web site will address, it is important right up front to become very familiar with the document which espouses beliefs which are totally alien to what was taught and understood by the earliest expression of the emerging Christian movement in the first century. Only after one has come to terms with the document one accepts for his faith and practice, the New Testament, can then one objectively deal with the questions and problems which follow its intensive study. Either the document is from God or not. If from God then it must be believed in all parts; but if it can be shown to not be from God but from the traditions of mankind which are mixed among Divine Revelation, then objectively questioning where the New Testament departs from the Hebrew Scriptures and the faith expressed by the New Testament Christ and Mind of Christ in Judaism is not only prudent but necessary.

Along with this comes the problem of the "inspiration" or lack of it as associated with the The New Testament writings. The New Testament and the inspired Apostles are silent on the subject and left the matter to serious doubts and disputations for many centuries: "There are no indications in the New Testament of a definite new Canon bequeathed by the Apostles to the Church, or of a strong self-witness to Divine inspiration," admits the Catholic Encyclopedia (Vol. iii, 274); that is, there is nothing in the 27 booklets which would lead to the suspicion of their "inspiration" or truth. There was then no Church for them to bequeath to, nor was the Canon settled, as we shall see.

You better be seated for this one. The Catholic Encyclopedia continues: "It was not until about the middle of the second century that these books (the books comprising our New Testament) were really written and that under the rubric of Scripture the New Testament writings were assimilated to the Old. . . . (lb. p. 275.)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the Catholic encyclopedia just admitted that the bulk of the New Testament writings were written not by the apostles and intimate followers of a supposed historical Jesus but were later written long after their deaths in in the "middle of the second century"? WOW! Of course this means "Gentile" authorship and this goes a long way to explain all the inaccuracies, misquotation of Hebrew Scriptures, purposeful mistranslation of the Hebrew Scriptures and Messianic Prophecy concerning Judaism and the Hebrew Scriptures as we find finally recorded in the New Testament. These Gentile writers were simply not conversant upon Biblical Judaism because they were not Jews, and as study of the second century reveals, filled with antisemitism that clearly comes out in many of the New Testament second century texts.

As if that is not enough, get a load of this. Further, the dubious and disputed status of the sacred writings through centuries, and the ultimate settlement of the controversies by a numerical majority of the Council of Trent, in 1546 (after the Reformation had forced the issue), is thus admitted:

"The idea of a complete and clear-cut canon of the New Testament existing from the beginning, that is, from Apostolic times, has no foundation in history. The canon of the New Testament, like that of the Old, is the result of a development, of a process at once stimulated by disputes with doubters, both within and without the Church, and retarded by certain obscurities and natural hesitations, and which did not reach its final term until the dogmatic definition of the Tridentine Council. . . . And this want of an organized distribution, secondarily to the absence of an early fixation of the Canon, left room for variation and doubts which lasted far into the centuries." (Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. iii, 274.) I just fell in love with the Catholic Encyclopedia in Seminary for it tells it like it is. I was constantly amazed how the earliest history of the Church and its deceptions were recorded over and over again in the Catholic Encyclopedia. In the Catholic Encyclopedia I found a frank history of the church and the perversion of Judaism over and over again. In it constantly is a truth that is long forgotten by the over-rehearsement of a church tradition that is anything but accurate and truthful. The self-incrimination of the Catholic Encyclopedia as to the untrustworthiness of these supposed inspired and infallible "literal" and "historical" religious documents given the whole of mankind is startling to say the least.

The modus operandi of the Holy Council in ultimately "canonizing" Jerome's old Vulgate Version, and its motive for doing so, are thus exposed by the keen pen of the author of The Rise and Fall:

"When the Council of Trent resolved to pronounce sentence on the Canon of Scripture, the opinion which prevailed, after some debate, was to declare the Latin Vulgate authentic and almost infallible; and this sentence, which was guarded by formidable anathemas, secured all the books of the Old and New Testament which composed that ancient version. . . . When the merit of that version was discussed, the majority of the theologians urged, with confidence and success, that it was absolutely necessary to receive the Vulgate as authentic and inspired, unless they wished to abandon the victory to the Lutherans, and the honors of the Church to the Grammarians." (Gibbon, A Vindication, v, 2; Istoria del Consiglio Tridentino, L. ii, p. 147.)

A number of these books were bitterly disputed and their authenticity and inspiration denied by the leading Reformers, Luther, Grotius, Calvin, etc., and excluded from their official lists, until finally the Reformed Church followed the example of the Church hopeless of reform and swallowed the canon whole, as we have it today, minus, of course, the Tobit, Judith, and like inspired buffooneries of the True Bible.

Such books and the vicissitudes of their authenticity are thus described: "Like the Old Testament, the New has its deutero-canonical [i.e. doubted] books and portions of books, their canonicity having formerly been a subject of some controversy in the Church. These are, for entire books: the Epistle to the Hebrews, that of James, the Second and Third of John, Jude, and Apocalypse; giving seven in all as the number of the N. T. contested books". The formerly disputed passages are three:

- the closing section of St. Mark's Gospel, 16:9-20, about the apparitions of Christ after the resurrection;
- the verses in Luke about the bloody sweat of Jesus, 22:43, 44;
- the Pericope Adulterae, or narrative of the woman taken in adultery, St. John, 7:53 to 8:11

Since the Council of Trent it is not permitted for a Catholic to question the inspiration of these passages. (Catholic Encyclopedia, iii, 274.) Besides the forgery of the above and other books as a whole, we shall see many other instances of "interpolated" or forged passages in the Christian books.

So, when we read things like the following we have to take them with a large grain of salt given the testimony of the later Church Fathers as to how this New Testament actually came about. Information like the above makes such passages like those below laughable.

"The Gospel has come down to us," says Bishop Irenaeus (about 185 A.D.), "which the apostles did at one time proclaim in public, and, at a later period, by the will of God, handed down to us in the Scriptures, to be the ground and pillar of our faith. . . . For, after our Lord rose from the dead [the apostles] departed to the ends of the earth, preaching the glad tidings of the good things sent from God to us, who indeed do equally and individually possess the Gospel of God." (Iren., Adv. Haer, Bk. III, ch. i; ANF. i, 414.)

All of the New Testament must be suspect and open to intense scrutiny if we ever hope to find and separate Divine Truth within if from man-made religious dogmas, many of which are diametrically opposed to religious beliefs held for thousands and thousands of years by both the ancient Spiritual Wisdom Religions as well as Biblical Judaism. Understand much of what comes out in the New Testament could and never would have been believed by a Jewish Messiah or a typical righteous Zaddik like the Jesus of the New Testament. Given this then I used to ask myself over and over why I should continue to believe what I was proving to myself is a replacement religion based upon the distortion of both Biblical Judaism as well as "the Christ" given us by Rome in the middle centuries.

You need to set down for this because this will take your breath away. There are really two New Testaments. The First New Testament was written and given the world by Marcion who is a Christian Gnostic and one of the leaders of the earliest Gnostic Christians. You might say it is a collection of the Gnostic Paul's writings that focused on the evolution of the incarnated and indwelling Krst/Christ within every child of God. Marcion gave the world this First New Testament. Rome, not wishing to follow the ancient Wisdom Religions and the ancient understanding of "the Krst/Christ" gave the world their retort to Marcion's First New Testament. I call it the Second New Testament and it is the one we have today. This Second New Testament, the reworking of Marcion's First New Testament, was given to us by Bishop Irenaeus. Amazingly, both Bishop Irenaeus and Bishop Papias have both professed that the Jesus of the New Testament lived to old age (even at late as 98-117 A.D.), flatly denying thus as "heresy" the Gospel stories as to his crucifixion at about thirty years of age (Wheless, Forgery In Christianity, p. 173). The implication of this is staggering to Christian dogma and the salvation message attached to the crucifixion of Jesus as the Christ. But there it lies in dust in books never read today. It is these mean, Irenaeus, Papias, and others who, in spite of their beliefs about this Jesus, would sanction and give the world that taught otherwise. In any event, the Apostles, according to the record of such men like Irenaeus, scattered to the ends of the earth, preaching, orally, before they wrote anything at all. It is all so simple until you begin to study this book seriously then the can of worms flies open and hits the fan the the nice and neat Bible stories explode before your eyes as something less than trustworthy. The bottom line after ten years of such study is that one who seeks God is much better served by beginning his search for God through Biblical Judaism than the Christian religion with their corrupted religious documents which by the light of serious study can be shown to be "Swiss cheese theology" and full of holes throughout.

Traditional Christianity and many of our Bibles attest that the New Testament was not written all at once, but the books that compose it appeared one after another in the space of fifty years, i.e., in the second half of the first century. That sounds so nice and neat and reassuring that we have the earliest truth about God and His "Krst/Christ" but when we see that those responsible for this New Testament, in their private papers, held opposite views regarding this New Testament and its true origins, then it appears the whole agenda of preparing this New Testament was to deceive the illiterate masses and subjugate them to a Roman salvation message linked with their redefinition of "the Christ" which was only available to mankind through the doors of the Roman Church. Oh, how convenient to control the world through ignorance and fear of damnation. Surely less legions and wars would be needed to conquer the minds of people and subjugate them to the whims of the Roman State.

So we grow up believing as we are told. We are told to believe, as Irenaeus maintains, that the Gospels have come down to us (referring to Irenaeus in 185 A.D.) which the apostles did at one time proclaim in public, and, at a later period, by the will of God, handed down to us in the Scriptures. But other Church Fathers testify otherwise. That this last clause of Irenaeus is untrue will be fully and readily demonstrated throughout the websites of Bet Emet Ministries. This statement, too, contradicts Bishops Papias and Irenaeus, who are, positively, the only two of the many second century Church Fathers who up to their times at all mention or reference any written Gospels or their supposed authors, as we have seen and shall more particularly notice. Amazingly, the earliest quote from any Gospel which is supposedly written "early" according to Irenaeus cannot be found in existence until after 185 A.D. Rather than early, it appears that they were written "late" at best and surely not by the supposed Apostles of a messianic movement in Judaism. I would often wonder as my studies advanced daily these many years ago what other things I had been taught to believe in my Christian tradition that were untrustworthy and not truthful. God knew, it was up to me to discern the truth from error in my relationship with God.

And Catholic Encyclopedia says, as is true, of the earliest existing manuscripts of any New Testament books: "We have New Testament MSS. written not much more than 300 years after the composition of the books"; and it admits (though with much diminution of truth, as we shall see: "And in them we find numerous differences, though but few of them are important." (Catholic Encyclopedia xiv, 526.) I would find that these "important" difference resided mainly regarding Messianic Prophecy which could be shown to be purposeful mistranslations, purposeful misquotations, verses taken out of context and pure invention of Hebrew Scriptures out of thin air in order to make it appear as if the New Testament Jesus was the "fulfiller" of Messianic Prophecy and the Jewish Messiah. Judaism has for two thousand years pointed out these Scriptural irregularities in the New Testament and staunchly denied that the New Testament Jesus is the Jewish Messiah. I would find out in my studies that it is "all about the texts" and "who has the best and most reliable texts". As a retired ordained Pastor it saddens me to say that as a Christian that I don't have these "best" and "most reliable" texts and Scriptures in my Bible. In fact, when these texts of Judaism and Christianity are compared, line upon line, precept upon precept, the Christian Bible is a forgery when compared to the Hebrew Scriptures. That means many dogmas and beliefs attached to the central character of the New Testament, Jesus, are less than truthful; in fact they are outright deceptions

In this Catholic Encyclopedia at another place, and speaking much more nearly the truth, contradicts itself, saying: "The existence of numerous and, at times, considerable differences between the four canonical Gospels is a fact which has long been noticed and which all scholars readily admit. . . . Those evangelical records (SS. Matthew, Mark, Luke) whose mutual resemblances are obvious and striking, and . . . the narrative (that of St. John) whose relation with the other three is that of dissimilarity rather than that of likeness." (Catholic Encyclopedia vi, 658.)

After ten years of daily textual study the so-called "canonical" books of the New Testament are a mess of contradictions and confusions of texts when compared to the Hebrew Scriptures from which they are taken, to the present estimate of 150,000 and more "variant readings," as is well known and admitted by honest scholars.

Thus Catholic Encyclopedia:

"It is easy to understand how numerous would be the readings of a text transcribed as often as the Bible, and, as only one reading can represent the original, it follows that all the others are necessarily faulty.

Answer for yourself: But where do we find the most accurate Scriptures that we can trust? Do we look to Biblical Judaism or to Christianity? Do we look to the Hebrew Tanakh or the Roman Bible? Without a doubt, having done these studies and proved to myself beyond any doubt which are truthful, one should look to the Hebrew Tanakh for all Messianic Prophecy as well as Divine Dogmas and not to Rome and its later sister, Protestantism, which is infected with the same corrupt texts in the same Bible.

The English critic John Mill estimated the variants of the New Testament at 30,000, and since the discovery of so many MSS. unknown to Mill, this number has greatly increased." (Catholic Encyclopedia iv, 498.)

Answer for yourself: Who, then, is "inspired" to distinguish true from false readings, and thus to know what God's Christ really said, or what some copyist's error or priest's forgery make them say or do, falsely? Well one thing is for certain it surely is not the average Christian who has never studied these issues or read any scholarly books upon the subject. But fortunately not all the followers of this Jesus and the New Testament Christ are ignorant of such problems with the New Testament.

Of the chaos and juggling of sacred texts in the Great Dioceses of Africa, the Catholic Encyclopedia again says: "There never existed in early Christian Africa an official Latin text known to all the Churches, or used by the faithful to the exclusion of all others. The African bishops willingly allowed corrections to be made in a copy of the Sacred Scriptures, or even a reference, when necessary, to the Greek text. With some exceptions, it was the Septuagint text that prevailed, for the Old Testament until the fourth century. In the case of the New, the MSS. were of the Western type. On this basis there arose a variety of translations and interpretations. . . . Apart from the discrepancies to be found in two quotations from the same text in the works of two different authors, and sometimes of the same author, we now know that of several books of Scripture there were versions wholly independent of each other." (Catholic Encyclopedia i, 193.)

Bishop Victor of Tunnunum, who died about 569 A. D. and whose work, says Catholic Encyclopedia, "is of great historical value," says that in the fifth century, "In the consulship of Messala, at the command of the Emperor Anastasius, the Holy Gospels, as written Idiotis Evangelistis, are corrected and amended." (Victor of T., Chronica, p. 89-90; cited by Dr. Mills, Prolegom. to R. V., p. 98.)

Answer for yourself: What does all of this mean to me...the average Christian?

This would indicate some very substantial tinkering with Holy Writ; which process was a continuing one, for, says Catholic Encyclopedia, "Under Sixtus V (1585-90) and Clement VIII (1592-1605) the Latin Vulgate after years of revision attained its present shape." (Catholic Encyclopedia, xii, 769.) And the Vulgate, which was fiercely denounced as fearfully corrupt, was only given sanction of divinity by the Council of Trent in 1546, under the Curse of God against any who questioned it. Though this amendatory tinkering of their two Holinesses was after the Council of Trent had put the final Seal of the Holy Ghost on the Vulgate in 1546!

Let us not forget that as Protestants we have come from such people and their religious persuasions, and that being fact, are faced with the stark realization that we have inherited their religious documents and their falsifications as well.

Answer for yourself: What is the truth about the New Testament that has come down to us today from the Catholic Church...is it truly the Word of God or has it replaced the Word of God and I not know it? Has not only the texts been forged when compared to the Hebrew Scriptures, but has the ancient Divine Spiritual Wisdom been so mischaracterized that "the Krst/Christ" has been distorted almost beyond belief? Are these documents, corrupted as they are, given today a false and improper hermeneutic and manner of interpretation? Are these documents to be understood "literally" or "historically" or are they to be understood "allegorically", "metaphorically", and "metaphysically" instead as did the ancients who held sacred the same "Krst/Christ" story under different names for thousands and thousands of years before the rise of Rome and its radical reinterpretation of almost everything?

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #1

For everyone reading this series of articles please understand that I grew up as a fundamentalist Christian. Not only that but I attended Southwestern Theological Seminary in Ft. Worth, Texas, and received a M.Div. degree. Upon completion of my degree I was quickly ordained and began in earnest my Pastoral Career. While in Seminary I encountered what seemed to me a hodgepodge of religious beliefs that seemed more disjointed than in unity. Things just did not add up and contradictions abounded. I constantly wondered how a perfect God allowed or fostered such confusion of religious beliefs; much of which seemed to consistently disagree and contradict what Israel had previously been taught by God and I could not seem to find peace about all this especially in light of the constant reiteration in the Jewish Scriptures that Israel was to be "the" light for all the world concerning the "truth" about YHVH. Prior to Seminary I read a book called Understanding the Difficult Words of Jesus and this book showed me that behind passages which I had heard preached my whole life were Hebraic meanings that I have never heard. Realizing that Jesus is a Jew I quickly saw that unless I understood the passages as Jesus the Jew understood them that I did not have the actual meaning of the passage that God intended I know and understand. I had to find out the Jewish meaning of my faith. All was well until I began to further my studies in related religious studies concerning the above issues. Over the next few years I had my legs cut out from under me as I studied and encountered spiritual truths and facts that often contradicted what I had been led to believe by both the New Testament as well as other religious authority figures. I was shocked to find that what I had been told since a child was not true in many instance; I quickly realized that much of what I had "accepted by faith" was without substance and that many things taught me by my Pastor as a child and even at conservative Baptist Seminary was in error. Understand I was fortunate enough to know some professors well enough in Seminary who confided in me that "all is not as it appears" but they had to hold the "party line" in order to insure that they continued their employment and received their pay checks. But even then they were preparing me for what I would discover on my own in my personal studies into the difficult areas of Christianity and the New Testament which they would not touch in class due to the explosive nature of the subject.

It is a tragic and sad fact that most church-going Christians open their New Testaments and read without ever once considering that they are absorbing the words of a translation from the pens of biased, often politically motivated monks and ministers as transmitted through countless centuries of numerous councils and corrupt church fathers. They are unaware that the New Testament they believe to be "inspired", "infallible", and "inerrant" and which they hold so near and dear contains hundreds of many shocking contradictions and errors when compared line upon line and precept upon precept with the Jewish Scriptures that Jesus used. Understand that a superficial reading of the text once a week will illuminate this sad fact to no one. Only when one undertakes a serious investigation and study of the New Testament will one be able to see the truth about the document he relies upon for his faith and practice in this life. When one sees this for himself one is overwhelmed with the deceptions uncovered. But few ever encounter such truths and facts concerning the New Testament which sheds the light of truth upon it's many problems. When one undertakes such a comparative study where the Jewish texts are compared with the Christian texts one quickly will see that many dogmas and beliefs in one's Christian religious belief system are in error and often this results in a conduct or behavior is violates what God commanded in the Jewish Scriptures; such erroneous conduct based upon false beliefs is "sin" according to the Jewish Bible and these false beliefs and conducts pass unnoticed by the vast majority of Gentile Christianity....unnoticed that is until we die and meet God face to face and receive our Eternal Condemnation. God calls much of this "sin" and we are not aware because we never "question" what is written in our Christian translations of the Jewish texts as to if God really endorses such. Sadly we never knew there were problems; let me assure you that there are and many of them are critical problems in doctrines and dogmas that just might affect one's eternal salvation such as hidden idolatry that passes for orthodoxy in Gentile Christianity. I am here to tell you that I have questioned such "dogmas" and "doctrines" only because in my studies I ran upon conclusive contradictory evidence and factual data which brought much of the New Testament into question regarding it's validity for faith and practice. Understand both you and I originally took everything in the New Testament "by faith" as being true. It is way past time we investigate whether our faith be sound or if we have built our relationship with God on sinking sand. Again let us understand our faiths as New Testament Christians and followers of Jesus is built off the Christian document; the New Testament. Let me quote a New Testament passage which speaks the truth on the matter:

2 Cor 13:5 Examine yourselves, whether ye be in "the" faith; prove your own selves.

This requires we examine the Christian documents as to their truth as it is responsible for Christians beliefs, dogmas, and doctrines!

In this passage you are told to "examine" yourselves….from the Greek:

3985 peirazo (pi-rad'-zo); from 3984; to test (objectively), i.e. endeavor, scrutinize, entice, discipline: assay, examine, go about, prove, try.

The root word is: 3984 peira (pi'-rah); from the base of 4008 (through the idea of piercing); a test, i.e. attempt, experience: assaying, trial.

Understand this is what this series of articles will accomplish. I will put the New Testament on trial as the evidence will be presented to determine if what you have accepted "by faith" is warranted or if you possibly need to reconsider what "you believe" to be true.

Also we are told to "prove" to yourself that you be in "the" faith of the early church…from the Greek;

1381 dokimazo-

- 1) to test, to examine, to prove, to scrutinize (to see whether a thing is genuine or not), as metals
- 2) to recognize as genuine after examination, to approve, to deem worthy

Understand that just because something is written in the New Testament does not mean it is true. This is a sad fact you will quickly come to realize. This is true even though the information is openly taught in major religious colleges in comparative religion classes and is readily available in most public libraries. But Christians believe that they have no need to look into such things since they are falsely reassured by their clergy that they have "the truth". I wish it were true, but my research over the years has proved such a statement totally false. In reality, it is the Jews who have the truth, have always had the truth, and will be the nation to lead the world in repentance at the advent of Messiah. The church-going public labors under deception because any damaging information about the bible has been purposely and systematically hidden by a clergy that has no illusions as to how their flocks would react if they knew the truth about "God's infallible word. "

As a prime example of this deception fundamentalist Christian ministers are notorious for attacking secular and so-called liberal Christian scholarship, which openly and bluntly publishes the truth about the state of the New Testament. Let me give you an example of such attacks by fundamentalist Christians upon the truth. In A Creationist's Defense of the King James Bible, which was written by the noted fundamentalist Christian educator, Henry M. Morris, he states:

"In any case, one of the serious problems with almost all modern English translations is that they rely heavily on Hebrew and Greek manuscripts of the Bible developed by liberals, rationalists, and evolutionists, none of whom believed in the verbal inspiration of the Bible."

The question I guess I hear the most from my readers is this: "Are we to believe that God would entrust the preservation of His eternal Word to men such as these?" This is nothing more than an assumption; one which fails to take into consideration the free-will of men to defy God and His commandments. As you study with us you will see beyond a shadow of doubt that God does oversee His Word to preserve it; however, it is not the New Testament nor the Christian Old Testament which has been preserved but the Jewish Masoretic Text which is the backbone of the Jewish Bible today (JPS Translation and the Stone Edition Tanakh). For over thousands of years only minute differences appear in these Jewish texts where as the New Testament and the Christian's Old Testament has hundreds of thousands of conflicts and disagreements...many, many of which are in crucial and particular places that affect not only atonement, forgiveness, but Messianic beliefs as well. Simply said the Christian's Bible has been "fixed" long ago and few today know of this tragic adulteration of God's Holy Word! One thing is for certain: the Jewish Scholars and the Jewish people know of it and that is why the vast majority of them cannot accept many things taught about the Messiah in the Christian documents.

IS THERE A PERFECT BIBLE?

What you must understand after reading such a quote above is that Dr. Morris' idea of the perfect bible translation was the King James Version (El Cajon, Ca.: Institute For Creation Research, 1996, p. 5). I know, many of you are thinking "what is so wrong with that"? When you come to the knowledge of the hundreds of corruptions and outright purposeful mistranslations and misquotations in the King James Bible (both OT and NT) which does severe injustice to the Jewish Hebrew Scriptures, you will not longer ask such a question. As you read this series of informative articles you will see that one of the most severe violations of intellectual integrity by the founders of Christianity is shown by their gross distortions of the Old Testament for purposes of indoctrination. In their never-ending quest for religious legitimacy and status, the writers of the New Testament have not hesitated to twist, distort, pervert, and concoct Old Testament verses as expediency dictated. Here the true colors of the creators of Christianity come through in all their radiant splendor. Examples of their dishonest display of propagandistic propensities are abundantly evident to anyone with a reasonably critical eye. You need to know that although it is not my purpose in this series of article to expose individual examples of such errors we at Bet Emet have demonstrated hundreds of such errors in these textual fabrications and purposeful mistranslations for theological advantage in two of our other websites in order for you to see these examples for yourself:

http://returningtofaithofyeshua.freeservers.com &

http://paulproblem.faithweb.com

Upon your individual and persistent study you will come to see without a doubt an overall scheme of dishonesty by the writers of the New Testament and the translators of the Jewish Old Testament Scriptures.

Such deceptions and distortions by the writers of the New Testament and the Essene translators of the Jewish Palestinian Masoretic text fall into three broad categories: misquotations, nonquotes, and misinterpretations. A misquotation is defined as deliberately misquoting an Old Testament passage; a nonquote consists of quoting a non-existent Old Testament passage, and a misinterpretation consists of correctly quoting an Old Testament passage while distorting the meaning intended. In these series of article I plan on dealing primarily with the New Testament and since doing so I plan on showing you that the crafters and writers of the New Testament are guilty on all the counts in hundred of places and only a reasonably critical eye and knowledge of true Jewish Masoretic text, called unfortunately today the "Old" Testament Scripture, is necessary to spot such perversions in the New Testament. If one is interested in individual examples of such New Testament distortions of the Old Testament and the Jewish Scriptures one needs only to examine not only this webpage but the documentation on this website as well as they contain evidence to prove our point.

But you must see it for yourself. This is the purpose of not only this series of articles but Bet Emet Ministries; to reveal the truth for New Testament believers by exposing the unsoundness of such a document in hopes one will repent of such false beliefs once he sees the truth for himself. Israel is the light of the world and God did not make a mistake in commissioning them to be so and it is high time we as Gentile believers learn our place in the economy of God. We must always remember that with every lie exposed and repented of one takes a closer step toward the God of Truth.

Answer for yourself: When one come to the truth behind the New Testament and sees for himself that God never said or gave mankind such dogmas and doctrines as contained in the New Testament, then why follow them?

Let us see what other fundamentalist Christians have to say on the matter. In an article entitled Modern Bible Versions Are Dangerous-Watch Out For Them!, the directors of the Fundamental Evangelistic Association of Los Osos, California has this to say about so-called liberal Christian scholarship:

"We must also be aware that the Bible is under attack. Satan, who succeeded in selling the first 'reviled' edition of God's Word to Eve in the Garden of Eden, has surely been busy in this 20th century along the same lines.... It was not until the publication of the Revised Standard Version in 1946 and 1952 that many Fundamentalists became aware of how effectively a new Bible version or translation could be used as a tool of Satan"* (Modern Bible Versions Are Dangerous-Watch Out For Them! Fundamental Evangelistic Association, Los Osos, California, pp. 1,6).

Having Pastored for years I noticed that many fundamentalist ministers spend almost as much time denouncing so-called liberal scholarship as they do in preaching from "God's infallible word." Their time would be better served looking into what the Liberal Christian scholars have to say. I did. I started out to prove them wrong for after all the New Testament "says this" and "says that". But when I undertook such a task in defense of the New Testament I was quickly presented with evidence and facts which exposed my New Testament as a fraud in many but not all places! Read the last sentence again. I said many but not "all" places. God desires we have faith in truth and not fables or anti-Semitic lies. Having seen the evidence then repentance in many of my religious beliefs was the only course for me to take. Such condemnation by fundamentalist Christians who have not evaluated the evidence for themselves is a tactic which is sadly quite successful in warning Christians away from any damaging information, which in turn ensures the continued financial profitability of the Christian religion. Understand the basis for much repudiation of "factual truths" by the fundamentalist branch of Christianity. If they were to stand before their flocks and tell them that they were wrong and that their New Testament is flawed in hundreds of places, then they would lose their following and their financial backing. They would have to get a real job and that is beneath most who have lived off the ignorance of their flocks. Perhaps in fairness it should be said that the blame for such deception cannot be laid fully at the feet of the present-day clergy, because, as we shall now see, many of these men simply do not know these truths for themselves due to their lack of intense study and others are simply carrying on a long Christian tradition which they were never taught to question. Only by the grace of God did I run across materials in my years of study which challenged my Christian beliefs, and taking such challenges I responded to prove myself vindicated in my beliefs. I was overwhelmed at times at the evidence I uncovered which proved my "error laden" New Testament for what it really was.....a combination and mixture of anti-semitic religious lies carried over from pagan mystery religions and gnosticism along with small amounts of Jewish truth.

Let us continue our study in the next article in this series.

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #2

In what I am about to say now I do not intend to offend anyone. Please understand that. But over the years of my Pastorate I was amazed at the lack of Biblical knowledge by those who called themselves Christians. It seemed to me that rarely I would meet a person who had a workable knowledge of the New Testament let alone the Old Testament which is another story entirely. But they are not totally to blame because the church has centered on preaching instead of teaching since the early fourth century. This is why Biblical ignorance is rampant in the Christian Church in America today. If one can quote 10 Scriptures then he considers himself knowledgeable about the Bible. Thus the flock is led around by blind Pastors who themselves are more interested in building bigger ministries than equipping their people to know the truths about their faith. Such truth is dangerous as it liberates mankind from the selfish ambitions of hirelings. If the Christian body of believers knew the truth about their faith then there would be a tumult in Christendom today which would rival the "big bang" of creation.

Answer for yourself: So what is the history of the document Christians call their New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Can the New Testament stand up to critical examination to prove its infallibility, inerrancy, and inspiration?

Answer for yourself: Have you as a New Testament believer ever seriously examined the New Testament to prove to yourself that it is inspired, infallible, and inerrant, and worthy of your commitment to follow its religious tenants?

Answer for yourself: And upon such examination of the New Testament if it be found to be a creation of anti-Semitic dogmas of Rome taken from centuries of syncretistic pagan religious mixture will you repent of such heathen beliefs and return to the faith of the real Yeshua which is not Gentile Christianity, but Biblical Judaism?

These are tough questions only you can answer. But if you ever hope to answer them then you must have the truth about the New Testament. Let us begin our serious inquiry into the infallibility of the New Testament by researching together the History of the New Testament.

THE HISTORY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

After three centuries of obscurity and serious internal conflict, in the fourth century AD a second rate religious cult emerged virtually overnight as the supreme faith of the Roman Empire. This occurred when Emperor Constantine the Great was supposedly converted to Christianity and at once became the benefactor of the church. With this unexpected turn of events, and with the enthusiastic backing of the "first Christian emperor," the surprised Christian Church fathers wasted little time in cementing their new-found authority throughout the empire. Without hesitation they began to centralize all Christian activities through the office of the Bishop of Rome, while at the same time seeking to convert the emperor's subjects to the faith of Christ.

At first the conversion of the pagan masses was undertaken by some inventive methods. One was by Constantine himself offering a bribe (twenty gold coins and a new set of clothes to every new Christian convert), which, needless to say, was initially successful but didn't have a lasting effects (Walker, The Woman's Encyclopedia of Myths and Secrets, p. 174). The better method proved to be the Christian Church's absorption of pagan doctrines, Gods, Goddess and customs into their ever-expanding catalogue of theology and tradition. Please understand it is these Godless customs and doctrines which are expounded from the pulpits of American Christianity today. Sadly, for the most part, these congregations are totally unaware of the origins of such Christian dogma as taught by their Pastors because they have never personally studied the origins of such dogmas both preached and contained in the New Testament.

Into the church of the fourth century came the old Persian Mithraic mass, unaltered in many instances to this day. The church absorbed the ancient Vestal Virgins of pagan Rome, who were then called by the new title of nuns. The ancient pagan office of the hierarchy of the mysteries (from which we get the religious term "hierarchy") was transformed into the papacy. The ancient holy day of the sun-God, Sunday, or Dies Solis, was the replacement for the Jewish Sabbath. The pre-Christian legends of a human virgin giving birth to a halo-bedecked baby savior God on December 25, whose life was immediately sought by an evil king while three wise men from the east visited him as he lay in a manger, was given over to Jesus. The pre-Christian legends of a crucified savior-God, who died upon a cross for the sins of humanity in the spring only to be resurrected three days later from his tomb, became the legend of Easter. The pre-Christian pagan symbols of bread and wine, eaten by the faithful to represent the body and blood of the sacrificial savior-God, entered the church as the Eucharist. Into the church also came hundreds of new Christian saints, transformed from the Gods and Goddess—and demons—of the old pagan faiths.

In addition to the better known Christianized pagan Gods, like St. Nicholas and St. Valentine, here is a small sampling of the numerous Gods and Goddesses absorbed by the early Christian Church:

- ST. FEBRONIA, who was the original St. Valentine, was derived from the Goddess Juno Februata; her worship was shared with that of Cupid, the Roman God of erotic love, and included a festival of sexual orgies. The Goddess became the male St. Valentine and Cupid, whose symbols was a winged phallus (penis) was changed to a winged cherub; and the old day of February 14 was retained as the new St. Valentine's Day.
- ST. SOPHIA was the same as the Goddesses Ishtar and Isis; her Goddess daughters, Faith Hope and Charity became Christian Saints.
- ST. AGAPE was the first of the Goddess Aphrodite's sacred whores, as were St. Chione and St. Irene. ST. SEBASTIAN was the Christian version of the Gaulish savior-God Bacchus.
- ST. GEORGE was originally the pagan savior-God Green George, his day, now St. George's Day, was the day of pagan Rome's Feast of Pales, a fertility festival.
- ST. ALBAN was the famous English saint who was created from the title of a British Goddess named Albion. St. Alban was supposedly slain on Holmhurst Hill, where, coincidentally, there was a temple of the Goddess Albion.
- ST. DAVID, the patron saint of Wales, was originally the Welsh sea God DEWI, who was Christianized in the 11th century. The old God's symbol, the Red Serpent, became the Red Dragon of Wales.
- ST. AGATHA was a regional representation of Ishtar offering her breasts, which according to legend, were cut off; the severed breasts, being reinterpreted as bells by the church, is the reason that St. Agatha became the patron of bell founders.
- ST. DENIS was originally the God of Paris, being their version of the savior-God Dionysus.
- ST. CLARK was the Celtic Goddess Sinclair, changed into a Christian Saint.
- ST. GENEVIEVE was the Gallic version of Diana, the Goddess mentioned in the book of Acts.

- ST. MARGARET was the Christian version of Aphrodite Marina, or Margarita, Pearl of the Sea, a title later given over to the Virgin Mary.
- St. CRISPAN was the pagan tutelary God of shoemakers; the old God's day, October 25, was adapted as St. Crispin's Day.
- ST. JANUARIUS, who had the title of "peter," was the Christian version of the Roman God of Gates, who held the keys to the kingdom of heaven; when he was transformed into St. Peter his famous keys became the keys to the gate of the Christian heaven.
- ST. DEMETRA, and ST. DRMETRIUS are the female and male version of the Goddess Demeter.
- ST. URSULA was the Catholic version of the Saxon Goddess Ursel.
- ST. FAITH was created from the pagan daughters or virtues of the mother Goddess Sophia; her name in Latin. Bona Fides, means Good Faith, which is a term still in use.
- St. IGNATIUS, the pagan "God bearer," was a pre-Christian God who was brought into the Catholic Church.
- ST. BACCHUS bears a name that needs no explanation to anyone slightly versed in pagan mythology.
- ST. MITHRA, who was the God most responsible for the mysteries being introduced into Christianity.
- ST. SATUR and ST. SWITHIN who, as princes of shadows, are identified by all mythologist as Satan!
- ST. CATHERINE is admitted by Christian scholars as a preposterous creation, because she was nothing more than a continuance of the mother Goddess of the Fiery Wheel—or Sun—and her worship is still found in India, where she is known as Kathakali.
- ST. LUCY is the Christian version of Juno Lucina, Mother of Lights.
- ST. JOSAPHAT is the Christian version of the Buddha..
- ST. CERAUNOS was originally the thunder-serpent Keraunos.
- ST. COSMAS and ST. DAMANUS were the Christian versions of the pagan Gods Castor and Pollux.
- T. SEBASTIAN and ST. HUBERT, patrons of hunting, were once pagan lords.
- ST. MERCURY was a Roman God whose temple was Christianized in the sixth century along with himself.
- ST. ACHILLES was derived from the God Achilles with absolutely no attempt being made by the church to disguise his identity!
- ST. THECLA, the "Famous One," was the Ephesian mother Goddess Diana, whose pagan shrine continued as a Christian place of pilgrimage until the seventeenth century AD.

Keep in mind, these are but a small sampling of the many Gods, Goddess, demons, devils and other spirits that were absorbed by the Christian Church in their efforts to convert the world!

NOW LETS THINK

On one hand you have the Jewish people with their religion and customs which is strange and alien from all other nations of the world. One only need to remember the book of Esther at the hatred for the Jews by the non-Jews of the world. And it is into this world that Paul and others are taking this "Jewish Gospel" along with the writings of the New Testament in hope of "conversion" of the masses to the faith of Christ.

Answer for yourself: If you understand the scenario I just pictured for you then does it not seem to you, at first glance, remarkable with what readiness the non-Jewish cultures of the world dropped their ancestral faiths an accepted Christianity through the persuasions of Christian missionaries?

Answer for yourself: What can explain the openness and readiness of these non-Jewish nations to receive this "Jewish Gospel" as taught by Paul and as recorded by the writers of the New Testament as the documents circulated among the congregations?

THE TESTIMONY OF THE EARLY CHURCH FATHERS

The information is massive so I have just chosen a few examples to show why early Christian Doctrine along with their writings (the New Testament) was so readily accepted among the pagans to whom they evangelized. Remember that behind all of this is our question regarding the "truthfulness" of the New Testament as a Revelation from God and not one copied by men from prior pagan sources. Now on with the testimony of the Early Church Fathers:

1. The Holy Father Minucius Felix, in his Octavius, written as late as A.D. 211

In this writing Father Felix indignantly resents the supposition that the sign of the cross should be considered as exclusively a Christian symbol; and represents his advocate of the Christian arguments as retorting on an infidel opponent thus: "As for the adoration of crosses, which you object to against us, I must tell you that we neither adore crosses nor desire them. You it is, ye Pagans, who worship wooden Gods, who are the most likely people to adore wooden crosses, as being parts of the same substance with you deities. For what else are your ensigns, flags, and standards, but crosses? Your victorious trophies not only represent a simple cross, but a cross with a man upon it".

2. Tertullian, a Christian Father of the second and third centuries, writing to the Pagans says:

"The origin of your Gods is derived from figures molded on a cross. All those rows of images on your standards are the appendages of crosses; those hanging on your standards and banners are robes of crosses" (Egyptian Belief, p. 217).

3. Justin Martyr, in his Dialogue with Trypho, says:

"That there exist not a people, civilized or semi-civilized, who have not offered up prayers in the name of a crucified Savior to the Father and Creator of all things".

Also Justin remarks: "It having reached the Devil's ears that the prophets had foretold that Christ would come…he [the Devil] set the heathen poets to bring forward a great many who should be called sons of Jove [that is, the sons of God]; the Devil, laying his schemes in this to get men to imagine that the true history of Christ was of the same character as the prodigious fables and poetic stories". (Justin, Apol. 2.). We must understand properly the above quote. In the attacks upon Christianity by heathenism Christians were blamed from "copying" the pagan' religious beliefs and the only answer that the leading apologist for this new "Gentile Christian faith" could come up is that "the Devil" did it!

4. Eusebius, the ecclesiastical historian, says:

"that the names of Jesus and Christ were both known and honored among the ancients (Eccl. Hist., Lib. 1. Chap. iv.)

Also Eusebius states: "that which is called the Christian religion is neither new nor strange, but if it be lawful to testify the truth, well known to the ancients". (Eccl. History, lib. 2, ch. v).

5. Gregory of Nazianzus, writing to Saint Jerome, says:

"A little jargon is all that is necessary to impose on the people. The less they comprehend the more they admire. Our forefathers and doctors have often said, not what they thought, but what circumstances and necessity dictated". (Heiron ad. Nep. Quoted in Volney's Ruins, p. 177, note. Boston: 1872).

6. Isaac de Casaubon, the great ecclesiastical scholar, says:

"It mightily affects me to see how many there were in the earliest times of the Church, who considered it as a capital exploit to lend to heavenly truth the help of their own inventions, in order that the new doctrine might be more readily received by the wise among the Gentiles. These officious lies, they were wont to say, were devised for a good end". (Quoted in Taylor's Diegesis, p. 44).

7. M. Turretin, the learned Christian advocate, says in describing Christianity in the fourth century, when the Canon of the New Testament was established says:

"That it was not so much the empire that was brought over to the faith, as the faith that was brought over to the empire; not the Pagans who were converted to Christianity, but Christianity that was converted to Paganism". (Taylor, Diegesis, p. 50).

8. Saint Augustine says:

"That in our times is the Christian Religion, which to know and follow is the most sure and certain health, called according to that name, but not according to the thing itself, of which it is the name; for the thing itself which is now called the Christian Religion really was known to the ancients, nor was wanting at any time from the beginning of the human race until the time when Christ came in the flesh, from whence the true religion, which had previously existed, began to be called "Christian:; and this in our day is the Christian religion; not as having been wanting in former times, but as having in later times received this name". (Opera Augustini, vol. i. p. 12, quoted in Taylor's Diegesis, p. 42).

9. Paul

Paul pleads with his listeners that he was made a minister of the gospel, which had been preached to every creature under Heaven (Col. 1:23). You must think now! In saying this Paul was indicating that the doctrines he was bringing the Gentile world were already known by the peoples he targeted for "conversion". We find Saint Paul, the first Apostle of the Gentiles, avowing that he was made a minister of the Gospel which had already been preached to every creature under Heaven, and preaching a God manifest in the flesh, who had been believed on in the world, long before the commencement of his ministry, and who could not have been Jesus of Nazareth, who had certainly not been preached at that time, nor generally believed on in the world till ages after. Paul was preaching to the Gentiles a Jewish adaptation of their own prior pagan superstitions and religion. The reason for such compromise by Paul is not difficult to fathom once comes to the truth about Paul but let me warn you the "half" has not been told about the truth concerning this Paul. You need to know but it is not pretty when you find the facts about him both hidden in places in the NT as well as documents that exist outside the Bible that expose him for what he really was. We can read Luke's accounts of Paul but let us never forget that Luke was his friend and friends tend to bias their depiction of other friends. The truth about Paul can be found at this website: http://paulproblem.faithweb.com.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice the testimony of early Church fathers testify to the fact that the Christian religion is not new or a Divine Truth which dropped down from heaven, but the same religion of the ancients only retold with different names for their Gods and saints?

Answer for yourself: Then if the above claim and charge be true, then are we not to expect that in the writings of the New Testament to find such pre-existing doctrines carried over from pagan mystery religions?

Answer for yourself: After seeing the New Testament as a mixture of conflicting doctrines and dogmas, many of which come directly from pagan mystery religions, what is to by your response before God?

Answer for yourself: Once you see for yourself that these non-Jews who wrote and continually altered the New Testament did no more than lend to heavenly truth the help of their own inventions, in order that the new doctrine might be more readily received by the wise among the Gentiles by offering them no more than what they already had only dressed up in new names (Jesus), can you now better see the ease of conversion of the polytheistic non-Jews, and what will be your approach to the New Testament which can no longer be shown to be the citadel of truth?

But a more complete study of the subject only reveals more concerning the unusual ease of this conversion much less surprising, by making it apparent that the Christian Church's Gentile missionaries:

1. Added the leading dogmas of Biblical faith to their own existing pagan faiths rather than replacing all their pagan beliefs by Biblical Jewish beliefs
2. Caused in time the cessation of the masses to worship their pagan Gods but transferred such pagan concepts from such Gods to Yeshua, the Virgin, and saints
3. Invested Yeshua, the Virgin, and saints with the attributes of their pagan Gods and recorded such in the New Testament as if inspired by God
4. Retained most of their old religious dogmas and ceremonies and passed them off to the unsuspecting as if God inspired

With the absorption of the old pagan faiths and the recording of them in the "infallible and inerrant document called the New Testament", mass conversions became a reality. Think about it for a minutes. The pagans to whom the Gentile Gospel would come would not have to give up anything at all in accepting this Pauline Yeshua. The same concepts and beliefs held by them about their pagan Gods and Goddesses were only transferred and made applicable to Yeshua, the Virgin, and saints as well. The conversion of the non-Jewish world in the earliest centuries was accomplished easily by only changing the names of their Gods; the concepts staid the same. And few know the truth about the alteration of the religion of Yeshua which went into all the world and accept today unquestioningly that what they have as taught by Christianity is what God intended they have. Nothing could be further from the truth and God is not amused as the apostasy of the people of God today. Not only that, but neither could He be pleased with the apathy and lethargy inherent in most believes who fail to study to discover these truths for themselves before they die.

Understand in closing, it was these early writers and redactors of the New Testament manuscripts who "wrote into the oral traditions of a Jewish Rabbi named Yeshua" pre-existing accounts of their pagan Gods and molded such stories in and around the life of Yeshua. Therefore, without a through background in comparative religion one is helpless in reading the New Testament because he lacks the knowledge and skill necessary to separate out truth from fiction.

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #3

With the absorption of the old pagan faiths within the texture of Christianity in the latter first and early second century, it was then that a secure Christian hierarchy began an intensive campaign to outlaw rival pagan religions. However, in a move to placate the remaining pagans and win them over to Christianity, the hierarchy often rededicated pagan temples and shrines, which essentially allowed former pagans to continue their worship virtually uninterrupted. This is why one can still find pre-Christian pagan idols of a mother-goddess holding her infant savior-son still surviving in a number of Christian churches—the only exception being that they now have the Christian names of Mary and Jesus.

CHRISTIANITY'S OWN TESTIMONY CONVICTS THEMSELVES

The Christian Church cannot escape the origins of their services, as The Catholic Encyclopedia bluntly admits: "In this age of Pan-Babylonianism it is not at all surprising that the germinal ideas of the Christian Communion should be located in Babylon, where in the Adapa myth mention has been found of 'wafer of life' and 'food of life."' (Volume X, p. 12.) The editors of this article go on to quote the famous religious historian Franz Cumont's Mysterien desMithra, in which he documents the origin of the Mass to the Roman sun-god Mithra. They also note that even the ancient Catholic historian Tertullian was so angry when he found the tremendous similarities of Catholicism to Mithraism that he ". . . ascribed this mimicking of Christian rites to the 'devil."' (Ibid., p. 13.)

Few know but Tertullian, an early Church Father, often questioned the legitimacy of his own faith. One should only ask himself: "What did Tertullian find that so upset him?" I want you to pay particular attention to his reply. "The origin of your gods is derived from figures molded on a cross. All those rows of images on your standards are the appendages of crosses; those hanging on your standards and banners are robes of crosses" (Egyptian Belief, p. 217).

The priests of Mithraism celebrated Mass by using holy water, bells, candles, and offered communion on Sunday, which all took place in one of their elaborate idol-bedecked cathedrals. (The Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th ed. 1938, Volume 15, p. 621.) Another example is found in ancient Tibet and Nepal, where the worship of their crucified savior-god was found to be very close to the Christian Jesus. "In Tibet was found the pope, or head of the religion, whom they called the 'Dalai Lama,' they use holy water, they celebrate a sacrifice with bread and wine; they give extreme unction, pray for the sick; they have monasteries, and convents for women; they chant in their service, have fasts; they worship one god in a trinity, believe in a hell, heaven, and a half-way place or purgatory; they make prayers and sacrifices for the dead, have confession, adore the cross; have...strings of beads to count their prayers..." Doane, Bible Myths, p. 400.)

Historian Arthur Wigall writes that, "When Christian saints triumphed, these paintings and figures became those of Madonna and child without any break in continuity: No archaeologist, in fact, can now tell whether some of these objects represent the one or the other" (Wigall, The Paganism In Our Christianity, p. 129). E.J. Waggoner comments that when Christianity prevailed over paganism, "It worshipped in the same temples; it performed, to a certain extent, the same rites; it actually abrogated the local worship of one of the multitudinous deities of paganism" . Noted mythologist S.C. Wake writes: "The 'Black Virgins' of the French cathedrals prove, when examined critically, to be basalt figures of the goddess Isis. The Virgin Mary succeeded to her form, titles, symbols, rites, and ceremonies . . . It is astonishing how much of the Egyptian and the second-hand Indian symbolism passed over into the usages of the following times. The high cap and hooked staff of the god became the bishop's miter and crosier" (Westropp, Hodder M., Wake Staniland C. Ancient Symbol Worship, Influence of the Phallic Idea in the Religions of Antiquity, p. 97).

"It is well known that when paganism was superseded by Christianity, the older religion was by no means obliterated", writes George H McKnight in his book, St. Nicholas. He continues: "In Greece the pagan temples often were converted into Christian churches. At Athens, the Parthenon, a temple of the Virgin Pallas, became a church of the Virgin Mary, the temple of Theseus [Zeus] became a church devoted to . . . St. George . . . In many of the churches of Rome may be seen beautiful classical columns taken from the earlier pagan structures." He notes that at Syracuse in Sicily, one can find that ". . . the older classical temple of Minerva has been transformed into a renaissance cathedral [the church was renamed, appropriately, Santa Maria Sopra Minerva, or Holy Mary over the shrine of Minerva]" (Westropp, Hodder M., Wake Staniland C. Ancient Symbol Worship, Influence of the Phallic Idea in the Religions of Antiquity, p. 125).

A pagan temple in Rome, sacred to the "Bona Dea" (the good goddess), was rededicated to the Virgin Mary. Another temple sacred to Apollo was demolished and rebuilt—using the materials from the older temple—in honor of St. Apollinaris. The temple of Mars is now the church of St. Martine, and the temple holy to Caelestis Dea, or the heavenly goddess, was converted into a Catholic church at Carthage. What is interesting in this instance is that the last pagan high priest of this temple, whose name was Aurelius, disappeared from history (in AD 390) at exactly the same time a new Christian Bishop of Carthage appears—whose name, coincidentally, was also Aurelius.

Answer for yourself: Did you catch that?

The church of St. Reparatae in Florence was originally dedicated to the great goddess Nutria. The church of St. Stephen in Bologna was built from the temple of Isis. In Rome, the temple dedicated to the god Romulus was made over to a St. Theodore. Quite revealing is that the old custom of women bringing their sick children to the temple to be healed by the pagan god Romulus continues to this day, the only difference being that the present-day faithful now evoke the name of St. Theodore (Doane, Bible Myths, pp. 396-397).

The Church of Santa Maria Maggiore in Rome was built over the sacred cave of the Magna Mater. The Church of St. Clemente in Rome has beneath its altar a vault where there is a beautifully carved shrine and altar to the sun-god Mithras. Atop the altar is the sun-god wearing his radiant crown. The temple of the Roman mother-goddess, complete with the god Mithra's phallus standing on top, once stood on the site of the present Vatican. Actually it is still there buried under the artificial hill that was constructed to form the court of St. Peter's." And the memory of the ancient mother goddess accounts for the name of St. Mary's Rotunda, which is so important to the Vatican complex.

In addition to the rededication of the great pagan temples, throughout Europe and the British isles local parish churches are usually built on the tops of hills where a former pagan holy site was once located. This is why many of the old phallic stones of the pre-Christian religion can still be found standing in the church yards of the present Christian churches.

At any rate, such is the history of Christian tradition. But all these changes were simply a prelude to accomplishing the overall objective of enforcing Christianity on the whole of the Roman Empire. Understand such a plan was carried out by merging Jewish beliefs with prior pagan beliefs. Such a mixture assured acceptance by the non-Jews by bringing to them another god fashioned already in the image of those that they already revered.

Answer for yourself: To a polytheist what is another god? These amalgamation of beliefs were first fashioned in oral traditions and later recorded in a document called the New Testament. You have already read the testimony of early Church Fathers to the guilt of the Church in doing such. Now comes the next step in Rome's overall plan…the destruction of as much as possible existing documents which exposed their religious duplicity.

The next and most important step involved a centuries-long campaign of horrendous destruction of anything which revealed the plagiarism by the Catholic Christian Church which took the majority of its "dogmas and doctrines" from prior pagan mystery religions to which they and their "missionary targets" were already familiar. Only in this way would they be able later to hold sway over the masses and none would have "proof" any longer of the Church's copy-cat "theology". This would ensure that Rome could not only claim a "Divine Revelation" since all proof of their plagiarism of pagan mystery religions would be destroyed, but they could then continue without fear of exposure teaching pagan lies and myths as "Divine Truths" which were intended to secure the allegiance and finances of the masses who would depend on such religious establishments for their very "salvation" for soon the Catholic Church would teach that there "was no salvation outside the Catholic Church and its doctrines". Is was only a short step from teaching such pagan lies and myths to recording these pagan myths in a "Divine Document" latter called the New Testament. Without previous references to their dishonesty, the path was cleared for global conversion, for if you remember, they were taking the same stories and myths and only changing the name of the characters. And we read the New Testament most of our lives as if it were "inspired, infallible, and inerrant" never once knowing that most of the accounts in the New Testament had been told before for thousands of years by the people the God of the Old Testament would tell Israel to stay apart from and to whose religion they were not to adopt!

Answer for yourself: What impact would it have if it could be shown that the core teachings of Christianity, a religion espoused as given by God from Heaven, were nothing more than the retelling of pagan mythology as applied to a Jewish Rabbi named Yeshua.

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #4

Read any good books lately? Well I can assure you that your Church does not want you to read certain books because if you do then you will become aware of the deceptions within the New Testament of which I continually speak.

As many men and governments before and after the time of the fourth century had learned, if a dictatorship is to control an entire people it is essential to first control education. In other words, to be successful a dictatorship needs to maintain a murderous grip over what their people hear, read and think. Just look at the Communist dictatorship of the former Soviet Union for your example in your own life time. But you don't need to look just at the Soviet Union; lets look closer to home beginning with the Christian Church of the earliest centuries who controlled knowledge. Following a proven method, the main objective of the Roman Empire's new Christian dictatorship beginning with Constantine became the destruction of books and a monopoly on education.

Calling it a "service to God," Christianity's venerable church fathers caused an unfathomable amount of historical materials to be forever lost to the world, such as the entire contents of the ancient Palatine Apollo Library which were burned on the orders of Pope Gregory the Great (AD 540-604). His decree stated that the library was to be burned "lest its secular literature distract the faithful from the contemplation of heaven" (Smith, Man and His Gods, pp. 228, 253). Knowing that the library contained thousands of scrolls from the pre-Christian mystery religions—whose doctrines and customs had been recently absorbed by the Christian Church—Pope Gregory might just have well said "lest its secular literature expose the origin of the Christian Church!" This was the real reason why anything remotely connected to the old pagan religions was savagely attacked by the church! The whole of Roman authority as well as Christian Imperial influence would be severely damaged if it was shown that the core teachings of Christianity, a religion espoused as given by God from Heaven, could be shown to be nothing more than the retelling of pagan mythology as applied to a Jewish Rabbi named Yeshua. Such damaging documents exposing Christian Roman religious lies passed off as Divine Truth as well as their document, the New Testament, had to be destroyed whenever found in order to preserve and protect the Church-State of the Roman Empire. Failure to censer the truth when found could only lead to the enlightenment of the people whereby Rome could no longer use fear and ignorance to control the masses through religion. Rome you must remember saw too it that there was "no salvation" outside the Bishop of the Roman Church; thus it was easy to see how Rome used ignorance of the truth and fear of the loss of one's salvation to control the masses to do the bidding of the Roman Church-State which could be seen in her political and financial desires to propagate herself. If the masses were to learn that salvation as taught by Rome was only pagan ideas recast through a Jewish Rabbi and that their salvation was in doubt, then rebellion to such a religious and political hierarchy would be the guaranteed outcome. All evidence revealing Rome's religious duplicity had to be destroyed whenever and wherever it was encountered.

ROME DESTROYS THE EVIDENCE TO THEIR RELIGIOUS LIES… AND IS THE MORTAL ENEMY TO KNOWLEDGE

Every book in the Gnostic Basilides, Porphyry's thirty-six volumes and an additional 27,000 papyrus rolls of the Gentile mystery religions were all burned by order of the church. Concerning the great ancient library of Alexandria, built by Ptolemy, Joseph Wheless writes: "This Library became the most extensive and celebrated of the ancient world, containing some 700,000 manuscript books at the time it was savagely destroyed, in 391 AD, by the benighted Christian zeal and fury of Bishop Theophilus of Alexandria and his crazy monks of Nitria, as related in Kingsley's Hypatia or any history of the times" (Wheless, Forgery in Christianity, p. 58) These events are simply summed up by Edward Carpenter, who writes, that "the Christians took special pains to destroy the pagan records and so obliterate the evidence of their own dishonesty" (Graham, Deceptions and Myths of the Bible, p. 444).

The official Christian zeal for the destruction of books continued unquenched over the coming centuries. For instance, when the Spanish invaders arrived in South America one of the first acts of the accompanying priests was to order the mass destruction of the ancient libraries of the Aztecs. This action became imperative when the priests discovered that the natives had a pagan religion that virtually mirrored their own. With native religious customs like a virgin-loom crucified savior god, a Eucharist, a clergy that essentially consisted of a pope, priests and virgin nuns, and adoring a golden cross as the symbol of their salvation on which their savior god was crucified, the Catholic priests had ample reason to be zealous in their actions.

The above example is startling when you think about it. These Catholic missionaries travel half-way around the world and these "ignorant" natives have the same religion that they had in Catholic Europe?

Answer for yourself: How is that possible?

Well the answer is not hard but it is involved and a complete understanding of how the residue of "sun worship" became worldwide will explain a lot; not the least of it the ministry and later success of Paul in the New Testament among the Gentiles. Again I warn you that this information is not pretty but very unsettling but necessary if the New Testament believer truly desires to know and return to "the faith" once given to the saints. a faith that taught the incarnation of God in every human being never limiting it to be one supposed "literal" and "historical" person by the name if Jesus as did Rome. What was metaphysical and mystical regarding the Soul of mankind as taught in the Divine Mysteries was later "literalized" and "historicized" and limited to a "Jesus" of Rome's creation wherby what was always understood mystically and meaphysically was "literalized" in a Jesus to whom access came now only through the doors of the Roman Church. What appears to be Paganism, when understood alleghorically as it always was, become the hightest of Spiritual Truths for man's Soul.. I have devoted one entire website to this problem of how the faith and religion of Yeshua, a Jew, was litearlized, historicized, paganized and passed off as a debased and imporoper modification of the ancient Divine Mysteries and you can see how it was done in detail and the doctrines taken from it as we later find "literalized" and "historicized" as found in the New Testament by visiting this website: http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com.

The ancient Indians of South America worshipped a trinity of gods, the chief god, or father, being Icona. His son, called Bacob, was born of a virgin mother, named Chibirias, who dwelled in heaven with the holy spirit. The son, Bacob, born of a virgin, came to earth as a human and was tied or nailed to a cross, where he both died for the sins of humanity and the fertility of the earth, after which he was raised back to life (Yucatec Trinity in South America quoted in The Mythology of All Races, Volume Xl, p. 143. See also, Hislop, The Two Babylons, pp. 18-19.). T.W. Doane writes: "Sometimes Quetzalcoatle or Bacob is represented as tied to the cross and at other times he is represented in attitude of a person crucified, with impressions of nail holes in his hands and feet..." (op. cif, p. 200.) These native pagan crosses corresponded, as T.W. Doane writes, "in every particular with those delineated on Babylonian monuments;" but it was also distinguished by the Catholic designation, "the tree of subsistence", "the wood of health", "the emblem of life," etc. (op. cit., p. 347.)

In his renowned histories of South America, James Prescott relates how the Spanish missionaries, when they first arrived in Mexico, ". . . could not suppress their wonder as they beheld the cross, the sacred emblem of their own faith, raised as an object of worship in the temples . . . [they] were not aware that the cross was the symbol of worship of the highest antiquity in Egypt and Syria; and that rite, resembling those of communion and baptism, were practiced by pagan nations on whom the light of Christianity had never shone." (Prescott, History of the Conquest of Mexico, Volume 111, pp. 368, 371.) In fact, the Christian priests found in Palenque, Mexico a heathen temple known as the "Temple of the Cross." This temple, almost 3,000 years old, preserved a cross that is identical to the modern form now being used in the Catholic Church. With such discoveries the priest at first thought that the land had been reached by other Christian missionaries, yet when they finally understood the antiquity of the native religion they were confused as to why legends and symbols so close to their own Catholicism should be found there (The Catholic Encyclopedia, Volume X, p. 252.). Traveling into what would one day become Vera Cruz, Mexico, they found a marble cross, identical to their own sacred symbol, topped with a crown of gold. The natives told the astonished priests that "one more glorious than the sun died upon the cross!" (Murray-Ayosley, Symbolism of the East and West, p 70.)

Answer for yourself: Did you notice the above author described the crucifixion as the "sun" and not the "son" that dies upon the cross? This is just the beginning of how sun-worship is tied to the story of Jesus in the Gentile's New Testament!

The path of the Sun through the Sky and Heavens was always understood to be a visible expression of the Cosmic Intelligent Invisible Creative Principle we call God who humbled Himself and "fell" into material manifestation and incarnation in the whole of material existence, mineral, vegetable, animal, and human. This incarnation of Divine Mind or "Krst/Christ" was personified by the ancients whereby they would relate such scientific and metaphysical realties to others, however, with the rise of Rome they "literalized" the whole of it and gave it a supposed historical existence, and brought forth this perversion of Divine Spiritual Truth limited to but one supposed person of their own making and we find this in the "Jesus Story". In so doing Rome robs the whole of humanity of their incarnational purpose to bring to birth this indwelling God within them and evolve themselves into the "fullness and stature of Christ."

These Catholic priests would soon find themselves even more confused, as Prescott notes: "Their surprise was heightened, when they witnessed a religious rite which reminded them of Christian Communion." The communion in the form of the Aztec sun-god deity ". . . was made of the flour of maize, mixed with blood, and after consecration by the priest, was distributed among the people, who, as they ate it, "showed signs of humiliation and sorrow, declaring it was the flesh of the deity." (Prescott, History of the Conquest of Mexico, Volume 111, p.369.)

SINCE THE CHURCH WON'T ADMIT THE TRUTH…THAT THEIR DOCTRINES ARE COPIES OF PAGANISM…WHAT DOES SHE DO?

Don DeSolis, a Catholic writer in the eighteenth century, tries to explains these obvious "Christian" counterparts within the pagan customs of South America: ". . . it seems that the Devil . . . was ambitious to imitate Baptism . . . and even the Sacraments of the Catholic Church, since he introduced among the Barbarians the Confession of Sins . . . and Communion which the priest administered on certain days. They had likewise Jubilees, processions, offerings of incense and other forms of divine worship; Nay, they even gave their Chief Priest the title of Pope in their language:" "Satan, . . . whether with a design to abuse and profane the Sacred Mysteries and Ceremonies by mingling them with his Abominations, is still aspiring to imitate the Most High. " (De Solis, The History of the Conquest of Mexico, Volume 1, p. 355-6.)

We can add to these examples that of the Christian Crusaders who destroyed every book and scroll they could find when they entered the so-called holy land. You may not be aware of this but this action was, in fact, one of the main objectives of the Crusades. But with all this destruction there was still another outstanding problem—the bible itself, especially the New Testament, the contents of which are most revealing to the critical eye.

Answer for yourself: The church could destroy all existing extra-Biblical pagan mystery religious documents which reveals the plagiarized New Testament, but what were they to do about the New Testament itself, since knowledgeable people who would possibly read it could recognize such copying of pagan myths as passed-off Roman "Divine truths"?

THE CREATION OF AN IGNORANT CHURCH TO PROTECT ROME'S SECRET

Remember that there is nothing new under the sun says Solomon. The problem of an informed church was so damaging and obvious that Pope Gregory, who had denounced "all secular education as folly" and who had burned a few hundred tons of pre-Christian scrolls to erase the past and protect Rome's plagiarism of pagan myths, finally commanded that the common people should not read the bible (Graham, Deceptions and Myths of the Bible, p. 444). This command meant that the ordinary Christian man and woman could only hear selected bits and pieces of the bible as interpreted by their priests in his Sunday sermon. The Catholic Christian Church was spared embarrassment and ensured their continued domination of the people who would never know different or the facts behind the New Testament. Finances would continue to be collected forever to ensure the longevity of the Church-State as long as the people never learned the truths behind the dogmas and doctrines Rome borrowed from their pagan past and included in their "infallible" New Testament. It also meant that the "protectors of the faith of Christ" could keep their holy book from close scrutiny and critical assessment. The paganism of the New Testament they hoped could never be found out by the masses. The Catholic Church had destroyed almost all existing pagan religious documents which mimicked the New Testament in religious concepts and ideas and now they had limited the people from ever reading it. They were safe they thought and their positions of influence safe-guarded. The people were to be kept in the "dark" concerning the truth and the Dark Ages were about to begin. Ignorance was bliss to the leaders of the Catholic Church.

Answer for yourself: Today one might wonder "why didn't the average Christian protest the pope's command"?

The answer lies in the absolute control the church wielded over both king and commoner, which perhaps is easily demonstrated in the title of the powerful and notorious pope, Innocent III (1198-1216). In 1198 he was crowned "FATHER OF PRINCES AND KINGS, RULER OF THE WORLD, VICAR OF CHRIST and GOD". DeRosa says that this pontiff "…never doubted this blasphemy was his due" (DeRosa, Vicars of Christ, p. 67). Innocent, whose name is a historical joke because he is credited as the father of the infamous "holy" Inquisition, added to his power by claiming that "All things on earth and in heaven and in hell are subject to the Vicar of Christ" (Halley, Halley's Bible Handbook, p. 776). Innocent's god-like attitude was bequeathed to his successors, an example being Pope Leo XIII (1878-1903) who openly declared that, "We hold upon this earth the place of God Almighty" (Leo XIII, The Great Encyclical Letters of Leo XIII, 3rd ed. P. 304, extracted from The Reunion of Christendom, 20 June, 1894).

In the coming centuries Pope Gregory's orders against bible reading were backed by the threat of death: "In 1234, the Synod of Taragona declared that anyone was a heretic, who, having in his possession a copy of the Scriptures in the vernacular [i.e., in their own language], refused to surrender it to be burned within eighty days" (Barrett, While Peter Sleeps, p. 223). In other words, after 1234 A.D. anyone possessing a bible that he or she could read was guilty of heresy, and the fate of an unrepentant heretic, after the initial routine torture sessions, was being burned alive.

The prohibition against bible reading was further assured by the fact that the Christian Church had essentially eliminated education in the Holy Roman Empire. By the Middle Ages ninety-nine percent of all Europeans couldn't read or write—a number that usually included most ruling kings and princes. For those few who could read, the study of any subject that might call into question the "truth" of the bible was a perilous undertaking, the most dangerous being a study of the sciences.

Even though the ancient scientist Eratosthenes of Alexandria had measured the circumference of the earth in the third century BC, and his colleague Hipparchus invented longitude and latitude in the second century BC, and even though the ancient Phoenicians had sailed and explored most of the world a thousand years before the time of Jesus—establishing colonies as far away as South America—the Christian Church declared that the earth was flat. It was an "infallible" declaration went unopposed because the church controlled all avenues that might call into question their brand of scientific" reasoning—this and the fact that they had already burned every book of science in existence, including those of the ancient scientists Democritus and Leucippus, who taught the atomic theory of matter in the fifth century BC, and all of the books of the ancient mathematician and geographer Eratosthenes of Alexandria (Eartosthenes of Alexandria:, The Encyclopedia Britannica, 11th ed., Vol. 13, p. 526).

In contrast, and at the time most Christian kings and princes in Europe couldn't read or write, a Moorish king had a library of 600,000 books available to his subjects. The Moorish city of Cordova, Spain had eight hundred public schools, while only one percent of Europe was literate. Religious historian Lloyd Graham writes: "It was difficult to encounter even a Moorish peasant who could not read and write.... In Christian Europe scholars were burned at the stake; in Moorish Europe they were the highest paid men in the realm. One Moorish king gave his leading scholar forty thousand pieces of gold each year, while in Christendom, Roger Bacon, credited with inventing the camera, clock, telescope and lens, gunpowder and steam power, was imprisoned fourteen years as a sorcerer and heretic" (Graham, Deceptions and Myths of The Bible, pp. 457-458). True to their own stated objectives, once the Spanish had driven the Moors out of Europe a hateful Cardinal Ximenes "delivered to the flames in the square of Granada eighty thousand Arabic manuscripts" to be burned " (Graham, Deceptions and Myths of The Bible, pp. 444).

Indeed, the church's hatred of science was so intense that its hierarchy even went so far as to bring charges against Pope Sylvester II. Desiring something more than a religious education, and because there were no universities in Christian Europe that taught anything other than theology, Sylvester, when he was a cardinal, went to a Moorish university in Spain and received an education in medicine. It was putting this education to practical use that ran him afoul of the church hierarchy. After being accused of sorcery, historians note that it was only because of his high office that Pope Sylvester escaped prosecution and the horrors of the Inquisition.

Such an attitude towards the sciences meant that the Christian Church can be held directly responsible for catastrophes like the so-called Black Death, the bubonic plague of the Middle Ages that killed between one-third to one-half of Europe's population.

Now I want you to pay attention to the next quote from a rather well respected church father: Augustine. Remember when you read this quote that many of your Christian Doctrines today are directly attributable to this man. Now after reading the quote think to yourself if you should follow any reasoning coming from such a man and how much of your Christianity today is absolute foolishness. During this deadly sickness of Europe, called the Black Death, the church still agreed with the "wisdom" of its venerated St. Augustine, who declared: "All diseases of Christians are to be ascribed to demons; chiefly do they torment first-baptized Christians, yea, even the guileless newborn infant" (Graham, Deceptions and Myths of The Bible, pp. 458).

At the same time the church was torturing and burning scientists as heretics, one of their most often recommended remedies for illness was driving out the offending demon by the use of "holy water" or by touching a "blessed" relic, which is to say by touching the bones of a saint, or vials of Jesus' blood, pieces of the "true Cross" or, in one instance, a piece of the wing of the archangel Gabriel, which, the church said, he left behind when he came to tell the virgin Mary that she was with child. All of these so-called cures were, of course, for sale from the Christian church.

Throughout Christendom local churches offered cures for just about any type of ailment, all effected by their own local relics. Any "holy" relic dipped into well water, could, as the church advertised far and wide, cure tumors, baldness, impotence, infertility, bad teeth, heart, liver and stomach ailments, broken bones, difficult pregnancies, sores, lepers . . . !

The selling or use of holy bones (or relics) became so profitable that a special papal corporation was founded in Rome to discover, sell, and transport, holy relics to all parts of Europe. The greed became so great that Joe Nickell, in his book, Inquest on The Shroud of Turin, writes: "The living bodies of likely future saints were covetously watched by relic mongers; when Thomas Aquinas fell ill and died at a French monastery, his body was decapitated and his flesh boiled away by monks greedy for his bones. It is said that St. Romnald of Ravenna heard during a visit to France that he was in mortal peril because of the value of his bones and fled homeward . . ." (p. 51.) "Rome, says Gregorovius, was like a moldering cemetery in which hyenas howled and fought as they dug greedily alter corpses." (Woodrow, Babylon Mystery Religion, p. 54.)

One of the most famous examples of relic profiteering is that of Saint Nicholas. He is supposedly buried in the city of Bari, Italy, where his remains were brought after being supposedly discovered by some merchants in Myra. According to the story when these merchants found St. Nicholas' body it was flowing in holy oil, and after his re-burial in Bari this "holy oil" miraculously continued to exude from his bones. Claiming that the oil had miraculous healing powers, the monks began one of the biggest money making schemes in the history of the Italian Church. Unless there were a failure in the local olive oil crop, this "holy" oil was sold by the Christian clergy of Bari, gallon after gallon, century after century to the ill and dying. (McKnight, St Nicholas, p. 147. See also, Walsh, The Story of Santa Klaus, pp 45-46).

Notably the superstition of relics as means of magical cures continues today by the wearing of holy medals or the use of icons. Every Catholic book store, or other related business, sells millions of medals and icons of the church's many different saints for protection against a host of threats. Noting that the ancient pagans wore the same kind of charms, or believed in the power of religious icons of their gods or saints, T.W. Doane makes the connections of the ancient custom to the present-day: "The Christians also used amulets with the name or monogram of the god Serapis engraved thereon.... even the charm which is worn by the Christians at the present day, has none other than the monogram of [the god] Bacchus engraved thereon, i.e., I H S." Bible Myths, p. 405.)

With such "divine" cures bringing a steady flow of money-paying faithful patients to the church, that same church certainly had no need for medical science, and least of all for the "heretics" that promoted scientific experiments. This attitude is why some of the most famous scientists in European history, Leonardo Da Vinci included, had to often work in secret and in fear for their lives!

As yet one more example of the church's relentless war on secular education, early in the seventeenth century one of history's greatest scientists was put on trial for his life charged in an ecclesiastical court with heresy.

Despite his reputation and his advanced age, before the mock trial he had been tortured relentlessly by the disciples of Jesus Christ. His heretical crime was to challenge the church's position that the earth was the center of the universe and that the universe revolved around the earth.

After he could no longer endure the torture, and remembering that his colleague Giordano Bruno had been burned at the stake for conducting the same research, this broken old man recanted. Being led before a group of pious Christian priests and clerics the great Galileo admitted the following: "1, Galileo, being in my seventieth year, being a prisoner and on my knees, and before your Eminences, having before my eyes the Holy Gospel, which I touch with my hands, abjure, curse, and detest the error and the heresy of the movement of the earth." And thus the church, that had already declared the earth to be flat because that is what the bible teaches, was secure in its belief that the earth did not move but stood stationary at the center of the universe. Galileo published his work, Dialogo in 1632. Essentially building upon the theory of Copernicus, he was able to demonstrate the fallacy of the church's teaching that the earth was the center of the universe and everything revolved around it.

Perhaps all this madness is best summed up by one historian who wrote that within the Christian Church of the Middle Ages a heretic was a man with an opinion! (Reinach, Orpheus, p. 318).

FINALLY THE LIGHT OF TRUTH AND KNOWLEDGE SURFACES

It would not be until 1865 that the major crack came in the strict domination of Christianity over education. Up until that time virtually all universities appointed religious authorities to supervise all fields of scientific inquiry. In 1865 Cornell University was founded and, under a great deal of protest, became the first major school in Christendom to appoint a non-cleric as its dean. However, when the academic world finally broke free of the murderous grip of fanatic Christian ignorance, intellectual freedom was far from being a reality.

Even after the clergy could no longer arrest, torture and burn people for thinking, questioning, or for reading a forbidden book, they still waged a relentless war on secular education by using their considerable influence with the uneducated masses forever in fear of eternal damnation. Notice again the same tactics used by the Church who controlled not only knowledge but salvation as well. In the majority of Christian churches members were and still are told either directly not read certain materials, or they are warned away through more subtle means, such as sermons ridiculing and discrediting a particular work or author. We at Bet Emet encounter such a blindness to the facts and fear of truth occasionally as our articles are sent to others but we cannot be deterred from the quest and calling we have received from God. God is sacred and not a book which can be shown to be lies; lies that have replaced God's Truth no less for millions who never do their own study to see if "they be in the faith"…"the faith once given to the saints".

Both the Catholic Church and her Protestant Sister still dictates to their members what they can and cannot read. In 1515 the church, alarmed by the number of "heretical" books being published, moved to put an end to this danger. Thus was born the Imprimatur, the official Vatican stamp of approval received by works that are in line with Catholic dogma. The office is still in operation and any good Catholic book will contain this stamp of approval on the title page. (Lea, A History of the Inquisition, Volume 111, p. 615.)

For any fundamentalist who finally works up the courage to get outside the carefully screened and recommended reading of their church the reasons for these warnings become painfully obvious. No where is this more true than in a critical study of the New Testament. Such a critical study of the New Testament will reveal to you gross distortions of the Old Testament for purposes of indoctrination by anti-Semitic Gentiles. The process really began with the corruption of the translation of the Jewish Scriptures by the Essenes of Egypt when they were also involved in sun-worship. In their never-ending quest for religious legitimacy and status, the writers of the New Testament have not hesitated to twist, distort, pervert, and concoct Old Testament verses as expediency dictated. Examples of their dishonest display of propagandistic propensities are abundantly evident to anyone with a reasonably critical eye. Such deceptions and distortions by the writers of the New Testament fall into three broad categories: misquotations, nonquotes, and misinterpretations. A misquotation is defined as deliberately misquoting an Old Testament passage; a nonquote consists of quoting a non-existent Old Testament passage, and a misinterpretation consists of correctly quoting an Old Testament passage while distorting the meaning intended. The New Testament is guilty on all the counts in hundred of places and only a reasonably critical eye and knowledge of Old Testament Scripture as take from the Jewish Bible and not the altered Christian Old Testaments is necessary to spot such perversions in the New Testament.

We must always remember that with every lie exposed and repented of one takes a closer step toward the God of Truth.

Let us continue our study in the next article in this series.

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #5

I have spent some time laying the foundation for this present study. I have labored to present to you the history of your faith as championed by the Catholic Church and as inherited by the Protestant Church. You need to understand that they literally controlled and yet control what you are to believe as your faith as a Christian. They do this through both preaching of false dogmas and doctrines as well as point you to a document which is full of error and lies taken from pagan mystery religions. The Catholic Church not only had possession of the New Testament manuscripts but controlled what you heard and what you were "to believe". By the time that the books of the New Testament would be printed in the language of the people for all to read and see for themselves, hundreds and hundreds of changes had already been made in the text by monks and adept "theologians" who made sure the manuscripts carried the "current teachings" of the Catholic Church. The New Testament was to be a reflection not of truth or the original faith of Yeshua but of Catholic theology as it evolved by emperor's decisions and majority votes; from one Church Council to the next. Over time by majority vote the New Testament took upon itself a life of its own which can be shown to be quite different from the doctrines believed by the Jerusalem Church.

Perhaps one of the most pointed questions I get in my e-mails over and over is this:

"Does it make sense that God would give man His revelation and then stand by helplessly as it became garbled and corrupted? Such an idea is preposterous."

I understand the desperation of such a question but the student does not grasp the incalculable damage done to the New Testament over the centuries by the Catholic Church. He lacks the facts in the matter at hand. Once you see this for yourself then such a question needs not to be asked because you have proof as your answer.

Ironically, I totally agree with that statement! If a Divine Being, who we are told created the whole universe, transmitted His divine will into the writing of a book, then it makes no sense that He'd allow that book to become corrupt. The Creator of the universe would be perfection manifest and beyond error, whereas man is notoriously corrupt in everything he puts his hand to! This is the rule by which one should judge any human-proclaimed holy writing, and one to keep in mind as we NOW consider the facts pertaining to and the origins of the New Testament.

WHERE ARE THE ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPTS?

To get an overall picture let's start by first noting that there is no such thing as an original manuscript of the New Testament. This means that there is no known prototype from which later copies of the New Testament were made. To the contrary, there are several so-called families of Greek texts, none of which agrees with the other, that stand behind the present day New Testament.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice I said no "two" (2) New Testament manuscripts agrees with each other?

Take time to let that statement sink in.

The more important of these families of Greek texts are the Alexandrian texts, the Western texts, the Caesarean texts and the Byzantine Texts. Metzger, A Textual Commentary On The Greek New Testament, pp. XVI, XVII states that the Alexandrian texts are represented by the codex Vaticanus and the codex Sinaiticus. The Western text were those used by the church fathers Irenaeus, Tertullian, Cyprian, Marcion and Tatian. The Caesarean text apparently originated in Egypt and is thought to have been brought to Caesarea where it was used by Eusebius and others.

The state of these texts can be seen in the admission of the turn-of-the-century editors of The Catholic Encyclopedia, who represented a church that even today fully believes and teaches the infallibility of the bible.

Now pay attention to the next quotation. Although admitting to thousands of conflicting scriptures in the New Testament text families, they nevertheless offer this weak excuse: "It is easy to understand how numerous would be the readings of a text transcribed as often as the Bible, and, as only one reading can represent the original, it follows that all the others are necessarily faulty. Mill estimated the variants of the New Testament at 30,000, and since the discovery of so many MSS. [i.e., manuscripts] unknown to Mill, this number has greatly increased" (Vol. IV, p. 498. The Catholic Encyclopedia, published in 1910). I need to stop here and ask you a very important question.

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that the Catholic Encyclopedia estimated 30,000 variants and contradictions in the New Testament manuscripts in 1910 and do you know that the true number is much higher because of the newer archeological discoveries in New Testament studies since 1910?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware before reading this article that the Greek "New Testament" manuscripts from which the New Testament in your Christian Bible is taken had "thousands and thousands" of conflicting scriptures?

Answer for yourself: Can you give an answer why when considering the Masoretic Text of the Old Testament as handed down by the Jewish Scribes is almost 99% accurate with just minimal discrepancies whereas the Greek Scriptures handed down from the non-Jewish Catholic Church has thousands and thousands of "conflicting scriptures"?

Answer for yourself: Remember the question posed earlier: "Does it make sense that God would give man His revelation and then stand by helplessly as it became garbled and corrupted? Now I ask you "What does it appear to you that God is preserving as His Word; the New Testament or the Old Testament?

Take time to let that statement sink in.

Concerning the New Testament Gospels the editors note: "The existence of numerous and, at times, considerable differences between the four canonical Gospels is a fact which has long been noticed and which all scholars readily admit" (Volume VI, p. 658.The Catholic Encyclopedia was published in 1910).

LETS GET MORE CURRENT IN OUR INFORMATION

Regarding the lack of uniformity of these various texts, a later work, Forlong's Encyclopedia of Religion, tells us: "There are some 1,760 MSS. to be compared; and the various readings are computed at 150,000.

Answer for yourself: Now did you notice that the number of variants and conflicts are now over 150,000?

Answer for yourself: In all honesty where is the work of the Holy Spirit in this?

The revisers confess to 100,000 in 1,500 MSS" (Vol. I, p. 316.) In other words here we are being told that there are l50,000 conflicting words or verses in the so-called original Greek New Testament manuscripts from which Christianity derives its holy book.

Take time to let that statement sink in.

Answer for yourself: Can you honestly say that the New Testament, according to the facts you have seen, is the work of the Holy Spirit especially in light of the facts regarding how meticulously and with such few discrepancies the Jewish Old Testament was preserved by the Jewish Scribes?

NOW FOR THE REAL BAD NEWS…CHRISTIAN SCHOLARS ADMIT THAT "SOMEWHERE" IN ALL THE CONFLICTING N.T. MANUSCRIPTS IS TRUTH…."SOMEWHERE"……BUT WHERE?

However since the above reference works were first published the discovery of ancient New Testament manuscripts have more than doubled in numbers. By 1989 the Munster Institute for New Testament Textual Research had catalogued 5,488 Greek New Testament manuscripts. Only 59 of these contain the entire New Testament, while roughly 1500 contain only the Gospels. The present count of New Testament MSS. include 96 papyri, 299 uncials, 2,812 minuscule and 2,281 lectionaries, or works containing selected passages for use in church services (The Oxford Companion to the Bible, p. 488). The relevant information that you need to know about these 5,488 manuscripts is that virtually all of them differ in some mayor or minor degrees one from the other!

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that now, out of 5,488 New Testament manuscripts that no 2 agree?

EVEN CHRISTIAN BIBLES WILL TODAY TELL YOU THE FACTS IF YOU LOOK

After noting that the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John alone are preserved in some 3,500 different and often conflicting manuscripts, the editors of a contemporary work entitled, The Complete Gospels, bluntly admit that, "The Greek texts behind our English translation [of the New Testament] is a reconstruction produced by patient and exacting comparison of thousands of differences in wording among the numerous copies" (The Complete Gospels, p. 2).

By way of defending such damaging information, Christian apologist and fundamentalist Eric V. Snow first acknowledges that there are 200,000 estimated variations in the New Testament, but then excuses this fact with the following remark: "Scholars Geisler and Nix, building upon the work of F.J.A. Hort, said only about 1/8 [of the 200,000] have weight, with 1/60 [of the 200,000] being 'substantial variation.'"

Answer for yourself: Can you feel secure knowing that your religious belief system whereby you are trusting New Testament dogmas and doctrines for your salvation can be shown to have "substantial variations"?

Eric V. Snow adds to his so-called defense by also quoting the well-known NT scholars C.F. Sitterly and J.H. Greenlee as saying: "Such a wealth of evidence makes it all the more certain that the original words of the NT have been preserved somewhere within the MSS."

What Christian scholars like Eric's two experts are saying is that somewhere in all the jumble of the surviving disagreeing New Testament manuscripts there must be some originality...but where!)

Answer for yourself: As a typical New Testament believer, have you when reading the New Testament, the ability to pick out from these "jumbled and disagreeing New Testament Scriptures" what is originally true from what is false since the Christian scholars attest that "truth" is jumbled somewhere within it?

Answer for yourself: Are you qualified to read the New Testament and have the ability to discern "truth" from "error" on every page?

Answer for yourself: Have you invested years of scholarly research in order to equip yourself with necessary skills that ensure you can pick out the lies from the truth when reading the New Testament?

I never was real good with math but let's get out our handy pocket calculators. Take the 200,000 NT variations admitted by Christian scholars and divide by 8; we have 25,000 NT variations which quoted scholars like Geisler and Nix said have weight. Now, let's divide 200,000 by 60. We come up with 3,333 New Testament variations which these two Christians scholars said were substantial! Taking the low number of 3,333 substantial variations, we still have a major headache for those who uphold the infallibility of the New Testament!"

Answer for yourself: Have you ever thought that you should ask your Pastor how many of these 3,333 substantial New Testament variations conflict in matters of salvation let alone in doctrines where your life-style is either pleasing or displeasing to God?

Speaking of Doctors Westcott and Hort, fundamentalist minister, educator and author Dr. D.A. Waite criticizes their work by charging that Hort deliberately understates the number of variances between his reconstructed Greek New Testament translation and the "original" Textus Receptus, or the "received" Greek text behind the King James Version of the New Testament. Waite notes that he counted some 5,604 places where Westcott and Hort "rejected the Textus Receptus", which includes 9,970 Greek words that were either added, subtracted or changed from what he terms the original Textus Receptus.

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that? At least 9,970 words were either added or subtracted or changed from the earlier translation of the Bible; the Textus Receptus?

Answer for yourself: Do you recall the following verses from the Old Testament?

Deut. 4:2

2 Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

Deut 12:32

32 What thing soever I command you, observe to do it: thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish from it.

Answer for yourself: Did any of these 9,970 words which were either "added, subtracted, or changed" in the New Testament affect, influence, or change Biblical doctrines or dogmas from what the Old Testament once said?

You better listen to what I just asked. The horrible fact is that many do! Over the years my research, as well as the research conducted by many others have revealed the same results. The tragic fact is that the typical believer in the Church pew has not the slightest idea to the corruption which has occurred to the New Testament. The typical New Testament believer would literally die if he knew the horrible and severe violations does to the Masoretic text by the writers of the New Testament and their subsequent translations which are filled with gross distortions of the Old Testament for purposes of indoctrination. In their never-ending quest for religious legitimacy and status, the writers of the New Testament have not hesitated to twist, distort, pervert, and concoct Old Testament verses as expediency dictated, and subsequent translations of the New Testament followed suit in the steps of their predecessors.

Waite calculated that these changes came to 45.9 pages of differences within the whole of the New Testament (The Four-Fold Superiority of the King James Version, Collingswood, New Jersey, 1992, pp. 5-6. This reference is taken from Waite's book Defending the King James Bible: The Four-Fold Superiority of the King James Version). The next time you go to church and read from the New Testament I want you to count 45 pages and hold them between your thumb and realize that this much "verbiage" in the New Testament is considered by scholars to be substantial variations !

Again, such statistics are not very reassuring to "infallible New Testament" advocates. However, as I will endeavor to show, the above figures are the least of the problems inherent with the New Testament.

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #6

Over the past centuries countless Christian ministers and scholars, both Protestant and Catholic, have appealed to the "original Greek" of the New Testament while attempting to make some theological argument, which may have indeed formed the foundation of an important doctrine. The question I wish to put forward to you is this:

Answer for yourself: What comprises the original Greek New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Is it, as Christian scholars attest, to be found in the so-called Textus Receptus?

We shall now see.

THE PROTESTANTS HAVE TO COME UP WITH THEIR OWN BIBLE SINCE LEAVING THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND THE VULGATE

When the protesting children of Roman Christianity left their mother church they also rejected its bible. That is, they rejected Jerome's Latin Vulgate, traditionally said to have been translated by Jerome from an early New Testament version called the Old Latin, which itself rested on the authority of the Alexandrian and Western Texts. Of necessity the newly designated Protestants had to find another source of authority for their new-found faith. For this need they turned to what essentially was the only alternative—the large collection of New Testament manuscripts known as the Byzantine Greek Texts, so-called because they surfaced inside the Eastern (Orthodox) Christian Church, which had formally split from the Western, or Roman Catholic Church in the eleventh century.

In many important instances the Byzantine Texts differed greatly from both the Alexandrian and Western Texts, and, as already noted, they also differed greatly in comparison with each other.

Answer for yourself: Do you remember that previously we stated that no "two" Greek New Testament manuscripts agreed with each other?

Answer for yourself: Did you notice that not only did the Byzantine Texts differ from the Alexandrian and Western Texts, but they also disagreed with "each other" as well in the same family of Texts?

This meant that in order to use the collective Byzantine Texts Protestant scholars had to reconstruct a new Greek bible.

THE ERASMUS GREEK NEW TESTAMENT…CALLED "THE LEAST

CAREFULLY PREPARED BOOK EVER PUBLISHED"…HOW HONEST WAS HE… AND HIS NEW TESTAMENT?

Such an attempt had already been made by the great Dutch Catholic scholar Desiderius Erasmus, who worked in Baste, Switzerland. But his Greek New Testament, printed in 1516, left a lot to be desired.

Among the many faults in Erasmus' reconstruction efforts was that he was able to locate only two rather inferior Byzantine manuscripts for the greater part of his work. (Metzger, op. cit., p. xxi). The editors of The Cambridge History of the Bible add this: "Further, while Erasmus suggested that he had consulted many manuscripts, in fact he used few in the preparation of the text he published, and most of these he found in Baste." Vol. 1, p. 60).

Answer for yourself: First of all did you notice that Erasmus, the first man to give the Protestants the Greek New Testament from the Byzantine Texts "lied" about his production?

Further, Erasmus used only the Complutensian Polyglot for his translation of the book of Revelation, which indeed in his copy was missing the last page, or six whole verses of the last chapter. As a substitute for the missing versus Erasmus simply used Jerome's Latin Vulgate for "what he supposed the Greek text should read" (The Oxford Companion to the Bible, p. 490). So after all part of the Catholic Bible crept into the Protestant Bible anyway!

On top of this, Erasmus is known to have tampered with the text of the Byzantine manuscripts he was using. For example they didn't contain the infamous, and completely spurious passage of I John 5:7, which falsely acknowledges the doctrine of the Trinity. Virtually all scholars acknowledge that this passage was the work of a monk copyist in the fourth century AD. It is known as the Johannine Comma, and, as the editors of Harper's Bible Commentary state, "This gloss [lie!], apparently motivated by early trinitarian debates, is not found in any Greek manuscript before the fifteenth century" (Harper's Bible Commentary, p. 1294.)

Answer for yourself: Is it a fair assumption to say that Erasmus' theology was instrumental in creation of his New Testament regardless of what the Greek manuscripts he used "contained within them" or "did not contain within them"?

Answer for yourself: Besides this "doctrinal creationism" do you know where other doctrinal "creationisms" lie within the New Testament which God never intended you believe or cherish?

Most modern Bible translations agree that I John 5:7 is a false insertion, and do not include it in their work. Even the extremely liberal Living Bible makes a note about this scripture! Most bible commentaries, such as Peake's Commentary on the Bible, are forced to admit that I John 5:7 doesn't belong in the Bible, noting that, "no respectable Greek manuscript contains it." (p. 1030.)

The verse is, in fact, not found in the earliest copies of the Vulgate itself; although it is included in the present Catholic bible. After rendering the spurious verse in the main text The New Testament, a Catholic translation from the Latin Vulgate, says in the footnote: "According to the evidence of many manuscripts, and the majority of commentators, these verses should read: "For there are three that bear witness: the Spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three are one." The Holy See [the papacy] reserves to itself the right to pass finally on the origin of the present reading." (p. 638.)

Religious historian Salomon Reinach writes: "The Roman Church refused to bow to evidence. 'How,' she argued, 'if these verses were an interpolation, could the Holy Spirit who guides and directs the Church, have allowed her to regard this lofty affirmation of the Trinity as authentic, and permitted its insertion in the official edition of the sacred books?" (Orpheus, p. 260.)

Again the Church and the New Testament believer make a fatal assumption; namely, that the Holy Spirit is directing the Christian Church in such plagiarism of pagan doctrines as truth!

When his fellow Catholics complained that he'd left this passage out, Erasmus supplied it in his next edition on the justification that a Byzantine MSS. in Dublin contained the verse. However, not having access to the Dublin MSS., Erasmus simply took the text from the Latin Vulgate and translated the Latin into Greek (The Cambridge History of the Bible, Vol. 1, p. 60).

These examples and many others tell us why Erasmus' Greek New Testament contains words that do not agree with any known Greek text. Moreover, Erasmus' translation of the last six verses of Revelation are still found in the so-called original Greek New Testament.

Relevant to this point is that Erasmus, in trying to be the first get a Protestant Greek translation of the Byzantine Texts into print, threw together in a few months what his competitors at Alcala de Henares University took years to assemble. The University's text came to be known as the Complutensian Polyglot, which, as previously noted, Erasmus used in his translation of the book of Revelation! One contemporary critic in England called Erasmus' work the "least carefully penned book ever published", which is echoed by the editors of The Cambridge History of the Bible, who conservatively say of Erasmus' work that it shows "plainly the signs of undue haste" (Vol. I, p. 59).

ERASMUS' GREEK NEW TESTAMENT (TEXTUS RECEPTUS) … THE FOUNDATION FOR ALL LATER GREEK NEW TESTAMENTS

However, the main problem with Erasmus' translation, or reconstruction, which became known as the Textus Receptus or the Received Text, is that it formed the foundation for later Greek New Testaments, and hence it is essentially the "original Greek" of the present day Protestant New Testament and the one proclaimed as God's infallible word by fundamentalist Christians.

And we must not forget that truthful Christian Biblical scholars call his work "the least carefully penned book ever published".

However, such claims can only be made by ignoring the embarrassing history behind the Textus Receptus. The Textus Receptus got its name by way of the Elzovir brothers, who printed bibles in Leiden and later in Amsterdam. In the preface to their second edition of the Greek New Testament of 1633 is found the following: "Therefore you dear reader now have the text received by all, in which we give nothing changed or corrupted." From this sentence the term Textus Receptus (The Received Text) was derived (Metzger, op. cit., pp. xxii, xxiii).

STEPHANUS….THE KJV…I GUESS HE MEANT WELL…BUT…

The next translator to try his hand at producing a Greek New Testament from the Byzantine Texts was a Parisian reconstructionist printer and part-time scholar named Robert Estienne (or Etienne), who is better known as Stephanus. Called the editio Regia, his Greek Bible was published in Geneva in 1551 and must have been more to the liking of the Protestant world because it essentially became "the original Greek" behind the best known of all Protestant New Testaments, which is to say the Authorized Version or the 1611 King James Bible. It was this same Stephanus, by the way, who first employed the use of chapter and verse divisions in the Christian bible. This is a major problem in itself for often the correct interpretation of passages is severely hampered by his chapter divisions. Isaiah chapter 52 and 53 are prime examples.

THE ERASMUS' TEXT REBORN…IN THE KJV 1611

Although the concept of chapter and verse divisions was in itself a much-needed improvement for bible study in some instances, Stephanus' efforts in this area have been greatly criticized because his divisions often broke sentences apart or inserted chapter breaks in places that broke the continuity of a story. The oddity in this situation is that numerous "the bible is the infallible word of God" advocates have argued over the years against anyone trying to correct certain problems caused by Stephanus' clumsy divisions by declaring that "one doesn't mess around with the infallible word of God!"

But the real problem with the Stephanus translation is that he relied heavily on the translation of Erasmus' Greek text. In fact Stephanus' translation is but a repeat of the fifth Erasmian text with variants. As Erasmus before him, Stephanus also used the Greek of the above mentioned Complutensian Polyglot. This translation was undertaken in 1502 under the direction of Cardinal Ximenes de Cisneros, Archbishop of Toledo, Spain, by license of Pope Leo X . Cardinal de Cisneros founded the University of Alcala de Henares at Complutum where the work on his Complutensian Polyglot began in 1502, with the New Testament finally being completed in 1514 and formally published in 1522 after the pope gave his permission. It was against this translation work that Erasmus was competing, as he wanted to be the first to get a translation of the Byzantine text into print to chiefly satisfy commercial demands. Polyglot bibles, by the way, are editions containing a biblical text in several languages, usually in parallel columns (The Oxford Companion to the Bible, p. 601).

In his work the good cardinal used both the great codices of the Catholic Church (i.e., the Alexandrian and Western Texts, which were loaned to him by the Vatican) and the Latin Vulgate itself to augment his limited collection of Byzantine codices, all of which tells us immediately both the underlying scholarship of Stephanus' text and that of the 1611 King James Bible (The Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. V, pp. 289-290).

In other words the KJV Bible, the production of Stephanus, is a mixture of Catholic manuscripts and Byzantine Eastern texts. It is a mixture!

The editors of The Cambridge History of the Bible write, "For their Greek text the [KJV] translators worked from Stephanus and [Theodore] Beza, without any sure principles of textual criticism to guide them[and they did make extensive use of [the]Geneva and Rhemes [Bibles]" (Vol. 1, p 167. The KJV translators essentially used the 1588, 1589 and 1598 editions of Beza's work).

As to the so-called translation of Theodore Beza (whose name was given to the famous Codex Bezae), even though he published nine consecutive corrected editions of his Textus Receptus (from 1565 - 1604 with a tenth published after his death), his foundational "original" Greek was simply borrowed from Stephanus' translation, which, remember, was borrowed from the work of Erasmus: "He [Beza] made little significant change from the fourth edition of Estienne [i e., Stephanus] . . . which he had before him in preparing his own edition" (The Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. V, pp. 289-290).

In other words the "inspired original Greek" behind our modern Protestant New Testament, the fundamentalist-proclaimed infallible word of God, is traceable only to the sixteenth century where we find that it was essentially a piece-meal composition as reconstructed by three different men:

- A Catholic Cardinal
- A Catholic Scholar
- A Parisian Printer

Answer for yourself: How does that make you feel knowing that as a Protestant your Bible and New Testament is the work of only 3 men, let alone Catholics?

Answer for yourself: Do you think that their theologies "crept" into the text in places where you believe to be "inspired"?

It you have paid attention so far you already have been given examples where it had!

Answer for yourself: And who knows how and by what means these three came to select from the differing texts the final verses for their "original Greek" New Testament?

IN A NUTSHELL

The New International Dictionary of the Christian Church, p 353. and The Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th ea., vol. 3, p. 518 attest:

The history of the KJV is summed up thus: "Sixty years after the first edition of the Bible was printed, a Dutch scholar Erasmus in 1516 printed a Greek language version of the New Testament. He used only three or four available twelfth century copy manuscripts [he actually used two!] and a later copy of Jerome's Latin translation which he translated back into Greek; this translation had now gone through countless copies and had been converted from Greek to Latin and back to Greek. This mishmash brought about a self originating, concocted Greek text producing a unique reading never to be found in any other known Greek manuscript. Unfortunately this artificial perverted text became the basis for the received text, the Textus Receptus, which was later used as the base text of the King James Bible. In 1611, King James of England had the Textus Receptus adopted into the King James Bible, including all the error in the Erasmus Text. This became the basis for most Protestant translations in Europe until the end of the nineteenth century (Armageddon 2033: Facts on Bible Time Prophecies, Leafy Grove Keston, Kent, England: The Bible Research and Investigation Company, 1996, chapter 4, "The Clean Up of Scripture").

At any rate, the work of these three men stand behind what is regarded by fundamentalist Christians as the most sacred of all bible translations, which is to say the King James Version (KJV) of the Holy Bible. This is a joke!

Answer for yourself: How comfortable are you resting your eternal security upon the work of 3 men, 3 Catholics, let alone considering the hundreds of thousands of conflicting scriptures contained in such a document called the New Testament?

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #7

Answer for yourself: How much do you know about the King James Version of the Bible?

Ever since as authorization by King James I back in the seventeenth century, the King James Version translation has been "the bible" of the majority of English-speaking Protestants. Indeed when Protestants get into the argument of biblical infallibility it is virtually always the KJV that they hold up as the model of perfection. Even when other translations are used the majority of fundamentalist ministers strongly recommend that they be "checked for accuracy" against the KJV. This is why of all the countless translations since 1611 the KJV is by far the world's best seller. But having already seen the real foundation behind the "original Greek" of the KJV, let's now look a little closer at the history of the translation itself.

When present-day Christian fundamentalist declare that the KJV is the "inerrant" or "infallible" word of God, they probably don't know that the KJV translation has undergone many changes—word deletions, additions and changes—in the last 350 years; they probably don't know that the present KJV lacks fourteen entire books (the so-called Apocrypha) which were in the original translation of 1611 but were dropped in the 1769 revision. They probably have never been enlightened to the tact that the KJV or the Authorized Version was never authorized by anyone other than England's King James I. Their ministers have conveniently forgotten to tell them that the original KJV had a calendar of annual holy days which all believers were expected to follow and that these days included such notable Roman Catholic examples as the Purification of the Virgin Mary, The Annunciation of Our Lady and Innocent's Day. In fact, fundamentalists ministers like to declare that the KJV was so popular with the common people that all other translations fell into disuse, which, they claim, indicates that it had God's blessing. But the truth is that when the KJV was printed all other translations ceased to be published. Its triumph over previous translations is due to that fact and that fact alone. "It [the KJV] replaced the Bishop's Bible in public use because after 1611 no other folio Bible was printed" (The Cambridge History of the Bible, Vol. l, p.168).

Concerning the accuracy of the translation work of the 1611 KJV, history doesn't paint a flattering picture. In 1881, upon the release of the Revised Version (a reworked edition of the 1769 KJV, which was a revision of the original 1611), the revisers had this to say about the so-called Authorized Version of 1611:

"The texts relied on are founded, for the most part, on MSS. [manuscripts] of late date, few in number, and used with little critical skill . . . "

As an example of that last point we may note that during the translation of the KJV disputed points about a given text were settled by a vote of the translators, which, in the case of a deadlock, meant that "God's infallible word" often depended on the deciding vote of the chairman of the translating committee—and his vote depended entirely upon his own religious views

Furthermore to this confusion we can add the political and religious views of his majesty King James I.

THE INFLUENCE OF KING JAMES ON HIS BIBLE

As already noted the man behind the KJV was England's King James I. James' influence on the translation bearing his name has been negatively commented on by numerous scholars, which is a point that is all but unknown to most Protestants. In fact, the king hand-picked the scholars for the work, carefully selecting only those who were both politically and doctrinally in accord with his views . On 22 July 1604 King James "appointed certain learned men, to the number of four and fifty, for translation of the Bible" (The Cambridge History of the Bible, Vol. l, p 164).

Before they set to work the king also issued his hand-picked so-called translation committee fifteen rules which they had to follow in their work. One rule was that the very popular Bishops' Bible, which then was in use throughout the Anglican Church, "had to be followed and as little altered as the Truth of the original will permit. When a word hath divers significations, that to be kept which hath been most commonly used by the most of the Ancient Fathers, being agreeable to the Propriety of the Place, and the Analogy of the Faith.... These translations to be used when they agree better with the text than the Bishops' Bible; viz., Tyndale's, Matthew's, Coverdale's, Whitchurch's [the Great Bible], [and the] Geneva . . . " (The Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th ea., vol.3, pp. 533-534).

Scholars complain that fifteen such rules certainly tied the hands of the translators. But more than this, the last rule adds additional complications to the claim of an infallible word of God.

Because the Bishops' Bible played such an important part in the translation of the KJV, it is essential to this study to look into its history. In 1526 William Tyndale, working from the Greek of Erasmus' printed text, produced his New Testament, which, it should be noted, was not authorized by the Christian Church (Metzger, op. Cit., pp. xxi, xxii). After he was burned at the stake for this heresy, John Rogers, a friend of Tyndale's, printed the so-called Thomas Matthews Bible in 1537 by simply using William Tyndale's New Testament and Pentateuch. Thomas Matthews is thought to have been an alias for John Rogers (The Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th ed. Vol. 3, p. 532). In 1539 a lawyer named Richard Taverner published (many historians call it "pirated") a revision of the Matthew Bible, which was followed in 1539 by yet another revision by Miles Coverdale. Unlike the previous editions or translations, Coverdale's work had the official sanction of King Henry VIII's ministers. When finished, this new translation became known as the Great Bible because of its large format (The Oxford Companion to the Bible, p. 759). However, Coverdale not only based his revision on the Matthew Bible he also consulted the Latin Vulgate and Erasmus' edition of the Greek text—the latter of which, as the reader probably noticed, was the Greek behind the Matthew Bible to begin with (The Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th ed. Vol. 3, p. 532).

During the reign of Queen Mary I, who tried to revert England back to Catholicism after the death of her father and brother, King Henry VIII and King Edward VI, the printing of all English language bibles in the kingdom was stopped. Those who wanted to produce bibles in English had to go over to the European Continent. It was during this time that the Geneva Bible was produced (so-called because it was printed in Geneva, Switzerland). The New Testament was translated by William Whittingham, pastor of the English Church in Geneva, whose "original Greek" authority for the work can be traced directly to the translation of Erasmus—an important point considering the Geneva Bible also played a part in the translation work of the KJV.

In short order the Geneva Bible became the bible of the English speaking world and was widely used in both England and Scotland, especially during the reign of Queen Elizabeth I. However, as the editors of The Oxford Companion to the Bible point out, "Its extremely Protestant notes were offensive to the [English] bishops, and in 1568 a tension of the Great Bible was published, which became known as the Bishops' Bible, owing to the great number of bishops on the committee" (The Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th ed. Vol. 3, p. 759).

In other words, the scholarship behind the Bishops' Bible was the Great Bible, which, as noted above, was rooted in Erasmus' Greek New Testament, and which also formed another building block of the KJV. We can add to this point that the KJV translators understood that they had a need to translate certain passages to uphold King James' "Divine Right of Kings" doctrine, which was the cornerstone of his reign—and one, by the way, that ultimately caused the English Civil War and the death of his son, King Charles I.

ALTERATION OF HEBREW AND GREEK WORDS ON PURPOSE

If the overall history behind the KJV weren't already bad enough, many scholars also point out that in certain places the KJV translators changed the meaning of the original Hebrew and Greek words to better fit the doctrines of their own Anglican faith. That this complaint is valid is easily noticeable in the role call of King James' hand-picked translation committee. They include Dr. John Bois, Dean of Canterbury, Lancelot Andrews, Dean of Westminster and Bishop of Winchester, Dr. William Bedwell, an Anglican theologian, Miles Smith, Bishop of Gloucester and Dr. George, Abbott and Archbishop of Canterbury (The Cambridge History of the Bible, Vol. I, p. 164). Couple all of this with the fact that the KJV translators were working from a very faulty and piece-meal Greek reconstruction that had flowed from the pens and whims of essentially three men in the previous century, and we have the truth, or perhaps it is better said, we see the farce behind the so-called infallible King James Bible.

This history tells us why Hugh Broughton, the foremost Hebrew scholar of England at that time the KJV was published, rejected the suggestion that he endorse the work by saying that he would rather "be rent to pieces by wild horses than have had any part in the urging of such a wretched version of the Bible on the poor people. "

As an example of the truth behind Broughton's opinion, just two short years after the release of 1611 KJV a revision was released that differed from the 1611 original in over four hundred places. In 1769 Dr. Benjamin Blayney of Oxford produced another edition of the KJV which he also called The Authorized Version, although scholars point out that it was never formally authorized by either king or Parliament (The Oxford Companion of the Bible, p. 760). It was this new edition that dropped the fourteen books of the Apocrypha from the "infallible word of God" while at the same time introducing countless other changes to the text. However, changes to the text, whether authorized or not, was only part of the problem.

In 1851 the American Bible Society compared six different publisher's editions of the King James Bible then in circulation and discovered over 24,000 variations in the text—which was understandable since the printers had to typeset the bibles by hand. Even so, one minister rightly asked how could there be an inerrant King James Bible when even the different editions had ten's of thousands of variant readings? Such a sad state didn't go unnoticed and in 1870 the Church of England formally authorized a revision of the KJV. Fifty scholars, most of whom were Anglicans, went to work. In the New Testament alone some thirty thousand changes were made, with some five thousand based on what they called "a better Greek text." That last notation means that since the time of Erasmus, Cardinal Ximenes de Cisneros and Stephanus' piece-meal compositions, men had been steadily working to produce a better "original" Greek New Testament, which the new translators were now going to employ in their new translation. All of this brings us to the present day "original" Greek New Testament.

ORIGINAL GREEK…WHERE IS IT AT?

The present day Greek New Testament is essentially the work of two scholars, Dr. Brooke F. Westcott and Dr. Fenton J.A. Hort, who, in 1881, produced an "original" Greek New Testament entitled, The New Testament: A Translation from the Original Greek. What we need to note here, however, is that Doctors Westcott and Hort primarily used Stephanus' Textus Receptus augmented by another translation by Professor Konstantin von Tischendorf for their work. As neither Stephanus nor his predecessors ever saw, let alone used an "original" Greek New Testament manuscript for their work, one wonders how Doctors Westcott and Hort came up with the second part of their title, "A Translation from the Original Greek"?

This point aside, not long after Westcott and Hort's work the Christian world was presented with yet another "original" Greek New Testament by the efforts of Dr. Eberhard Nestle (Novam Testamentum graece) printed in Stuttgart in 1898. Important to this study is the tact that Nestle primarily used the text of Westcott and Hort, who used Stephanus' work, who, remember, used the translation of Erasmus' piece-meal reconstruction. However, even this effort was just a stepping stone in the history of the "original" Greek New Testament. Nestle's "original" Greek New Testament was eventually corrected and augmented by Doctors Erwin Nestle and Kurt Aland, whose work is known as the Nestle/Aland Greek Text.

Earlier in these articles I quoted fundamentalist minister Dr. D.A. Waite's complaint that F.J.A. Hort and B.F. Westcott had either added, subtracted or changed almost l0,000 words in their Greek New Testament in comparison to the Textus Receptus of Erasmus and Stephanus. Dr. Waite noted that this amounted to 45.9 pages of changes. In his book, Defending the King James Bible, Waite offers this further complaint about the current Nestle/Aland Greek New Testament, which, as noted, is essentially based on the work of Westcott and Hort, who based their translation on the work of the Received Text of Staphanus and Erasmus: "The fact that there have been TWENTY-SIX EDITIONS IN EIGHTY-ONE YEARS (a new edition every 3.1 years) would give you the DISTINCT impression that these men, and their followers, who put confidence in their editions, have NO ASSURANCE WHATEVER of what ARE NOT the very and the exact GREEK WORDS OF GOD in the New Testament!"

Answer for yourself: Did you hear that and does that sink in?

Answer for yourself: If the New Testament is to be believed to be "The Word Of God" then knowing these facts does it not stand to reason that God has done a terrible job of preserving it?

Despite the fact that Dr. Waite misses the point that if the New Testament is indeed the word of God, then God has done a miserable job preserving it, his complaint about the present day Greek text, which stands behind all modern translations, speaks volumes about the history of New Testament corruption and needs no further comment other than to criticize his unmitigated defense of the Textus Receptus, which stands behind his beloved KJV.

In his attack on men like Westcott, Hort, Nestle and Aland, whom he calls "theological heretics", Waite conveniently forgets to mention why it was that they decided it necessary to produce a new Greek bible in the first placed. He forgets to mention the sloppy methods by which the "original" Textus Receptus was produced, nor does he bother to relate the history of the biased, opinionated men or their methods which ultimately produced the KJV. Undoubtedly Dr. Waite forgets all this because the men who produced the KJV were, as good Protestants, quite close to his own Baptist theology!

With blunt admissions like these, which are a slap in the face of the "infallibility of the New Testament" doctrine, we can see why it is that men like Dr. Waite try to warn fellow fundamentalists away from reading the works of so-called secular scholarship which expose such facts to the "believing flock".

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #8

Faced with the irrefutable truth that the history of the Protestant New Testament is one of mass of confusion, a die-hard fundamentalist, trying desperately to cling to his faith, might naturally be tempted to look at the forerunner of their New Testament, i.e., the Latin Vulgate, as a possible candidate for the "infallible" word of God. Even though such a claim is made by the Roman Catholic Church the truth is that their own history relates a different story.

Christian legend says that in the time of St. Jerome the bible then in use, which is now known as the Old Latin, was deemed to be in a mess. So hopeless was the situation that the pope himself prevailed upon the great St. Jerome to correct the situation by using the "original Greek" New Testament to produce a new translation (The New Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, p. 441). This Jerome supposedly did. The editors of The Cambridge History of the Bible make the point essential to this study: "A natural question is: Can the 'old' Greek manuscript that Jerome used in the preparation of the Vulgate gospels be identified? The short answer is, No" (The New Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, p. 529). However, as they point out, scholars are able to partially identify some of Jerome's work as being based on both the Alexandrian and Western families of text—which doesn't tell us a whole lot (The New Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, p. 529). For instance it doesn't tell us anything about the "original" manuscripts or their origin, nor does it tell us how much of these Jerome used or indeed how many changes he made. To accept the Latin Vulgate as the "infallible word of God" one essentially has to place their faith in Jerome and equally in the numerous revisers that followed him. They also have to unquestionably accept the manuscripts behind the Vulgate.

Considering that all we really know of the Vulgate is that it is based on the Old Latin, then we need to examine this source closer, which is virtually impossible because it has an obscure origin. The only definite fact about the Old Latin is that the surviving fragments exhibit many variations, which means that they are far from being a candidate for the "infallible" word of God." On top of this almost all scholars seriously doubt that Jerome ever translated the entire New Testament, which tells us that the Vulgate, like the Protestant versions, is essentially nothing more than a composite work (The Cambridge History of the Bible, vol. I, pp. 373-374). Jerome is essentially credited with translating the four-gospels. Short and to the point, these are the facts that are conveniently forgotten while Roman Catholics denounce the heresy of Protestant bible translations!

Answer for yourself: But what about the other sources for Jerome's work? What about the Alexandrian and Western texts, which scholars have identified as partial sources for the Vulgate, and which, by the way, are also employed by scholars for modern Protestant translations?

THE GREAT CODICES

A “codice” is a manuscript volume containing the Scriptures. To further complicate matters for fundamentalist Christians the last few centuries have brought the discoveries of several so-called great Uncials, so designated because they were written in Greek capital letters. The Unicals are the oldest known extant manuscripts of the Christian New Testament and are as follows: The Codex Alexandrinus from the fifth century AD, the Codex Sinaiticus from the fourth or early fifth centuries; The Codex Vaticanus, the oldest, from the fourth century; the Codex Ephroemi, from the fifth century and the Codex Bezae from the sixth century.

One would think that the discovery of these MSS. would be a welcomed event in Christendom, hailed as a great advancement in the study of Christian scripture. It was not!

Answer for yourself: Why not for Heaven's sake?

This is because the great Uncials not only disagree with the present Christian bible, they show unmistakable signs of having been heavily edited.

Imagine, the oldest known MSS. of the New Testament show disturbing evidence of having been "worked over" by Catholic monks!

And, if these facts weren't bad enough, some of the great Uncials include the ancient and so-called spurious books of the bible. For example the Codex Sinaiticus includes the Epistle of Barnabas and The Shepherd of Hermas—a fact that focuses one's attention on the infamous Christian councils and their disgraceful process of "canonizing" the New Testament, a subject that I will deal with shortly.

To completely understand why these oldest of all manuscripts are so controversial within fundamental Christianity we only need cite several examples.

In 1938 scholar T.C. Skeat examined the fourth century Codex Sinaiticus under ultra-violet light. Under the visible text he found the following verse, which had been erased: "Consider the lilies of the field: they neither card nor spin. " Biblical historian Robin Lane Fox writes, "the King James translators have beguiled us with a wrong version; there was growing, no toiling, in what the author wrote. Strictly, there were no 'lilies', because they are a very free translation of the Greek; however, the botanists' favorite candidate for the flower in question (a Stembergia) would spoil the flow of the saying" (Fox, The Unauthorized Version, pp. 140-141, referring to Matthew 6:28).

Another example is the story of Jesus' encounter with the woman taken in adultery. Manfred Barthel writes, "Two passages in this Gospel [John] are not included in the most reliable ancient manuscripts, and stylistic analysis confirms that they were added by another writer" (What the Bible Really Says, p. 232). Robin Lane Fox adds, "'He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her"; "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more". The episode is missing from the surviving fourth-century codices which underpin the rest of the New Testament text; it is not known in an early papyrus or any quotation by an early Christian author, although the subject was relevant to so much which they discussed. Its style is universally held to differ from the rest of the fourth Gospel, and in its present place it interrupts the flow of the text" (The Unauthorized Version, p. 143).

Most Christians are unaware that there are two versions of the Acts of the Apostles. One is almost a tenth longer than the other. Again, Robin Lane Fox makes the relevant observation: "The shorter, usual text is based on one of the main Greek lines, the Alexandrian, whereas the longer alternative is best represented in a book-text, Codex Bezae, of the fifth to sixth century date which contains the Gospels and Acts in Greek and Latin. Its extra wordings and variant readings are sometimes reflected in early Christian quotations or in early papyrus fragments of Acts' text" (The Unauthorized Version, p. 141).

In just these few examples out of hundreds we can see why so many present-day ministers have denounced the great codices as corrupt—they present an embarrassing predicament. Essentially, what we see in the most ancient extant Greek manuscripts is the evolution, if you'll pardon the expression, of the New Testament Gospel stories especially when compared to the present-day finished product. That this is exactly what these MSS. prove has caused no small embarrassment for countless theologians who, on more than one occasion, have said that it was unfortunate that these early MSS. survived to the present because by their contents they serve no useful purpose for the unity of the Christian faith.

Such embarrassment stands behind the following comment from Christian fundamentalist, Dr. D.A. Waite, in his book Defending the King James Bible. After relating the story about how Professor Konstantin von Tischendorf discovered the Codex Sinaiticus in a trash basket at St. Catherine's Monastery in the Sinai, and buying it for several hundred dollars, Waite quotes a Dr. James Qurollo: "I don't know which of them had the truer evaluation of its worth—Tischendorf, who wanted to buy it, or the monks, who were getting ready to burn it!" Waite adds to this comment, "He had to pay for the trash. It really was that, because of all the heretic' changes" (Waite, Defending The King James Bible, p. 60).

Heresy, as Dr. Waite charges, is not the only transparent argument used against the great codices. Here is an even more radical excuse, which is offered by a Christian fundamentalist church: "The oldest extant copies [of the New Testament] are the most corrupt! . . . The oldest fragments of the New Testament are of the 'Western Text,' used by the early Catholic Church fathers in the first three centuries. This type of text is full of spurious additions, notable corruption's, deletions and contradictions. These 'oldest' fragments vary so from each other that there would be no way of knowing what constitutes the New testament! This 'Western Text' admittedly originated in Rome!"

Dr. D.A. Waite echoes this opinion: "Both Dr. Frederick Scrivener and Dean John William Burgon agreed that the greatest pollution of the stream of pure manuscripts was accomplished in the first 100 years after the New Testament was written! So some believe that the oldest are not necessarily the best! This is especially true since the heretics had their knives out "correcting" the Greek N.T. almost as soon as it was written" (The Four-Fold Superiority of the King James Version, p. 8). Waite follows this thought in his book, Defending the King James Bible, when he writes of the oldest codices: ". . . [they] had very little, if any, use by their owners. I believe this was true because the owners recognized them to be perverted texts, having been defaced and polluted by heretics and others . . . they are neither the best nor the purest. They were corrupted by heretics" (p. 59). With these biased, ignorant words ringing in our ears, let's touch on a very significant point.

Christian fundamentalists laud the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls, in particular the Book of Isaiah, as incontrovertible evidence that the Old Testament is the "infallible word of God." That is to say, because the Isaiah scroll essentially agrees with the now accepted book of Isaiah, or the Masoretic text of the Christian bible, it is proof; say the fundamentalists, of Isaiah's authenticity and God's hand in its preservation. This is a fine sounding argument if it weren't for one problem: Among those same Dead Sea Scrolls is a copy of the book of Jeremiah that is more in line with the Septuagint, which is the translation behind the Old Testament of the great Uncials. This fact has caused considerable controversy within many fundamentalist Christian circles, and it may well be one of the reasons that it took some fifty years before Christian scholars were finally forced lo make the Dead Sea Scrolls public.

But let us notice something: the same men who hold up the ancient example of the Dead Sea Scroll book of Isaiah as proving the authenticity of the bible, will not apply the same test to the oldest Greek MSS. of the New Testament. That is because when applied to the New Testament this comparison proves the opposite of what they are claiming, which is the doctrine of an infallible Christian bible. Hence they complain that the oldest are the most corrupt! This claim, by the way, is an unscientific principle, especially in the field of history where the closer one comes to the original source the nearer they are to the truth. At Qumran was discovered older Hebrew texts that differed considerably in unique places from the Greek Septuagint and which also predated it by some 1000 years. This is of importance because they also basically agreed with the oldest existing (up to then) Hebrew texts of 900-1000 A.D. These older Hebrew texts had differed also considerably with the Greek LXX and were basically discounted by Christianity as the more authentic because of their age as well as their "theological diversity" when compared with the LXX. But with the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls the Jewish Palestinian Masoretic text was exonerated and now the question as to "theological diversity" falls squarely upon the Greek Septuagint which now appears to have altered in no small way the "theology" concerning atonement and the Jewish Messiah. Basically Christianity has been turned upside down with the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Perhaps the irony of the whole situation is that if the great Uncials had been in complete agreement with the present-day Christian bible, their discovery would have been hailed as one of the greatest events in Christian history! Indeed, most Christian fundamentalists blatantly display their hypocrisy in this regard by their consistent use of the earliest known fragments of the New Testament as proof of the New Testament's authenticity. In other words because of their age (the earliest dating from the second century AD) these fragments are lauded as proof that the New Testament was written by the men to whom later church lathers assigned authorship. However, what is conveniently forgotten is that these early fragments, like the great Uncials, are from the so-called Alexandrian and Western texts, meaning that they often disagree with the present-day Byzantine Text-based New Testament.

Even more to the point is that when compared one to another, these fragments are full of contradictions. First of all there are only some eighty eight pieces that date before AD 300, with only a few dating before AD 180. As to their conflicting readings we only need cite the example of two early papyri from the Gospel of John. They overlap across seventy verses and, as Robin Lane Fox notes, "even if the plain errors of their copyists are excluded, they differ at no less than seventy small places (Fox, The Unauthorized Version, p. 139).

However, none of the above information seems to deter the intellectually dishonest. Even with the history of the New Testament squarely in front of them they still make statements like this: "None of the modern [NT] scholars have thought to look at the bulk of later New Testament Manuscripts —95% of known Greek Biblical MSS. [i.e., the Byzantine Texts]—which the Greek people and its church have always used! These later MSS., copied century after century from earlier ones as they wore out, are the fundamental basis of the King James Version (KJV)."

As we have seen from the information already presented the author of this statement is being completely dishonest. Scholars have indeed "thought to look at the bulk of later New Testament Manuscripts", which is why there is such great confusion among the many different New Testament translations. Further, the manuscripts that the "Greek people and its church have always used" date back only to the seventh century AD, with complete texts preserved about 200 years later than this time. The author compounds this misinformation with the following: "The nearly 4,000 MSS. of this Byzantine or Official Text agree so perfectly with each other that the only work of the critic is to weed out individual scribal mistakes in the copying of each Ms. The text is not in question!' The author of the above never bothered to give any sources for his statements, which was wise considering the evidence would expose his dishonesty. Yet, I for one, as a former dedicated "the bible is the infallible word of God" advocate, would never have questioned such statements in the past. I would have read this statement in total agreement! Why? Because my fundamentalist background and natural life-long bias in favor of Christianity would lead me to accept without question such an argument—just like a born-Buddhist would accept the fundamentals of his faith without question. The fact is that like 99.99% of all Christians, I had never bothered to research the history of the New Testament. I was born into a Christian fundamentalist family, had grown up believing in New Testament infallibility, and that was good enough for me. My past attitude can be summed up in the little fundamentalist ditty so often quoted: "the bible says it, I believe it, and that settles it!"

What I sadly found out upon serious investigation is that nothing could be further from the truth, and because of believing such lies of biased non-Jews I lived the vast majority of my life opposing the God I loved both in doctrine and conduct because I had believed "in the New Testament" and patterned my life and thoughts after it. Thank God in Heaven that my eyes were opened to the beautiful truth of Biblical Judaism; the faith of Yeshua.

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #9

Most scholars agree that the language of Jesus and his disciples was Aramaic, which means that they never would have written a New Testament in Greek. Further these same scholars note that the sayings of Jesus, as found in the four Gospels, bear traces of having been originally translated from Aramaic into Greek The Jerome Biblical Commentary tells us: ". . . the words of Jesus, as recorded in the Gospels, definitely show Ara[maic] influence.... Since Aramaisms are strongest and most frequent in the words of Jesus, an Aram[aic] saying-source, either written or oral, underlies the Synoptic Gospel tradition"' (Vol. II, pp. 11-12)

THE ALEXANDRIAN INFLUENCE UPON YOUR NEW TESTAMENT

First of all you need to know that the hot-bed of religious scholarship in the first century was Alexandria, Egypt. It was the melting pot for all world religions and provides fertile soil for all religions to mix and exchange views. So we find in Alexandria a little of everything as far as religions myths and stories.

Next you need to know that there is a distinction between the Gospels stories of Jesus' life and the actual quoted sayings of Jesus. This needs to be kept in mind. In other words, while most scholars agree that the most primitive "New Testament" consisted only of the sayings of Jesus, which were likely composed in, or translated from Aramaic, they note that the actual stories surrounding Jesus' life and death, as found in Gospels, were most assuredly composed in Greek. This betrays the Alexandrian influence upon the accounts recorded within the New Testament which are taken from pagan mystery religions and written into the life of Jesus. Such is the Alexandrian influence.

What I say now is at the crux of the problems revealed so far. Scholars, being virtually unanimous that the New Testament was composed in Greek, while at the same time incorporating the Aramaic sayings of Jesus, offer compelling evidence for the accusations that it was later Greek-speaking church fathers who composed the New Testament as we know it. Until the Christian church realizes this truth there may be no hope for her education into the corruptness of the New Testament. The true Apostles did not write the Gospels and many of the supposed letters of Paul were never penned by him. Biblical criticism whereby internal evidences are scrutinized reveals such details.

Evidence for the demonstration that it was the Greek-speaking church fathers who composed the New Testament and not the Jewish followers of Yeshua is seen easily in 3 facts:

- Within the New Testament and written into the life of a Jewish Rabbi is something totally foreign to him as well as the Old Testament and his faith; namely the integrated pagan legends of a virgin-born, crucified sun-god in the Gospel stories which were drawn from the existing mystery religions of such Greeks.
- The accusation is also backed by the admission that the quotations or allusions to the Old Testament found in the New Testament depend upon the Greek Septuagint and not the Masoretic Text which the Jews rejected because of its corruptions at the hands of its Greek translators. The Septuagint was the Old Testament version used by the early church fathers, but would have been deemed unworthy of use by a first century Orthodox Jew like Jesus.

- The existence of the earliest Gospel ever found, the Gnostic Gospel According To Thomas.

As if that was not enough, the scholarly contention that the original New Testament contained only the sayings of Jesus was given a tremendous boost by the discovery in Egypt in 1947 of the Nag Hammadi manuscripts, specifically a gospel account now known as The Gospel According To Thomas. The entire manuscript was written in Coptic and dates to ca. AD 350, while some portions, in Greek, date to ca. AD 140. Actually, the entire MSS. is but a translation of a second century original composed in Greek. This gospel, in certain respects, is actually the oldest known complete MSS. of the NT in existence. But, significantly, it is a Gnostic Christian production containing only the sayings of Jesus and therefore rejected by orthodox Christians. More than likely the main reason why The Gospel According To Thomas is rejected by Christianity is that if they admit that these sayings of Jesus were indeed all there was to the original gospels, then there is a very big problem with the modern four Gospels, because there is much more than the sayings in the accounts of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John! Added to that one's knowledge of Aryan-Sun Myths and their crucified saviors and sun-gods, along with the stories comprising their lives which date up to thousands of years before Jesus, then it is hard for an objective reader of the New Testament to find a story about the life of Jesus in the New Testament which has not be told previously multiple times over about these pagan gods (http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com)

Answer for yourself: Are you a thinking believer?

Answer for yourself: Are you an objective believer who wants the facts and the truth at all costs?

CAN YOU HANDLE THE TRUTH?

To the thinking believer there is only one conclusion to which one can arrive: The New Testament is a woven tale by non-Jews who patterned this "Jesus" which was preached to them after their own pagan gods and only changed the names of them thereby conforming "this Jesus" in the image of their pagan gods and their pagan religions. The results of such efforts is the New Testament which is a collection of articles which betray such plagiarism. But one must have the knowledge before hand if one is to see and recognize such alarming perversions as applied to the Historical Jesus.

The editors of The Complete Gospels explain that, "The frequent word-for-word agreements between Matthew and Luke are impossible to account for if both were independently translating from Aramaic (p. 250).

These facts along with corrupt church history and the confused state of both the Protestant and Catholic so-called original Greek New Testaments, have caused a few scholars to claim that the whole of the New Testament was originally written in Aramaic. Although on the surface this argument seems logical history itself doesn't support the claim.

THE PESHITTA TEXT….THE ARAMIC BIBLE

There is a New Testament translation that has been promoted by many as the only reliable text because it is allegedly a translation from the original Aramaic writings of Jesus' apostles. The translation, known as the Peshitta, which means the "simple version," purports to have been copied, century after century from the original Aramaic manuscripts—which notably are conveniently missing. The Peshitta is reproduced in English in the Lamsa translation. There are a number of flaws in this claim. First of all, history tells us that the earliest version of what came to be called the Peshitta, known as the Old Syriac, contained only the four Gospels and not the entire New Testament. Although those who promote the Peshitta somehow date this work to ca AD 160, the second problem is that the only "original" of the work survives in quotations found in later writings.

The fact is that the earliest surviving manuscripts of the Peshitta date only from the fourth and fifth centuries. They are The Sinai Palimpsest (Sinaiticus) and Cureton's MSS., which is called the Curetonranus. But scholars point out that these MSS. are really of little value because they were made from an early Greek text with many "Western features," which is to say the Western texts used by the early Roman Christian Church. To throw a further "wrench into the works" the editors of The Oxford Companion to the Bible tell us that the Greek text in question was itself revised "on the basis of an early form of the Koine, or Byzantine Greek NT Text; this revision, eventually called the Peshitta, emerged in ca 400 AD to become the standard New Testament of the Syriac Churches" (The Oxford Companion to the Bible, p. 754)

In other words the "original" texts of the Peshitta did not originate from the first century Aramaic-speaking apostles, but came from both early Western and Byzantine Greek texts, which we have been discussing throughout this study.

To completely understand the composition of the Peshitta let's look a little closer at its pre-history, meaning the works that formed its foundation. They include a so-called harmony of the Gospels called the Diatessaron. According to the church father Eusebius the compiler of the Diatessaron was a man named Tatian who was a native of Mesopotamia and a disciple of Justin Martyr, meaning that he received his Christian education and training via the Church of Rome. In other words it is a Catholic production. This is made even more clear since Tatian is said to have originally composed the Diatessaron in Latin (The New International Dictionary of the Christian Church, p. 296). Biblical historians also tell us that this Tatian changed the text of the Gospels during his translation work to support his extreme hostility to sex. Despite this open tampering, Tatian's work was widely accepted in the Eastern Christian Churches where it made a serious impact on Christian scholarship (Fox, The Unauthorized Version, pp. 139-140). It was in the Eastern Churches, remember, that the Byzantine texts originated.

All of this takes us to the Greek MSS. behind the Peshitta. Regarding these, we read the following in The Encyclopedia Britannica: "The MSS. differ considerably in reading, and each has certainly been influenced by the Diatessaron [of Tatian…Catholic theologically influenced], so that in Syriac-speaking lands about AD 400 the Gospel was extant as a Harmony and as 'separated Gospels,'. . . the single copies having many discordant readings, just as had been the case in Latin before Jerome. To remedy this, Rabbula, bishop of Edessa from 411 to 435, prepared a revised edition of the 'Separated Gospels,' freely correcting the text from Greek mss. such as were then current at Antioch: this edition he established by authority and suppressed the Diatessaron with such success that no Syriac copy of the Diatessaron survives, and of the unrevised version only Syr. S and C. Rabbula's revision is now used by both the great divisions of the Syriac-speaking Church: to distinguish it from the elaborate later revision of the (Jacobite) Old and New Testament it is usually called Peshitta, i.e. the simple version." The editor's conclusion is that, "The Peshitta has only the value of a post-Nicene revision (14th ed., vol. 3, p. 517).

The long and the short of it is that the so-called Peshitta is nothing more than its rival translations—a book produced by questionable men inside a notoriously corrupt church, all of which does little for the "infallibility of the bible" argument!

WHAT YOUR CHURCH AND PASTOR NEVER TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NEW TESTAMENT #10

So far the case for a divinely-inspired original Greek New Testament has been lacking. Let's see if this can't be helped along by closing our study with the examination of another related event, which is the canonization of the New Testament.

"Canon" is a word describing the much-fought-over, officially accepted books of the Christian Churches which comprise their holy bible. "Canonization" is the term used to describe the process by which these books became canon. To the untrained ear it all sounds very scholarly and religious.But to those familiar with ancient church history what canonization really means is that the pious liars, cheats, perverts and murderers who comprised the hierarchy of the early Christian Church were the ones who decided irrevocably what books of the New Testament were sacred and what books were to be discarded.

In other word if you carry a New Testament you have the summary of Catholic Theology at its highest and you might as well go to mass.

If this critical assessment seems a bit harsh it is probably because the average Christian has little if any knowledge of the early history of their church or their Bible. Take for example this blunt admission from the Roman Catholic Church about the character of the church fathers of the fourth century: "The primitive disciplined charity of the early Christians had been diluted by self-willed scholars, ambitious politicians, and easy-going laxists" (Knights of Columbus, The Catholic Pilgrimage, p. 4).

What is important in this study is that it was in the fourth century AD that the final New Testament canon was decided for the entire Christian Church! (The Encyclopedia Britannica 14th edition, vol. 3, p. 514). Not a very reassuring thought when one considers, as historian Michael Grant notes, it was a time in which men "crept into the church to secure its benefits", (Grant, Constantine the Great, p. 161) and doubly ominous when we consider that it was during this time that the present-day, much-worked-over, surviving New Testament MSS. were produced.

Perhaps even more revealing is that the church fathers of the fourth century were not only politically and morally corrupt, in many cases they were not even interested in Christianity. That the bishop of Troy was known to pray to the sun-god at the same time he was holding Episcopal office, is only one example of the kind of church fathers one deals with in early church history (Grant, Constantine the Great, p. 136). Another good example is found in the famous fourth century Council of Nicaea and the man responsible for its organization.

A CRITICAL LOOK AT CONSTANTINE...SHOULD WE FOLLOW HIS COUNCIL AND THEIR THEOLOGY?

As noted at the beginning of this study the man who promoted Christianity into a world-class religion was the so-called first Christian emperor, Constantine the Great. However, for the sake of considering New Testament origins, let's note a few examples of his Christianity. For instance, long after his alleged conversion Constantine continued his devotion to pagan gods. In one case he removed the great Palladium (the large stone phallus or penis of the sun-god) from Rome to Constantinople, his capital city, and set it up as a symbol of his own masculinity. On top of this image he placed a statue of himself in the guise of the sun-god Apollo, to which his faithful subjects were commanded to bow and worship (Walker, The Woman's Encyclopedia of Myths and Secrets, p. 764).

The editors of The Encyclopedia Britannica say of Constantine that, "He was at best only half heathen, half Christian, who could seek to combine the worship of Christ with the worship of Apollo, having the name of one and the figure of the other impressed upon his coins, and ordaining the observance of Sunday [i.e., the day sacred to the sun-god] under the name Dies Solis (The Encyclopedia Britannica, 9th edition, Volume VI, p. 301). Apolllo and Mithra were one and the same god from two different places, i.e., Greece and Persia, both being mingled in later Roman worship. For those who don't know it, it was at this time that Sunday officially replaced the seventh-day Sabbath within the Christian Church.

As a further example of his lack Christian ethic, historians note that Constantine was guilty of murdering his own son and wife, among countless others. A notorious example of this can be seen in the following. Long after his "Christian" conversion Constantine fell ill and ordered that a large number of children be killed so he could bathe in their blood, and thus effect a magical cure. He was only dissuaded when a group of Christian parents pleaded for mercy (Grant, Constantine the Great, p. 175). Most revealing is that Constantine was not even baptized into the church until he lay on his death bed. On 22 May 337 water was poured on his forehead and the "first Christian emperor" was pronounced saved in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit (The Encyclopedia Britannica, 9th edition, Volume VI, p. 301).

However, Constantine's lack of Christianity mattered little to the church notables who gathered for the emperor's great council on May 20, AD 325, at Nicaea. This is because Constantine had long since bought their loyalty, giving away such wealth that the Christian clergy was among the greatest land owners in the empire, often living on palatial estates reviling even the wealthiest subjects. "whose at court dined with Constantine—like Apostles surrounding Christ in paradise," wrote Constantine's official biographer, the church father Eusebius. Historian Michael Grant adds, "…churches became endowed with great wealth, Christian art and architecture increasingly showed the grandeur of imperial ceremonial" (Grant, Constantine the Great, p. 160). But wealth wasn't the only bribery used by Constantine to gain loyalty.

As an added assurance that his will became law in the church, Constantine also relied on the fear that he had instilled in virtually everyone in the empire. Whether this fear came from the thought of loosing their wealth or from falling prey to the routine executions ordered by the emperor doesn't matter. What does matter is that within the church Constantine's control was so complete that it was referred to as Caesaropapism (Grant, Constantine the Great, p. 159-161). Also important to this study is that it was this man who called the famous Council of Nicaea, whose purpose was to decide some fundamental church doctrines.

Take time to let what you now know of Constantine sink in and then ask yourself if the doctrines decided basically by this man for all of Christianity today should be "believed"?

Moreover, it was Constantine who set the agenda and it was he who issued the final statements of decision. And just in case there should be any open dissension, Constantine also let it be publicly known that he would personally deal with those who did not conform to his wishes. Indeed after the Council of Nicaea, when Constantine's decisions had been forced upon the church, Eusebius wrote to the emperor: "We committed an impious act, O prince, by subscribing to a blasphemy from fear of you" (Smith, Constantine the Great, p. 202).

Answer for yourself: How does that make you feel when Constantine's right-hand man tells him after the Council of Nicaea that "they" had "committed an impious act"…likening it to "blasphemy" because "they feared Constantine"?

Answer for yourself: Are you aware that Nicaea rejected the faith of Yeshua as it had spread into all the world up to that time and gave you instead Constantine's paganism with Jesus' name attached?

Answer for yourself: Can you now understand why Bet Emet Ministries is a voice crying in a desert of Biblical ignorance in America today?

THE LEGACY OF CONSTANTINE LIVES ON IN OTHER COUNCILS

Such bullying tactics set the stage for later councils, notably the Council of Ephesus held in AD 449, which erupted into bloodshed. When one group of delegates could not get their way, they went after the other side with clubs, until after the battle, they had enforced their decrees on the Christian Church. As one historian wrote: "Fanatical bands of monks terrorized the assembly of Church notables (Nigg, The Heretics, P. 121). To be fair, these actions were not unheard of. Indeed, bloodshed had long been an established way of doing business within the Christian Church, going back as far as Pope Damascus, who murdered 137 priests and other followers of his rival to gain the papacy. The situation surrounding the Councils of Nicaea and Ephesus was by no means unique (DeRose, The Vicars of Christ, p. 38).

Another prime example of the character of the early church fathers is found in the famous Bishop Eusebius, who attended the Council of Nicaea and who is rightly considered as one of Christianity's greatest liars. It is commonly admitted that he forged a writing known as the Lepers, which were supposedly an exchange between Abgar and Jesus. He falsely declared that he had found the originals and gives a translation of them in his Ecclesiastical History (Wheless, Forgery in Christianity, p. 155). That such an episode was by no means unique to Eusebius comments volumes on the integrity of the early church fathers and the canonization of the New Testament!

It should also give us pause for serious concern when we consider that not only did the earliest complete MSS. of the New Testament surface during this time, as well as the absorption of numerous pagan doctrines, customs and deities into the Christian faith, but it was from this time and among these particular church fathers that the twenty-seven books of the New Testament were selected and officially canonized as holy scripture.

How that came about is briefly, and with a certain amount of gloss, summed up in the following account from a correspondence course lesson offered by a fundamentalist Christian college: "Prior to the fourth century there was no [official] catalogue of the New Testament canonical books. However, even during the time of the apostles, quotations of some of these books were made by writers of the Christian faith.... Clement, Paul's fellow laborer, referred to 1 Corinthians as 'Paul's epistle.' . . . Tertullian (AD 160-220) regarded the four Gospels and most of the books of the New Testament to be genuine.

Eusebius of Caesarea [circa AD 260-340 and the same man mentioned above in the forgery scandal] declared in his Ecclesiastical History (AD 315) that it was, ".... universally admitted that the four Gospels, Acts, the Epistles of Paul, the first Epistles of John, Peter, and Revelation are genuine.... Jerome's residence in Palestine and great knowledge of the sites of bible history qualifies him to make statements as to the authenticity of the books of the New Testament Scriptures. He [the church lather Jerome] assigned authorship of the books to the person whose name the book carried. He assigned the Acts of the Apostles to Luke, and the Epistles of the Hebrews to Paul, noting that there was some doubt as to authorship of this epistle which today is considered anonymous" (Zion Faith College, lesson no. 1, pp. 3-4).

Answer for yourself: Did you notice for yourself that even Christian Colleges sometimes teach the truth when they tell you that the Apostles did not write the Gospels?

As to these reliability of men like Eusebius, Clement, Tertullian and Jerome on the matter of New Testament authorship, we can ignore the questions about their character and merely note that in this instance they are only repeating tradition, which we now knew wasn't reliable because modern critical analysis confirms that manly hands played a part in the composition of each New Testament book.

Regarding the canon itself history tells us that the first known canon was put together by the so-called great heretic, Marcion, in circa AD 150. What is of significance here is that, as Salomon Reinach, notes, "Down to this time all quotations from 'Scriptures' in the works of the Apostolic Fathers, refer exclusively to the Old Testament" (Reinach, Salomon, Orpheus. (New York: Horace Liverlight Inc., 1930), p. 229. In other words, until AD 150 and the time of Marcion the church fathers either didn't know of any "New Testament" manuscripts, or if they did, they seriously doubted their authenticity.

Answer for yourself: So what does that say about the Gospels being written by the Apostles? It tells us the Gospels were the creation of non-Apostles much later after the deaths of the Apostles.

At any rate it was Marcion who collected various books of what would one day be the New Testament—another significant point because Marcion, being notoriously anti-Jewish, deliberately excluded the Old Testament from his teachings. Indeed he even went so far as to purge the writings of Paul and what we now call the Gospel of Luke of what he considered Jewish traits' (Legge, Forerunners and Rivals of Christianity, book II, p. 207). But despite his obvious lack of Christian character, we find this positive statement about Marcion in The New International Dictionary of the Christian Church: "The significance of Marcion lies in the fact that he compelled representatives of orthodox Christianity to deal seriously with the problems of evil, to think deeply about the biblical teaching concerning creation and redemption, to reexamine the Pauline writings, and to decide upon the question of the canon" (Legge, Forerunners and Rivals of Christianity, book II, p. 207).

Relevant to both the question of the canon and Marcion's role in the matter, let's quote biblical historian Robin Lane Fox here about Marcion's tampering with the NT books: "In the 140's an important Christian, Marcion, troubled many of his fellow Christians by producing a 'Gospel' which abbreviated Luke's so as to suit his theology . . . He edited ten letters of Paul, changing and omitting bits which he did not like and also omitted the Epistles to Timothy and Titus. This enterprise played havoc with the written text." Fox astutely comments: "If Christian texts were being changed and edited to this degree, even a gap of a century between the original and its first survival on a papyrus is a long and potentially dangerous time. We simply do not know what may have happened to the author's words at important places. " (Legge, Forerunners and Rivals of Christianity, book II, p. 139-140).

In all fairness it should be mentioned that Marcion wasn't the only early Christian notable who tampered with the New Testament. In an open attempt to write the doctrine of the Trinity into the pages of the New Testament Apollinaris the Elder, and his son Apollinaris the Younger, rewrote the New Testament using Platonic theology" (Encyclopedia Britannica, 11th edition, Volume 2. P. 183). Athanasius is thought by historians to have been Apollinarian, so called from Apollinarius "the younger," who rewrote the New Testament with his father in the platonic dialogues, in an effort to combat those in the Christian Church who taught against the Trinity (The Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th ed., Volume 2, pp. 109, 600). Now pay attention to what I say next and imagine the implications. The significant point here is that a disciple of the two Apollinaris' was a man named Athanasius who was the first to mention all twenty-seven books of the present New Testament in the famous Thirty-ninth Paschal Letter of Athanasius (The Oxford Companion to the Bible, p. 103).

The Encyclopedia Britannica tells us the following:

"The triumph of the Athanasian Canon, indeed, went along with the triumph of Nicene Christianity. And while the movement received its impulse from Athanasius, the power by which it was carried through and established was largely that of his powerful ally the Church of Rome* (11th ed., Vol. 3, pp. 876-877). As In the Western Church the canon of Athanasius was likely approved at the synod of Rome in AD 382, being definitely confirmed in 405 by papal declaration. In other words the present

New Testament canon was produced inside the Roman Catholic Church and approved by a Roman Catholic pope, which is only natural as Roman Catholicism and early Christianity was one and the same thing! (The Oxford Companion to the Bible, pp. 103-104).

Here is a partial list of the different books that were floating around the Christian world and seriously considered by the early church councils for inclusion in the canon: A gospel written by Jesus' own hand; letters and other correspondences written by Jesus; letters written by the virgin Mary; Pilate's official report to the emperor of the trial and crucifixion of Jesus, with Pilate's confession of faith; the reply to this from Tiberius; the trial of Pilate; official documents of the Roman Senate about Jesus, Gospels, epistles, acts, by every single one of the twelve apostles; and official documents of church law and government, written in Greek by the apostles. the number comes to about 50 or more "holy" books (Wheless, Forgery in Christianity, p. 101; also The Catholic Encyclopedia, Volume VI, p. 656).

As to the Gospels themselves, out of which only tour were finally selected and canonized, at one time there were some 200 different ones circulating in the Christian Church. As late as 450, Bishop Theodore of Cyrrhus said there were at least 200 different Gospels revered by the churches of his own diocese, until he destroyed all but the canonical four" (Walker, The Woman's Encyclopedia, p. 467). Here are some of the known (or at least the surviving) Gospels, which, keep in mind, were at different times and in different places accepted as the "infallible word" of God by the faithful of Christ: The Gospels of Mark, Matthew, Luke, John, the Gospel of Signs, the Gospel of Thomas, Greek Fragments of Thomas, Secret Book of James, Dialogue of the Savior, Gospel of Mary, Infancy Gospel of I homes, Infancy Gospel of James, Gospel of Peter, Secret Gospel of Mark, Egerton Gospel, Gospel Oxyrhynchus, Gospel of the Hebrews, Gospel of the Ebionites and the Gospel of the Nazoreans.

Essentially, Christian history proves one thing: it is only by faith in the early church fathers that present day Christians can accept the canonized New Testament as the word of God.

Although the average Christian can easily repeat some well-rehearsed Jesus legend, or quote one or two favorite passages, they will look at you with a blank stare if you should mention any of the facts related in this study. That is because, to say this one more time, most Protestant and Catholic ministers have deliberately kept their congregations in ignorance of the true history of their church. My only hope is that you, the reader, will take what is written here and go to the nearest library to seek out the books of scholars, both Christian and secular, and use your logic and common sense to make a final determination.

Answer for yourself: Given the history of the New Testament as I have labored to show you, my closing question to you, the reader, is "which part of your New Testament is infallible, inerrant, and inspired and worthy to be followed by you for your faith and practice as you attempt to please God with your life?

Answer for yourself: Which parts of the New Testament are blatant attempts to lead the reader from what Jesus both believed and practiced and what Rome wanted instead?

Answer for yourself: What part of your faith, as inherited from New Testament beliefs, is before God truthful and which is not; and do you know how to spot the lies from the truths when you read the New Testament?

Answer for yourself: Do you want to learn how? Well, Bet Emet is for you then because we will share with you, as we have done here in this series of articles, the hard facts and truth withheld from you whereby you can make an intelligent decision about your faith before God. It is our hope and prayer that armed with these facts you life can be lived more pleasing to God and when you pass into the next world you won't have to stand ashamed before the Creator of the Universe because you have been led by your Church and your Pastor to "believe in the wrong Gospel". THE CORRUPTION OF THE JEWISH SCRIPTURES BY THE ESSENES....THE PROBLEM SURROUNDING THE CHRISTIAN OLD TESTAMENT (THE SEPTUAGINT)

I guess we need to begin in the beginning.

Answer for yourself: What is the "Septuagint?"

From the dramatic find in the caves of Qumran, The Dead Sea Scrolls presented the world with the most precious and ancient "version" of the Bible that Jesus used....the Jewish Masoretic text. Up to the time of the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls the oldest known copies of the Jewish Masoretic text were copies no earlier than 900-1000 A.D. Unknown to most Christians is the fact that these "Jewish Scriptures" are considerably different in key "theological passages" from the earlier Greek translation of them dating from 200 B.C.E. which is today called the "Septuagint." Many of these differences are in areas of "Messianic prophecy." Because of this difference in texts, especially in places that are considered "messianic" and dealing with a "deliverer" it was "assumed" by Christendom over the last thousand years that the Jewish texts of 900-1000 A.D. had expunged, altered, or had removed by the Jews passages which were, in their minds, concerning Jesus as the Messiah. Because these two "bibles" were so different Christendom today has accepted the "oldest texts of the Septuagint" as more correct because in Biblical studies there is an unwritten rule: "oldest manuscripts are the best and most likely correct." Not possessing any earlier copies of the Jewish Bible it was again "assumed," because of the great differences between these Bibles in "Messianic contexts," that the Jews had "written Jesus out of their Scriptures." But that all changed with the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls. The discoveries at Qumran revealed not only the Greek texts of the Bible called the Septuagint but revealed substantial earlier copies of the Jewish Scriptures over 1000 years earlier than had been known to have existed. What we find startling is that these "older" copies of the Jewish Masoretic text agree almost identically with those later copies of 900-1000 A.D. This has startling repercussions concerning the debate between the Jews and the Christians as to "whose Bible is correct and which has been 'theologically' altered."

A persons' religious belief system should be based off the texts of the Bible. The problem we have now is that in key passages throughout the Jewish Bible we have the Jewish Masoretic text preserved by the Jews over thousands of years which reads considerably different than the revered Septuagint of Christianity. A Christian must be fully aware that basically the Old Testaments in our Christian Bibles come from this Septuagint and the Greek translations and not the Jewish Masoretic Hebrew texts long revered by the Rabbis and the Jewish people. Thus the problem confronting Christendom is that of Jewish texts which read completely different in the Jewish Bible when compared with the same texts in the supposedly Greek translation of them and the Christian's Old Testament. As if that is not bad enough we have the problem that every quote in the New Testament comes from this Greek text and not the Jewish Masoretic Hebrew text. The implication is serious; if it can be shown that the Greek translation is purposefully in error in key theological passages then such "quotes" from it in the New Testament as applied to Jesus will lead to error and incorrect beliefs attached to the man from Galilee. That means that a Christian's religious belief system concerning Jesus could be and is in error in many places. The result of which is idolatry in many instances.

The problem becomes critical when studying Messianic Prophecy because simply these passages have been altered when translated from the Jewish Scriptures into the Greek. The question remains...why and by whom? We will get to that answer in other articles but like I said up till 1948 and the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls Christendom had assumed over the centuries that it was the Jews who had altered their texts in reaction to and in response to Jesus and his Messianic status as claimed by Christianity. Now such an assumption is in doubt; and quite the opposite, with the existence of the Jewish texts at Qumran that verify the veracity and accuracy of the Jewish Masoretic texts of 900-1000 A.D., which up until the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls, had been discounted. That can no longer be. It seems most likely now that is was the Greek texts that had been altered and not the Jewish texts. What this means for the Christian is that when these Jewish Scriptures were altered in 200 B.C.E. or earlier by the Essenes of Alexandria, Egypt, they were not altering them to make them refer to a Jesus which would not be born for another 250 years or so; rather, their concepts of astral Godmen redeemers were written into the Greek translation to replace the Jewish Messiah. Later with the coming of Jesus these solar and sun-worship corruptions in the Greek texts were applied to Jesus and today Christianity's concepts and beliefs about Jesus have more in common with sun-worship than with Judaism and it's Jewish human Messiah.

Answer for yourself: What does this mean to the typical Christian?

Simply this. Many of your beliefs that you have come to accept about Jesus from the Christian Greek texts as found in your Old Testaments and New Testaments are wrong since these texts are exposed in the light of today as being altered from the earlier existing Hebrew Masoretic texts. This means that many "religious beliefs" held by Christians concerning Jesus are not only wrong but have led millions into idolatry or worse and they are not aware since they have never known or seen the Jewish Masoretic texts or a Jewish Bible which read differently from their Christian Old Testament. Today the evidence has surfaced and the "rocks have cried out the truth" about who has the true Word of God.

In the articles that follow I will attempt to lay out for you pertinent information necessary to understand this serious problem that confronts Christianity today. One you have read and studied the information presented then you are better equipped to make an intelligent decision regarding this matter.

In your study you will need to procure a few items to verify what I have said is true. You will need to purchase a Jewish Bible; I recommend the Stone's Edition Tanakh or the JPS Tanakh (www.artscroll.com). The Stone's Edition Tanakh is my favorite however. A Septuagint can be purchased as well if you so desire but you will be able to use a typical KJV Old Testament if you wish because the Old Testament in the KJV Bible is faithful to the Greek translation.

"Isa 28:10 "For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little:"

Each Messianic passage must be examined and compared with the Jewish Masoretic Hebrew text, the Greek text in the Septuagint, the corresponding translation in the Christian's Old Testament, and the corresponding reference or quote in the New Testament. Only in so doing will you be able to see if the Jewish Scriptures that Jesus read have been altered as they "came down to you" through Gentile Christendom. I strongly suggest you follow the articles of Bet Emet Ministries as an outline for your own study. Only when you see these "changes in the texts" for yourself will the magnitude of the problem become apparent. Only then can you be convinced that what I say is true and that as believers in Jesus and followers of Jesus that we have been deceived by the antisemitism of the early Gentile Church that has caused us to depart from "the faith once given to the Saints." There has been a very good reason why the Jewish people have not accepted the Christian's testimony concerning Jesus for these two thousand years. It is time for the Christian to come to the truth concerning the religious texts which undergird his religious beliefs system. Many things a Christian believes about Jesus is true; many are not. Let us learn the difference and make adjustments and repentance in our beliefs concerning Jesus when shown our errors.

Deut 4:2 2 Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you. (KJV)

God is not pleased than men have changed and altered His Word. The same could be said for Jesus as well. It is time for the Christian to come to the truth concerning Jesus and the true teachings of the Jewish Bible concerning "the" Messiah. The implications of what I am trying to convey will affect the whole gamut of a Christian's religious beliefs system involving such things as issues of Jesus and the Godhead, Messianic expectations and prophecy, the incarnation, atonement, etc. This is a study that a "believer" in Jesus must undertake if his relationship and love for God is paramount in his life.

THE TRANSLATION OF THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES INTO GREEK...THE TRUTH ABOUT THE BACKGROUND OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

In order to come to an accurate understanding of the value and authority of the New Testament for the Christian believer today many things need to be understood; most of which few Christians have ever concerned themselves with. Your research must begin at the origin of the New Testament and that, believe it or not, begins long before it was written.

WHICH OLD TESTAMENT ARE WE TO HONOR AND USE?

Within the New Testament are hundreds of quotes taken from the Old Testament. The problem is which Old Testament are we to believe because there is in reality are two every different translations of the Jewish Scriptures. The Jews today have one and the Christians have one. They are not the same! The Jewish Old Testament is called the Palestinian Jewish Scriptures or the Masoretic text. Christianity has their Old Testament as taken from the Greek translation, or should I say "a purposeful mistranslation" of the Hebrew Scriptures. The Essene translators of the Jewish Scriptures in Alexandria, Egypt, in 200 B.C.E., altered them terribly and wrote their sect's astral beliefs within it in the form of prophecies giving authority to their sect's beliefs. These Egyptian Essenes departed from Judaism and in doing so produced a "Divine" book that gave saction to their sect's religious beliefs over others. That is right, there are two very different Old Testaments today and the vast majority of Christians have never heard about this. Most of you never knew that. There was a time I did not as well. What I will show you in the beginning of our study is the truth and facts concerning the translation of the Jewish Scriptures into Greek and how mystical and allegorical Spiritual concepts were purposefully "literalized" and later mingled within in the Greek translations of the Jewish holy texts by the Alexandrian translators and later these concepts concerning "literalized" pagan sun-godmen were applied to a later Jesus by these Essene apocalyptic messianic believers of the first century. We end up with the conservative Pharisees looking for a human Davidic messiah to fulfill the Jewish Scriptures; opposite this we had the Pythagorean-Buddhist Essenes who believed in a cosmic godman as their "anointed redeemer." These concepts were later mixed together and applied to Jesus by the "Romanized" Paul and others and today we read them again mingled together in the New Testament never knowing that they were originally two conflicting and contradicting concepts; one Biblical and one Extra-Biblical. Dear ones, there is a big difference between legend and fact. The selection of which Old Testament you read and believe is of monumental importance for the Christian faith. One leads the reader down the path of righteousness and the other the path of idolatry.

The vast majority of Christian believers never even considered that their Old Testaments in their Christian Bible could possibly contain falsifications and purposeful mistranslations of the Jewish Masoretic text made over 2200 years ago which were made to further the theological agenda of the Hellenized-Jews of Alexandria, Egypt. If you were like me once you took it for granted when you bought your first Bible that you had the "Word of God." Well, yes and no. It never entered your mind that you might be reading religious passages that were never read by Jesus when reading the Jewish Scriptures that he believed in. Jesus did not use the Septuagint or the Greek translation. The Jews of the first century would not use this corrupt translation because they knew what you and I don't; namely, that it is forged in hundreds of places. No longer was this translation of the Jewish Scriptures "God's Word" but paganism dressed up to look "Jewish." You simply took it for granted that you were buying the same Bible that Jesus used when you went to buy your first Christian Bible. If you bought a Christian Bible instead of a Jewish Tanakh nothing could have been further from the truth for you. Jesus would not use the Old Testament that is used by Christians today because the quotes in the Christian's Old Testament and as used in the New Testament about the "messiah" are adulterated and corrupted in most places when compared to the Hebrew Jewish Masoretic text. You have to see them for youself to believe it; don't believe me, but let me show them to you and then you, having seen the evidence for yourself, can make up your own mind. So by default the New Testament, in quoting much of the Old Testament prophecies as taken from the Greek mistranslations, are simply incorrect as presented in the New Testament and as applied to Jesus and worse yet, misrepresent the historical Jesus and cause those who "accept them" and "believe them" to become idolators or worse. The tragic consequences of such adulteration of the Jewish Bible by these Essenes of Egypt and later by the Roman Church as well is that you, the typical Christian, will not know of such severe error in your religious belief system until you die and then it will be too late to explain your Idolatry to YHVH!

What we will examine first is the corruption of the Jewish Hebrew Scriptures when they were translated by the Greek-Jews of Alexandria, Egypt, over 200 years before the birth of Jesus. The importance for you to understand in this study is that the New Testament contains hundreds of quotes from this Greek Old Testament, and if it can be proven that this Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures contain purposeful mistranslations, misquotations, and scriptures continually taken out of context from the original documents used in the translation in order to promote the religious beliefs of the translators in Alexandria, Egypt, then that means that "these quotes" as as taken from this forged Old Testament translation as found in the New Testament distorts the truth about Jesus and recasts him in the image of pagan godmen. This is a very serious charge and one not made lightly. The reason I and others can bring such a charge against the New Testament is that we have done the research over years that others have not and proved beyond any shadow of doubt these tragic facts. That is why I had to leave the pastorate after several years of such study; I was wrong and preaching lies. The Jews were right and have always been right because they only have God's Word; their Jewish Scriptures are the ONLY Holy Word of God we have! The time to learn and repent is now in hope before we die we can return to the faith once given to the saints; the true faith of Jesus (Yeshua). Such would be a honor to both Jesus and the God you love. Let us begin by letting us prove this to yourself beyond any doubt. It will require some reading but the trip is worth the price.

SEPTUAGINT STUDIES

The Jewish Scriptures were translated from the Hebrew into the Greek language in Alexandria, Egypt. We must begin our study here as we attempt to familiarize ourselves with the religious climate of the day and the influences at work which played a huge part on the translations and corruption of the Jewish Scriptures. It will be this fraudulent Greek translation of the Old Testament which will sever as the Bible for the Western World let alone the substrate for the quotations in the New Testament. If it can be shown, and it can, that this was a faulty translation to say the least, then the impact upon the New Testament is devastating. It is to this subject every Christian must turn and acquaint himself with the facts before he meets God face to face and be told the terrible truth of his idolatry and falsified documents we trusted his whole life. It is time that everyone who considers himself a "New Testament" believer learn the truth about the document he currently trusts over the Torah for his eternal life. Let us not forget that is was the Torah the very Scriptures that a Jew like Jesus who is depicted to us in the New Testament would have used and trusted as the way to God's heart.

THE ALEXANDRIAN INFLUENCE UPON EARLY CHRISTIANITY

In Alexandria, in Egypt, there was an immense library, founded by the Ptolemies. This library was situated in the Alexandrian Museum; the apartments which were allotted for it were beautifully sculptured, and crowded with the choicest statues and pictures; the building was built of marble. This library eventually comprised four hundred thousand volumes. In the course of time, probably on account of inadequate accommodation for so many books, an additional library was established, and placed in the temple of Serapis. The number of volumes in this library, which was called the daughter of that in the museum, was eventually three hundred thousand. There were, therefore, seven hundred thousand volumes in these royal collections.

In the establishment of the museum, Ptolemy Soter, and his son Philadelphus, had three objects in view:

1. The perpetuation of such knowledge as was then in the world;
2. Its increase;
3. Its diffusion.

1. For the perpetuation of knowledge. Orders were given to the chief librarian to buy, at the king's expense, whatever books he could. A body of transcribers was maintained in the museum, whose duty it was to make correct copies of such works as their owners were not disposed to sell. Any books brought by foreigners into Egypt were taken at once to the museum, and when correct copies had been made, the transcript was given to the owner, and the original placed in the library. Often a very large pecuniary indemnity was paid.

2. For the increase of knowledge. One of the chief objects of the museum was that of serving as the home of a body of men who devoted themselves to study, and were lodged and maintained at the king's expense. In the original organization of the museum the residents were divided into four faculties-Literature, Mathematics, Astronomy, and Medicine. An officer of very great distinction presided over the establishment, and had general charge of its interests. Demetius Phalareus, perhaps the most learned man of his age, who had been Governor of Athens for many years, was the first so appointed. Under him was the librarian, an office sometimes held by men whose names have descended to our times, as Eratosthenes and Apollonius Rhodius. In connection with the museum was a botanical and a zoological garden. These gardens, as their names imply, were for the purpose of facilitating the study of plants and animals. There was also an astronomical observatory, containing armillary spheres, globes, solstitial and equatorial armils, astrolabes, parallactic rules, and other apparatus then in use, the graduation on the divided instruments being into degrees and sixths.

3. For the diffusion of knowledge. In the museum was given, by lectures, conversation, or other appropriate methods, instruction in all the various departments of human knowledge.

There flocked to this great intellectual centre, students from all countries. It is said that at one time not fewer than fourteen thousand were in attendance. Subsequently even the Christian church received from it some of the most eminent of its Fathers, as Clemens Alexandrinus, Origen, Athanasius, etc.

The library in the museum was burned during the siege of Alexandria by Julius Caesar. To make amends, for this great loss, the library collected by Eumenes, King of Pergamus, was presented by Mark Antony to Queen Cleopatra. Originally it was founded as a rival to that of the Ptolemies. It was added to the collection in the Serapion, or the temple of Serapis.

It was not destined, however, to remain there many centuries, as this very valuable library was willfully destroyed by the Christian Theophilus, and on the spot where this beautiful temple of Serapis stood, in fact, on its very foundation, was erected a church in honor of the "noble army of martyrs," who had never existed.

This we learn from the historian Gibbon, who says that. after this library was destroyed, the appearance of the empty shelves excited the regret and indignation of every spectator, whose mind was not totally darkened by religious prejudice.

The destruction of this library was almost the death-blow to free-thought - wherever Christianity ruled - for more than a thousand years.

The death-blow was soon to be struck, however, which was done by Saint Cyril, who succeeded Theophilus as Bishop of Alexandria.

Hypatia*, the daughter of Theon, the mathematician, endeavored to continue the old-time instructions. Each day before her academy stood a long train of chariots; her lecture-room was crowded with the wealth and fashion of Alexandria. They came to listen to her discourses on those questions which man in all ages has asked, but which have never yet been answered What am I ? Where am I? What can I know ?

Hypatia and Cyril; philosophy and bigotry; they cannot exist together. As Hypatia repaired to her academy, she was assaulted by (Saint) Cyril's mob - a mob of many monks. Stripped naked in the street, she was dragged into a church, and there killed by the club of Peter the Reader. The corpse was cut to pieces, the flesh was scraped from the bones with shells, and the remnants cast into a fire. For this frightful crime Cyril was never called to account.

It seemed to be admitted that the end sanctified the means. So ended Greek philosophy in Alexandria, so came to an untimely close the learning that the Ptolemies had done so much to promote.

The fate of Hypatia was a warning to all who would cultivate profane knowledge. Henceforth there was to be no freedom for human thought. Every one must think as ecclestical authority ordered him ; A.D. 414.

In Athens itself philosophy awaited its doom. Justinian at length prohibited its teaching and caused all its schools in that city to be closed.

After this followed the long and dreary dark ages, but the sun of science, that bright and glorious luminary, was destined to rise again.

THE LINK TO THE MESSIAH OF CHRISTIANITY

The history of this great Alexandrian library is one of the keys which unlock the door, and exposes to our view the manner in which the Hindoo incarnate god Chrishna, and the meek and benevolent Buddha, came to be worshiped under the name of Christ Jesus. For instance, we have just seen:

1. That, "orders were given to the chief librarian to buy at the king's expense *whatever books he could."
2. That, "one of the chief objects of the museum was that of serving as the home of a body of men who devoted themselves to study."

3. That, "any books brought by foreigners into Egypt were taken at once to the museum and correct copies made."
4. That, "there flocked to this great intellectual center students from all countries."
5. That, "the Christian church received from it some of the most eminent of its Fathers."

And also: (and this is where it gets really important for a Christian):

6. That, the chief doctrines of the Gnostic Christians "had been held for centuries before their time in many of the cities in Asia Minor. There, it is probable, they first came into existence as Mystae upon the establishment of a direct intercourse with India under the Seleucidae and the Ptolemies."

7. That, "the College of Essenes at Ephesus, the Orphics of Thrace, the Curetes of Crete, are all merely branches of one antique and common religion, and that originally Asiatic."

8. That, "their introduction of Buddhism into Egypt and Palestine affords the only true solution of innumerable difficulties in the history of religion."

9. That, "Buddhism had actually been planted in the dominions of the Seleucidae and Ptolemies (Palestine belonging to the former) before the beginning of the third century B. C., and is proved to demonstration by a passage in the edicts of Asoka."[BEFORE THE THIRD CENTURY B.C.E.!]

10. That, "it is very likely that the commentaries (Scriptures) which were among them (the Essenes) were the Gospels."

11. That, "the principal doctrines and rites of the Essenes can be connected with the East, with Parsism, and especially with Buddhism."

12. That, "among the doctrines which the Essenes and Buddhists had in common was that of theAngel-Messiah."

13. That, " they (the Essenes) had a flourishing university or corporate body, established at Alexandria, in Egypt, long before the period assigned for the birth of Christ."

14. That, "the very ancient and Eastern doctrine of the Angel-Messiah bad been applied to Gautama Buddha, and so it was applied to Jesus Christ by the Essenes of Egypt and Palestine, who introduced this new Messianic doctrine into Essenic Judaism and Essenic Christianity."

THE CORRUPTION OF THE JEWISH BIBLE WHEN TRANSLATED INTO GREEK

What you need to know is that these Essenic-Phytagorean-Buddhists of Alexandria, Egypt, 200 B.C.E. translated the Jewish Bible into Greek. It is called the Septuagint. What you don't know is that many of these ancient religious tenants possessed by these Buddhist Essenes would be written into the Greek translation of the Bible. The existing Jewish Scriptures (the Tanakh) would be mistranslated on purpose in hundreds of places whereby the existing "theologies" of the Greek-Jewish Phythagorean-Buddhists would be intermingled among the existing Jewish texts in order to promote their "beliefs." The theology of this Egyptian sect replaced the writings of Moses and the Prophets in many places and few know it today.

This was the modus operandi used to corrupt the Jewish Scriptures. Of major interest in New Testament study is the alterations of many passages whereby the Essenic Cosmic Angel-Messiah was to replace the Davidic Messiah of the Jewish Scriptures. The Essenes believed in a Cosmic Angel-Messiah godman which finds its ultimate origin in sun-myths from the most ancient of days. This Angel-Messiah was made to be the fulfillment of Messianic prophecy originally intended to apply to the Davidic Messiah only!

The doctrine of the "Anointed Angel-Messiah" as taken from the evolution of sun-myths consisted of:

- The Sun-godman from heaven (Angel-Messiah incarnation as personified from Sun worship).
- This Sun-godman was also the Creator.
- The doctrine of the atoning sacrificial death of this Sun godman...called the Essenes' Angel Mssiah [these concepts coming from Iranian, Pythagorean, Buddhist backgrounds and influences upon the Essenes]
- The resurrection of this Angel-Messiah following 3 days [taken from the winter soltice]

These doctrines which most think Paul first taught can, with more or less certainty, be connected with the Essenes; even the Essenes in Egypt. It becomes almost a certainty that Eusebius was right in surmising that Essenic writings have been used by Paul and the evangelists. So Paul's "gospel" was not unique by any means but had been taught in all the world for thousand of years among the nation who worshipped the sun. All this information is laid out for your inspectionat: http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com.

This Angelic-Messiah had evolved from the Phythagorean synthesis of Indian and Buddhist beliefs which they themselves had assimilated from Egypt. Thus we find the blending of a sun-godman and an earthly Davidic Messiah-king. This will not be a problem until the death of Jesus and the application of these cosmic sun-god myths to him following the Essenes converting to the Jesus Movement following his crucifixion.

Acts 6:7 7 And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith. (KJV)

Simply said these Essenes priests became believers and followers of Jesus and entered the Jesus Movement after his crucifixion. One should not forget that what began as a righteous separation from the Temple by the Zadok priests in the early second century B.C.E. would later evolve into the current "Essenes" of Jesus' day. It should be remembered that these Essenes were once considered priest of Zadok: The word "Zadok" in Hebrew means:

6659Tsadowq- Zadok = "righteous";

Zadok was the high priest, son of Ahitub of the house of Eleazar the son of Aaron, and 11th in descent from Aaron; he joined David after Saul's death and supported him against Absalom and Adonijah; and later anointed Solomon as king. In the time of Jesus the Zadoks no longer had connections to the Temple.

When these remnant Essenic priests converted they brought their cosmic redeemer theology with them and applied this to a crucified Jesus in the same motif as their beliefs in their sun-myths. Now we have the Pharisees expecting a Davidic Messiah and these Essenes expecting a godman crucified. The New Testament contains both "theologies" jumbled together thanks to the writers of the New Testament. To understand how these Essenes understood that the Angel-Messiah was to be crucified one needs to understand how they believed in a crucified sun-godman redeemer. I suggest you go to our website and read up on it: http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com.

That, "we hear very little of them (the Essenes) after A.D. 40; and there can hardly be any doubt that the Essenes as a body must have embraced Christianity" Christian Ginsburg,The Essenes, 1864.

Thus you can easily see how these Essene Buddhist of the first century A.D. brought their religious ideas and beliefs concerning the Angel-Messiah with them. Later those influenced by this theological thought center of Alexandria, with its great library and its university, will write from this perspective and viewpoint, and we, two thousand years later when reading such materials, will not have the facts to understand why people wrote that Jesus was a god, etc. The early Greek Church Fathers, many of which grew up in Alexandria and were schooled there, could not help be influenced by such religious ideas. That is why many of their writings contain such ideas not found in the Jewish Bible and its teachings on Messiah.

THE SOLUTION TO THE PROBLEM

The sacred books of Hindus and Buddhists were among the Essenes, and in the library at Alexandria. The Essenes, who were afterwards called Christians, applied the legend of the Angel-Messiah-" the very ancient Eastern doctrine," which I have both read and researched out beyond satisfaction, but also have such information delineated at our own personal website: http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com. We have shown throughout this site how the Gentile nations personified their sun-myths into a "pattern" redeemer. The nations, having seen the same things in the heavens, have quite similarity in their myths. Over time, however, would come additions to the legend from other sources. That is why the myths are similar, yet divergent.

Portions of the legends related of the Persian, Greek and Roman Saviours and Redeemers of mankind, were, from time to time, added to the already legendary history of the Christian Saviour. This is especially prominent by the Essenes whose writings already had deviated from the Jewish Bible and contained similar sun-god myths within their "holy scriptures."

Thus history was repeating itself. Thus the virgin-born God and Saviour, worshiped by all nations of the earth, though called by different names, was but one and the same.

Albert Reville' says:

"Alexandria, the home of Philonism, and Neo-Platonism, was naturally the center whence spread the dogma of the deity of Jesus Christ." In that city, through the third century, flourished a school of transcendental theology, afterwards looked upon with suspicion by the conservators of ecclesiastical doctrine, but not the less the real cradle of orthodoxy. It was still the Platonic tendency which influenced the speculations of Clement, Origen and Dionysius, and the theory of the Logos was at the foundation of their theology."

Among the numerous gospels in circulation among the Christians of the first three centuries, there was one entitled The Gospel of the Egyptians.

"Epiphanius (A. D. 385), speaking of it, says :

"Many things are proposed (in this Gospel of the Egyptians) in a bidden, mysterious manner, as by our Saviour, as though he had said to his disciples, that the Father was the same person, the Son the same person, and the Holy Ghost the same person."

That this was one of the "scriptures" of the Essenes, becomes very evident when we find it admitted by the most learned of Christian theologians that it was in existence "before either of the canonical Gospels," and that it contained the doctrine of the Trinity, a doctrine not established in the Christian church until A. D. 327, but which was taught by this Buddhist sect in Alexandria, in Egypt, which has been well called, " Egypt, the land of Trinities."

The learned Dr. Grabe thought it was composed by some Christians in Egypt, and that it was published before either of the canonical Gospels. Dr. Mill also believed that it was composed before either of the canonical Gospels, and, what is more important than all, that the authors of it were Essenes.

These" Scriptures" of the Essenes were undoubtedly amalgamated with the "Gospels" of the Christians, the result being the canonical Gospels as we now have them. The "Gospel of the Hebrews," and such like, on the one band, and the "Gospel of the Egyptians," or Essenes, and such like, on the other. The "Gospel of the Hebrews" spoke of Jesus of Nazareth as the son of Joseph and Mary, according to the flesh, and that it taught nothing about his miracles, his resurrection from the dead, and other such prodigies, is admitted on all hands. That the "Scriptures " of the Essenes contained the whole legend of the Angel-Messiah, which was afterwards added to the history of Jesus, making him a CHRIST,or an Anointed Angel, is a probability almost to a certainty.

This information should now help you to better understand how all the traditions and legends, originally Indian, escaping from the great focus through Egypt, were able to reach Judea, Greece and Rome. Besides that you now should be able to see how Alexandria, the center for Essenic study, aided by the great library and university, was the mecca for the synthesis of religious ideas from Iran, Egypt, the Orient, Persia, Israel, etc. Out of this theological mix will come a great synthesis of the Phythagoreans to which the Essenes would not be immune. We have the blending of a little bit of everything as it is later applied to Jesus. The early Greek philosophers were not immune from such influences; thus we find as early as 110 A.D. Church Fathers from Alexandria teaching concerning the Angel Messiah of the Essenes; however one thing is different, they give him a name; Jesus.

WHAT SCHOLARS HAVE SAID ABOUT THE GREEK TRANSLATION OF THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES (OLD TESTAMENT)

Let me set the stage for what you will see in these articles. There are two completely different "Messiah" in the New Testament; one real and one false. One was the culmination of Eastern and Oriental sun-myths and the other from the Davidic lineage of Israel. They two very different concepts concerning the redeemer to come are blurred in the New Testament. One approaches the New Testament and reads it as if both these concepts were included in Jesus of Nazareth. The later "Gospels" would be written under a Pauline and an Essenic influence; and influence that promoted an Angel-Messiah instead of a Davidic human Messiah. Such a doctrine of the Messiah would be the last straw to break the camel's back and separate the Jewish church from the Gentile church along with the repudiation of the Torah by the evolving Gentile Christian community. The Jews in Palestine in the days of Jesus had their Palestinian Jewish Scriptures (the Palestinian Masoretic text) preserved and it read completely different from the corrupted Greek translation (Septuagint) and these Jews looked yet for the Davidic Messiah and not a cosmic sun-godman as taught in the doctrines of the Angel-Messiah which were added throughout the Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures by these Greek-Jews of Alexandria, Egypt. One only needs to read the Gospel of John and compare it with the Jesus of the Synoptic Gospels to see we are talking about two very different persons!

In other words reading the Gospel attributed to John we read of a godman, but when reading the Synoptic Gospels attributed to Matthew, Mark, and Luke, we find a human anointed leader only. But such a dual-Messiahship is not true to the Jewish Scriptures not the beliefs of the Jews who were not looking for a cosmic redeemer but the Messiah of Israel.

The translators of the Jewish Scriptures, the Greek-Jewish Pythagorean-Buddhist sects of Alexandria, Egypt, 200 years before Jesus, wrote "into" their Greek translations of the Jewish Scriptures the religious beliefs of their sect intermingled among the pages of their Old Testament translation. THIS IS A FACT THAT CAN BE SEEN TODAY! Today we read the Christian Old Testaments, which came from this Greek source, never knowing that such forgery has been done. We fall into the trap of reading such "added sun-myths" and concepts concerning Jesus as quoted in the New Testament, as taken from this corrupted Old Testament, as if they are truths concerning the Jesus of history. Nothing could be further from the truth.

THE SCHOLARS SPEAK CONCERNING THE ALEXANDRIAN LINK AND THE CORRUPTION OF THE TRANSLATION OF THE JEWISH SCRIPTURES INTO GREEK

EUSEBIUS

These Essenes had a flourishing university, or corporate body, established upon these principles, at Alexandria in Egypt, long before the period assigned for the birth of Christ Jesus. The Essenes abounded in Egypt, especially about Alexandria (Eusebius, Eccl. Hist., lib. 2, ch. xvii). They esteemed this "corporate body" to such a degree that went so far as to mistranslation on purpose much of the Tanakh to promote their theological ganeda (Christian Ginsburg, The Essenes , Their History And Doctrines, 1863, p. 32).

C.D.F. MOULE

C.D.F. Moule, in The Birth Of The New Testament, records for us on page 59 that the Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures is "a wildly inaccurate translation."

LUCETTA MOWRY

Likewise, Lucetta Mowry, in The Dead Sea Scrolls and the Early Church, again tells us on page 11-12: "...the Qumran authors....altered the stories of the Pentateuch by pious and frequently fanciful embellishments. A more serious purpose of alteration was the attempt to use the stories as authoritative expression of the tenants of the Sect....rewriting familiar events of Israel's history and by inserting legendary details to make the Law of Moses correspond with Qumran thought. These documents, together with the commentaries, testify to the Sect's interest in supplementing biblical authority by adapting canonical works to its own purpose. The community desired in particular to prove that its members were the true heirs of Israel's tradition and that the promise of redemption revealed by God to the patriarchs and to Moses now belonged to their brotherhood." This is just the tip of the iceberg and you should understand that many Greek Fathers of the church, men like Clement of Alexandria, who grew up and was schooled in Alexandria, not only heard this Essene theology and their teachings on the Angel-Messiah, but their documents, even the Greek translation of the Jewish Bible had such tenants of the group included within it. This explains the natural tendency for these early Greek Fathers to accept and promote a theology that was in opposition to what the conservative Jews of Palestine believed as preserved in their Jewish Scriptures, which now read quite differently from the Greek translation of the Essenes in Alexandria.

There are literally hundreds of embellishments, but let me give you one such example as I have dealt with hundreds of examples of the corruption of the Jewish Scriptures when then were translated on another website that you might wish to examine to see the evidence for yourself: http://faithofyeshua.faithweb.com.

CHRISTIAN GINSBURG

Now for example... Christian Ginsburg details for us on page 32 of his monumental work The Essenes, Their History and Doctrines, when these Greek-Jews of Alexandria were employed to translate the Prophet and the Psalms into Greek, that they availed themselves of the opportunity to introduce their tenants and rites into their version of the translation. This version is called the Septuagint and is a grossly mistranslated version of the Jewish Scriptures. Millions of Christians are not aware of this and many of the Christian scholars stop short to examine the evidence for themselves; simply they just don't know it happened. Not being able to read Hebrew for themselves, they accept the Greek translation bequeathed to them as if it came for God. Your evaluation of the facts concerning this translation will show you otherwise. One example should suffice to begin your curiosity into the matter. Thus, for instance, when David said "Sacrifice and burn offering thou didst not desire, mine ears has thou opened" (Psalm 40:6) was changed by the Essenes translators of Alexandria to: "Sacrifice and burnt offering thou didst not desire, but a body hast thou prepared me." The Essenes, by changing this verse and taking away and adding to the Word of God introduced three of their tenets:

1. They made the Prophets speak absolutely as if God had entirely rejected sacrifices because they themselves would offer none

2. By dropping my the words, "mine ears has thou opened," they showed disapproval of slavery:

Exod 21:6 6 Then his master shall bring him (his slave) unto the judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door post; and his master shall bore his ear through with an aul; and he shall serve him for ever. (KJV)

3. By substituting "a body has thou prepared me," the were promoting their college of devout Essenes in Alexandria who met together as a body, and whom they believed God had appointed instead of the corrupt Priesthood. This body of Essenes was to be the now corporate "body" of Israel; the New Israel. Along with this the Torah and the Tanakh had been replaced with the religious and Apocalyptic writings of the community.

From this Essene corporate body of the "New Israel" they sent out missionaries promoting their theologies, and had established colonies, auxiliary branches, and affiliated communities, in various cities of Asia Minor, which colonies were in a flourishing condition before the preaching of St. Paul. Now you can understand that when Paul went on his journeys preaching "Christ crucified" that this was not a new message to his recipients. Jesus was just another name in a long line of crucified sun-god saviors that had come before. Chrishna crucified was now Christ crucified: http://paganizingfaithofyeshua.netfirms.com. There had been a long line of "personified sun-godmen" who were crucified; first in the heavens due to the blending of astrology and religion, and later personified in human terms reflecting the "heroes" of various Indo-Germanic nations since the beginning of time.

Col 1:23 23 If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister; (KJV) Notice please Paul used the "past tense" indicating that "his gospel" had already gone into all the world. A little study in comparative religion verifies the truth to his statement.

Answer for yourself: Have you ever wondered what was "the gospel" preached all over the world before Paul took the Christian message? These nations had already received the cosmic sun-myths from these Buddhist-Essene missionaries which covered according to their own testimony the whole of the known world. So Christ crucified was not a new message, but the personification of sun-myths long held by primitive mankind. Paul was only reiterating what they already knew and this explains the rapid spread of the Christian message...he had to give them nothing new...only a new name for their crucified godman. This also explains why the Jews continually followed Paul on his travels troubling him in their efforts to "undo" his preaching as the men from Jerusalem knew the distortions Paul was preaching about the Jesus that had personally known! Sadly, the New Testament blasts these men as "Judaizers." Redactionist history at its best!

THE CATHOLIC ENCYCLOPEDIA

Thus the pseudo-Aristeas, as cited by Josephus; thought, as a matter of fact, this Septuagint Version, so-called because of the legendary Seventy-two, was in the grossest manner inaccurate, and imported innumerable errors into the Christian religion which was based upon and propagated for several centuries only through the Septuagint texts. Indeed, "the text of the Septuagint was regarded as so unreliable, because of its freedom in rendering, and of the alterations which had been introduced into it, etc., that, during the second century of our era it was discarded by the Church." (Catholic Encyclopedia. iv, 625.)

In the course of a century or two before the Christian Era, the other Hebrew sacred books were likewise translated into Greek for the use of the Greek-speaking Jews of "the Dispersion," together with numbers of the forged Jewish apocrypha, and all these were added to the rolls of "Scriptures." This final and adulterated form of the Septuagint "was the vehicle which conveyed these additional Scriptures [i.e. the apocryphal Tobias, etc.] into the Catholic Church." (Catholic Encyclopedia, iii, 271.)

The role of the Holy Ghost in certifying the ill-translated and tempered Septuagint for the foundations of Christian Faith, was very disastrous, as CE. Points out:

"The Church had adopted the Septuagint as its own; this differed from the Hebrew not only by the addition of several books and passages but also by innumerable variations of text, due partly to the ordinary process of corruption in the transcription of ancient books, partly to the culpable temerity, as Origen called it, of correctors who used not a little freedom in making 'corrections,' additions, and suppressions, partly to mistakes in translation, and finally in great part to the fact that the original Septuagint had been made from a Hebrew text quite different from that fixed at Jamnia as the one standard by the Jewish Rabbis." (CE. vii, 316.)

"Copies of the Septuagint," says CE., "were multiplied, and, as might be expected, many changes, deliberate as well as involuntary, crept in." (CE. xiii, 723.)

ARTHUR G. PATZIA

Arthur Patzia is associate professor of New Testament and director of Fuller Theological Seminary in Norther California. On the translation of the Jewish Scriptures into the Greek he says this in his book The Making Of The New Testament: "The formation of the LXX was a gradual process spanning several centuries. Scholars have rightly judged that the Letter of Aristeas (B.C.E. 275-295) is a legendary or romantic piece of Jewish propaganda about the origin of the LXX.....But the translation of certain parts of the Old Testament into Greek was not always done consistently and carefully. Some books differ considerable from our present Hebrew Bible.....there are many Old Testament passages in the New Testament which agree with the LXX but differ considerably from the Hebrew Old Testament.....the LXX became identified as the Old Testament of the Christian Church....this led to a Jewish rejection of the LXX in its current form and the production of several other Greek versions that attempted to translate the Hebrew text more accurately...by becoming the Bible of the early church fathers, the LXX influenced church dogma....even the threefold division of Law, Prophets, and Writings was replaced with the Greek fourfold division of Law, History, Poetry, and Prophets" (p. 25-26).

FRANK MOORE CROSS

Frank Moore Cross, in Qumran And The History Of The Biblical Text, says in speaking of the translation of the Jewish Scriptures into the Greek: "these errors and textual diversities between the versions affect the intrinsic message only in relatively few instances. Nevertheless this may occur. Some examples of variants significant from a theological or ideo-historical angle may in fact be found....the Septuagint, commonly designated LXX, was in the Pentateuch less open to the uncontrolled impact of translators' idiosyncrasies. It contains indeed fewer deviations from the Hebrew text here than in the renderings of the other books...the ensuing embarrassing textual diversity of the versions of the sacred books soon called for the application of the methods of textual analysis and textual criticism to remedy this deficiency.....the Masoretic manuscripts showed no deviation of any consequence....all (Hebrew manuscripts of the Old Testament known today) exhibited a tradition which was identical to the smallest minutiae....taken as a whole the Greek tradition represented a textual family which differed from the Masoretic text."

MILLAR BURROWS

In Burrows' The Dead Sea Scrolls he says in regard to the Jewish Masoretic text of which we no earlier manuscript evidence than the ninth century until the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls in 1948 say regarding this: "The age of the manuscript, of course, does not establish its importance. An old manuscript is not necessarily a good manuscript. A copy made in the ninth or tenth century A.D. may be more accurately reproduce the original text than one made in the first or second century B.C." [this in response to many Christian commentators which have supposed the Greek translation of the Jewish Scriptures to be superior to the Jewish Masoretic text because we had "older manuscripts;" thus believing that "oldest" is most accurate]. As you can see this is not always correct!

"Many of the differences between the St. Mark's Isaiah scroll [discovered at Qumran] and the Masoretic text can be explained as mistakes in copying. Apart from these, there is remarkable agreement, on the whole, with the text found in the medieval manuscripts. Such agreement in a manuscript so much older gives reassuring testimony to the general accuracy of the traditional text...what it shows is that anymajor changes that occurred in the translation of the text had already been made before the beginning of the Christian era. In other words, a virtual standardization of the text had come about more or less automatically two or three centuries before the Masoretes made it official. As Hempel puts it, the decisive history of the text of the Old Testament had already been completed by the time of Jesus, not only in the books of the law, of which no jot or title should be altered, but also in the books of the prophets" (pp. 303-304).

Let me explain what you just read. The Christian Old Testament, corrupted since the Greek translation from which it was later re-translated, contains many passages interpreted as "messianic" and the church interprets these as if Jesus is the fulfillment. In reality, these are not true "messianic passages" as spoken by the prophets but adulterations meant to promote the sun-godmen theology of the translators in Alexandria. As Christians, we read them as if they are "messianic" and apply them to Jesus as if they were originally written concerning him. Needless to say, the Jewish Hebrew Scriptures do not read like this Greek "messianized" translation and many passages which read as if they were "messianic" in the Christian Old Testament were never given by the prophets as recorded in the Christian Bibles. The Christian response, when shown that their Old Testament is completely different in this regard when compared with the Jewish Scriptures, respond that the "Jews changed their Bible in response to the Christian message and tried to write-out Jesus from the Old Testament and "de-messiahize the prophets." This is simply false. As you read from scholar after scholar the Masoretic text, although until recently no copies could be discovered as early as the Greek translations, did not undergo change in reaction to the Christian church and its theology; rather the Masoretic text has been an accurate translation esteemed by the Jews since well before the days of Jesus and the passages that the Christian Church reads as if "messianic" are in reality purposeful corruptions of the Jewish text by the translators of the Jewish Scriptures in Alexandria.In other words, many of the beliefs held and applied to Jesus from this corrupted Old Testament in the Christian Bible are completely false and pagan in origin; and if that was not bad enough, such beliefs renders one an idolator!

Further Burrows states: "Considering how widely the earliest manuscripts of the New Testament vary, how radically, the ancient Greek versions differ from the traditional Hebrew text, and what a long time interval between the Dead Sea Scrolls and the oldest of the medieval manuscripts, one might have expected a much larger number of variant readings and a much wider degree of divergence. It is a matter for wonder that through something like a thousand years the text (of the Jewish Masoretic text) underwent so little alterations" (p. 304).

Now listen to what he says that I have already alluded to above: "We must still ask, however, whether the official scribes altered the text to eliminate what they considered objectionable implications, or whether the alteration was made by the covenanters [Essenes[to introduce their own beliefs into the text [beliefs about the Angel-Messiah in contrast to the Davidic Messiah]. That the latter procedure would not have been out of the question is shown by what was done by what was done with the text of Habakkuk..." (p. 313).

Again, "We cannot pause here to discuss each of those variants, but anyone who carefully examines the passages in question will find that the supposed Messianic implications are decidedly questionable" (p. 313)

Again, in contrasting the LXX and the Masoretic text he says: "By and large it confirms the antiquity and authenticity of the Masoretic text. Where it departs from the traditional text, the latter (the Masoretic text) is usually preferable" (p. 314).

ST. AUGUSTINE

Augustine, in his City of God 15:14 speaking of these Greek translations of the Jewish Scriptures states: "Apart from the errors of copyists, there are discrepancies which may conform to and even emphasize the truth. In such cases, we may well believe that the translators were inspired by divine Spirit to depart deliberately from the original, for along with their duties as scholars they had rights as prophets. [WHAT?] This explains why as Apostles rightly lend their authority not only to the Hebrew text but also the Septuagint, as when they quote Scripture texts from the latter."

Answer for yourself: Did you hear what he just said...that the Holy Spirit inspired these translators to depart deliberately from the original Words of God? What did YHVH warn us about adding to or taking away from His Word? Then how can we rightfully understand that God lied as Augustine just said?

THE PESHITTA HOLY BIBLE...GEORGE LAMSA'S TRANSLATION

The versions translated from Semetic languages into Greek and Latin were subject to constant revisions. Learned men who copied them introduced changes.....The Septuagint was made in the 3rd century B.C., for the Alexandrian Jews. This version was never officially read by the Jews in Palestine who spoke Aramaic and read Hebrew. Instead, the Jewish authorities condemned the work and declared a period of mourning because of the defects in the version. Evidently Jesus and his disciples used a text which came from an older Hebrew original. This is apparent because Jesus' quotations from the Old Testament agree with the Peshitta text but do not agree with the Greek text (Peshitta, pp. vi-ix).

A HISTORICAL ACCOUNT OF THE TRANSLATION OF THE HEBREW SCRIPTURES INTO GREEK...AS TAKEN FROM THE INTRODUCTION OF THE SEPTUAGINT (LXX)

The earliest version of the Old Testament Scriptures which is extant, or of which we possess any certain knowledge, is the translation executed at Alexandria in the third century before the Christian era: this version has been so habitually known by the name of the Septuagint, that the attempt of some learned men in modern times to introduce the designation of the Alexandrian version (as more correct) has been far from successful.

The history of the origin of this translation was embellished with various fables at so early a period that it has been a work of patient critical research in later times to bring into plain light the facts which may be regarded as well authenticated.

We need not wonder that but little is known with accuracy on this subject; for, with regard to the ancient versions of the Scriptures in general, we possess no information whatever as to the time or place of their execution, or by whom they were made: we simply find such versions in use at particular times, and thus we gather the fact that they must have been previously executed. If, then, our knowledge of the origin of the Septuagint be meager, it is at least more extensive than that which we possess of other translations.

After the conquests of Alexander had brought Egypt under Macedonian rule, the newly-founded city of Alexandria became especially a place where the Greek language, although by no means in its purest form, was the medium of written and spoken communication amongst the varied population there brought together. This Alexandrian dialect is the idiom in which the Septuagint version was made.

Amongst other inhabitants of Alexandria the number of Jews was considerable: many appear to have settled there even from the first founding of the city, and it became the residence of many more during the reign of the first Ptolemy. Hence the existence of the sacred books of the Jews would easily become known to the Greek population.

The earliest writer who gives an account of the Septuagint version is Aristobulus, a Jew who lived at the commencement of the second century B.C. He says that the version of the Law into Greek was completed under the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, and that Demetrius Phalereus had been employed about it. Now, Demetrius died about the beginning of the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, and hence it has been reasonably inferred that Aristobulus is a witness that the work of translation had been commenced under Ptolemy Soter.

Different opinions have been formed as to what is intended by Aristobulus when he speaks of the Law: some consider that he refers merely to the Pentateuch, while others extend the signification to the Old Testament Scriptures in general: the former opinion appears to be favored by the strict meaning of the terms used, the latter by the mode in which the Jews often applied the name of Law to the whole of their sacred writings.

The fact may, however, be regarded as certain, that prior to the year 285 B.C. the Septuagint version had been commenced, and that in the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus, either the books in general or at least an important part of them had been completed.

The embellishments and fictitious additions which this account soon received might be scarcely worthy of notice in this place, were it not that they are intimately connected with the authority which this version was once supposed to possess, and with the name by which it is commonly known.

A writer, who calls himself Aristeas, says that when Ptolemy Philadelphus was engaged in the formation of the Alexandrian Library, he was advised by Demetrius Phalereus to procure a translation of the sacred books of the Jews. The king accordingly, as a preliminary, purchased the freedom of more than one hundred thousand Jewish captives, and he then sent a deputation, of which Aristeas himself was one, to Eleazar the high-priest to request a copy of the Jewish Law and seventy-two interpreters, six out of each tribe. To this the priest is represented to have agreed; and after the arrival of the translators and their magnificent reception by the king, they are said to have been conducted to an island by Demetrius, who wrote down the renderings on which they agreed by mutual conference; and thus the work is stated to have been completed in seventy-two days. The translators are then said to have received from the king most abundant rewards; and the Jews are stated to have asked permission to take copies of the version.

As stated earlier legends abound concerning the translation of the Jewish Scriptures into the Greek. Other additions were subsequently made to this story: some said that each translator was shut into a separate cell and that all by divine inspiration made their versions word for word alike, others said that there were two in each cell, accompanied by an amanuensis; but at all events miracle and direct inspiration were supposed to be connected with the translation: hence we cannot wonder that the authority attached to this version in the minds of those who believed these stories was almost unbounded.

The basis of truth which appears to be under this story seems to be, that it was an Egyptian king who caused the translation to be made, and that it was from the Royal Library at Alexandria that the Hellenistic Jews received the copies which they used.

In examining the version itself, it bears manifest proof that it was not executed by Jews of Palestine, but by those of Egypt:—there are words and expressions which plainly denote its Alexandrian origin: this alone would be a sufficient demonstration that the narrative of Aristeas is a mere fiction. It may also be doubted whether in the year 285 B.C. there were Jews in Palestine who had sufficient intercourse with the Greeks to have executed a translation into that language, for it must be borne in mind how recently they had become the subjects of Greek monarchs, and how differently they were situated from the Alexandrians as to the influx of Greek settlers.

Some in rejecting the fabulous embellishments have also discarded all connected with them: they have then sought to devise new hypotheses as to the origin of the version. Some have thus supposed that the translation was made by Alexandrian Jews for their own use, in order to meet a necessity which they hail felt to have a version of the Scriptures in the tongue which had become vernacular to them.

There would be, however, many difficulties in the way of this hypothesis. We would hardly suppose that in a space of thirty-five years the Alexandrian Jews had found such a translation needful or desirable: we must also bear in mind that we find at this period no trace of any versions having been made by Jews into the languages of other countries in which they had continued for periods much longer than that of their settlement at Alexandria.

The most reasonable conclusion is, that the version was executed for the Egyptian king; and that the Hellenistic Jews afterwards used it as they became less and less familiar with the language of the original (Hebrew).

If the expression of Aristobulus does not designate the whole of the books of the Old Testament as translated in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus, the question arises, when were the other books besides the Pentateuch turned into Greek? To this no definite answer could be given: we may however be certain that various interpreters were occupied in translating various parts, and in all probability the interval between the commencement and the conclusion of the work was not great.

The variety of the translators is proved by the unequal character of the version: some books show that the translators were by no means competent to the task, while others, on the contrary, exhibit on the whole a careful translation. The Pentateuch is considered to be the part the best executed, while the book of Isaiah appears to be the very worst.

In estimating the general character of the version, it must be remembered that the translators were Jews, full of traditional thoughts of their own as to the meaning of Scripture; and thus nothing short of a miracle could have prevented them from infusing into their version the thoughts which were current in their own minds. They could only translate passages as they themselves understood them. This is evidently the case when their work is examined.

[Let me interject that you think about what you just read and then try to reason with yourself that such a translation could even possibly be considered inspired, infallible, and inerrant. This alone testifies to the numerous contradictions when compared to the Jewish Masoretic Text]

It would be, however, too much to say that they translated with dishonest intention; for it cannot be doubted that they wished to express their Scriptures truly in Greek, and that their deviations from accuracy may be simply attributed to the incompetency of' some of the interpreters, and the tone of mental and spiritual feeling which was common to them all.

One difficulty which they had to overcome was that of introducing theological ideas, which till then had only their proper terms in Hebrew, into a language of Gentiles, which till then had terms for no religious notions except those of heathens. Hence the necessity of using words and phrases in new and appropriated senses.

These remarks are not intended as depreciatory of the Septuagint version: their object is rather to show what difficulties the translators had to encounter, and why in some respects they failed; as well as to meet the thought which has occupied the minds of some, who would extol this version as though it possessed something resembling coordinate authority with the Hebrew text itself.

[There you have the redactor of the LXX testifying to the inferior authority of the LXX when compared with the Jewish Scriptures]

One of the earliest of those writers who mention the Greek translation of the Scriptures, speaks also of the version as not fully adequate. The Prologue of Jesus the son of Sirach (written as many suppose B.C. 130) to his Greek version of his grandfather's work, states: "For the same things expressed in Hebrew have not an equal force when translated into another language. Not only so, but even the Law and the prophecies and the rest of the books differ not a little as to the things said in them." The writer of this Prologue had come into Egypt from the Holy Land: he had undertaken the translation of his grandfather's work into Greek, but in explanation of the difficulty which he had to encounter in this work, he refers to the defects found even in the version of the Law, the prophets, and the other books, of which he had previously spoken. Doubtless coming into Egypt he wads more conscious of the defects of the Septuagint version than could have been the case with Egyptian Jews, who had used the translation commonly and habitually for a century and a quarter,

At Alexandria the Hellenistic Jews used the version, and gradually attached to it the greatest possible authority: from Alexandria it spread amongst the Jews of the dispersion, so that at the time of our Lord's birth it was the common form in which the Old Testament Scriptures had become diffused.

In examining the Pentateuch of the Septuagint in connection with the Hebrew text, and with the copies preserved by the Samaritans in their crooked letters, it is remarkable that in very many passages the readings of the Septuagint accord with the Samaritan copies where they differ from the Jewish. We cannot here notice the various theories which have been advanced to account for this accordance of the Septuagint with the Samaritan copies of the Hebrew; indeed it is not very satisfactory to enter into the details of the subject, because no theory hitherto brought forward explains all the facts, or meets all the difficulties. To one point however, we will advert, because it has not been sufficiently taken into account,—in the places in which the Samaritan and Jewish copies of the Hebrew text differ, in important and material points, the Septuagint accords much more with the Jewish than with the Samaritan copies, and in a good many points it introduces variations unknown to either.

The Septuagint version having been current for about three centuries before the time when the books of the New Testament were written, it is not surprising that the Hellenistic writers of the New Testament should have used it more often than not in making citations from the Old Testament. They used it as an honestly-made version in pretty general use at the time when they wrote. They did not on every occasion give an authoritative translation of each passage, but they used what was already familiar to the ears of converted Hellenists {thus the parallels to their existing heathen legends worked in among the texts), when it was sufficiently accurate to suit the matter in hand. In fact, they used it as did their contemporary Jewish writers, Philo and Josephus, but not, however, with the blind implicitness of the former.

In consequence of the fact that the New Testament writers used on many occasions the Septuagint version, some have deduced a new argument for its authority,—a theory which we might have thought to be sufficiently disproved by the defects of the version, which evince that it is merely a human work. But the fact that the New Testament writers used this version on many occasions supplies a new proof in opposition to the idea of authority, for in not a few places they do not follow it, but they supply a version of their own which rightly represents the Hebrew text, although contradicting the Septuagint.

The use, however, which the writers of the New Testament have made of the Septuagint version must always invest it with a peculiar interest; we thus see what honor God may be pleased to put on an honestly-made version, since we find that inspired writers often used such a version, when it was sufficiently near the original to suit the purpose for which it was cited, instead of rendering the Hebrew text exactly on every occasion.

Another important point on which the Septuagint stands in close connection with the New Testament is the general phraseology of the version,—a phraseology in which the traces of Hebrew elements are most marked, but with regard to which we should mistake greatly if we supposed that it originated with the New Testament writers. Thus we may see that the study of the Septuagint is almost needful to any biblical scholar who wishes to estimate adequately the phraseology of the New Testament.

Besides the direct citations in the New Testament in which the Septuagint is manifestly used, there are not a few passages in which it is clear that the train of expression has been formed on words and phrases of the Septuagint: thus an intimate acquaintance with this version becomes in a manner necessary on the part of an expositor who wishes to enter accurately into the scope of many parts of the New Testament.

Thus, whatever may be our estimate of the defects found in the Septuagint—its inadequate renderings, its departures from the sense of the Hebrew, its doctrinal deficiencies owing to the limited apprehensions of the translators—there its no reason whatever for our neglecting the version, or not being fully alive to its real value and importance. But one, when he studies this out, must be alert that within it exists major departures from the sense of the Hebrew that is manifested in doctrinal errors from the pens of its translators!

After the diffusion of Christianity, copies of the Septuagint became widely dispersed amongst the new communities that were formed; so that before many years had elapsed this version must have been as much in the hands of Gentiles as of Jews.

The veneration with which the Jews had treated this version (as is shown in the case of Philo and Josephus), gave place to a very contrary feeling when they found how it could be used against them in argument due to its inadequate translations and its doctrinal changes: hence they decried the version, and sought to deprive it of all authority. As the Gentile Christians were generally unacquainted with Hebrew, they were able to meet the Jews on the ground which they now took; and as the Gentile Christians at this time believed the most extraordinary legends of the origin of the version, so that they fully embraced the opinions of its authority and inspiration, they necessarily regarded the denial on the part of the Jews of its accuracy, as little less than blasphemy, and as a proof of their blindness. But being incapable of reading and translating the Hebrew thereby seeing the discrepancies, it was they who were blinded to the alterations, substitutions, and doctrinal inadequacies of the Septuagint!

In the course of the second century, three other complete versions of the Old Testament into Greek were executed: these are of importance in this place, because of the manner in which they were afterwards connected with the Septuagint.

The first off the Greek versions of the Old Testament executed in the second century was that of Aquila. tie is described as a Jew or Jewish proselyte of Pontus, and the date commonly attributed to his version its about the year A.D. 126. His translation is said to have been executed for the express purpose of opposing the authority of the Septuagint: his version was in consequence upheld by the Jews. His labor was evidently directed in opposing the passages which the Christians were accustomed to cite from the Septuagint as applicable to the Lord Jesus. The general characteristic of this version is bold literality of rendering: such an endeavor is made to render each Hebrew word and particle into Greek, that all grammar its often set at defiance, and not infrequently the sense is altogether sacrificed. From the scrupulosity of Aquila in rendering each Hebrew word, his work, if we possessed it complete (and not merely in scattered fragments), would be of great value in textual criticism.

Another Greek translator at a subsequent period in the second century was Syrnmachus. He is described as an Ebionite, a kind of semi-Christian. His version seems to have been executed in good and pure Greek perhaps he was the more particular in his attention to this in consequence of the mere barbarism of Aquila.

A third translator in the same century was Theodotion, an Ebionite like Symrnachus, to whom he was probably anterior. His version is in many parts based on the Septuagint. He is less servile in his adherence to the words of the Hebrew than Aquila, although he is void of the freedom of Symmachus. His knowledge of Hebrew was certainly but limited, and without the Septuagint it is hardly probable that he could have undertaken this version.

Thus, before the end of the second century there were, besides the Septuagint, three versions of the Old Testament in Greek, known to both Jews and Christians. All this could not fail in making the Old Testament Scriptures better known and more widely read.

Although many Christians believed in the inspiration and authority of the Septuagint, yet this could not have been universally the case; otherwise the disuse of the real Septuagint version of the book of Daniel, and the adoption of that of Theodotion in its stead, could never have taken place. This must have arisen from an apprehension of the poverty and inaccuracy of the Septuagint in this book, so that another version similar in its general style was gladly adopted.

We have now to speak of the labors of Origen in connection with the text of the Septuagint This learned and enterprising scholar, having acquired a knowledge of Hebrew, found that in many respects the copies of the Septuagint differed from the Hebrew text. It seems to be uncertain whether he regarded such differences as having arisen from mistakes on the part of copyists, or from errors of the original translators themselves.

The object which he proposed to himself was not to restore the Septuagint to its original condition, nor yet to correct mere errors of translation simply as such, but to cause that the Church should possess a text of the Septuagint in which all additions to the Hebrew should be marked with an obelus, and in which all that the Septuagint omitted should be added from one of the other versions marked with an asterisk. He also indicated readings in the Septuagint which were so incorrect that the passage ought to be changed for the corresponding one in another version.

With the object of thus amending the Septuagint, he formed his great works, the Hexapla and Tetrapla; these were (as the names imply) works in which the page was divided respectively into six columns and into four columns.

The Hexapla contained, 1st, the Hebrew text; 2nd, the Hebrew text expressed in Greek characters; 3rd, the version of Aquila; 4th, that of Symmachus; 5th, the Septuagint; 6th, Theodotion. The Tetrapla contained merely the four last columns.

Besides these four versions of the entire Old Testament, Origen employed three anonymous Greek versions of particular books; these are commonly called the fifth, sixth, and seventh versions. Hence in the parts in which two of these versions are added, the work was designated I Octapla, and where all the three appeared, it was called Enneapla.

References were then made from the column of the Septuagint to the other versions, so as to complete and correct it: for this purpose Theodotion was principally used. This recension by Origen has generally been called the Hexaplar text. The Hexapla itself is said never to have been copied: what remains of the versions which it contained (mere fragments) were edited by Montfaucon in 1714, and in an abridged edition by Bahrdt in 1769-70.

The Hexaplar text of the Septuagint was copied about half a century after Origen's death by Pamphilus and Eusebius; it thus obtained a circulation; but the errors of copyists soon confounded the marks of addition and omission which Origen placed, and hence the text of the Septuagint became almost hopelessly mixed up with that of other versions.

The Hexaplar text is best known from a Syriac version which was made from it; of this many books have been published from a MS at Milan; other books are now in the British Museum amongst the rest of the Syriac treasures obtained from the Nitrian monasteries. This Syro-Hexaplar translation preserves the marks of the Greek text, and the references to the other translations. It may yet be made of great use in separating the readings which were introduced by Origen from those of an older date.

There were two other early attempts to revise the Septuagint besides that of Origen. In the beginning of the fourth century, Lucian, a presbyter of Antioch, and Hesychius, an Egyptian bishop, undertook similar labors of the same kind. These two recensions (which they were in the proper sense of the term) were much used in the Eastern Churches.

From the fourth century and onward, we know of no definite attempt to revise the text of the Septuagint, or to correct the discrepancies of various copies. It is probable, however, that just as the text of the Greek New Testament became in a great measure fixed into the same form as we find it in the modern tropics, something of the same kind must have been the case with the Septuagint. As to the Greek New Testament, this seems to have occurred about the eleventh century, when the mass of copies were written within the limits of the patriarchate of Constantinople. It is probable that certain copies approved at the metropolis, both politically and religiously, of those who used the Greek tongue, were tacitly taken as a kind of standard.

We find amongst the members of the Eastern (churches who use the Greek language), that the Septuagint has been and is still so thoroughly received as authentic Scripture, that any effort to introduce amongst them versions which accurately represent the Hebrew (as has been attempted in modern times) has been wholly fruitless.

Thus the Septuagint demands our attention, were it only from the fact that the whole circle of religious ideas and thoughts amongst Christians in the East has always been molded according to this version, Without an acquaintance with the Septuagint, numerous allusions in the writings of the Fathers become wholly unintelligible, and even important doctrinal discussions and difficulties (such even as some connected with the Arian controversy) become wholly unintelligible,

As the Septuagint was held in such honor in the East, it is no cause for surprise that this version was the basis of the other translations which were made in early times into vernacular tongues. There was, however, also another reason;—the general ignorance of the original Hebrew amongst the early Christians prevented their forming their translations from the fountain itself. The special exception to this remark is the Syriac version of the Old Testament formed at once from the Hebrew.

WHAT IS THE MASORETIC TEXT AND IS IT IN THE CHRISTIAN'S BIBLE?

YES AND NO! This needs explanation.

The term “Masoretic Text” is the name for the Hebrew text handed down from the Jews since the Babylonian captivity. The word “Masoretic” comes from “masor,” a Hebrew word meaning “traditional.” It means to hand down from "person to person". The Masoretes, groups of scribes and Bible scholars working between the 7th and 11th centuries, based primarily in Israel in the cities of Tiberias and Jerusalem, as well as in Babylonia, handed down these Spiritual text from generation to generation. They both guarded them from corruption and preserved the divine essence of them. There were families of Hebrew scholars in Babylon, in Palestine, and in Tiberius which devoted their whole lives to these sacred endeavors. According to most students of these matters, these Masoretes safeguarded the consonantal text of the Jewish Scriptures.
